Most people, after externalizing their desire, forget the ladder by which they did ascend. I hope you will not. You don't need to brag, but if anyone should ask you how you achieved your goal, tell them how - in spite of any so-called worldly requirements - you believed you already were the person you wanted to be, and possessed the section of the world you wanted to possess. Do this, that you may encourage him to do the same.

Can you believe in this one and only foundation? If the word Jesus Christ offends you, use another. I love the word because I know its meaning. Jesus Christ is the power and the wisdom of God who is your own wonderful imagination.

Dare to assume that you have your desire. You may feel you do not have the wisdom to find the means to get it, but you do. If it takes one thousand or ten thousand people to play their parts to bring you into the embodiment of what you have assumed you are, they will play their parts, knowingly or unknowingly. You don't have to be concerned as to who is going to aid you. Simply dare to assume you are what you want to be, and you will compel everyone to play their part to bring about your assumption. That is life.

Live so that your mind can store a past worthy of recall, because any section of your past that cannot stand the fire will suffer loss. Build nobly, for you will continue to be confronted with your past until God awakens within you.

When this glorious knowledge awakens and you realize you are the one spoken of in scripture, you will be thrilled beyond measure. I know! And I will tell you from experience that the Bible is your biography and you are destined to experience everything recorded there as one called Jesus Christ. There never was another. He has always been you!

You are the dwelling place of God and the spirit of God dwells in you. His dwelling place is holy. That place you are, therefore you must be God. How will you know this? By dying to your delusions. Every foundation, every belief other than the belief in yourself, is a delusion that must die; for no other foundation can anyone lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ, and that being you are!

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 10-10-1969

NO OTHER FOUNDATION (2)

In Paul's 1st letter to the Corinthians he said: "No other foundation can anyone lay then that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." And in his 2nd letter he asked: "Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" Now I ask you: who is this Jesus Christ who is in you? He is your own wonderful human imagination - the foundation stone of your world! Your dreams create your world, and the dreamer dreaming those dreams, is your human imagination scripture calls Jesus Christ.

You may think of Jesus as someone other than yourself, someone separate and apart from you, but I tell you, Jesus Christ is in you as your wonderful human imagination. He is the dreamer, the foundation of your day as well as your night dreams. You may not be able to write a letter, paint a picture, or carry a tune, but you can dream because Jesus Christ is in you.

Now let me take you into the greatest story ever told man. It is the story of the Lord Jehovah, the being you really are. The Bible is your autobiography. You dictated it, recorded it, then came into the world to fulfill it - and you will!

People are forever looking for the coming of Christ, but he cannot come from without, for Jesus Christ is already within! He comes when the dreamer in you awakens and the dream comes to its end.

As the dreamer awakens, you awaken by a series of events which were predetermined before the world was. Let man speculate as to the age of the earth, the moon, and all the things round about him. That's perfectly all right; it's part of the dream, too. But when your individual dream comes to its end you - its dreamer - will find yourself awakening within your skull, the skull where Jesus was buried. You will come out of that skull, fulfilling Peter's words: "You are born again through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

Now, no one here thinks he is dead. We think those who depart this scene are dead, while we are very much alive; but I tell you: those who appear to be dead are no more dead than an actor who leaves the stage. Rather, they are restored to life in a world just like this, to continue their dream just as you and I continue it here. They have a body just like the one they left behind, only young - about twenty, where they can continue their dream until the dreamer in them awakes by a series of events which take place in them.

The series begins with a peculiar awakening within yourself to discover you are in your skull, the skull where you were entombed. Then you come out of that sepulcher to find the symbolism described in scripture surrounding you. You do not bring forth a child; the child you find merely symbolizes your birth, for you are born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God, to discover that you are the dreamer who - having foretold exactly what would happen, in symbolism - awoke from the dream of life.

Those who are not awake will continue to fight shadows in this world, for everything here is imagination made visible. Shelley once said:

"He has awakened from the dream of life.
'Tis we who, lost in stormy visions, Fight with phantoms and unprofitable strife."

Those who are fighting against the establishment do not realize that they are fighting against the objectified images of their own mind. But the day will come when he who is dreaming his world into being, will awake within himself to know he is its foundation, the one the Bible calls Jesus. The words "Jesus" and "Joshua" mean "Jehovah, the Lord's salvation." A man is saved from his dream by returning to the state he occupied before the dream began.

When Jesus told those who were listening to him that he came down from heaven, they could not understand his words, for they knew his physical father and mother, his physical brothers and sisters. Seeing only the outer man, they thought he had a demon and was mad.

Man is looking for a savior to change the establishment and society in the outside world when it is but a reflection of a dream whose reality lies deep within him. A savior will never be found in the midst of shadows. He will only be found when he who laid himself down within the individual man awakens in a wonderful series of events.

Everything said of Jesus Christ in scripture is said of you, for you are the dreamer, and the world is your dream pushed out. Fight with it if you will. Do as you like, but you will not awaken until the dream is finished. Then you will awaken to discover that you are its dreamer and creator. There is nothing but your wonderful human imagination! There is no other God. There is no other Jesus Christ. There is no other Lord. Your human imagination is the God of scripture. This I know from experience.

The series of events which will take place at your awakening begins with your resurrection. You will not resurrect from any cemetery, for every cemetery is conceived by dreaming man who desires to make money. There is no holy ground outside of where you stand, for the holy sepulcher is the human skull. That is where God is buried; and one day, when your dream is complete, you will awaken, not to find yourself in a world you like or dislike, but within your skull which is completely sealed, like an egg whose seal must be broken from within. This you will do, and coming out of that skull, you will know yourself to be the same being you were when you retired the night before.

There will be no change of identity, but the symbolism of scripture will be there. You will find the infant wrapped in swaddling clothes, whose birth will be witnessed by three others. Two, taking the child literally, will deny that you could bring it forth; but one witness will find the evidence and present it to you, the being who awakened from the dream of life. You will take that infant in your arms, and as you speak to it endearingly the vision will dissolve.

You will go from there into another section of scripture, for you are the Spirit of Jehovah who inspired the prophets to write the Old Testament. And you are the Spirit of Jehovah called Jesus, who controlled the lives of those who wrote the story in the New. Following your spiritual birth, you will fulfill the word you inspired the psalmist to say in the 2nd Psalm as "I will tell of the decree of the Lord. He said to me, `Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee.'" Having come into the world to fulfill your own prediction, you must find David and he must cry unto you, "Thou art my Father, my God and the Rock of my salvation."

This second grand event comes when suddenly the David of Biblical fame stands before you. At that moment there will be no uncertainty as to who he is and who you are. You will know the relationship of father/son and he will know it too. David is the result of all of your experiences of humanity. He is the same David as is described in the 16th chapter of the Book of 1 Samuel. If you date David chronologically, you would discover that he lived 3000 years ago; but the Bible does not record secular, but salvation history, as the events do not take place here.

This is the hell into which God descended and dreams his dream of life. God - your human imagination, your awareness - came out from being aware of being the Father and entered the world by becoming aware of it. The day will come when the world will lose its hold and you, human imagination, will return to the Father as the Father. You entered this wonderful world of adventure for the purpose of expansion, for if the limit of expansion was already reached, it would be hell.

Just imagine if you could never go beyond what you are. That would truly be hell would it not? Omnipotence has no part of scripture. God must ever be expanding his wisdom and his power. Having limited yourself to the contraction and opacity called “man”, you will break the shell and know an expansion far beyond what you were, prior to your descent from your exalted state into this limited one.

Yes, Christ will come, but not as the world expects, for "When Christ comes, no one will know where he came from." They will see a man such as the speaker. The records will show that he was born in the year 1905 in a little island called Barbados; yet I tell you I am not of this world, for I came down from heaven and have only just remembered it.

Believing I was Neville Goddard, a member of a certain family and race, I have been suffering from amnesia. My memory has returned now and I know that I came out from my own being, who is God the Father, for a purpose - to wear a garment called a brother, a son, and a friend. The garment I wear has many names to many people. I wear this garment, but I am not it. I came out from myself and came into the world. Having accomplished the purpose for which I came, I am now leaving the world and returning to myself.

There are those who would question my sanity and believe I have a devil; that I am mad because I do not believe in an external God, but rather I believe that I am God. And they challenge me relative to what I can do in the world saying: "If you are God, turn this stone into bread, or fall off a cliff and let us see if he will give you support," - but I say to this doubting Thomas: get behind me. I have told you what I have experienced. Believe me, for in time you will duplicate it. One day you, too, will know that you are God the Father, for you are he who inspired the psalmist to say: "I will tell of the decree of the Lord." You are that Lord who inspired him to write the words: "Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee."

You have come here to fulfill your word. But before this dream can come to its end, you must play every part you created in the beginning, be it the part of the rebel or the conservative, the murdered or the murderer, the rich man or the poor man. Having played all, you will forgive all, because it takes every experience of humanity to beget your son David and say: 'Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee."

A few months later another promised event will occur. It is said that: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the son of man be lifted up." The son of man is Christ, your dreaming being. When this event is fulfilled, you will find yourself split in two from the top of your skull to the base of your spine, with the parts separating about six inches. At the base of your spine you will find a golden liquid light which is pulsing and living. As you look at it you recognize yourself and consciously fuse with it. Then, like a fiery serpent you move up that spinal cord to enter your skull as it reverberates like thunder. Try as you will you cannot get out, for your skull contains the dream of which you are its life.

The final act will come as that skull becomes translucent, so transparent there is no circumference. Looking up you will see a dove floating about twenty feet above you, its eyes lovingly fixed upon you. In my own case, I raised my left hand, and as I extended my index finger the dove descended and lit upon it. Then I brought it close, and the dove smothered my face and neck with affection, as a woman at my side said: "They avoid humanity because man gives off such an offensive odor. But because of his love for you, he penetrated this ring of offense."

At that moment I fulfilled scripture: "He upon whom you see the Spirit descend in bodily form as a dove and remain, that is he." But I am not alone. I am only a sample. I am telling you what has happened to me and what will happen to all. Let the world continue on its way. Let the riots occur, the wars and rumors of wars, for they will go on forever. There is nothing new under the sun.

Evolution appears only in the affairs of man, but not in the creation of God. His creation occurred as one grand explosion, an orgasm which released only one place to cradle his biological experiment. That place is earth. Blake knew this; that is why he said: "We are put on earth a little space to learn to bear the beams of love." This we are doing even though we don't see any evidence of it. Instead we see only hate and violence of man against man as individuals set themselves up as the authorities to follow, not knowing that time moves on and one day he, too, will be as old as the speaker, then no one will trust him any more than they now trust anyone over thirty. This goes on forever, for there is nothing new under the sun.

But I am telling you what I know from experience and what is known from experience is known more thoroughly than any other way in this world. You may know something from hearsay, you may read it in a book, see it in a play, or hear it from the speaker; but you cannot know it in the true sense of the word until you have experienced it. When the dreamer in you begins to awake, then you realize that the world is a dream and you can prove it to yourself.

If this waking world is as much a dream as your sleeping world, you should be able to control it. In the dream of last night you might have been frightened and believed for a moment that the event was real, outside of yourself, and beyond your control.

Only when you awoke did you discover that it was a dream. Had you known at the time that it was a dream, you could have controlled it and made the event conform to your desire. Now awake in this world, you think it is real and outside of yourself, but I tell you: this world is a dream, too. It is every bit as much a dream as the dream of the night, only it is more difficult to control because it appears so real and independent of your perception. But it can be controlled by a simple act of assumption.

Let us assume that this is a dream and everything is perfect. You are happy and content and all is right in your world. Then persuade yourself of the reality of your assumption. Don't do anything to make it so; just trust the dreamer in you to bring it to pass, for the power who assumed your desire is the Lord Jesus Christ, and all things are possible to him. Your assumption, though false in the sense that it is denied by your senses and reason, if persisted in will harden into fact in such a normal, natural way that you will think it would have happened anyway. That is the dream. When imagination fulfills itself so naturally, it is easy to question that your assumption had anything to do with it; but I tell you it could not have happened without your assumption, for your awareness is the one and only cause of the phenomena of your life.

Use your imagination consciously, and after a while you will stop fighting shadows. The conflict within you will cease and your world will be at peace. Let those who are still asleep dream their violence into the world. It's perfectly all right, for in its midst you will walk knowing you are protected, for you are awake. This is your dream, too, and no dreamer can be destroyed by his dream.

You can stop dreaming violence and start dreaming peace while you are here, and share your awareness with those who will listen -but not everyone will. Instead they will call you mad and think you have a devil, just as they did of one called Jesus in scripture.

This man is mad, for he claims he came down from heaven, yet we know his father Joseph and his mother Mary. He claims that he existed before our father Abraham. How could one living in this century say that David, one who preceded him by 2,000 years, be [sic] his son?

He doesn't believe in reincarnation, but in two births: - a physical one that never comes to an end until the second birth takes place. And only one death, which took place at the beginning of time, when he became embodied in a body of flesh and blood and became its slave. He claims he was reborn through the act of awakening from the dream he imposed upon himself in order to expand his power and his wisdom beyond what it was when he made the decision to make man in his image.

Right now you are living in a fabulous world you created, filled with those who agreed to dream with you in concert. Everyone is dreaming his own dream. One dreams he wants to change the world. They call him Hitler or Stalin and millions of people appear to be killed, but they do not die. Rather, they simply depart this section of time and move into another, not even knowing they departed. Others will come and dream their desire of change and create a world in their own image; yet I tell you the whole thing was done before the world began. You are seeing simply the unfoldment of a purposed end which, as God, we agreed upon before we began the adventure.

There is no other foundation. Our scientists will continue to find new hypothesis to experiment with, relative to life and its cause. That's all right, for they are dreaming, too. This world began as a grand orgasm of God, with only this tiny little spot called earth capable of cradling life for the great experiment to take place.

Then the dream you and I are dreaming began. If you don't think it is a dream, take some section of your life that seems beyond redemption and rearrange it in your mind's eye. Make it as you would like it to be.

Persuade yourself of its truth and wait, because its fulfillment has its own appointed hour. It ripens, it will flower. If it be long, then wait, for it is sure and it will not be late. It will come into your objective world to bear witness to the reality of your assumption. Then you, too, will know that the world is a dream and you are its dreamer, the Jesus Christ of the New Testament and the Jehovah of the Old.

The Old Testament is an adumbration - a foreshadowing in a not altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. The New is its interpretation and fulfillment. If you hear the word, "Jesus" and think of a man other than yourself, you do not know him. The priests, rabbis, and ministers are looking for his coming, but they will look in vain. Jesus has already come or they couldn't breathe. He is their life, but they do not know it. One day, however, he will awaken in them as the being in whom he awakens.

Try it. What I have told you tonight concerning the coming of Christ is the only foundation. You will never disprove my words, for I am not speaking from speculation or theory, but from experience. When this little garment I now wear is taken away, I will no longer be a part of this age, for I have awakened from this dream called life. And one day, when your dream is over, the series of events which I have just mapped out for you will unfold within you; and you, too, will awaken and return as the one being who began the venture.

Believe me. There is no other foundation, no other God other than he who began a good work in you, and he will bring you to completion on the day of Jesus Christ.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 05-10-1968

NO OTHER GOD

A god sent into the fires of experience is the only God upon whom to rely!

Paul knew this truth and urged the Corinthians to "Examine yourselves. Test yourselves whether you are holding to the faith. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless, of course you fail to meet the test." Speaking of the Lord Jesus Christ as being in you, Paul invites everyone to test him. How would you go about testing yourself? By determining your desire and believing you have received it! In the 12th chapter of Mark, Jesus is made to say: "Whatever you desire, believe you have received it and you will." Now, here is a condition placed upon you. You must believe! You must dare to assume you are what you want to be and believe in that assumption! Then, if Jesus has not lied to you, your assumption will harden into fact!

Now, when you test Him, you, too must be faithful to the test. You have tested Him by giving Him a new model of yourself (or another) and he can't be changing models every few minutes and produce anything but confusion! So you must assume the feeling of being the man (or woman) you want to be and having assumed it, you must remain faithful to that assumption so that he may have one mode from which to work. Then he can objectify it in your world. It is entirely up to you. I urge you to test him and when you find him faithful to his claim, you will have found the only God worthy of your attention!

Moses was told by God that when he went to the people of Israel and they asked: "What is his name?" Moses was to say: "I am." He was to tell everyone that no other being has sent you, just I am. Then God continued, saying: "I have made myself known unto Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob by my name 'God Almighty,' but by my name "the Lord" I did not make myself known unto them." The name "Lord" was known but not understood. You have heard it time and again: "I am the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, your Savior and besides me there is no savior," but do you understand it? We have all heard the great confession of faith as recorded in the Book of Deuteronomy: "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One," but it is not understood.

When I say: "I am" God is speaking. You hear my words and because you see the body I wear called "Neville" you think I am saying "Neville is God," but I am saying: "I am." I am unconditioned consciousness believing myself to be a man of a certain race and nature, but before I say anything to complete a thought, my unconditioned I amness is God. Can you believe your "I am" is God? Can you believe it enough to trust him? Let me share an experience of a friend who is here tonight.

My friend wrote, saying: "While sitting quietly waiting for your lecture to begin I imagined hearing a certain voice saying the words I wanted him to say. I heard it, and as I rested in that quiet acceptance I saw a paneled door and wondered what was behind it. Suddenly my curiosity was answered, for the door opened and out came a white pig. Does this have any significance?"

It has tremendous significance. In the universal language of symbolism, a pig is the symbol of Jesus, the Everlasting Sustainer. The Lost Language of Symbolism by Bayley states: "The female pig symbolizes the Sustainer. Pictured are two pigs with crowns. One has upwards to twenty little suckling pigs being simultaneously nourished, and under the figure is the IC of Jesus, the Everlasting Sustainer, and under the other figure is the clover leaf and CR of Christus Redemptor."

My friend saw the symbol of his own wonderful human imagination, for that is Christ. If you imagine a state, remain faithful to it, and it externalizes itself, you have found the creator of the world for by him all things are made and without imagination is not anything made that is made. When you discover how to make something, you have found him of whom Moses and the prophets wrote, your own wonderful human imagination, the Everlasting Sustainer of all life.

Many years ago in vision I was in a large coliseum filled with beautiful trees and flowers. In fact the entire plant world was represented there. It was closing time and I was alone. Looking down I saw a little pig at my feet. Wondering what I could feed him, I picked him up and placed him on a desk. Looking around, I gathered branches, leaves, and flowers to bed him down for the night, so that tomorrow an attendant could care for him.

Then the scene changed and the coliseum became a huge supermarket. Again I looked down to discover my pig. He had grown in the interval, but was still not well fed. Opening a bag of meal I started to mix it, when I called out to my daughter saying: "Vicki, bring me a package of grain that I may feed the pig while I mix the meal for him." Then she said: "Daddy what will I use for money?" and I replied: "Everything here belongs to us. We don't need money." She went over to a pile of goods which was arranged like a serpent, and instead of taking a package from the top she took one from the bottom, dislodging the entire pile causing it to tumble down, revealing a single candle, lit. Then I said: "Do not rebuild it. Now that the candle is lit it must remain so and never be covered again."

My brother, Victor, appeared just then to inquire as to what I was doing and when I told him. he removed what appeared to be white, thick gravy from a bag and added three handfuls to my mixture, as I awoke hearing these words from the Books of Job and Proverbs: "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord and when his candle shone upon my head, by this light I walk through darkness."

Hearing the words so clearly, I realized they had great significance, so I began to search out the symbolism of the pig and found it to mean the Everlasting Sustainer of the world. I had found my imagination to be Christ Jesus, but I had not fed him well. I had neglected to exercise my imagination when the opportunity arose. Every day presents an opportunity for me to take my imagination and use it lovingly on behalf of others. If I hear people call in distress and do nothing about it I am not feeding my pig. If I want something and do not exercise my imagination towards its fulfillment my pig goes hungry. Having heard that whatsoever I desire I will have if I believe I have received it, and knowing it came from Jesus Christ who is my own wonderful human imagination, and yet not doing it, I am not feeding my pig. It was tall and rangy, but he should have been much fatter; however he had survived in spite of my neglect. So I can say to my friend: when the door opened and the pig came out, you saw the symbol of the Everlasting Sustainer of the world. Now you have proved to your own satisfaction that imagination creates reality, for you said that what you did in the silence came to pass in a very short interval of time.

In the same letter, he wrote this: "In my vision you were looking above my head at the branches of a perfectly straight tree. It was about three or four years old and came out of the top of my skull." This is the gentleman I spoke of a week ago and told him that, although he has no memory of the experience, he has been born from above. Now there is no doubt, for no one can have the tree of life growing out of his skull and not be born from above. If the tree is four years old, then he has not brought back the memory of any of the events, but if it is three years old then he still has time, and may bring back the vision of the dove.

This is the tree of life spoken in the 8th chapter of the Book of Mark: "When the eyes of the man who was born blind were opened, he said: 'I see men as trees walking.'" The tree of life, having turned down into generation, is turned around at the second birth, the birth from above. "Unless you are born from above you cannot in any wise enter the kingdom of God." Having gone down and given birth to generations the tree is reversed, thereby giving birth to regeneration in an entirely different world.

My friend emphasized the word "straight" in his letter. When Saul was blinded by the light the vision came to Ananias telling him to go to the street called "Straight" to the house of Judas. There he would find a man from Tarsus, for "I have shown him in a vision that you would put your hand upon him and restore his sight." Maybe my friend's sight will be restored, for he emphasized the word "straight" in his description of the tree which grew out of his skull.

The first time I had this vision, I was moving with those majestic beings of the awakened society with their trees growing out of their brains, when I saw a prominent man in the British government stick a tree on his head from the outside and jump in the hope that his tree would support him. But each time he fell flat on his face with the tree falling off his head, and I awoke laughing.

Blake said it so beautifully:

"The gods of the Earth and Sea sought through Nature to find this tree, but their search was all in vain,
there grows one in the human brain."

The only tree of life you will ever find is growing there, and it always grows up, not down. When you look at a chart of mortal man (the man who dies) you will see a tree with its roots in the brain and all the veins, nerves, and arteries going down as an inverted tree. If you saw that same man after his rebirth you would see the tree turned up and growing in a majestic manner. Now I know that not everyone brings back the memory of rebirth and the discovery of the Son. I can't tell you why, but my friend's visions of the past few months lead me to the conclusion that he has had all of them, but had not remembered.

But tonight the subject is "No Other God." Do not turn to any other god for the only God is your own wonderful human imagination. There is no other. The day will come when He will unveil himself in you as you. You won't see another, yet it takes his Son to unveil you. Only the Son knows who the Father is and only the Father knows who the Son is. The Son unveils you by calling you "Father." Only then do you know who you really are.

Now, if imagining proves itself in performance, does it matter what the world thinks? Test yourself, for there is no other God worthy of your attention. He is the god that you tested in the fires of experience and have proven true. He always proves himself in the testing and if he does that, what does it matter if the world rises in opposition and calls you insane for blaspheming? Let them say what they want to, it will not matter to you when you have found the only true God.

Abraham called upon the name, "the Lord, the Everlasting God," which is the divine definition of Jehovah. The word "Jehovah" (translated "Lord") is "YAD HE VAU HE" [pron. Yod Hey Vav Hey] which means "I AM." And the word "olam" (translated "everlasting eternity and the Word") in the statement "God has put eternity (olam) into the mind of man yet so that man cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end," also means "a youth; a stripling; a young man." These terms are given to David as he stands before the king, who inquires after his father. When Saul asked his lieutenant: "Whose son is that youth?" the lieutenant replied: "As your soul liveth O king I cannot tell." Then he said: "Inquire whose son the stripling is," and no one knows. Then David brought the head of the giant Goliath to the king, who said: "Whose son are you, young man?" and David replied: "I am the son of your servant, Jesse, the Bethlehemite." The word "Jesse" means "I AM." That thought is put into the mind of man, yet so that man cannot find out what is placed there until the end of the journey.

You have carried this innate wisdom in your bosom throughout the centuries you have traveled on your journey from heaven to heaven. You didn't begin here in your mother's womb. You came out from yourself - the Father - and entered this world of death to conquer it, and you will. In the end you will unveil yourself to yourself by your Son, David of Biblical fame. This is the story of scripture.

When scripture fulfills itself in you and you tell it, do not be surprised if no one believes you. This has been true throughout the centuries. In the days of the earliest Christians there was no New Testament, so when they spoke of scripture they referred only to the Old Testament. They had no plans to write a new one, but as the revelations were experienced they looked to the Old Testament for their meaning. The New Testament interprets the Old. Without the Old there would be no New, and the New without the Old is stupid, for the New is the fulfillment of the Old.

When Jesus said: "I have come to fulfill scripture" there was no New Testament, so the only scripture he could fulfill was the Old Testament. He searches the old scriptures to find the passages that parallel his experiences. The pattern of salvation is contained in Man, which in the fullness of time erupts like a tree bearing fruit. All of the things said of Jesus Christ are contained within that pattern, and when you break that shell the first eruption is your birth from above. Then come the second, the third, and the fourth revelations, as the pattern fulfills itself within you.

In the meantime while you are here in the world of Caesar, take this challenge and test yourself. Do you want to be other than what you are? Do you want some friend to be other than what he is? Without his knowledge or consent you can represent him to yourself as you would like him to be, and to the degree that you are self-persuaded, he will become it. No power in the outer world can change him; only [through] you, by actually becoming that which you have convinced yourself he is, will the change occur. There is no other way because the world is yourself pushed out. There is only one God. "Hear O Israel, the Lord, our God, the Lord is One," not two. That one is "I am." I didn't say, "We are," I said, "I am."

No matter who you see in the world, they only bear witness to what you are. So, without their consent or knowledge you, by the act of complete concentration, can listen to the sound of a voice, feel the touch of a hand, and see beauty for ashes, as you exercise your talent, which is Christ. Then one day you will see your pig, and I hope it will be good and fat. Mine was just a runt when I first saw it, but the pig grows with use. It is only a symbol, but the symbol of the Everlasting Sustainer of the world.

So tonight please believe me. There is no other God other than he who is your own wonderful human imagination. Turn to any other and you have turned to a false God. Now, make no graven image of God. "I am" has no face. Unnumbered artists have drawn pictures of what they conceive Jesus to be, but he has no face. He is simply "I am." But he is a person for you are a person and he has a Son. Calling himself the Father he says: "When you see me you see the Father." Well, he can't be a Father unless there is a child. And when His child calls you, "my Lord" he is saying: "You are my Father, Jesse," which means, "I am." 'I AM" is looking at his Son, David, and when you recognize your Son you will say to yourself: "Now I know who I AM."

I am telling you that which is entirely new and yet as old as the faith of Abraham. Man cannot believe it because he has been led astray by strange concepts as to who Jesus Christ really is. Jesus Christ is God the Father and as a Father he must have a Son. That Son is David. This I know from experience. I did not read it in a book. I never heard it from the lips of a man. It came by revelation. The tree of life bloomed and bore its fruit in me and every tree has the same fruit (the same story). There is only one story to be experienced in all, so if it hasn't happened in you, don't be distressed, it will. I know in my friend's case it has happened, but he hasn't remembered it. All I can say to him is: pray that you will remember.

Read the 9th chapter of the Book of Acts carefully and you will see that Paul did not realize what was happening to him; yet he was selected because of his peculiar talents, to do what he did. Others who remembered were not selected, but Paul, violent against the early Christians - bringing them shackled into Jerusalem to be beaten, and even consenting to Stephen's death - was chosen. When he came to the street called Straight he was blinded by the truth. The Lord picked him out because of his peculiar qualities. He was a man of intense power. Everything he did was intensified. The Lord took that same power which was used for evil and turned it around to be used for good. Paul did remember when his Son was unveiled, for he said: "When it pleased God to reveal his Son in me I did not consult with flesh and blood." He did not go up to Jerusalem to discuss the matter with others, no matter how seemingly powerful they were. It never occurred to Paul to get the permission of anyone. He simply went about doing exactly what he was told to do by the one who revealed his Son in him. And there is no one on record who revealed more than Paul. I am not saying that you are the one, but it is my real hope that you are. Nothing would please me more, because I am departing. My time is short and it is my hope that you will be selected to tell it.

But tonight believe me: your own wonderful human imagination is the one and only God, so put him to the test. Know what you want and let him create it for you. Search for and find the feeling that would be yours if things were as you desire them to be. Look at your world - would you see it differently? Would those in your world see a different you? Create that scene, catch the feeling of reality and don't let go! Don't forget what you saw and how you felt, for he who creates in you must have a model to work with. Don't be the double-minded man Jesus speaks of: "The double-minded man is unstable in all of his ways. He looks into the mirror of life and sees what he looks like, then he turns and forgets what he was like." Do not turn away from what you have just imagined and forget what you really look like, but persist in the new state. Remain faithful to it and let the one within you (who is Christ the Lord) externalize it, for you and He are one. I don't mean you and the Lord, but you are the Lord. There is only God in this world and you will know one day that you are He.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard 11-24-1959

NORTH OF THE STRIP

On this platform we believe that God is all Imagination and God is man (spiritual man, not the garment of skin he wears). Therefore man is all Imagination. We believe also that God, being the only creator, and God being man, then we are creators, that life itself is an activity of Imagination. The whole world in which we live is a world of Imagination. Tonight we hope to show it in such a manner that you will be encouraged to go out and prove it. Everyone can become what he or she desires to be, yet the real being is invisible and you see only its manifestation, for God is spirit, therefore man is spirit, and when we speak of spirit we mean imagining.

Here are two wonderful case histories, so follow closely and try to duplicate the technique. The lady who gave these to me does not differ from anyone here, for God is man. We are that man. I do not mean male/female, for these are the garments woven for man (generic man, which is God) to wear.

This lady says: "A year ago my husband decided to sell our home. I did not concern myself about it, for I knew from vast experience (having sold two and bought two) that my home could not be sold until I stopped mentally sleeping in it. But I allowed him to exercise his right to sell it, for it is our home. For four months several real estate operators tried to sell it. It was not sold and they gave up. Soon after that we decided we would sell the house and get a bigger one really two units under one roof so that my mother and my aunt could stay with us, and there would be only one tax bill. I decided he was right and then I began to sleep in Imagination in the area of West Hollywood, and I slept thus for four successive nights. On the fifth day my husband stopped in to see a friend and met a stranger who wanted a home in the hills, and he brought him back to see our house. He walked through it once and bought it and paid our price. In ten days we had to get out and move in with my mother.

My husband likes to do things immediately and so he wanted a new house at once, but now there were four adults and we wanted a home with two separate living rooms, and yet within one area, and with space so no neighbor would be breathing down our necks. We also have ten cats, three dogs, and a parakeet. We needed a fenced place to protect the dogs. We made our wants known to all the real estate operators on the Strip, for I wanted to live north of the Strip. Everyone told us we were mad. The lady realtors laughed outright, and the men just looked sad. They said that such a place as we wanted did not exist in that area, and if it did they could get five times the price we offered, a price they said was ridiculous, I did not listen to their ridicule. I said: You have not heard me. That is the house we want, and the price. I also want it completely paneled on the inside. Now they knew we were mad!

This lady began sleeping in her Imagination in such a house. Then one day one of the agents said to another: Show her the place on King's Road. (That was the area where she wanted her house.) The other said: You know the old lady would never split it. So then this lady said: Then lets go see it for laughs. The agents were reluctant, but they went. They turned into the private road and then the lady of the house took them through the place. There was this huge twenty-five foot room. It was paneled in redwood and the lady who wanted to buy said: I have never seen a more beautiful [room], even in a dream. The house was on two acres and was like two houses under one roof. There was a pool, but this lady didnt want a pool, only the house. After looking at the grounds and going back into the house, she stood on a balcony opening out of the dining room and looked down into the living room and saw her husband standing there by the fireplace with his pipe and with a look of complete satisfaction on his face. Then they all returned to the agents office, and the ladys husband said: Lets make them an offer. One lady agent said: I will lose my lunch! and the other said: Forget it! And then this ladys husband grew angry (which he seldom did) and hit the desk and said: Is it not your business to make the offer we suggest? Then make it! A third agent spoke up and said: Go slowly, for I have known that old womans husband to make a real estate operator wish he was dead.

However, they agreed to make the offer, the lady continued. We returned home and that night after we went to bed, having seen the house in Imagination, I stood on this same balcony above the living room and held onto its railing and looked again at my husband standing by the fireplace. And then she fell asleep in that imaginary act. Next day the phone rang and the agent said: You have bought yourself a house! The owners split the property in the middle and they got the house and one acre, just what they wanted and they got it at the price they had offered. She says: After twelve days of sleeping in a dream house we bought it, and are now going to live in a home that the realtors said did not exist. Our first house was sold after four days of sleeping elsewhere and we sold it without an agent and kept the five per cent commission in the family. A total stranger walked through it once and bought it.

That is how God creates. That is how you create if you know who you are, for you are God. You are not some little worm. They are now meeting in Chicago at this convention to tell us how we came from a worm, and that we are now evolving. God is not evolving. He creates out of nothing. He does not make something and hope He had the intelligence to make it better. Read it in the revealing word of God, the Bible. It is all created and what we call the animal world (which we say preceded us) is man himself pushed out, and as man is changing, so do the animals of the world change.

The whole vast world on the outside is dead, and man makes it alive. I know from my mystical experiences. I know that when I freeze an activity within me, it freezes outwardly, and when I started it again within me, it started. This lady did not sell the first house until she had stopped sleeping in it. And then, when she decided on a larger house (in spite of her problem of four adults, cats and dogs, and special privacy and north of the strip) she found it. I say you can be what you want to be and you need no preparation other than your desire. This lady was a better agent than the real estate men who could not sell her house in four months, and she kept the five per cent. She wanted to do so [and] she did it, because she is all Imagination. But you will not know it until you prove it as she did.

I tell her there is nothing impossible to her, and there is nothing impossible to you, for God became man that man may become God. God is the only actor. God alone acts in all existing beings and men. (Blake) If I re-act, that is the passive or negative side, called Satan, but if I act that is called God or Christ. If I go home tonight and conceive a scene that implies the fulfillment of my dream and then lose myself in it, I know that no power in the world can stop its coming into being.

Today brought me a letter asking for help. I do not need to be next door to help another. There is no separation or time without consent. You make this work for another, no matter where they are. This letter was from New York, telling me about a fine doctor there. He got these growths on his face and feared they might be malignant, and then it was found that he had Parkinsons disease. This friend wrote me to tell me about it, and he said: Can you do anything when you are so far away? I am not 3,000 miles away, for everything is within me. I brought this doctor, in Imagination, before me and I put my hand on his face. I put it on a face that had no lumps. I felt only smooth skin. And then he and I walked together and he did not stumble; he walked like a well man would walk. That is what I did.

Now comes this letter telling me that me that something has happened within him. These lumps are gone and he is no longer shaking and he now can go to his office again. Yet as a doctor he knows his condition is incurable. It is not unless he thinks so. If I had seemingly failed with him it would not matter, for I would still be exercising my wonderful talent. If that next letter had said if he had died it still would not mean I failed, for there are worlds within worlds, and God cannot fail. All we are called on to do, is to imagine and then let it be true. I cannot concern myself with what the doctors say. We are not little worms; we are of God, for God became his image and made [it] alive and it became a living soul, and then he transformed it into a life-giving spirit. But if you do not become a life-giving spirit, you do not know you are the cause of the livingness of your world. And then you cannot change it.

Here is another story from the lady who bought the house: Going into a certain restaurant she saw some unusual rose-colored water glasses, and she asked if she could buy them. Both the waiter and the hostess said it would be impossible for her to do business with the person who did the buying for the restaurant, as she was such an unpleasant person. Also, they said the glasses were manufactured in the east and the supply was very limited. The lady went home, but every day she saw those glasses on her table eight of them. A month later she and her mother were again in the restaurant, and there was [a] new hostess, who introduced herself and then brought up the subject of the glasses and said she had heard the buyer would not sell any of them. And then she smiled and excused herself, returning in a moment with a box, which she gave to this lady. In it were not only eight glasses but twice that number. And they were without charge. Jehovahs gifts are without price. She was willing to pay even an excessive price for the glasses, but she got them as a gift.

If you know what you want in this world you can get it. And let no one tell you that you are acquisitive. Those who tell you that would not mind having the same thing for themselves. So be completely disinterested in what people say and go out and live a full, wonderful, rich life, for what you want to do you can do if you know who you are. You are all Imagination and Imagination is God, and only God creates.

This lady learned to use the Western Gate closed in most of us which is touch. That was her secret. She saw what her husband looked like standing by the fireplace the night she recreated the scene but she held onto the balcony with her hand to prove it to herself that she was there.

So what would you desire? I cannot stress too much the use of touch or the Western Gate. I have seen people take imaginary paychecks and touch them. They had brought the other senses of seeing, and hearing comments, etc. but when they had brought the sense of touch it worked like a charm, for when you bring touch you open the closed Western Gate and then nothing seems impossible. If I could snuggle into a bed 10,000 miles away and then view my world from that place, I would gravitate there. For I am all Imagination, so I must be where I am in Imagination. Though I am physically here, if I view my world from that other place I am there, and if anyone is a sensitive they will be able to see me there. I have [been] seen in points of space when I was physically here but desired to be seen there. I am where I am in Imagination, so if I imagine I am the person I want to be and walk in that state as though it were true, then everything in the world will rush to make it so. If I would only live in Imagination as I desire to live in the flesh, then everything that seems detached will be joined to make it real.

Try it in your office, and if things are not right or as they ought to be, then you assume that this person is acting as he should and you hear the conversation and what they would say if they were now the kind of individual you want them to be. And if they act tomorrow as you imagined they are acting, then where is reality? It will come to you some day.

When weary man enters his cave then he meets his Savior in the grave.
Some find a female garment there and some a male woven with care.
(Blake)

But that is not man. God is the reality, and male and female is the garment. This (the body) is the cave, and this is also the grave of which Blake speaks. This is where God laid himself down. I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I but Christ liveth in me, and the life I now live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me. So it is all woven within me, for God is the eternal man and I am he. He weaves himself into us for educative purposes and in my case it is male, but that is not man. He wears garments of male and female, but that is not man. And then Blake turns to Satan:

Oh Satan, true thou art a dunce;
thou canst not tell the garment from the man.

The day will come when you will see this fabulous world of garments frozen, but the man you do not see, for you are that man. And you become aware of what you want and then you see the whole world is infinite response to you. So, whatever you activate, you get the response. The world has to respond after I start the action within me.

Tonight you take your dream and make it a noble one, and create a scene that would imply its fulfillment of your dream, and open that Western Gate, which is touch. There is one man here who made deposits (mental ones) at his bank. You know the story of Archie Franklin. He mentally went into two different banks and asked for his balance and heard what was said to him. He did it three times a day for two months. Then he went to Caliente and returned with $32,000. What he won was $3.00 more than the bank deposit he had mentally added up. I do not say go to Caliente, but I say put yourselves in that same state and do not let someone tell you it is not spiritual, for while they are saying that, they are already wondering if they can borrow some of that check when you get it.

Everything in this world is God's creation and God is all Imagination. Even the clothes we wear, the chairs we are sitting on, were once imagined and then brought into being. Let no one tell you this is wrong. Those who tell you to kill out desire have not gone far enough, for if I wanted to kill desire I would have to start with the desire not to desire, and where would [I] go? How far?

So, go out and do what you want to do and fulfill your dreams. Someone without academic background is telling you this. I am going out on a limb to tell you that everything in the Bible is true on a higher level, but it is revealed figuratively, and man confused literal truth with metaphor. I do not crawl on my belly and no little serpent spoke to me, as it says in Genesis; yet what is meant is true in metaphor. The serpent was called the most subtle of all the creatures and it represents the wisdom of man, who takes all his arts and religions for his own glamour and dedicates them to the creator. And then comes one who never went to any school (Blake) and shows them reality. And now those who thought themselves so wise are figuratively crawling on their bellies in the presence of such as he. In the Bible things are told on a higher level and told in metaphor, but I know from mystical experience things I could not have found in any book.

The statement: You must be born from above or you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven is an example. It is literally true, but it is told in metaphor. The rich young man said: How is it possible to again enter my mothers womb and be born a second time? But the womb is below and not above. It is speaking of the birth of the second man, the spiritual man. From Genesis right to the end of the Book, it says that God created all things and that he said: It is good. Seven times he repeats: It is good - the perfect number. One day you will see the whole vast world, and you will say: It is good! And you will animate it. I know everything depends on the activity taking place in MAN - and spell it with large letters, for the garments are male-female. You are MAN, this generic man that is God. The whole vast world is man pushed out. Not a man, but MAN. All that you behold though it seems to be without, it is within, in your own wonderful Imagination of which this vegetative world is but a shadow. It is hard at this stage to think that your world is a shadow, and it is cast by you and you are activating it.

When you dream, do not think that because there seems not a fact to support it, it cannot come. It will come, so dream nobly. If you want fame, have it. But I would suggest that you suggest to yourself that you are awakening and can see this frozen wonderful world and you as the activator. I hope many of you have the desire to do what I am doing and will go out and tell this. First prove it to yourselves. Learn the art of repentance, which means a change of mind. Try it, and try it again, and prove that a change in you will produce an outer change. Go out and prove it and then tell others. Imagine what you want to imagine and continue to imagine until you are confronted with it. It does not matter what your senses tell you; if you learn to live by this you will not fail.

Bear in mind that this, the body, is only a garment and one day you will take it off. But you are invisible, and when you [are] completely awakened, you join the Divine Society and become one of the Gods who create. Remember that every moment of time God is begetting himself in us and you cannot fail.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard

January 9 1964

One Greater Than John

Tonight's subject is "One Greater Than John." I think you will find this a most practical approach to this teaching. When we open the Bible we think it is just a normal book. May I tell you, it is not; it is divine history and all the characters in scripture represent states of consciousness, from Adam to Jesus, every one. They're not individuals as you and I are; they're simply representatives of these states of awareness. And the very last before the page turns into an entirely new age is called John. And so we are told in the earliest of the gospels, which is Mark: "After John was arrested, Jesus came preaching the gospel of God" (John 1:14). After John was arrested then he appears preaching the gospel of God. What is this story trying to tell us?

So here, let me share with you my experience. I didn't know it either, but I'll tell you how this thing works. John, we are told, is the very last of the great of the prophets. As we're told, "Of those born of women, none is greater than John; yet the least in the kingdom is greater than he" (Mat.11:11). None greater than John in this world, yet the least in the kingdom is greater than he. And John came not eating or drinking. If you take that on this level, that's nonsense, because the body could not survive. Another gospel states it, "He came neither eating bread nor drinking wine."

That tries in some way to, well, explain what he did not eat or drink. Well, there's no statement in the law of Moses against eating bread or drinking wine—unless you are one of the Nazarenes and it's true as to wine, but certainly not eating bread. The last supper was the eating of bread and the drinking of wine. But he came, neither eating bread (if you want to take it that way) nor drinking wine. But the Son of man came eating and drinking, and they called him a glutton and a drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners. But we think, this night, of one greater than John, who was the greatest in this world, yet not equal to the least in the world called the kingdom of heaven. Now these are only states of consciousness through which every man passes. If you are not now in the state of John, may I tell you, you're going to be some time in the state of John; if not now in this present little environment, when the wheel turns and it returns, you will be in that state. Everyone passes through the state of John before he comes into the state of Jesus Christ.

Now, what is the state of John? We come into this world …now let me share with you my own personal experience. I was born in a very limited environment, small little island in the West Indies called Barbados. My father ran a little grocery store, but it was a general store, not only groceries but meat, fish, fowl, liquor, wine. I mean, it supplied everything for the table. I was raised in that environment where it seemed the most normal, natural thing in this world to eat anything that was placed on the table, and so I did. I left Barbados at the age of seventeen and came to America, believing as I did everything placed before me that was edible was right. And then, I fell into a state, the state called John. John came not eating or drinking. And then I fell into the state where I gave up all the things that I did normally as a boy, right through until I was seventeen years old. I fell into the state at the age of twenty, a little after twenty, say, twenty-one, where I would not eat any meat, any fish, fowl, not even eggs. Naturally, in those days I didn't drink so that was not giving up wine, but that couldn't cross my lips. I did violence to my own appetites, because as a child, as a boy, I indulged in everything that my father placed before me. And suddenly I gave it all up and for seven years I was a strict vegetarian, teetotaler, celibate. John represents that state in man's ongoing when he does violence to his appetite. And yet life is nothing more than the appeasement of hunger. God gives to every man in this world a hunger that he can, if he knows God's law, satisfy. He can clothe himself with the fulfillment of his dream and satisfy it. But there's a state where man passes through, and it is called John the Baptist, where he does violence to his appetite.

I met a friend of mine in New York City, his name was Abdullah. He said to me in 1933 (I met him in ’29)…and he did everything, he ate everything, he drank everything. He didn’t smoke only because he just didn’t enjoy it, but he did everything. An old, old man, he was then in his late eighties when I met him. And he said to me, “So you’re going to Barbados? You want to go to Barbados?” I said yes. Now, this is where the good news of the kingdom comes in. Then, when I met him, I did not eat flesh in any form, I did not drink alcohol in any form, and no smoking and a celibate. He said, “Well then, you are now in Barbados.” I said, “I’m in Barbados?” This is on 72nd Street in New York City, where the buildings can go thirty and forty stories high. Barbados, if you find a three-story building, you’re lucky…the little one and two-story buildings, and no sidewalk, but no sidewalk. One little tiny street we call Broad Street, to this day we call it Broad Street, and that’s the only place that has a sidewalk. All the other areas no sidewalks, you walk in the street or you walk in the gutter, but there is no such thing as a sidewalk.

And he said to me, “Now clothe yourself with Barbados. Put it on as you would another garment, just as you would another garment, so that you would smell the tropics and you would see what you would see were you in Barbados.” Well, I did to the best of my ability, and I clothed myself with Barbados. And when I thought then that night—the first night that I clothed myself with Barbados–I thought of New York City, and I saw it 2,000 miles to the north of me. Then I had succeeded in clothing myself with Barbados. I fell asleep in the assumption I am in Barbados. Well, the days went on from this I would say, late October through November, and yet I am not physically in Barbados. So I tried to open up my discussion with Abdullah, and I said, “Ab, I did all that you told me. I clothed myself with Barbados, I am sleeping in Barbados, and yet here I am in New York City.” He would not talk to me. He turned his back upon me the very first time I brought it up; he walked towards his studio and slammed the door in my face. And if you knew Abdullah as I knew him that was no invitation to come in.

So, if I am clothing myself in Barbados and with Barbados, then I must be faithful to this clothing. That’s the good news spoken of after John is arrested, not before. John is doing violence, trying to gain the kingdom of heaven by being good. And he said to me, “You’re so good you’re good for nothing. And you’re trying to get into the kingdom by being good. You don’t eat meat, no kind of meat, you don’t drink any alcoholic liquor, so you’re so good. And you’re celibate at the age that you are today, and so all the fires you’ve bottled up in you, trying to be good.” So I kept on wearing my garment: I am in Barbados. On the morning of the 4th of December a letter came to my door, stuck under the door, from my brother giving reasons why he wanted me to come to Barbados, and enclosing in that letter a ticket for Barbados. I had not gone home to Barbados in eleven years. I made no request. I didn’t write the family. My brother Victor writes me saying that you must come and no response other than yes would he accept, and enclosing a little draft to buy shirts, if I need them, or a pair of shoes, and stating in the letter that use the check to the fullest advantage. Charge everything and when I arrived in Barbados, well, he would board the ship and pay all expenses that I had signed. If I use the bar, use the bar. He didn’t know I wasn’t drinking. But, all expenses…the tipping of the steward, the tipping of everyone in that ship. He would board the ship, take care of all my expenses, but I must come! Then he gave me his reasons for it, he justified why. I went down to that ship on the morning of the 6th and got my passage and off I went.

Before I went, Abdullah said to me, “So you’re going to Barbados. May I tell you, you’re going to die but you will not surely die…but you will die.” He didn’t explain. Like Blake he never would tell me the interpretation of his statement “you will die.” Well, I went off thinking, well, I’ll die, die in Barbados. I didn’t die in Barbados but I died: I died to everything that I was doing. I lived in Barbados for three months, which is the Christmas season and everyone is entertaining. I’m returning from America after eleven years, and party after party is given for my honor. It’s Christmas, it’s New Years, they’re all drinking, all having fun, and I simply drank water. Mother prepared all kinds of meals, and I would have just a vegetable meal. She never heard of it. We were raised supplying the entire island with meat, with fish, with fowl, with everything…with all the wine…everything was home… and I just said, no, I would take vegetables. I was there for one solid three months.

I came back to that ship going north. And the night I entered that ship, we sat maybe six or eight people at table, and we all introduced ourselves. "My name is Neville Goddard," and so I would shake hands, and this one is so and so-—you all introduce yourself aboard ship. Then the man to my right said to the waiter, "Let us see what you have for wine." The waiter brought the wine list, he said, "We'll have that." I didn't say wine, so he ordered that wine. Then came the first course, soup. So I didn't ask if there's meat stock in this as I'd done for seven years; I drank the soup. Then he brought the second course, it was fish; I ate the fish. He brought the third course, it was meat; I ate the meat; all the time pouring down the wine. Every thing that I had not done in seven years I did that night, and then from then on for the ten or twelve days at sea 'til I got off the ship in New York City. Then I understood what he meant "you will die."

That state called John the Baptist, which does violence to itself, you must pass through it. If you are not now in it, you will be in it. It's part of the eternal drama of God. God has prepared a way to redeem himself. It's God and only God playing all these parts. So God has prepared the way to bring himself back individualized as you. There's no other way. So from Adam to Jesus Christ they are only states of awareness through which God and only God passes. And the last state of the old dispensation is John the Baptist. That is the last stage. And so, man must pass through that state. Don't try to invite it. It happens, and you don't understand why it happens. In my own case, raised normally, with all the food before me, because my father made a living feeding us by selling this, fish, fowl, meat, eggs, butter, everything that was normal, all the rum in the world. We make rum in Barbados. He drank heavily; my father was a very heavy drinker. All these things were exposed to us, so we took it and suffered it.

My Father, the depths of my own being, moving me through all these furnaces, put me into a state where I was married at the age of eighteen, father at nineteen, separated at twenty. And then I became so disillusioned with marriage, I vowed I would have not a thing to do with sex—my own disillusionment, my own, not hers, my own. That was part of the play where he put me through these furnaces and brought me out seven years later. I know friends of mine who have been in that state of John the Baptist for fifty years, and they have died in it. But the wheel turns; they will come out, the wheel turns. Although they cease to be here as a flesh and blood being, they were in it when they died. Others came out after forty years. Here was George Bernard Shaw…he died in it after seventy years. He was ninety years when he died. He was a strict vegetarian and a teetotaler. He was in it, but he died in it; he had not come out. He died not believing in Christ. He died an atheist. He didn't know the good news. My friend Abdullah who taught me this story, he was in it for forty years. He hadn't touched anything that was meat, especially pork. He was born and raised in the Jewish faith, and for forty years he touched nothing that was meat. But certainly he, not only forty years, but from the time of birth up until he was almost eighty years old, he hadn't touched pork. And then came the same thing to him that happened to me.

So man passes through this state called John the Baptist, and he comes into the state called Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is the freedom of the world. So, it's said of John he came not eating or drinking. It is said of Christ, called the Son of man, he came eating and drinking; and they say of him, "Behold, a glutton and a drunkard, a friend of tax collectors and sinners." So you pass through it and then you know what he is talking about. He doesn't come to destroy the law. He said not one little dot will be rubbed out of the law, all will be fulfilled, but he interprets the law as John could not interpret it. John thought that by doing violence to his appetite he would get into the kingdom. He thought that he could scare a man into salvation. And the next state beyond John tells you you can't do it that way. He interprets the law and shows the law as something that is mental, not physical. And then he puts it this way: "You have heard it said, 'You shall not commit adultery.' But I say to you anyone who looks on a woman lustfully has already committed the act of adultery with her in his heart" (Mat.5:27). He takes it from a physical state to a mental state. If I look upon a woman lustfully and I think I can get away with it, and it seems pleasant, I may be inclined to do it.

If I contemplate that act along with its consequences for myself and my family, I may restrain the impulse. But, he tells me that's not good enough—in the contemplation of the act I did it. So, causation is mental, it's not physical. John didn't know that. The state called John didn't know that. If I restricted myself and resisted the impulse, I thought, "Well, am I not wonderful! I have just abided by the law 'ye shall not do.'"

Then comes the next state called Jesus Christ, and that state tells me that wasn't good enough; the wheel is turning and you are going to do it tomorrow. The wheel will turn now and tomorrow when it turns all over again, you will be performing the act. And you'll wonder why has this happened to me to the disgrace of my family and myself? Because you thought by the restraint of the act you didn't do it. And now he interprets the law for us, and tells us the very contemplation of the act was the act. And so, when one gets to that point where they don't even contemplate it, well, then off the wheel of recurrence we are lifted, one by one. And that is the story of the one that is greater than John.

So everyone is moving through a series of states, and it starts from Adam through, well, we can stop the Adam and start it from Abraham, for that's where real civilization begins. So you start from Abraham and you come all the way through into Jesus Christ. And they're only states of consciousness where God passes through individualizing himself as you. And everyone goes through the state called John the Baptist. So of all those born of women, none is greater than John, yet the least in the kingdom of God is greater than John. So how great we are in this world, that doesn't really matter; because the least in the kingdom of God has a greatness beyond the wildest dream of this world. The least has a greatness…you can't conceive the greatness of the least in the kingdom. And he's brought there not by anything he's done. For, may I tell you, I did nothing to do it; I fell into it. But who made me fall into it?—God. And so, we can't take any credit for having fallen into the state called John.

It seemed to me, if I reflect upon it, prior to when I fell into it, that I was disillusioned in marriage. A young man of eighteen getting married, and then being a father at nineteen, and then at twenty separated, and becoming disillusioned. And then pledging myself not to have anything to do in the sexual world and then to give up completely all the food that I loved. I love food, love all the things that the world would offer. And then to go through it and a man would tell me on a certain day, "You're going to die, but not really die." And then you're bewildered—"I'm going to die, but I'm not going to die"—what is he talking about? Well, he was talking about the state. I will die to that state. And when after the things happened and I said to him, "What did you mean and who told you that I would die and yet not really die?" He said to me, "The Brothers." That's all that he would tell me: "The Brothers told me that you would die and not really die. The Brothers told me you were coming to me." And what did he mean by the Brothers?—the Elohim, the gods who made us all in their own image.

So tonight, may I tell you, let me share with you the good news. You are told, the very first words given into the world in the mouth of Jesus Christ in the earliest gospel is in Mark, the 14th and 15th verses. The words are: "After John was arrested, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of God, and saying, 'The time is fulfilled, the kingdom of God is at hand; repent, and believe in the gospel.'" The first words put into his mouth. Someone asked the other night concerning changing the picture of this world—the word is "repent" in the first statement made in that gospel. "Repent" is "a radical change of attitude towards anything that happens to you in this world." I don't care what is happening, repent! Don't let it happen as it is happening. Change it in your mind's eye, solely, as I did standing in New York City, without one nickel in my pocket, not a nickel, and Barbados is 2,000 miles away, across water, so you can't walk; and he tells me, "You are now in Barbados!" I'm in Barbados and Barbados is 2,000 miles away across water. "Clothe yourself with Barbados. If you are in Barbados, how would you know you are? Look at the world." For motion is relative: I can only detect that I have moved relative to something that is stationery to my motion. So, New York remains where it is, and if I assume that I am in Barbados, and I think of New York, I should see it 2,000 miles to the north of me. So, I clothe myself with Barbados and think of some stopping place where if I am in Barbados that vision would tell me where I am. So I think of Barbados…and there it is 2,000 miles to the north of me. So I sleep in that state, to find that someone 2,000 miles away is moved to bring me…a ticket to go to Barbados, with a little small check to buy the necessary things to get aboard the ship.

So you clothe yourself in a state. That's the good news: "I bring you the good news of the kingdom of God," for man is rising into a kingdom where everything is subject to his imaginative power. But before you get there you start to test it here…and you test it. So I'm telling you of a kingdom. What kingdom? The kingdom of God, well, what is it? It's a place beyond the wildest dream of earth, the world of Caesar, where when you arrive there everything is subject to your imaginative power. But I'll tell you, start it right here. And how do you do it? You clothe yourself with this state just as though it were true, and as you clothe yourself with it, wait. As you're told, those who really believe do not make ___(??). If they really believe it, they don't make it so, it is so.

That's why when I discussed it with Abdullah he never discussed it with me. When I asked him how would I go there he wouldn't even answer me. Because what he was trying to show me was, "If you really are clothed with the feeling of being in Barbados, how could you and I sit down and discuss how you're going to get there? How could we possibly discuss this?" And so, he wouldn't discuss it with me. "If you really are doing what I told you to do…you say you are in Barbados…well, then you can't discuss how you're going to go." If I said to you, "You are now rich," and today you owe rent, can you and I discuss how you are going to become rich if I tell you that you are, and ask you to clothe yourself with wealth? If I ask you to clothe yourself with any state in this world; and then it doesn't hatch out tomorrow because tomorrow is not the moment of hatching out, but you're anxious; and then you say to me, "But where is it coming from, how will it come?" should I really discuss it with you? Would not…that is a lack of faith on your part if you say, well, I'm wearing it. If I'm wearing it, it should be just as real to you as the room is real.

That's the good news of the kingdom. If I really want anything in this world, I clothe myself with it, just as though it were true, and then let it hatch out. All things have moments between the moment of assumption and the fulfillment of that assumption. We either believe it or we don't believe it, and not a thing I can do to persuade you to believe it. I can just simply throw it out, and in this audience this night there are those who will accept it and those who will reject it…not a thing I can do about it. I can only tell you of the kingdom of God and tell you these are the states through which we pass.

So, I hope you've passed through the state of John the Baptist. But it makes no difference. If you haven't passed through, I'll tell you, you will pass through it. And so, when the wheel turns as it will turn; for all come to the inevitable end and so everyone will make their exit from this world; and if they haven't before they exit from this world passed through John the Baptist, they will when the wheel comes back again pass through it. For there is no death; nothing dies in God's world. It seems to die, but the world does not end where my senses seem to disappear from it…it doesn't. So if the wheel is turning and turning, and you and I are turning on the wheel until by…except after John the Baptist, before we are plucked from the wheel, we begin to live by the promise called the gospel or the good news of God.

So here, this night you take it and test it. If you test it, may I tell you, you'll prove it in performance; if you don't test it, you will never know. And so, it is Christ in you that you must test. Christ became man, God became man, that man may become God. So this John the Baptist spoken of in scripture is not a little man born of Elizabeth, who was a cousin of Jesus. Forget it! These are only related states—a cousin is a relative—and so these are related states that's all. It hasn't a thing to do with my cousin born of my sister. No, that's not the cousin. They were cousins separated in time: John came before and Jesus followed. Jesus is not a man. Jesus is the fulfillment of God's plan, God's promise, God's purpose, where he comes forward and he awakens as himself, and that self is Jesus Christ.

So, the last state man passes through is John the Baptist, where he does violence to himself. Now, he is clothed in camel's hair and a leather girdle. The most external parts of a man is hair and skin; so he's clothed in camel's hair and a leather girdle. So here, he's…the most external thing that man could ever have on a body would be the camel's hair and the leather girdle. And he said, "If you will accept it, he is Elijah come again." Go back and read the story of Elijah. He was clothed in camel's hair and a leather girdle. It means that the mind is clothed with something external. I think if I give to the poor, if I contribute to the church, if I go to church every Sunday, and I do all the external things then I am now getting into the kingdom of heaven. So I abide by all external things and that doesn't get me any place into the kingdom of heaven.

Then I begin to do violence to my appetite. I restrain the impulse to do this, that, or the other, not knowing that life itself is nothing more than the appeasement of hunger, and God and only God gives me the different hungers. And the final hunger he gives me is the hunger for the word of God. The very last hunger, as told us in the Book of Amos: "I will send a famine upon the world. It will not be for bread or a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the word of God" (8:11). And so, the last hunger to come upon man is to hear the word of God. To hear it is to experience it. I want to experience the reality of what is said in scripture. And so I will hear it, and I'm so hungry to hear it I will experience it; then comes man's individual experience. So man must experience scripture for himself to understand how wonderful it is. When he experiences scripture, the hunger that preceded the experience is now satisfied by the experience.

And so that is what comes out when he enters into the state called Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is the flower, the fulfillment of God's purpose. So in the end there's nothing but Jesus Christ. So then we are told, in that day or, "On that day the Lord is one and his name one," and that name is Jesus. All come out as he. But they must pass through the state called John the Baptist, and John is but a state. And all must pass through that state doing violence to themselves in the hope that in some way it is seen by someone above him, and by that seeing he enters into the state called salvation. You cannot save yourself. No man can save himself. It's the gift of grace; it's the gift of God. You could this very moment become the most strict vegetarian in the world, teetotaler, non-smoker, celibate—go to the extreme state and make yourself so impotent that you couldn't possibly even entertain the thought—and yet you cannot by such violence to yourself enter the kingdom of God. The kingdom of God is entered by grace. But you pass through the violence to self, and then you come out.

May I tell you, when you do come out, there'll always be those who mock you…always those. So, when he comes into the world they call him a glutton, and they call him a drunkard and the friend of sinners. And may I tell you, when I came back after seven years of this rigid discipline, and those who saw me in this meeting one night, when I got up and suddenly confessed what I am now doing, that a few ladies in the audience cried. Because they thought they had in me some personal savior, and I became to them an image that cracked and broke; and they saw in me now an utter failure, one who normally drank and normally ate meat. To them I was a complete disillusioned being. And it happens to every being in this world. You'll pass through it. I am sharing with you my own experience. And no man can speak with any grater authority than when he speaks from experience; for a truth that man knows from experience he knows more thoroughly than he knows anything else in this world, or than he can know that same truth in any other way.

So if I tell you of this experience, you may believe me or you may disbelieve me. Even those who believe me will not know it to the extent they will know it after they themselves have had the experience. And so you pass through. But don't encourage it, don't this night say, "I will simply go on a vegetable diet, I will give up liquor, I'll give up smoking, I'll give up sex in the hope that I'm going to pass through this state." It doesn't come that way. It comes in a strange way…it came to me in the strangest way. I ordered the most wonderful roast beef, may I tell you—I was in Syracuse, New York—and I love my meat, and I ordered the most wonderful roast beef. And as I put my knife into it, I actually felt I was cutting the animal alive. I took the plate and pushed it away. I could not take one piece from that plate…and for seven years I couldn't. So it happened that way. I couldn't touch a piece of meat, a piece of fowl, an egg or fish for seven years. But it happened…I was ___(??) for seven years. And I ordered from the menu roast beef, as I always loved it, and as it was delivered I just thought it would be marvelous, and as I put my knife right into it, I was cutting into the animal and pushed the whole thing away. For seven years it was that way. And coming back to the States I did everything I had not done in seven years. That's how you pass through the state called John the Baptist and come into the state called Jesus Christ.

But before you are lifted off the wheel, you must prove that this is good news. And good news is that everything in this world that you want you can have if you clothe yourself with it. It doesn't mean you're lifted off the wheel, but clothe yourself with it. You want to be rich? How would you feel were you rich? You want to be healthy? How would you feel were you healthy? You want to be free of all embarrassment? How would you feel this night if you were not embarrassed, that not a thing in this world could embarrass you? How would you feel were it so? And you clothe yourself with these states, one after the other, and be faithful to the clothing that you wear, and let it unfold in your world. It will! It will completely unfold in your world and you will see it.

Then as you practice with it and actually believe in the good news of the kingdom of God, suddenly, when you least expect it, one after the other, a series of events that God predetermined to awaken himself will awaken within you. Because, God has prepared a way for himself to return individualized as you, completely prepared, and no one can stop the way. He's prepared that way, and so, at very end, all of a sudden the series begins to unfold, and you are it unfolding; and you are he— the one who became you and took himself through the furnaces, all through John into Jesus Christ—and you awake as he.

There's not a thing I can tell you to persuade you to accept it. And I wouldn't raise a finger to make it so, because I am not convinced by speculation: I am convinced by knowing having experienced it. And so, if all the great teachers of the churches of the world stood before me in opposition, it would make no difference to me whatsoever. They, too, will pass through these states because they aren't elected to these states by men. So the heads of all the great churches of the world, if they stood before me now, I could say to them, if you have not experienced it, you will. And your greatness in this world is as naught, it is nothing, for the least in the kingdom is greater than you; for the least in the kingdom has a greatness that you cannot measure by anything on earth. And if you have not experienced this, no matter how great you are with all the medals pinned upon you by men who vanish in this world, it is as nothing. But the day will come you'll go through John the Baptist. He's not a man who lived 2,000 years ago. He represents a state of consciousness that's eternal, through which every soul must pass, and passing through they do violence to their appetites. They come out of it and enter the state called Jesus Christ; and they believe the story of the good news of God, and actually prove it in performance. They prove it and prove it until that moment in time when they're lifted off the wheel of recurrence, and they enter the kingdom of God.

But, here we are told concerning John, the law and the prophets until John. It starts the great law and all through the great prophets until John (Mat. 11:13)…there comes a stop…from then the good news of the kingdom is preached. And everyone enters the kingdom violently. I read here in the most recent scholarly works this passage, which is the 16th chapter, the 16th verse of the Book of Luke, and these great scholars, and there were hundreds of them in discussion, and they confessed it doesn't make sense. It only adds confusion to confusion, based upon an earlier passage that they can't understand what he means that all of a sudden everyone enters the kingdom violently, and this thing happens after John. Well, may I tell you, it's true; it happened to me, and I can't tell you how violent you are when you enter—not angry but sheer, sheer energy. You use a power that you have never heard of on earth. We speak of a power, of blowing up a whole city with one bomb, blowing up a country with a bomb. It doesn't compare to the power that you exert in that moment of entrance into the kingdom of God. When you are whipped up in the form of a spiral into your own skull, it is as though it takes that energy to ram you into the eternal structure that God has predetermined; as though the whole vast skull is being filled, and you fill one niche forever and forever. But you move into it with such power the whole thing radiates, the whole thing shakes like an earthquake; as though the whole vast world is an earthquake. And then suddenly when you are completely in it and then riveted in, then it subsides, and it's all quiet, and you return here to the world of Caesar. So the world is stating in that 16th verse of the 16th chapter of Luke: "Everyone enters it violently." May I tell you, it must, because it takes an enormous power to drive you into that part prepared for you. It's been waiting for you since the beginning of time, and you move into that one part prepared for you, and you move in so forcibly the whole structure vibrates. Then it subsides and you're back.

So, you go home this night and clothe yourself in the joy of being the man, the woman that you want to be. I tell you it will not fail you! Now let us go into the Silence.

* * *

Q: (inaudible)

A: Yes, my dear, certainly. The lady's question is "Do you think we could have gone through the state of John in a life before this?" Why certainly, I wouldn't doubt that for one moment, and come out of it knowing that these things are not necessary for the kingdom of God…with all the temptations of the world. For we have all kinds of cults in this world who are playing as a cult. They don't know it's the state called John the Baptist, inviting everyone into it. They give up wearing fur, they give up eating meat, give up drinking, give up smoking, give up sex, and they're all inviting us into that cult, and they call themselves houses of religion. But, people are persuaded to enter that, and then they give up all these things, and do violence to their appetites. You might have passed through that. I'm not saying that you did or did not. So I'm saying to you, to answer your question, certainly, many of us could have gone through that state and in this world tonight you could be called into the kingdom of heaven. Because you're told, when the question was asked, "Tell me, Lord, is it now that you will restore the kingdom to Israel?" And he corrected their question and then answered, "It's not for you to know the time or the season which is fixed by God by his own authority. But you'll receive power after the Holy Spirit has come upon you" (Acts 1:6). Therefore, wait for the promise, just wait for it. You could have gone through it, and this very night…it is my constant hope that everyone who hears me is this very night lifted up into the experience, because, I can't tell anyone the thrill of being aware of the fact that you are a part of the kingdom of God. And there should be no delay beyond that moment in time when God calls you. And I'm ___(??) quite sure there is no delay.

Q: (inaudible)

A: Well, my dear, when this thing happens from above and you are awakened from this deep, deep sleep…

Q: (inaudible)

A: Oh, I didn't even know I was asleep. I didn't know when I was awakened in my skull to find myself completely enclosed within my skull and my skull is a sepulcher. And it's not a little tiny place like this here, for I only wear a seven-size hat, and I couldn't get into a seven-size hat. So it's not this, but it is my skull. And so here, I awake. I find myself waking but unlike the usual waking which comes every morning when I awake. This is something different—I'm waking, and I awake in my skull. My skull is a tomb, it's a sepulcher. And here I am completely awake now for the first time in thousands of years, but I am entombed. That's the resurrection. The resurrection begins the whole drama. And then out I come, being born like a child. The birth is symbolized in that of a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes. So, this series of events differs completely from all other mystical experiences.

Neville 09-13-1968

ONE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED SIXTY DAYS

According to a rabbinical principle, what is not written in the Old Testament does not exist. The life of Jesus follows this principle. He made no attempt to change the world of Caesar or its social order, but left it just as it is, for man to make mistakes and live as he desires. Urging man to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's, Jesus comes into our lives for one purpose and that is to fulfill scripture. Tonight I want to show you how this is done in 1,260 days.

Daniel confesses in the last chapter of his book that he did not understand the vision, when: "A man stood clothed in linen, above the water, who said to me, 'The words are closed and sealed until the time of the end.' I asked him how long shall it be to the end of these wonders and he said, 'A time, two times, and half a time.'" In Hebrew thought, a time is a year or 360 days; so we have three years of 360 days each and a half year of 180 days, which equal 1,260 days. Daniel was not told when the signs would begin, only that it would take 1,260 days to complete them.

Let us now turn to the 12th chapter of the Book of Revelation, where John tells us: "I saw in the heavens a great pulpit. A woman clothed with the sun, wearing a crown of twelve stars upon her head, was standing on the moon. In labor and with great pain she brought forth a male child, which was caught up to the throne of God. Fleeing into the wilderness to a place prepared for her, she was fed for 1,260 days." Here we find the clue to the beginning of the 1,260 days as the birth of the child.

Now, the manner of Jesus' birth is - for those who know who he is - a sign of divine initiative in our redemption. No doubt you have heard the story of Jesus' birth unnumbered times, told as some man who was born almost 2,000 years ago; but let me tell you: if there is any other Jesus Christ other than he who is buried, rose, and continues to rise in individual men and women, he is a false Christ. And any teacher who talks about Jesus as someone from without misleads the millions who hear the story. We carry in our body the death of Jesus. If we have been united with him in a death like his, we shall certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his as he rises in us individually; therefore, who is he? From my own personal experience (I am not theorizing, I am not speculating) I know that your awareness, your I AMness is Christ Jesus, who is the Lord God Jehovah. The word "Jesus" is the anglicized form of the Hebrew word "Joshua" which means "savior." We are told: "I am the Lord, your God, your savior, and beside me there is no savior." It is the Lord God Jehovah who became as we are that we may be as he is; therefore there is no intermediary between you and God, your savior.

Now to the 1,260 days. On July 20 of the year 1959, my day was normal. I lectured in the morning to a large audience in San Francisco. Calling my wife around 9:00 P.M., I read the Bible and a bit of Blake and retired about 11:00 P.M., expecting nothing other than a normal, restful sleep. At 4:00 in the morning, a vibration centered at the base of my skull began to increase in intensity until I thought I would explode from the force of it. I am not a doctor, but I have read of massive brain hemorrhages and thought I was having one. I couldn't conceive of living through this experience, yet I was unable to arrest it. Then I began to awaken, to discover that I was completely sealed within my own skull. I had but one consuming desire, and that was to get out of it. Intuitively knowing that if I would push the base of my skull something would give, I did, and something rolled away as I came out inch by inch just as a child emerges from the womb of a woman.

Then the imagery spoken of in the books of Luke and Matthew began to appear before me: the witnesses to the event and the child wrapped in swaddling clothes. I was unseen by those who were present. They spoke of me and knew the child was mine; but me they could not see, for I was clothed in an entirely different body of spirit, and no longer the flesh and blood body that they knew. I not only saw them, I could discern their every thought. And when the child was placed upon the bed and I picked it up and looked into its face and said: "How is my sweetheart?" it broke into a heavenly smile. Then the vision was caught up into the heavens and disappeared from sight, for the whole thing had come out of me.

Then on January 1, 1963, the fourth event appeared in the form of a dove who descended on me and smothered me with love.

Now, I have recorded the date of every great mystical event I have experienced, next to the passage of scripture which parallels it. Next to the passage concerning the resurrection, I had marked July 20, 1959. That was one side of the coin, for the same night was the birth; so against the passage regarding the birth of Christ (who is the Son of God who is one with God) I also wrote the date of July 20, 1959.

When another vibration exploded in my head and David of Biblical fame stood before me and called me "Father", I wrote the date of December 6, l959 next to the passage in the 89th Psalm, where the Lord said: "I have found David. He has cried unto me, 'Thou art my Father, my God and the Rock of my salvation.'"

On the 8th day of April, 1960, a bolt of lightning split me in two from the top of my head to the base of my spine and I separated. At the base of my spine I saw golden liquid light, which I knew to be myself. Fusing with it, I ascended like a serpent in a fire of lightning back into my skull, as it reverberated as though shattered. I recorded that vision as against the passages: "The curtain of the Lord was split in two from top to bottom" and: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up."

Here recently I was reading the Book of Daniel, gathering my thoughts together as I was on my way to San Francisco to start a series of lectures on the 15th of July. Sitting alone in my living room with my Bible in my hand, memory returned and I knew that if I counted the days between my resurrection and birth, and the descent of the dove, it would come to 1,260 days. Checking the dates I had recorded in my Bible, I discovered that there were 139 days between the first event (the resurrection and birth) and the second one, which was the discovery of David and the fatherhood of God. The third vision appeared 123 days later, with the fourth and final vision arriving in 998 days. No matter how many times I checked them, they always came out to 1,260 days. Here is a definite pattern of four major visions which complete themselves in 1,260 days, making the one who experiences them the pattern man.

Now, the calendar of the ancients differed from ours. Their year consisted of 360 days, which were divided into twelve equal parts of thirty days each. I did not use the ancient calendar, but our modern one, yet the pattern remained the same: 1,260 days. If tomorrow someone changes the calendar, the same number of days will appear between the birth of God in Man and the descent of the Holy Spirit.

Now, against the passage: "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me because he has anointed me to proclaim liberty to the captives and to open the eyes of those who are in prison" (recorded in the 61st chapter of Isaiah) I wrote January 1, 1963. I can now say with the central figure of scripture: "This scripture has been fulfilled in me. The book is now closed, given back to the attendant, for I know who Christ really is."

I have not changed my identity, but now wear a garment - although unseen by mortal eye - that is all power. There is nothing here on earth to compare it with. No longer am I an animated form. I now know myself to be a life-giving spirit. The power that I know myself to be animates all forms, so I know now who Christ really is.

As a child I was raised in a Christian environment and taught that Jesus was a man outside of me. Although I read in the scriptures: "I carry in my body the death of Jesus" it meant nothing to me. And "If I am united with him in a death like his I will certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his," were only words, for I was taught Christ was another, someone different, and not a simple, normal man. But now I know that God assumed the weakness and limitations of man by assuming his form. The rabbis of the day, however, expected some fantastic being to come out of space and lead Israel out of its misery and enslave those who had enslaved Israel - but that is not the story. God became Man and erupts in Man in these four mighty acts. I have experienced all of the events recorded in the Old Testament, but the ones I have spoken of tonight are the four important ones.

We are told that when Jesus stood upon the Mount of Olives, they asked him: "When will you come and what will be the sign of your coming?" Pointing to the wonderful buildings, he said: "You see these buildings? I tell you, not one stone will be standing upon another that will not be thrown down. That is when you will know." On the 21st day of December, l960, I came upon fantastic city of tall buildings, and as I looked at each building it tumbled until not one stone was left standing upon the other. So I wrote that date against this prophecy in the 24th chapter of Matthew and the 13th of Mark. Other visions came after the 1,260 days. I recorded them, but the important ones are these four. The first, a dual one - the resurrection and birth. The second, a single vision - the discovery of David, who called me Father.

Who would have thought that a man born in this century was the father of one recorded to have lived 3,000 years ago? But there was no other way that God could give himself to us and prove that he did it equally, unless his only begotten Son revealed it. And when David calls me Father and calls you Father, are we not one? How could we ever know we are one unless we have the same son who calls us Father?

David will one day rise in the life of everyone so that all will know that he (or she) is God the Father. Although it may sound strange, I tell you that you - a lady - will know you are the Father. You see, sex belongs only to this level. When these visions come upon you, you are in a region above the organization of sex, so you will not think it strange when David calls you Father, as you will know that you are neither male nor female, but Man, and God is Man. Seeing your wonderful Son is the fulfillment of the 2nd Psalm. In it David speaks, saying: "I will tell you of the decree of the Lord. He said unto me: 'Thou art my Son, today I have begotten thee.'"

Start counting from the day the child appears, to the descent of the dove, and you will discover it to be 1,260 days. I tell you the Bible is literally true, but it is not concerned with the world of Caesar. If tomorrow you rose to the heights of this world and received all the worldly honors offered here, in time they would turn to ash. Oh yes, apply the law and have all of the worldly gifts you desire while you are here. Live graciously, but I tell you: only as you fulfill scripture do you really fulfill God's purpose.

The visions come suddenly, like a thief in the night. I had no idea that the night of July 20, 1959 would differ from any other. I did not know that the story of Jesus Christ was mine. I did not know Jesus interpreted the Old Testament with himself as the very center of it; that the human imagination - our human IAMness - was He. But now I know that there never was another Jesus and there never will be another, and those who teach another are false teachers teaching a false Christ.

Let me share a vision with you now. We are told in the Book of Jeremiah that God sacrificed himself. In the story, Isaac said to Abraham: "Father, I see the fire and I see the wood, but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" Abraham answered his son, saying: "The Lord will provide himself, the lamb." Here we see that no earthly sacrifice is required, for God sacrifices himself. He is the lamb provided for the great offering. Well, about two weeks ago, just before we retired, my wife said to me: "I can't go to sleep before I tell you what has been disturbing me all day. I had a vivid vision when I saw you bathed in radiant light, carrying yourself in your arms. It was the same kind of a limp body as seen in Michelangelo's Pieta, only you - a radiant being - were carrying yourself, the sacrificed one."

Here is a vision with tremendous spiritual significance. This vision was showing her the only way that man can ever awake. You are God! You, yourself, became human for a divine purpose. You died, and at the very end you will see the symbol of what you did. It's the story of the seed: "Unless a seed falls into the ground and dies it remains alone, but if it dies it brings forth much." The seed of God is His image and Jesus Christ is the sperm which is buried in Man. One day he will appear in the form as I have just revealed him to you, and you will reflect the glory of God the Father and bear the very stamp of his person.

There is only God. There cannot be another, so in the end there is Jesus only. Transfiguration takes place when all of the promises of God are fulfilled. Moses, the personification of the law, appears and Elijah, the personification of the prophecy is there; but having fulfilled the law and the prophecy, their personifications vanish, leaving Jesus only. That's the story.

Zechariah tells us that on that day "The Lord will be king over all the earth and the Lord will be one and his name one." In the end, all of us, without loss of identity, will form that one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all. In eternity I will know you far more intimately than I can ever know you here, for now - like Pieta - you are wearing a mask; but the being I will know in eternity is he who is behind that mask. Yes, I will know you, yet I will know you as myself, for we will all form that one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all.

Who, reading the scriptures today, would believe that they could be taken literally and fulfilled literally; yet I know from experience that they are. Before I began to count I knew it was going to come out to 1,260 days. I checked each date as I had recorded it when it happened. I didn't go back and put a date in - and no matter how I checked it, it always came out to 1,260 days.

The Bible is truly the Book of books, and what is not written there is non-existent. The day will come when this building will crumble, the house you live in and the clothes you now wear will be left behind, for everything that comes into this world of death waxes, wanes, and vanishes. But God's eternal Word will never pass away, and everyone born of woman will fulfill it. "My Word shall not return unto me void. It must accomplish that which I purposes and prosper in the thing for which I have sent it." You were sent here to fulfill scripture. Methods other than those I have spoken of tonight have [not?] been added, for they have not been found in the oldest manuscripts. Revelation gives you the event to start the count, but those not knowing this teach the end of the age; but this is not true. The world goes on as before, but you, individually, reach the end of your age.

Having finished the job, you will say with Paul: "The time for my departure has come. I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness." After the dove descends there is not a thing to do but continue fulfilling scripture. In my own case on the 10th of October, 1966, a glorious vision was mine and against the 53rd chapter of Isaiah I recorded that date: "Who will believe our report, and to whom has the arm of the Lord been revealed?"

On that night I experienced the betrayal as told us in the Book of John (and the 41st of Psalms, because the New Testament only fulfills the Old): "My friend who ate my food has lifted up his heel against me."

I am seated in a room, square, but not so large as this, where I am speaking to twelve men (who are seated in front of me) about the Word of God. I said something that caused a man on my left to rise and quickly leave the room. The moment he did I knew he was going to report to the authorities what he had heard. Suddenly a tall, handsome man in his forties wearing a very costly robe entered the room. Recognizing the dignity and authority of the man, we all rose and stood at attention as he entered. Standing straight as an arrow, he walked to the end of the room, turned at a right angle, walked to the end, again turned right and moving to the center, he came forward and faced me.

Taking a wooden mallet, he hammered a wooden peg into my shoulder. Although it wasn't painful, I felt the impact of every blow. Then with a circular, sharp instrument he cut off my sleeve and with one sweeping motion he pulled it off, revealing my right arm from the shoulder to the tips of my fingers. Stretching out his arms, he embraced me, kissed me on the right side of my neck as I kissed him on the right side of his neck. As I did, I saw the discarded sleeve, which was a beautiful shade of pale blue, and I knew it was also of costly fabric. Then the vision dissolved.

I now know from experience that the arm of the Lord has been revealed in me. When Daniel told this story, he said: "I saw in a vision of the night, under the clouds of heaven one came like the son of man, who was presented to the Ancient of Days. To him was given dominion and authority over all peoples, ages and races and of his reign there shall be no end." Everyone is going to be a part of that one body which rules everything here. The moment I was incorporated into it I had that dominion, that authority; but it will not be used as long as I wear this garment of flesh and blood. I remain here now only to tell my story to encourage others to have faith, and to set their hope fully upon this grace that is coming to them. The day will come when I will take this garment of flesh off for the last time to be one with the body of God forever and ever.

That vision did not come within the 1,260 days; it came after, so I recorded it in my Bible. If I had dropped this garment the night of the dove it would have been perfectly all right, for in that vision the heavens became translucent and the dove floated twenty or so feet above my head. It made no motion with its wings, but simply floated on crystal clear water with me submerged twenty feet below. So when the dove appeared to descend, it didn't come through water; instead I must have emerged, as told in the story: "When Jesus came out of the water the dove descended upon him." The way this story is told, people think of earthly water; but in the vision the water was crystal clear, so translucent I could not tell if it was liquid or not. Do you know that we are actually living at the bottom of an ocean of air? In the spiritual sense we are in the flood, and when the dove appears he floats until the individual emerges. Then the dove takes your finger and smothers the individual with kisses.

Tonight you have heard a mystery that I personally have not read in any book. I never heard it. I can say with Paul: "I wasn't taught it. I never heard it. It came through a series of self-revealing acts of God." I did not reach these conclusions philosophically by long reflections; they came suddenly, unveiling me as the central figure of scripture, so I can say: "In the volume of the Book it is all about me." The day will come when everyone will know that in the volume of the book it is all about him.

When we are told: "If you do not believe that I am he you will die in your sins," it is not some man speaking, saying you must believe in him. No, the drama is unfolding in us and unless you individually believe that you are Jesus Christ you will die in your sins. It's just as simple as that. I must persuade myself that I am he. If the Book was written of me, then it had to have happened before that the world was; so now it has to happen here. We have come down into garments of flesh and blood, garments of sin and death, to walk through states as these things happen in some remote region of our soul.

Now let us go into the silence.

4-L
S2

ORDER: THEN WAIT

16 April 1971

God and man are inseparable. We are all members of the Divine Body, partakers of the Divine nature. We cannot be separated. We are one.

Now, let us turn to Scripture for confirmation of what I have just said. I now quote from the 64th chapter of the Book of Isaiah: "O Lord, Thou art our Father. We are the clay. Thou art our Potter. We are the work of Thy hand."

Now, listen to it carefully. The word translated the "Lord" is "I AM." That is our Father; and you can't put "I AM" away from yourself. Now, the word translated "potter" is "imagination." He didn't say, "the potter," -- "our Potter."

So, "O Lord, Thou art our Father; we are the clay. Thou art our Potter; we are the work of Thy hand."

So here, my own wonderful human imagination is now identified with the Lord. It's the word "Jehovah." And this is called the "father." So, I am Self-begotten. We are self-begotten. We're not the product of something other than ourselves. These terms are interchangeable: "the Lord," "Father," "Potter," "Imagination." For "potter" is defined in the Concordance as "imagination; that which forms or molds into form; that which makes a resolution; that which determines." For we are told, "Commune with your own hearts on your beds, and be silent."

For, "if we know that He hears us in whatever we ask, we know that we have obtained the request from Him."

It's not "another." Can I actually have that confidence in myself? Can I actually, this night, commune with my own heart on my bed and be silent? -- knowing that I heard what I did? I know exactly what I did. Can I have confidence in that action? for there is no other god. There is no other "Lord" to whom I can turn.

Let us take, now, the 18th chapter of Jeremiah. He said, "My people have forgotten me and burned incense to false gods." You read that in the 18th chapter, the 15th verse, of Jeremiah.

But now we go back to the beginning of the chapter: "And the word came to Jeremiah from the Lord." The word "Jeremiah" means "Jehovah will rise," which implies in his name that he is asleep and has not yet been awakened. "The word came to Jeremiah from the Lord: Arise and go down to the Potter's house, and I will let you hear my word."

So, "I went down to the Potter's house, and there he was, working at his wheel; but the vessel in his hand was spoiled; so he reworked it into another vessel, as it seemed good to the potter to do."

We have just discovered that "potter" is my own imagination. I go down to the potter's house. Well, I have just been told "our Potter" is one with the Lord, who is our Father. So, where do I go? Into some little place where a man is working with clay? Oh, he is working with clay, but I've just discovered that I am the clay. "We are the clay." We are the fruit of your efforts; we have discovered Who He is. He is my own imagination! So, I turn to my own imagination, and I wonder, What did you imagine yourself to be today? Broke? Unemployed? Let out? What did you do this day in the Potter's house? for the Potter is your own wonderful human imagination. Now, this day, what was the concept you held of yourself? It's entirely up to me, for there's no one to whom I can turn. I have to turn to my Self. Well, that is the Potter! And that is the only Jehovah; that's the only Lord, the only Jesus.

So when asked, "What do you think of Jesus?" Blake replied, "It is the only God; but so am I, and so are you."

"Jesus" is "God-awake." He is the Jeremiah when he sleeps; that is "Jehovah-will-arise." He does arise, and when He rises, it is "God-awake."

So, I will go down, -- if I know the story, I will still go down while I still am asleep. I am not fully aware of the fact I am the Being spoken of, but I will test it. I will try it. I'll go to the Potter's house; and the Potter is my own imagination.

Now, this day, what did I imagine? Was it spoiled in my hand? Or, was it something that I thought lovely, and I want to preserve it and make it a real state in my world? Or, could I change it somewhat and make it better? Well, if I could make it better, then make it better, because there is no one to whom I can turn. I must go to my own heart on my own bed; and then when I do what I am called upon to do, be silent, -- have complete trust in that which I have done.

If I have complete trust in it, it must come to pass because there is no other Creator. There is no Creator in the world but your own wonderful human imagination, and that is the Immortal You. It cannot cease to be when this little "garment" that you are now "wearing" for creative purposes is taken off, -- and you'll do it. You will take it off on time.

Whether the world calls it "suicide" or not, every death is a suicide, because there is no one else to take it from me, even though he shoots me! No matter what he does to me, it's only myself, because we are all "partakers of the one Divine nature." We are all coexistent with God, and God and man are inseparable. They are one.

So, I cannot turn to another, although in my blindness, I burn incense to a false god. I am called upon to be perfectly still and know: I AM GOD. As we are told in the 46th Psalm, the 10th verse: "Be still and know I am God. I kill; I make alive. I wound; I heal." I do all these things. "And there is none that can deliver out of my hand."

Your 32d chapter of Deuteronomy, your 39th verse -- there is no one doing anything but God, and God and man are one; but the Man of Whom I speak is your own wonderful human imagination. That's the real You, the Immortal You.

So, in the Book of Amos, he asks the question: "Does evil befall a city, unless God has done it?" "Does evil befall a city, unless God has done it?"

Now we know Who God is; so all the horrors of the world that befall us, -- God did it! But who is God? Our own wonderful human imagination. Yes, even the earthquakes, the volcanoes, -- every horror of the world, and every lovely thing in the world, -- our own wonderful human imagination did it, because that is one with the Lord Jehovah. There is only one God, and there is no other god.

Now, if you think that it is atheistic, you may think what you will, but I don't think you will. But the world, not yet brought into this concept will think it so. Yet I can tell you, before we began the Fall, -- we didn't fall because of some mistake we made. This was a deliberate descent in consciousness to this level for a purpose; to prove our own creative power, that we could actually come down into this world and face death -- what seems to be eternal death, and conquer it. Not pretend we are dying, but actually die, and see them all die around us, and still conquer it. But before we came down, we set up a plan. We prepared a way for ourselves to return, and that way is described in Scripture, -- and I've told it night after night after night; for no one can really see you -- the Real Being that you are. They see the mask that you wear, but not the Being that you are. Not through mortal eyes can they see it.

His Glory is completely hidden from mortal eyes, but you will know it when you see the Son. That Son -- the sum total of all the experiences of the world -- stands before you, and then you know. Memory returns. And he will stand before every one in this world, and memory will return; and then comes the final curtain when it comes down on all, and we are the brothers that we were "before that the world was." Every one glorified, every one returned to the glory that he deliberately, consciously gave up to assume the limitation of these "garments" that we are "wearing" now.

We will not shirk it. All the "garments," all the weaknesses that we took upon ourselves, -- I am telling you from experience.

Here, yesterday morning, it's a little after 4:00; and these very wise men -- seemingly wise men -- in the medical field; and then a woman, an attractive lady in her 40's, and she was a psychiatrist, also of the medical field but a psychiatrist. And I was brought into the picture of the three and they were giving me all this nonsense; and I said, "I know exactly your intention, but to me it's all stupid. It's all nonsense."

Then came into my mind that which I knew I wrote unnumbered years ago, "before that the world was"; it's recorded in Scripture. But memory returns. They were so wise -- these grand adults. I said, "Except ye become as a little child, ye cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven," and they looked startled. I said, "Well now, I am intelligent enough to know what you are telling me. I understand every word you are telling me, but I do not accept it. Now, a little child may not understand what I am telling the child, but the child trusts me. It has oonfidence in me, and will say, "I believe."

Unless you, with all your socalled wisdom of this world -- the outside, conscious world -- can drop it and believe the story that I will tell you, for if I told you what I have experienced, you in your present conscious state could not accept it. You have to turn and become as a child to really accept it. If I told you of a different kind of a birth than that which you know, and the only thing that you know, -- and you are giving me all this, -- I am giving you the word "baloney," for that's what I meant, -- all this nonsense and she came to me and placed her face against mine. I said, I know exactly what your intentions are. That is your therapy? May I tell you? it's stupid! I have not a thing wrong with me; and secondly, your therapy is nonsense, pure nonsense. If you will only listen for one moment, I will tell you what your reasoning mind cannot accept; but if you will become as a child -- for I know from my own experience, -- I have a little nephew who came through from Thailand recently, and he came over and I told him a story. He could not understand my story, but I said, "Do you believe that, Roger?"

"Yes!" He believes it. He couldn't understand what I am talking about, but he trusted me; and in trusting me, he believed it.

So, Blake, in writing his friend, Samuel Palmer, said: "You could see what I see, but you do not trust or cultivate it. All you have to do is simply work up imagination to the state of vision, and it's done." The whole thing is done! So, you can see what I see and do what I do, and all you need do is to work up imagination to the state of vision, and the thing is done!

So, he did not claim for himself something apart from Palmer; he was talking to his friend, Samuel Palmer, and thought, Well now, you are endowed with a certain faculty. He said, "I, too, have the faculty, but I cultivate it. I have the faculty and you have the faculty because we are one. Jesus, -- yes, is the only God, but so am I and so are you."

Jesus is God-awake; and I am telling you from experience, he sleeps in all. Call him "Father," call him "Joseph," who sleeps. He is the Dreamer. When he awakes, he is Jesus; and Jesus who calls himself the Son is one with the Father, but now the Father is awake, for in the end there is only God. There is only the Father.

So, I tell you, your own wonderful human imagination is God! It's not like God; it is God! There is no other god. And you cannot separate it, not for one moment. If you do, you'll burn incense to false gods and you will make all kinds of things on the outside of yourself and worship it; and that is not God.

I am speaking of the Immortal You that cannot die. It cannot die! That is God, -- so confident that it could overcome death that it gave up its beauty, its glorified Body, and took upon itself this [indicating the physical body] and became obedient unto death, even death upon this "cross." And yet, it could overcome it.

But I tell you, not one is going to fail. Many will doubt it, but not one can fail! He would leave the ninety and nine, who awoke, and go in search of the one who is still asleep. I cannot for one moment rest if one of my brothers is not redeemed. And may I tell you? the world may not believe this, may not know it; but it is the true and reawakening of imagination that the whole vast world aches for. That is a spiritual experience that crowns and redeems experience. It is that great event that actually crowns this experience, for without that, what would be the experience?

It is the awakening of the Being Who deliberately fell asleep to have this experience, because this power is so great, unless he gave up his power and his glorified body, what challenge could you give him? So, he had to completely give it up, and take upon himself the restrictions and the limitations of man -- this little thing here [indicating the body].

But That Which is now dreaming in man is one with God, and is God. That is the Father.

So, "O Lord, Thou art our Father; we are the clay. Thou art our Potter, and we are the work of Thy hand." Our imagination is the Lord. Our imagination is the Father, and in search of the Father. I am in search of my Self. I am looking for my Self; and when I find Him, I find Him only through the means that I set up in the beginning "before that the world was," and that was a son. For if I am a father, there must be a son. So, I set him up in the beginning, that when I go through all the experiences that I can ever have in the world of death and decay, -- when I come out of it, it has to mold itself into one being, and that is the fruit of my effort, and he is the son, and his name is David.

So, when I meet David, suddenly the whole thing returns, and here is my memory. That which I gave up returns, and he stands before me, and he calls me, Father. I am his lord; I am his father; and I know I am, and he knows I am; and that is the Crown that redeems the experiences, the horrors that I have gone through. For I have played all the parts. Not one part could I have omitted. Yes, the thief and the judge, the murderer and the murdered; I have played every part in the world. And that is why today, I can actually say, "Father," -- meaning my Self, -- "forgive them, for they do not know in their state of sleep what they do." Leave them just as they are. But tell the story over and over. "How often, Lord?"

"Seventy times seven."

Keep on telling it and telling it until it gets through and starts to shake the Dreamer within the one who is listening to you.

So, "unless you turn," said he, "and become as a child, you cannot enter the Kindgom of Heaven." So, all the educations of men, all these wonderful honors that we have applied on each other, -- they bury the mind and stop it from actually becoming like the child.

What I am telling you I could never have discovered through reason. I never could have found it in a book. It is in the Bible, but I didn't see it until it happened. Now I share with you what is already in the Bible, but I didn't know it until I experienced it. And when I experienced it, I began to really search Scripture to find that it was always there!

When I read that chapter, little did I realize that, "Thou, Lord, art our Father, our Potter." I always thought it meant something on the outside. And then I searched and searched to find that "potter" means "imagination; to mold into a form." But the word is "our Potter," not the imagination; -> our imagination. "Thou art our Potter." You mean the Lord? and the word is "Jehovah." They sound it as "Adonai"; "Adonai" is what we use instead of saying Jehovah. All right, so it is called "the Lord," defined in Scripture as "the Self Existent, eternal One, that has no beginning and no end." That is the God, the only Lord; and he is Father.

But it is "our Father." "O Lord, Thou are our Father." And now our Father is our Potter. And I have discovered, our "Potter" is our imagination! So, I am my own Father! But I didn't know it. And how would I know that that Father is the father of David, for David said, "I will tell of the decree of the Lord, and he said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee." But who would have thought for one moment, reading that story, -- thousands of years before this moment in time -- that it is speaking of me? Speaking of you? That we are the Father who said to David, "Thou art my son."

Then comes the deep, deep dream; and we dream these horrors of the world. And then comes that moment in time when I call myself from the Deep, for I am the Father. I am the Lord; and so, I call my own Being. I awaken myself, as I had predetermined at a certain moment in time after I have played all the parts.

But, "How long, how vast, how severe the anguish 'ere I found my Self were long to tell." But I found my Self, and the only one who could have revealed me to myself was my Son that I set up in the beginning "before that the world was."

So, then we are told: "No one knows who the Son is, except the Father; and no one knows who the Father is, except the Son, and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal Him," for he has to reveal Him in the end, and then the Father awakes.

Now, you take that 78th chapter of Psalms. The title of it is Asaph. That is, the Psalm is a Psalm of Asaph. "Asaph" means to gather together and to record, to take all the things and put them together. And then he said, "I will open up my mouth in a parable and utter dark sayings from of old," -- dark sayings from of old, things that are difficult and hard to understand. Then, now, he goes through the entire story of Israel, as we call it in the Old Testament, and he tells the entire story, and he tells you it is a parable. He tells you they are dark sayings, hard to understand; and then he comes to the end -- it is a nice long chapter, -- and what does he say? "And the Lord awoke as from sleep, like a man rising out of strong drink." And then he declared David. David is his Prince. David is his Shepherd over all the people.

At the very end, he records all the things through which man has gone, and then comes: "The Lord begins to awake," and He awakes as one out of sleep, like one waking from wine, strong wine, -- as though it were a drunken sleep, where all things could happen; and then He awakes! And who does he call? He calls David. And the whole thing ends on the note of David, after the entire series of parables.

So, a parable is a story told as though it were true, letting the one who hears it wrestle with it, letting him discover the meaning behind the written word. It's told as though it were true. Now, one has to discover the fiction from the fact. What is it trying to convey? It is telling a story. You will pass through the Red Sea. You will lift up the serpent in the wilderness. He is telling all these stories; and then it comes: "And then the Lord awakes."

He awakes from the parable, and finds the kernel. He finds the truth; and then He calls David. So David comes into view, and David stands before you and calls you, Father. And the joy that comes upon you when you see your son standing before you, -- you have no other child, just David. For your child in this world is a brother.

I have a son, I have a daughter; they are both my "brothers" in Eternity. I have a wife, and I have other brothers here; they are all my "brothers" in Eternity. For in Eternity, we are all above the organization of sex. We are the Elohim; and the "Elohim" is a plural word: "one made up of others," -- Elohim.

So, all of us are the gods who came down. So, when you hear the word tomorrow or you think of it tonight, do not let the mind jump to something on the outside. "Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and then be silent." But see that you commune as you want to mold that picture, for the whole verse is this: "Be angry, but sin not. Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be silent."

But it doesn't tell you not to be angry. So, the day has been an explosive day -- explode! Be angry, "but sin not." To "sin" is to "miss the mark." Don't now go to bed and let the sun descend upon your anger. All right, -- explode! Get it off your chest, as it were. Now take the whole thing that you would throw away in the past as a broken vessel and you can't repair it. No; keep the same vessel, and rework it now into a new shape as it seems good to you to do.

So, the end of a day, -- all right, so it wasn't a good day. Explode, and then: "But sin not. Don't let the sun descend upon your anger." Stand right there, and simply rework it. Rework what being? Rework yourself! You are the clay. This thing here [indicating the physical man] is seeing the world based upon what you have assumed that you are. So, now you actually do it.

Now, let me share with you a story. The lady is here tonight, -- this is the mother. She said, "Our son kept talking and talking and talking that he wanted a mini-bike. Well, his father and I did not want him to have a mini-bike; but he kept on talking and talking and talking about it; so, one day I thought, Now I will show him. I said, 'Now tell me, Dusty, if you had your mini-bike, where would it be now?' He said, 'In the garage.'"

She said, "All right, it's now in the garage. Right? There it is. Now, will you go and get it, and where would you use it?"

"Well," he said, "I would use it in the driveway."

Well, the mother said to Dusty, "Well, you can't do that, for we have neighbors, and they have stated in no uncertain terms they will not tolerate a mini-bike on their driveway; and their driveway joins ours. So, they will not allow it. Now, where else would you use it?"

"Well, I would use it on the street. I would drive it on the street."

"But is that allowed?" the mother said.

"Well," he said, "I don't know."

"Well, go and call the police and find out."

So, he went to the 'phone and called the police, and the police said, "No, you are not allowed to use a mini-bike on the streets."

All right, that was that. "Now, where else would you use it?"

"Well, in the May lot. The May Company has a huge big parking lot; I'll go over there and use it."

"You have to have permission. All right, go and call the May Company and ask for permission."

So, he went to the 'phone and called the May Company; and they said, "No; we are open seven days a week, and so we cannot allow a mini-bike in our parking lot for we have it used by our customers seven days a week."

So, when he got that, he went to his room for half an hour; and when he came out, he said, "I have made a decision. I don't really want a mini-bike at all."

And then the mother said, "You know, how often I've done the same thing! I thought really I wanted this -- I really want this, and then I ask myself, Now what would I do with it after I got it? Now, I have it now; what am I going to do with it? And I discovered, you know, I really don't want it at all!"

Well, may I tell you? having lived in one apartment in New York City for fourteen years -- the last apartment we had before we moved out here, we lived almost fourteen years in that apartment. It was a seven-room apartment -- a duplex. I had no idea what junk we stored over fourteen years! We called in our Sisters-in-Law, that is, Bill's two sisters, and her aunt and said, 'Pick out all these things.' They took one third of our furniture, and said, 'There it is, take what you can.'"

What they didn't take, we called the church and said, "Send your van for it for your thrift shop." We gave away a third of what we had accumulated. When we came out here, I regretted I hadn't given away fifty per cent or maybe two-thirds. When we came out here, I couldn't find places for my books. I gave away over four hundred books that I felt I didn't need. I had read them; that was part of my growth.

As a man grows in this world, he is growing from a god of tradition into a God of experience; so, these were part of my growth in the god of tradition. And then I still kept them. Well, maybe some one can use them now; so I gave a friend of mine who lives here, well over four hundred books, and I gave another fifty or so books -- and all these; and I still have too many books!

You grow, and you outgrow, and you grow and you outgrow; and all these things that we kept and kept and kept for fourteen years, we accumulated them. Where we kept them, I really do not know: under the bed, under this, -- all places. And finally came the day of moving.

That's why, not to burden my wife, I hope I go first, that she will have the pleasure of weeding out what we have now, because I couldn't face it, really -- the thought of all that you accumulate. We have been here now ten years in the present apartment. And knowing what happened after fourteen years, I despair when I think of what eventually must take place when we do move, as we all have to move in this world.

So, the mother is perfectly right, now, in taking that little lesson, which she had learned before. I want so-and-so; but if I really had it, then where would it be now? Then she comes to the conclusion, I really don't want it at all.

They must have it. I have a Sister-in-Law, -- she's now a widow, for my brother Lawrence died. She always must have the biggest of everything in the family. My sister, who could well afford anything in this world, for she really is the richest of all because all her brothers see to it that she keeps everything that she ever made, and they invest it for her, -- but she has a lovely string of pearls. No! this Sister-in-Law had to have a bigger string of pearls, something fantastic. Well, it came now to little diamond earrings. She had to have the biggest thing in the world. She wouldn't go to her own husband to pierce her ears. She wanted them pierced so she could carry these big things in her ears. So she went to her brother, who also was a doctor; and he unfortunately made the hole too low. These things are so big that they will pull her down to here [indicating]. Now, they cannot be the world's best diamonds, because you can't have diamonds that big and only pay $8,000 for them. For the two rings cost $8,000. Well, you can't have an eight-thousand-dollar diamond that big and be a good diamond. She doesn't know that; so now she can't wear them. Where are they? In a safe. But she had to have the biggest thing in the world.

Had she only known this story that my friend knows tonight, -- if I had them, where would they be? On my ears? Yes; that is why I bought them. Would they be comfortable? She never thought of that. She never thought of this enormous thing pulling on her lobe, and so she has the two rocks. What good are they? Were I she, I'd give them away, -- give them to any one who wants to have this nonsense. But, no; she can't part with anything. That, I do know. Now, she is traveling the world over, and all of her things are in storage in Barbados. More silver than you would need to open any silver shop. More sets of dishes than you would need to feed a hundred without borrowing a dish. She had to have more and more.

So, that is what one gets without thinking: If I had it, what would I do with it?

I will tell you a simple, simply technique. Set your whole mind on what I have been telling you from night to night on the Grace that is coming to you, which means that you are going to awake! When you awake, you own the world! You don't have a little cottage. The world is yours, for the world is God's; and you are God when you awake. The whole vast universe is the Lord's, and you are the Lord. You cannot separate the Reality that is man from the Creator of the universe. You are one. "So, set your hope fully on that grace that is coming to you at the unveiling of Jesus Christ within you," for Jesus Christ is God-awake.

So, when He awakes, He awakes in you as you; not as "another." Then the whole vast world is yours, and you see it through entirely different eyes. You see everything differently, -- a beauty that no one, looking only through mortal eyes, could ever conceive.

So, when you go home, try to remember what I've told you; and when you read Scripture, it's all about you! So, when you read, "O Lord, Thou art our Father; we are the clay. Thou art our Potter; we are the work of Thy hands," remember these three are interchangeable terms: my "imagination," the "Father," and the "Lord" are interchangeable terms. And now I'll go down to the Potter, for the Potter, I've just discovered, is my own imagination. I will stand still and now, in my own imagination, watch: What did I this day do? What did I imagine? And now if what I imagined this day is spoiled, is not what I want to make real in my world, -- don't discard it. Rework it into another vessel, as it seems good to you to do.

You can't discard any one; just rework it into an entirely different vessel as it seems good to you to do. And if one will not accept it, pass along. It's perfectly all right. Eventually they will awake; and when they awake, they are our brother.

And we will wait for Eternity, if it takes Eternity, for every one to come back, for we are incomplete if one is missing. And one cannot be missing, for the Lord is made up of all of us. He has no being without us. We are members of the Divine Body, all of us; and we share in that Divine nature, -- the same Creative Power. And may I tell you? when you are clothed in that "garment" which you gave up, wherever you go, it is perfect, -- automatically perfect. You don't have to raise a finger to make it so. It is perfect, because you are clothed in your Glorified Body.

So, tonight you dwell upon what you really are, and don't turn to the left or the right. Don't burn incense to any false god. "Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and then be silent." What would it be like if it were true? Can you answer that? If you can answer that, then what was said in that First Epistle of John, the 5th chapter, the 15th verse: "If we know that he hears us in whatever we ask, we know that we have obtained the request made of him."

What a Promise! "If we know He hears," -- well, don't I know what I've heard? Don't I know what I've just done? All right; that is the One spoken of.

Well, can I really believe what I have just imagined? Can I? Well then, I must know, now, if I am putting my trust in This One, which is my own imagination, -- well then, I will know I have obtained it. It has already been done. Now wait for it. It's done!

Like a shipment. I have complete confidence in a shipment coming if I have ordered it; so you order, and then you wait! It may come by slow freight, it may come by express, it may come by air freight; it'll come. The vision is maturing; "and if it seems long, then wait, for it is sure, and it will not be late." [Habakkuk 2:3]

---oOo---

ORDER YOUR CONVERSATIONS ARIGHT

Tonight's subject is, "Order Your Conversations Aright." As we are told in the 50th Psalm: "To him that ordereth his conversation aright will I show the salvation of God" [Psalm 50:23, King James version].

Have we any instructions in Scripture concerning how we order our conversations aright? We do have it in the 4th chapter of Ephesians. We are told: "Put off your old nature which belongs to your former conversations . . . and put on the new nature" [Ephesians 4:22,24, Revised Standard Version, except for the word "conversations," which occurs only in the King James version].

If the "old Nature" belongs to the "former conversations," then the "new nature" has to have new conversations. "Put on the new nature, created after the image of God." [Ephesians 4:24 R.S.V.]

Well, now, what is this "nature"? "Nature is that principle upon which we depend for sameness of form in transmitted life."

If my conversations determine the things that project themselves upon the screen of space in my world, -- until I change my conversations, I cannot change the forms. For that is the principle upon which man depends for the "sameness of forms in transmitted life." If these forms that come out -- good, bad and indifferent -- are the results of my conversations, then I must change my conversations.

We are told in an ancient book -- a book written in the First Century, -- I have a translation by Walter Scott; it is called "The Hermetica," and in it is said: "God has given two gifts to man alone, and to no other mortal creature. These gifts are Mind and Speech. And these gifts, if used rightly, will differ in nothing from the Immortals." Now, when man takes off the body, -- "When he quits the body, they will be his guides, and by them he will be led into the Troop of the Gods, and into the souls of those who attain to bliss."

Only to man is the gift given of Mind and Speech. Now I could tell you the story of how easy it is to do; but in the doing, may I tell you? it really is difficult. You will think, Why, certainly I can change my conversations, and then remain faithful to the change. But we are such creatures of habit.

So, Shakespeare could say, in "The Merchant of Venice," where he put the words into the mouth of Portia: "If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, then chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions; I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than to be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching." [Act I, Scene II]

So, it's simple on the surface, but in practice it is not as simple as it appears to be. But if man could only take an inner conversation and control it, -- a conversation which implies the fulfillment of his dream, -- and remain faithful to that inner conversation; this inner dialogue -- a controlled inner dialogue -- possibly could be the most fruitful conversation in your life.

Man talks all day long inwardly. He may restrain the impulse to say it outwardly. He may feel like saying it, but he has cultivated -- he's an educated person; he feels himself under restraint. He might feel like telling you to go to the devil, but he restrains the impulse to say it audibly. But he has said it! It was born with the impulse.

If I could only now take my objective in this world and dare to assume that I've achieved it, and then carry on conversations -- inner conversations -- from the premise of that assumption, I should put this to the test and prove it. Would it really achieve a change of form in my world? I am telling you from my own experience, it does. It absolutely does!

As we are told in Isaiah, the 55th chapter: "And the word that goes forth from my mouth shall not return unto me void; it must accomplish that which I purpose, and prosper in the thing for which I sent it" [Isaiah 55:11].

But you will say, This is the Lord speaking, and certainly the Lord can do that. Well, now, let me quote the last words of David as said in the 23d chapter of II Samuel -- and these are the last words of David: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, his word upon my tongue" [II Samuel 23:2]. The "Spirit of the Lord" -- he never had that revelation until that moment. He realizes now that all along everything on his tongue was the Lord speaking!

"The Lord speaks by me, and his word is upon my tongue" [II Samuel 23:2]. The word "Lord," as we told you earlier in this series, -- if it in any way conveys the sense of an external something, external to your own being, you have the wrong lord. If the words "Jesus Christ" convey the sense of an existent something outside of man, you have the wrong Jesus Christ! For Jesus Christ is in us; and if He is in us, and by Him all things are made and without Him was not anything made that is made, and He is called the "Word of God," and you understand that the very word was created by the Word of God, -- and David tells us that God is upon his tongue. The very Word of God is upon his tongue. Then we are told: "I am the Lord. There is no other god. Beside Me there is no god" [Isaiah 45:5].

Is it true? Well, you and I are called upon to put it to the test. Can I actually now, this very moment, construct a simple conversation which, if it is true, will imply that I realize my objective? Can I then be faithful to that conversation, or will I wander from it? Well, I'm telling you, it's very difficult! It seems so simple. I certainly could take a little conversation between a friend and myself in a dialogue and tell him that all things are as I would like them to be; that I have this goal and that goal, and "Do you realize, I have realized it?" It all came so simply and so naturally; it all fell into place. Could you really believe that?

Well, the thing is to try it. See how long you can carry on that conversation without wandering away. I've tried it over and over. Every time that I am successful in keeping it to where I demand in words -- but again to quote Shakespeare: "It is a great virtue, and the one who can do it, it is a noble virtue" to follow your own instruction. So, I can teach you. It is easy -- far "easier to teach twenty what were good to be done, than to be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching."

But now let me share with you a story I know well, the story of my father. He was born a very poor white man in the Island of Barbados. My mother was born poor. She had nothing; he had nothing. And they proceeded to have children. Twelve children were born; two died at birth. Ten survived. He had nothing. How he got hold of this, I do not know, but the first time he heard me speak in New York City was a Sunday morning; and when we went back to the apartment, he said, "You know, everything you said this morning is true. But why do you tell the people to close their eyes? Don't close your eyes. Keep them partly shut. You can control your imagination and you can control your attention better if the eyes are not completely closed. When you see me in the morning after breakfast reclining in my chair, you might think that I am just sleeping it off, -- " because he's a heavy drinker. "You might think I'm simply sleeping it off. I am not sleeping off anything. I am doing my day's work then! I bring before my mind's eye the men that I want to deal with that day, and I control the conversation. I tell them exactly what I want to tell them, as though it were true. I let them tell me -- confirm that it is true; and then when I am completely satisfied with my inner conversation, then I go to town. And it works that way."

Now, he started behind the 8-ball. He had himself, my mother, my grandmother, and the ten of us to feed, plus a few servants. It was not easy. But when he died in 1959, he could leave his ten children -- because my mother preceded him by many years, and he never remarried. She died in '41, and he said, "No; I've been so blissfully happy with your Mother, I could not ever get married again"; so he remained single until he died at the age of 85. But when he died, that poor man could leave a family of ten independently wealthy -- each, not just collectively. He gave it to each individually as a block of stock in the company, just to the ten of us. In 1951 it was then equal to an independent income for each of us. It has trebled since he gave it to us when he died in 1959, under the control of my brother Victor, who practices the same thing.

Victor doesn't smoke and he doesn't drink; but he sits alone, and in his room he, too, is carrying on his little inner convdrsations -- premises of desires fulfilled. And he can completely control that imagination of his. He can completely control the inner conversation, and things work just as he has determined them. He never goes to church. He's a religious man in the true sense of the word. He gives generously to charity and to all people -- you would never know how many people he helps in the Island because he doesn't publicize it. That works for him because he has found out inner conversations will do it.

So then we are told: "To him who orders his conversations aright, I will show the salvation of God!" [Psalm 50:23]. Then we are told how to do it: "Put off your old nature which belongs to your former conversations" [Ephesians 4:22]. And you know how, day after day, there are certain people who will run the same thing like a record, and do it over and over and over; and when you meet them, they start just where they left off the last time that you talked with them. They tell the same story over and over and over. "How rotten she is to me!" or "How rotten he is to me!"

And after one solid year when you return to the City, they take up just where they left off before! And they wonder, Why are these things happening to me? Well, here in the greatest book in the world we are told why. For, if my conversation determines my nature, -- my nature is that principle upon which I depend for the sameness of forms in transmitted life, -- how can I change the form when the form is dependent upon my inner conversation?

So, my inner conversation is actually determining the entire thing, but man thinks it was only some external being called God whose word could not return to him void; that it had to prosper in the thing for which it was sent [See Isaiah 55:11], because he has divorced himself from God. God's name forever and forever and forever is I AM. He said, "That is my name forever, and by that name I shall be known throughout all generations" [Exodus 3:15].

Well, before you were given the name John or Mary, you had God's name. God's name is I AM. That should precede the name you now use as John, for should I ask you, "What is your name?" before you say, "John," you are going to say, "I am"; and you are going to say, "I am John." So you preceded the little mask called John and declared that I am. Well, that's God's name! So, that is the One spoken of in Scripture Whose word cannot return void, but must accomplish that which He purposed. It must prosper in the thing for which He sent it.

You may say, "How simple this thing is. You mean, I could start tonight? I don't go to church; I am not a religious person. I have done nothing in the world. But do you mean, I have that talent?"

Is this the being of whom Hermes spoke when he said, "God gave a gift to man and to no other creature. And this gift is Mind and Speech"? Well, I can talk, and I have a mind. And then he tells me that speech reflects mind, and mind reflects God; that as man, so is God. As is God, so man. And if God reflects my mind, and my mind reflects my speech, to change any production in my world, I've got to change the speech!

So, it is simply that the mind reflects it. And the mind reflects God. So, my God goes back, then, to my speech! So, I am simply reproducing the same old story in my world when I could easily change the record.

Back in 1953 my wife had a vision. It was an audio-vision. She jumped out of bed and came into the living room. I always rise early. She came barging through looking for the dictionary, and she said, "I've just had the most wonderful experience. I saw nothing, but I heard the most wonderful voice -- a voice of authorty. And the voice said to me: 'You must stop spending your thoughts, time, and your money. Everything in life must be an investment.'"

So, she wanted to see the difference between spending and investing. According to the definition in the dictionery that she had at the time: When you spend, you give out without any hope of return; it's a waste to spend. When you invest, you expect a return on equity. When you invest, you always expect a return on your equity. So you must stop spending and everything you do from now on must be invested, -- and it stated what they are: your thoughts, your time, and your money. These are three things that man thinks he has in abundance, and he is spending them morning, noon and night. He wastes his time in trivia. He wastes his thoughts. He wastes his money.

So, if this vision of hers is actually put into practice -- and she is the first one to admit that she does not practice it; she was the instrument through which it came, but she would be the first one to admit that, raised as she was, in the most conservative environment, that she doesn't really live it, because she lives a restrained life. She would think it only becoming a lady to express herself -- well, I would say -- openly. She feels it, and she knows now that she was thinking of saying it, but she restrained the impulse. She said it anyway, and she knows now that her body is an emotional filter, and it bears the marks of her prevalent emotions.

So, all day long you and I are making -- little tiny speech movements are being made in us. We are not hearing them audibly, but the inner ear hears them. So, I need not hear them on the outside, and no one need hear them; but I see the results in my world. My whole vast world could not bear anything other than my speech. That's what the Book teaches! I must "put off the old nature"; it belongs to my former conversations. And then it tells me, Now "put on the new nature."

The "old nature" belongs to my former conversations; the "new nature" belongs to my new conversations. Can I put on the new and make it so natural that I will do with that as I did with the former one? And can I, now, so completely change the record and play it often enough that it becomes a habit, within me as I walk the earth, so that things are perfect? So that things are easy? So that when I read the headline of a market crash, it doesn't disturb me? So, when I read the headline that something has "gone to pot," it does not disturb me inwardly?

Since this is based upon Principle, it doesn't matter what happens in the world, because the world is simply the outpouring of the conversations of men and women in the world. If I change my conversation in the midst of a depression, I am still going to be successful in my world. There are men today that were hugely successful when millions lost so much during the depressed market!

They are not concerned about the market; they don't watch the market at all. But they must be controlling their inner conversation.

I know in my father's case, he was a living example. My Brother Victor is a living example of this technique; but I don't think my father taught it to him. He really got it innately, because he told me that when he saw the sign on a building that had the name F. N. Roach and Company, he made it spell "J. N. Goddard & Sons." When he confided to my Mother, my Mother said, "Vic, don't do it. We have no money,, and it's only going to hurt you. You can never own that building." Two years later the building was up for sale. The business that was in it failed.

A total stranger came in. When I say, "total stranger," -- he knew us only as a family, but he had never come to our home for a cup of tea. We were never entertained in his home for a cup of tea, and he was not a drinking partner of my father. He knew him. The day it went up for sale, he came in and said that he would buy it for us. All he would take as collateral was our signature, for we had invested in it our honesty and the bank assured him that if we pledged ourselves, we would do it. If we had to starve to pay his note, we would do it.

He said, "That's all I need; so if you will sign this piece of paper, I'll buy the building. I will have my lawyer bid for it. If I bid for it, they will bid me up; but if my laywer bids for it, he represents more than one client, and they do not know who he represents today. They wouldn't think for one second that a planter -- " He was a planter. " -- that he would bid for a business on Main Street which carries groceries."

So, that day the Goddards owned it, and all we had to give was our signature on that paper that we signed. And he said to reduce the principle in ten years, and as you reduce it, you simply pay 6 per cent on the principle; if you keep on reducing it every year, in ten years it must be completely paid off. Well, it was. And when he died, twenty years later, he said his greatest friend was Victor Goddard, and he left him an estate in excess of a quarter of a million, tax free. Everything was completely paid off when he gave that to my Brother Victor. He said, "You have been my friend."

So, I know that today we have at least one member of the family who does put this into practice. I try to the best of my ability to practice it, because I get requests morning, noon and night in my mail asking me to hear this, hear that, and hear the other. I never fail to hear it. I try not to dwell upon it after I have heard it. I must believe that what I have heard must come to pass, as told us in the First Epistle of John in the 5th chapter: "If we know that He hears us in whatever we ask, we know we have obtained the request made of Him" [I John 5:15] What a challenge!

"If we know that He hears us in whatever we ask, -- " no restraint upon the things we ask for, then -- "we know we have -- " There's the past tense. "-- we have obtained the requests made of Him." Read it in the 5th chapter, 15th verse, of the First Epistle of John. Well, what a fantastic promise to make to man!

I don't have, then, to keep it going. It's like putting the seed down and having full confidence in the planting of that seed, for it contains within itself the power of self-expression. The Word of God is like the Seed of God, and it is planted at that moment that you actually carry on the conversation.

So, I bring before my mind's eye the one who has asked of me if I know them. If I do not know them, I imagine that I have heard from them. They will not always confirm it, but I imagine they wrote me and thanked me.

But as we are told in Scripture: There were ten who received the gift. They were all lepers. Only one turned back and said, "Thank you." But the nine went on, and they got their help, but never turned back to say, "Thank you." [See Luke 17:12-19] So, it doesn't really matter as far as I am concerned. I do my work. They may never write to tell me that it worked; but quite often I meet them, maybe a year later, or three or four years later, and they will say, "You know, so-and-so happened." I ask them, "Do you know why it happened?" Then they will give me the means that were employed, and tell me that is why it happened.

Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt, who was just killed in an automobile accident in New York City, -- she would come home once a month. This was always a problem with her family -- never her husband, but her children and -in-laws. One day she said to me, "My son has returned from Egypt, and he has an enormous beard, and I am so ashamed to walk down the street with him." Here was this young, good-looking lad, -- now, this was before the hippies when people began to grow long hair and beards. He was unique. So, I said, "Now, Mrs. Roosevelt, you know what a kiss of your son would be like without the beard, don't you?" "Oh, yes," she said. "Well, kiss him and he doesn't have a beard. Put your arms around him, and kiss your son, and see the nice, smooth skin and feel it." "Well," she said, "I'll do it."

Well, she never once told me; but because of her position in the world, I read in the morning paper -- on a Monday morning. Here was this big spread of a wedding. He got married on Sunday. A smooth-skinned lad, Mrs. Roosevelt, Archie Roosevelt, the bride, -- the whole gang of them. When she came the next time, I said, "You know, your son has shaved his beard." She said, "Yes. Do you know why? You know, he married a girl who disliked it. Because she completely disliked it, he shaved it off." I said, "So that's why it happened? Tell me, Mrs. Roosevelt, did you do what I asked you to do?" and I reminded her of what I had asked. She said, "Oh, yes, I did that; but why he did it was the girl." You see, they always go back to the means employed. The girl could have loved him just as much with the beard; but she had to initiate the drive. He shaved it off, and then the mother gave full credit to the girl.

I have seen so many things happen and they never turn back, but forget. We have a very short memory. We do not remember when we set in motion the events or when we planted the seed. So, if nothing comes into this world by accident it is produced by some principle; and the principle is told in this talk tonight, and the principle is simply our conversation -- our little simple inner conversations when we are alone. The conversation when you are putting on a mask and meet some one at a cocktail party and you are all lying -- everybody is lying; you have a few martinis and this one lies, that one lies. Little do they know that what they are doing is a lie. But I don't mean that; I mean when you are alone.

Knowing this principle, it doesn't really matter if what appears now to be a lie -- you know, an assumption, though false, if persisted in will harden into fact. So, now you are going to put that principle into operation. We will take an assumption. I will assume that things are as I want them to be. Now I will carry on a conversation based upon that assumption, and that controlled inner conversation will be possibly my greatest success -- my greatest conversation ever -- far, far greater than the conversations that we hold at a dinner party.

You sit down, and here is a dinner. You are not going to tell your host that thing is horrible, are you? But anyway, you wonder what on earth possessed her to make this. But you don't say it because that would be unkind. But you did say it anyway; you said it inwardly.

But I am speaking now of this productive principle. When you are alone and you know exactly what you want for yourself or for a friend or for the community. Then what conversation would imply that you have yours, she has hers and the community has its? Well, carry on with that conversation. If this statement in the 4th chapter of Ephesians is correct, then it should prove itself in the testing: that if I could put off my old nature, which refers to my former conversations, -- don't just put it off, because I can not live in a void, but put on the new nature. If the old is related to my former conversations, well, then, my new nature must be related to my new conversation. [See Ephesians 4:22-24.] Well, I will start a new conversation, and talk with my brother Victor and tell him of the success I am having. This is going to amuse him, because he likes success. He loves success in the world of Caesar.

He thinks that what I do -- well, he would not say it's insane -- he doesn't understand it. He says, "I have one thing to do in the world of Caesar. We are a large family, but I have no children of my own. I am the one that's a mule," he says. "All you fellows seem to be bulls, but I am a mule -- I have no children. So, I have to make it, in the event you fellows will need it." Well, we aren't going to need it, but he keeps on making it. So, he enjoys money. He enjoys making it. He enjoys actually doing things in a big way. He thinks in a big way. And he does it by inner conversations. And he started, I'd say, behind the 8-ball when as a poor white family in little Barbados, or in any of the islands, for that matter, because the white man who has it ignores the white man who hasn't anything. A white man in Barbados has to put on shoes. A Negro in Barbados can go without shoes; he can go without a jacket, and they will tolerate that. But they will not tolerate that from a poor, poor white man. So, I know what I talk about. We were as poor as they come. Today no one tops them in Barbados regarding money, and they all come to him for advice. Those who thought they had it, they come to Victor. They don't venture anything -- not even the government -- until they come to Victor. They value his opinion. He gets a piece of it all. "If they want my advice, I'll take a piece of their stock. Give me a block of stock and you'll get my advice." So, he has stock here, stock there, stock everywhere. And, so, that's Victor. He loves it.

I tell him that I do my work alone, and I love it. I love this as he loves making money. Fortunately for me, I don't have to go to him for advice!

So, here, I spoke of two men tonight; my father and my brother; and they do it by inner conversations. But the Bible supports it. If the Bible did not support it, I wouldn't tell you, but the Bible supports what they are doing. How they found it, I do not know. My father, -- the only book he ever read was the Bible. I wonder if he got it when he read it?

When I wrote my first book, "Your Faith Is Your Fortune," I sent the first copy off the press to my father and mother. When I wrote the inscription, I said, "If there is such a thing as reincarnation and I have to come back to this world again, I would ask for nothing greater than to have you two as my parents." So, Daddy, because of that inscription, started to look at the book. It has 26 chapters, and each chapter began with a quote from the Bible; so he closed the book. When I went home a few years later, I saked, "Daddy, did you read my book?" He said, "Oh, why should I? You took 26 little verses from the Scripture and wrote a book of 200 pages. I know the 26 verses." So, that's how he said it. "Why should I read it? I know those verses." And it's the one book he always read. Perhaps he did find it, -- I do not know.

But we are told to alter our old conversations; and if we do it, He will show us the salvation of God. Blake, whom I am always quoting, in his book "Jerusalem," he says, "Oh, what have I said? What have I done, O All Powerful Human Words!" You realize that you cannot pull them back; so you said them. Then how are you going to pull them back?

Now tonight it shouldn't take you long if you know it's true.-- and I know it's true, -- to change the entire world if you put on a new record. And you can easily put on the new record. Just what would it be like if it were true? And if it were true, would any one know? Yes. My wife would know it first, my daughter would know it; and then my circle would widen. Then my circle of friends would know it. Well, start with the one you know best first. My wife would know it; I share all things with her, and then my daughter would know it. So, I carry on a conversation, first with my wife and then with my daugher Vicki; and then try to make it a lasting conversation so that it becomes a habit. Instead of going back into the negative, make it a positive statement, and try to make it so natural in yourself that it's easy to pick up that record and put it on. And see how it works in your world. It doesn't cost you anything! It costs nothing to do it. And this is what Scripture teaches. And it cannot but return to you if you know

Who-You-Are. And I am trying to convince every one that I reach that they are God! It's a shock to them, because they have been told that they are little worms. You aren't a little worm! You are God wearing a garment of flesh for educative purposes. But you are God! You have His name, and He will not give His name to another. But He puts you through the furnaces of affliction to receive His name. You are going through the furnaces.

As Blake says in the statement speaking of those who call God a non-existent being, -- he calls them fools as we are told in the Psalm: "The fool says in his heart, 'There is no God.'" [Psalm 14:1 and Psalm 53:1] But Blake calls the fool Babel.

> "Babel says . . . there is no God or Son of God:
> That Thou, O Human Imagination, O Divine Body . . . are all a delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou arisest upon My weary eyes, even in this dungeon and this iron mill . . .
> Thou also sufferest with me, although I behold Thee not. . "
> [Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

You cannot see your imagination. And he equates human imagination with the Divine Body of the Lord and the Lord. These three are one, in the eyes of Blake, in this marvelous poem "Jerusalem."

So, you can't see imagination; you see the fruits of imagination. So, no one has ever seen God, because you are the reality called "Imagination." And you don't see imagination, but you see the evidence; you see the fruit of it.

> " . . . . And the Divine Voice answers:
> . . . Fear not! Lo, I am with you always. [even to the ends of time]
> Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from death Thy brother who sleeps in Albion."
> [Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

So, who is the brother? You are the brother, I am the brother. Humanity is "Albion." And, then, buried in Humanity is the Lord Jesus Christ; and this one is speaking, saying, "I have power to raise from the dead thy brother who sleeps in Albion." But he has not for one moment denied the human imagination as the Lord. They are equated. They are all one. You have the Lord always with you! You can't take imagination and put it out there. Wherever you go, you are always imagining. You cannot leave the Lord behind you! You cannot sit here and wish imagination away as you can the body. I can stand here and assume that I am at the end of the room and imagine that I am looking at this one. But where am I? I am in imagination. I can look at the body as something that I have put away for a while. I return to it. But I can't put away imagination. I cannot get away from the Lord, because, being all imagination, I must be wherever He is in imagination. So, if I now, in imagination, feel things as I desire them to be, that's the Lord doing it. And because "all things are possible to the Lord," I must believe in me; I must believe it is the Lord doing it, as we are told in the last words of David.

"Now these are the last words of David: . . . . The Lord is upon me, his word is upon my tongue." [II Samuel 23:1,2] Then he discovers that that's why he was victorious. He never lost a battle. When the giant put on the armor and he had the sword -- and he was a giant; and little David comes out only with five feathers. They were not stones! He took five. Well, "five" is the number of Grace, and Grace is God's gift of Himself to man. What other armor does he need, other than the gift of God? So, he goes on with that. What giant could stand before him when all he needs is the Grace of God? So, he goes, and the giant comes down. So, he realizes then that everything he did was done because he went in the Grace of God.

So, wherever you are -- you are in a bar, -- that's a holy place. Why? Because you are there. If you go into any place that the world would judge harshly, it is holy because you are there! And you can sit any place in the world. You don't have to go into a church. You can sit at home in any room, sit in the garden; sit any place in this world and just carry on a conversation with yourself, this controlled dialogue. This may turn out one day to be the most fruitful conversation that you've ever had.

So, we all need something tonight. We all do, even those who have a billion. They still want more, and I wouldn't judge them harshly. They want it. Let them have it, if they want more, because as Blake said: "More! More! is the cry of the fool; All or nothing." [Wm. Blake, from "There Is No Natural Religion," second series] * And I have covered the 50th chapter of Psalms tonight, and that's the chapter -- you read it carefully: "If I were hungry, I would not tell you; because the world is mine and all within it. [Psalm 50:12] "The cattle on a thousand hills are mine" [Psalm 50:20]. But who is speaking? Asaph is speaking, and "Asaph" means "to gather together." He has been recalled -- he records all the history of Israel. From the famous 78th Psalm he says: "I will open my mouth in a parable; and utter dark sayings from of old." [Psalm 78:2] And he records the entire history of Israel, and how in spite of all the great things the Lord did, Israel went astray to false gods. Then we come to the end, and David appears. The Lord awoke as out of sleep, like a man from strong drink, and He appoints David. But here is the entire history in a parable; the whole history of Israel is a parable. It is a story told as if it were true, leaving the one who hears it to discover its fictitious nature and then extract its meaning.

So, the entire history of Israel, as recorded in Scripture, is not secular history, but it is divine history. You have to find out what it means behind that story; and when you find out, it is the most thrilling thing in the world. It's all about you! As we are told in the 40th Psalm: "In the volume of the book, it is all about me" [Psalm 40:7]. " . . I have not restrained my lips" [Psalm 40:9]; I screamed it from the housetops when I discovered the whole thing was all about me!

---

*"More! More! is the cry of a mistaken soul; less than All cannot satisfy Man." [Blake, Proposition V, from "There Is No Natural Religion," Second Series]

The whole Book is all about you! It's all about you. But it is adumbrated. The whole thing is an adumbration. Now, when we come to the New Testament, it takes on a cubic reality. The Old is a rough sketch, but the New Testament takes on a cubic reality, and it all takes place within you, the individual. Then you will realize the whole thing is all about you -- everything in the Bible. It is not understood in the Old Testament because that is a foreshadowing; it is told in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. When we come into the New Testament, and He tells it all about the individual, that's not what they were looking for. They were looking for an external Savior, one who would come and destroy a physical enemy of Israel. So, that's not it. He comes from within. And this is what was meant in the very beginning of days. He comes to us as One unknown, but One who in the most mysterious manner lets the individual experience Who He is. And when you experience it, you experience it as yourself. You are The One spoken of!

Now, if all things are possible to Him, -- remember now: You are The One spoken of in Scripture. And if what I have quoted earlier tonight can be put to the test and proven in the testing, don't hesitate to do it. You can speak. You have the two gifts spoken of by Hermes, and we are told that no mortal creature has it but man; and these are the gifts of Mind and Speech. So, if you use them rightly, you will differ in nothing from the gods! And when you drop off the body and you quit it, these will be your guides. They will lead you into the troop of the gods and into the souls of those who have attained to bliss. You will have the same mind; you will be using Mind and you will be using Speech.

So, you will find all through Scripture the words: "And the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah" [Jeremiah 1:2,9,13; 2:1; 11:1; 14:1; 16:1; 18:1; 21:1; 30:1; 32:1; 33:1; 34:1; 35:1; 40:1; 46:1; 47:1; etc.] "The Word of the Lord came unto Ezekiel." [Ezekiel 1:3; 3:16; 6:1; 7:1; 11:14; 13:1; 15:1; 16:1; 17:1; 18:1; 21:1; etc.] All these are the Word of the Lord, and you are the one spoken of.

So, tonight in a simple way this is what I would do: I would be brutally frank with myself. and don't modify it. If there is no restraint on what God offers, and you have a desire, -- nothing is impossible to God. So, know exactly what you want, and be honest with yourself. Now, if it were true, what would it feel like? And if it were true, could I restrain the impulse to talk about it? No, I couldn't. I would have to tell it. As we are told in Jeremiah:

> "If I say, 'I will not mention him, > or speak any more in his name,' > there is in my heart as it were a burning fire > shut up in my bones, > and I am weary with holding it in,
> and I cannot." [Jeremiah 20:9, R.S.V.]

Well, do it! He has to talk about it when he discovers a principle that works and proves itself in the performance. Now, don't modify your objective. You know what you want? Well, that's it! Now, what would the feeling be like, and what would I say, and to whom would I say it? Well, now, carry on that conversation from the premise of the wish fulfilled, and try to keep it up until it is natural -- feels natural. When it takes on the tones of reality and the feeling of naturalness, you've got it! The thing is working now.

You can play it over and over as you play a nice record. If you like good music, you never tire of listening to it. You can play it every day and several times a day and never tire of good music, if you appreciate it. You could get tired of the bee-bop, but how could you ever tire of the beautiful classical pieces? I know, I don't; so I could listen to them every day, and I do when I am at home. We turn on our radio to a certain station, and it's 24 hours a day of classical music -- KFAC -- with very little advertising and a small little 3-minute newscast on the hour; and then throughout the hour -- unbroken hour, wonderful music: piano music between 9:00 and 10:00, the Beethovens and the Brahms and the Bachs for one solid hour. I just enjoy it -- feast upon it. Well, you can take a record -- your own record -- and do that, and then let it come back into this world bearing fruit.

So, I do hope you will take me seriously. You haven't a thing to lose and all to gain. That's why you are here, and that's why I have been sent to tell you. There is a Law, and there is a Promise.

The Promise is going to come, regardless; but while you are waiting for the Promise, you could make life more comfortable with the use of the Law, because the Law must be operated. We are the operant power. It will not operate itself. But the Promise is coming. You can't stop the Promise.

The Promise is that you are going to be God! That's the Promise. You are going to wake up one day and know that you are God, and all the symbolism that confirms it will stand before you, and then you'll know Who-You-Are. His Son will call you, "Father"; and you will know that you are God when His Only Son calls you, "Father," you will know that he is your son, and he'll know that you are his Father.

So, that Promise is coming. But while you wait for the Promise, take the Law and use it. I quoted very much this night on the Law, which is the inner conversations. Use your inner conversations, because if you do, you will have the salvation of God. And because your former conversations were related to your old nature, and He tells you to put it off, -- you can only put off the old nature by putting off the old conversations, because they are related. The former conversations were producing the old nature; and if the "nature is the principle upon which man depends for sameness of form in transmitted life," the same form is going to be transmitted until you change the former conversations. When you put on the new record -- the new conversations, you are going to change your world; and people will meet you and wonder what has happened to you. "Why, he now is moving in the most marvelous manner! Things are just going perfectly for him." Why? He changed his nature. How did he do it? He changed his inner conversations.

But do you know, there are people, -- my mind goes back now to the last war -- Word War II; and this young man -- a fine chap, an only child; and he told me quite innocently that he so hated Roosevelt that in the morning while he was shaving he told him off. He told him exactly what he thought of him, -- bawled him out. I said, "Why do you do it? Don't you know you are only hurting yourself?" He said, "I know it. But, oh, if I told you what a thrill I get out of it!" You know, he wouldn't change it. He so despised the man -- he didn't know Roosevelt, he didn't know any member of the family; but he simply disliked him. And inwardly -- not on Mr. Roosevelt, it worked on him. And he knew what he was doing! If he didn't know, that's one thing; but to know and not do it, -- that is just the opposite. Well, that is what he did.

He said, "Why, Neville, the shows on Broadway today are $10 a seat. There is no show on Broadway that could give me the thrill of those fifteen minutes in the morning when I shave. He just simply delighted in telling off somebody that he didn't even know. And if he thought for one moment he shouldn't do it, he said, Well, let me finish this sentence anyway. Well, people do that. They know they are doing the wrong thing, and yet they've got to complete the sentence. It's a stupid thing.

So, I ask you to try it. But work it radically, and go to the very root and put on the new record. You can do it! I warned you earier, it is not the easiest thing in the world, because we are creatures of habit. But when you catch yourself going back to the old record, just put on the new record again; and the new one will become just as easy to play and as natural to play as the old one is now.

Now, let us go into the Silence.

Now, I will be here the five nights next week. Monday night will be the practical night; and what will be in the next four, I do not know. The titles are there, but how I will present them, I do not know yet. But Monday night will be a very practical one. I call tonight's a practical one.

Now, are there any questions, please?

A LADY: How could I know the difference between if I am daydreaming or if I have the real inner conversation?

NEVILLE: Well, my dear, try it! You start with a daydream anyway. The dress you are wearing had first to be imagined. People call all imagination a dream. It first was only imagined before it became what the world calls a fact. What is now known as something proven was first only imagined. This building we are in here, all the buildings in the City were only imagined. And all the workers that seems to be the active instruments to put them up -- they are the unconscious instruments of men who only dreamed. The architects, they had their blueprint and their dream; and the workmen -- they come out -- all right, they are doing their job, and they seem so active, but they are simply the unconscious instruments of those men of imagination.

You go into battle. Thousands are falling. They are the unconscious instruments of the men who plot the war.

Are there any other questions, please? If not, I will say, Good night.

---oOo---

NEVILLE GODDARD

Out of This World

G & J Publishing Co.
Los Angeles, California, 1949

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

Contents

Chapter 1: Thinking Fourth-Dimensionally 5

Chapter 2: Assumptions Become Facts..... 28

Chapter 3: Power of Imagination 42

Chapter 4: No One to Change But Self 55

Chapter 1: Thinking Fourth-Dimensionally

And now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe," —John 14:29.

Many persons, myself included, have observed events before they occurred; that is, before they occurred in this world of three dimensions. Since man can observe an event before it occurs in the three dimensions of space, life on earth must proceed according to plan, and this plan must exist elsewhere in another dimension and be slowly moving through our space.

If the occurring events were not in this world when they were observed, then, to be perfectly logical, they must have been out of this world. And whatever is there to be seen before it occurs here must be "Predetermined" from the point of view of man awake in a three-dimensional world.

Thus, the question arises: “Are we able to alter our future?”

My object in writing these pages is to indicate possibilities inherent in man, to show that man can alter his future; but, thus altered, it forms again a deterministic sequence starting from the point of interference—a future that will be consistent with the alteration. The most remarkable feature of man's future is its flexibility. It is determined by his attitudes rather than by his acts. The cornerstone on which all things are based is man's concept of himself. He acts as he does and has the experiences that he does, because his concept of himself is what it is, and for no other reason. Had he a different concept of self, he would act differently. A change of concept of self automatically alters his future: and a change in any term of his future series of experiences reciprocally alters his concept of self. Man's assumptions which he regards as insignificant produce effects that are considerable; therefore, man should revise his estimate of an assumption, and recognize its creative power.

All changes take place in consciousness. The future, although prepared in every detail in advance, has several outcomes. At every moment of our lives, we have before us the choice of which of several futures we will choose.

There are two actual outlooks on the world possessed by everyone—a natural focus and a spiritual focus. The ancient teachers called the one "the carnal mind," the other "the mind of Christ." We may differentiate them as ordinary waking consciousness—governed by our senses, and a controlled imagination—governed by desire. We recognize these two distinct centers of thought in the statement: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them for they are spiritually discerned." The natural view confines reality to the moment called now. To the natural view, the past and future are purely imaginary. The spiritual view, on the other hand, sees the contents of time. It sees events as distinct and separated as objects in space. The past and future are a present whole to the spiritual view. What is mental and subjective to the natural man is concrete and objective to the spiritual man.

The habit of seeing only that which our senses permit, renders us totally blind to what we otherwise could see. To cultivate the faculty of seeing the invisible, we should often deliberately disentangle our minds from the evidence of the senses and focus our attention on an invisible state, mentally feeling it and sensing it until it has all the distinctness of reality.

Earnest, concentrated thought focused in a particular direction shuts out other sensations and causes them to disappear. We have but to concentrate on the state desired in order to see it. The habit of withdrawing attention from the region of sensation and concentrating it on the invisible develops our spiritual outlook and enables us to penetrate beyond the world of sense and to see that which is invisible. "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen."—Romans 1:20. This vision is completely independent of the natural faculties. Open it and quicken it! Without it, these instructions are useless, for "the things of the spirit are spiritually discerned."

A little practice will convince us that we can, by controlling our imagination, reshape our future in harmony with our desire. Desire is the mainspring of action. We could not move a single finger unless we had a desire to move it. No matter what we do, we follow the desire which at the moment dominates our minds. When we break a habit, our desire to break it is greater than our desire to continue in the habit.

The desires which impel us to action are those that hold our attention. A desire is but an awareness of something we lack or need to make our life more enjoyable. Desires always have some personal gain in view, the greater the anticipated gain, the more intense, is the desire. There is no absolutely unselfish desire. Where there is nothing to gain there is no desire, and consequently no action.

The spiritual man speaks to the natural man through the language of desire. The key to progress in life and to the fulfillment of dreams lies in ready obedience to its voice. Unhesitating obedience to its voice is an immediate assumption of the wish fulfilled. To desire a state is to have it. As Pascal has said, "You would not have sought me had you not already found me." Man, by assuming the feeling of his wish fulfilled, and then living and acting on this conviction, alters the future in harmony with his assumption.

Assumptions awaken what they affirm. As soon as man assumes the feeling of his wish fulfilled, his four-dimensional self finds ways for the attainment of this end, discovers methods for its realization. I know of no clearer definition of the means by which we realize our desires than to e*xperience in imagination what we would experience in the flesh were we to achieve our goal*. This experience of the end wills the means. With its larger outlook the four-dimensional self then constructs the means necessary to realize the accepted end.

The undisciplined mind finds it difficult to assume a state which is denied by the senses. Here is a technique that makes it easy to encounter events before they occur to "call things which are not seen as though they were." People have a habit of slighting the importance of simple things; but this simple formula for changing the future was discovered after years of searching and experimenting. The first step in changing the future is desire— that is: define your objective—know definitely what you want. Secondly: construct an event which you believe you would encounter following the fulfillment of your desire—an event which implies fulfillment of your desire—something that will have the action of self predominant. Thirdly: immobilize the physical body and induce a condition akin to sleep—lie on a bed or relax in a chair and imagine that you are sleepy; then, with eyelids closed and your attention focused on the action you intend to experience—in imagination—mentally feel yourself right into the proposed action—imagining all the while that you are actually performing the action here and now. You must always participate in the imaginary action, not merely stand back and look on, but you must feel that you are actually performing the action so that the imaginary sensation is real to you.

It is important always to remember that the proposed action must be one which follows the fulfillment of your desire; and, also, you must feel yourself into the action until it has all the vividness and distinctness of reality.

For example: suppose you desired promotion in office. Being congratulated would be an event you would encounter following the fulfillment of your desire. Having selected this action as the one you will experience in imagination, immobilize the physical body, and induce a state akin to sleep—a drowsy state—but one in which you are still able to control the direction of your thoughts—a state in which you are attentive without effort. Now, imagine that a friend is standing before you. Put your imaginary hand into his. First feel it to be solid and real, then carry on an imaginary conversation with him in harmony with the action. Do not visualize yourself at a distance in point of space and at a distance in point of time being congratulated on your good fortune. Instead, make elsewhere here, and the future now. The future event is a reality now in a dimensionally larger world; and, oddly enough, now in a dimensionally larger world, is equivalent to here in the ordinary three-dimensional space of everyday life. The difference between feeling yourself in action, here and now, and visualizing yourself in action, as though you were on a motion-picture screen, is the difference between success and failure. The difference will be appreciated if you will now visualize yourself climbing a ladder. Then with eyelids closed imagine that a ladder is right in front of you and feel you are actually climbing it.

Desire, physical immobility bordering on sleep, and imaginary action in which self feelingly predominates, here and now, are not only important factors in altering the future, but they are essential conditions in consciously projecting the spiritual self. If, when the physical body is immobilized, we become possessed of the idea to do something—and imagine that we are doing it here and now and keep the imaginary action feelingly going right up until sleep ensues—we are likely to awaken out of the physical body to find ourselves in a dimensionally larger world with a dimensionally larger focus and actually doing what we desired and imagined we were doing in the flesh. But whether we awaken there or not, we are actually performing the action in the fourth-dimensional world, and we will re-enact it in the future, here in the third-dimensional world.

Experience has taught me to restrict the imaginary action, to condense the idea which is to be the object of our meditation into a single act, and to re-enact it over and over again until it has the feeling of reality. Otherwise, the attention will wander off along an associational track, and hosts of associated images will be presented to our attention. In a few seconds they will lead us hundreds of miles away from our objective in point of space, and years away in point of time. If we decide to climb a particular flight of stairs, because that is the likely event to follow the realization of our desire, then we must restrict the action to climbing that particular flight of stairs. Should our attention wander off, we must bring it back to its task of climbing that flight of stairs and keep on doing so until the imaginary action has all the solidity and distinctness of reality. The idea must be maintained in the field of presentation without any sensible effort on our part. We must, with the minimum of effort, permeate the mind with the feeling of the wish fulfilled.

Drowsiness facilitates change because it favors attention without effort, but it must not be pushed to the stage of sleep, in which we shall no longer be able to control the movements of our attention, but rather a moderate degree of drowsiness in which we are still able to direct our thoughts. A most effective way to embody a desire is to assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled and then, in a relaxed and sleepy state, repeat over and over again, like a lullaby, any short phrase which implies fulfillment of our desire, such as "Thank you" as though we addressed a higher power for having done it for us. If, however, we seek a conscious projection into a dimensionally larger world, then we must keep the action going right up until sleep ensues.

Experience in imagination, with all the distinctness of reality, what would be experienced in the flesh were you to achieve your goal; and you shall, in time, meet it in the flesh as you met it in your imagination. Feed the mind with premises—that is, assertions presumed to be true, because assumptions, though unreal to the senses, if persisted in, until they have the feeling of reality, will harden into facts. To an assumption all means which promote its realization are good. It influences the behavior of all by inspiring in all the movements, the actions, and the words which tend towards its fulfillment.

To understand how man molds his future in harmony with his assumption we must know what we mean by a dimensionally larger world, for it is to a dimensionally larger world that we go to alter our future. The observation of an event before it occurs implies that the event is predetermined from the point of view of man in the three-dimensional world. Therefore, to change the conditions here in the three dimensions of space we must first change them in the four dimensions of space.

Man does not know exactly what is meant by a dimensionally larger world, and would no doubt deny the existence of a dimensionally larger self. He is quite familiar with the three dimensions of length, width and height, and he feels that if there were a fourth dimension, it should be just as obvious to him as the dimensions of length, width and height. A dimension is not a line; it is any way in which a thing can be measured that is entirely different from all other ways. That is, to measure a solid fourth-dimensionally, we simply measure it in any direction except that of its length, width and height.

Is there another way of measuring an object other than those of its length, width and height? Time measures my life without employing the three dimensions of length, width and height. There is no such thing as an instantaneous object. Its appearance and disappearance are measurable. It endures for a definite length of time. We can measure its life span without using the dimensions of length, width and height. Time is definitely a fourth way of measuring an object.

The more dimensions an object has, the more substantial and real it becomes. A straight line, which lies entirely in one dimension, acquires shape, mass and substance by the addition of dimensions. What new quality would time, the fourth dimension, give which would make it just as vastly superior to solids as solids are to surfaces and surfaces are to lines? Time is a medium for changes in experience because all changes take time. The new quality is changeability.

Observe that if we bisect a solid, its cross section will be a surface; by bisecting a surface, we obtain a line; and by bisecting a line, we get a point. This means that a point is but a cross section of a line, which is, in turn, but a cross section of a surface, which is, in turn, but a cross section of a solid, which is, in turn, if carried to its logical conclusion, but a cross section of a four-dimensional object.

We cannot avoid the inference that all three-dimensional objects are but cross sections of four-dimensional bodies. Which means: when I meet you, I meet a cross section of the four-dimensional you—the four-dimension self that is not seen. To see the four-dimensional self, I must see every cross section or moment of your life from birth to death and see them all as coexisting. My focus should take in the entire array of sensory impressions which you have experienced on earth plus those you might encounter. I should see them, not in the order in which they were experienced by you, but as a present whole. Because change is the characteristic of the fourth dimension, I should see them in a state of flux as a living, animated whole.

If we have all this clearly fixed in our minds, what does it mean to us in this three-dimensional world? It means that, if we can move along time's length, we can see the future and alter it as we so desire. This world, which we think so solidly real, is a shadow out of which and beyond which we may at any time pass. It is an abstraction from a more fundamental and dimensionally larger world—a more fundamental world abstracted from a still more fundamental and dimensionally larger world and so on to infinity. The absolute is unattainable by any means or analysis, no matter how many dimensions we add to the world.

Man can prove the existence of a dimensionally larger world simply by focusing his attention on an invisible state and imagining that he sees and feels it. If he remains concentrated in this state, his present environment will pass away, and he will awaken in a dimensionally larger world where the object of his contemplation will be seen as a concrete objective reality. Intuitively I feel that, were he to abstract his thoughts from this dimensionally larger world and retreat still farther within his mind, he would again bring about an externalization of time. He would discover that every time he retreats into his inner mind and brings about an externalization of time, space becomes dimensionally larger. And he would, therefore, conclude that both time and space are serial, and that the drama of life is but the climbing of a multitudinous dimensional time block.

Scientists will one day explain why there is a Serial Universe. But in practice how we use this Serial Universe to change the future is more important. To change the future, we need only concern ourselves with two worlds in the infinite series, the world we know by reason of our bodily organs, and the world we perceive independently of our bodily organs.

Chapter 2: Assumptions Become Facts

Men believe in the reality of the external world because they do not know how to focus and condense their powers to penetrate its thin crust. This book has only one purpose—the removing of the veil of the senses—the traveling into another world. To remove the veil of the senses we do not employ great effort; the objective world vanishes by turning our attention away from it.

We have only to concentrate on the state desired in order to mentally see it, but to give it reality so that it will become an objective fact, we must focus attention upon the invisible state until it has the feeling of reality. When, through concentrated attention, our desire appears to possess the distinctness and feeling of reality, we have given it the right to become a visible concrete fact.

If it is difficult to control the direction of your attention while in a state akin to sleep, you may find gazing fixedly into an object very helpful. Do not look at its surface but into and beyond any plain object such as a wall, a carpet, or any other object which possesses depth. Arrange it to return as little reflection as possible. Imagine then that in this depth you are seeing and hearing what you want to see and hear until your attention is exclusively occupied by the imagined state.

At the end of your meditation, when you awake from your "controlled waking dream," you feel as though you had returned from a great distance. The visible world which you had shut out returns to consciousness and by its very presence informs you that you have been self-deceived into believing that the object of your contemplation was real. But, if you know that consciousness is the one and only reality, you will remain faithful to your vision, and by this sustained mental attitude confirm your gift of reality, and prove that you have the power to give reality to your desires that they may become visible concrete facts.

Define your ideal and concentrate your attention upon the idea of identifying yourself with your ideal. Assume the feeling of being it, the feeling that would be yours were you already the embodiment of your ideal. Then live and act upon this conviction. This assumption, though denied by the senses, if persisted in, will become fact. You will know when you have succeeded in fixing the desired state in consciousness by simply looking mentally at the people you know. In dialogues with yourself you are less inhibited and more sincere than in actual conversations with others, therefore the opportunity for self analysis arises when you are surprised by your mental conversations with others. If you see them as you formerly saw them, you have not changed your concept of self, for all changes of concepts of self result in a changed relationship to your world.

In your meditation allow others to see you as they would see you were this new concept of self a concrete fact. You always seem to others an embodiment of the ideal you inspire. Therefore, in meditation, when you contemplate others, you must be seen by them mentally as you would be seen by them physically were your concept of self an objective fact; that is, in meditation you imagine that they see you expressing that which you desire to be.

If you assume that you are what you want to be your desire is fulfilled, and in fulfillment all longing is neutralized. You cannot continue desiring what you have already realized. Your desire is not something you labor to fulfill, it is recognizing something you already possess. It is assuming the feeling of being that which you desire to be. Believing and being are one. The conceiver and his conception are one, therefore that which you conceive yourself to be can never be so far off as even to be near, for nearness implies separation. "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." Being is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not yet seen. If you assume that you are what you want to be, then you will see others as they are related to your assumption.

If, however, it is the good of others that you desire, then, in meditation, you must represent them to yourself as already being that which you desire them to be. It is through desire that you rise above your present sphere and the road from longing to fulfillment is shortened as you experience in imagination what you would experience in the flesh were you already the embodiment of the ideal you desire to be.

I have stated that man has at every moment of time the choice before him which of several futures he will encounter; but the question arises: "How is this possible when the experiences of man, awake in the three-dimensional world, are predetermined?" as his observation of an event before it occurs implies. This ability to change the future will be seen if we liken the experiences of life on earth to this printed page. Man experiences events on earth singly and successively in the same way that you are now experiencing the words of this page.

Imagine that every word on this page represents a single sensory impression. To get the context, to understand my meaning, you focus your vision on the first word in the upper left-hand corner and then move your focus across the page from left to right, letting it fall on the words singly and successively. By the time your eyes reach the last word on this page you have extracted my meaning. Suppose, however, on looking at the page, with all the printed words thereon equally present, you decided to rearrange them. You could, by rearranging them, tell an entirely different story; in fact, you could tell many different stories.

A dream is nothing more than uncontrolled four-dimensional thinking, or the rearrangement of both past and future sensory impressions. Man seldom dreams of events in the order in which he experiences them when awake. He usually dreams of two or more events which are separated in time, fused into a single sensory impression; or, in his dream, he so completely rearranges his single waking sensory impressions that he does not recognize them when he encounters them in his waking state.

For example: I dreamed that I delivered a package to the restaurant in my apartment building. The hostess said to me, "You can't leave that there"; whereupon, the elevator operator gave me a few letters and as I thanked him for them, he, in turn, thanked me. At this point, the night elevator operator appeared and waved a greeting to me.

The following day, as I left my apartment, I picked up a few letters which had been placed at my door. On my way down I gave the day elevator operator a tip and thanked him for taking care of my mail; whereupon, he thanked me for the tip. On my return home that day I overheard a doorman say to a delivery man, "You can't leave that there." As I was about to take the elevator up to my apartment, I was attracted by a familiar face in the restaurant, and, as I looked in, the hostess greeted me with a smile. Late that night I escorted my dinner guests to the elevator and as I said goodbye to them, the night operator waved goodnight to me.

By simply rearranging a few of the single sensory impressions I was destined to encounter, and by fusing two or more of them into single sensory impressions, I constructed a dream which differed quite a bit from my waking experience.

When we have learned to control the movements of our attention in the four-dimensional world, we shall be able to consciously create circumstances in the three-dimensional world. We learn this control through the waking dream, where our attention can be maintained without effort, for attention minus effort is indispensable to changing the future. We can, in a controlled waking dream, consciously construct an event which we desire to experience in the three-dimensional world.

The sensory impressions we use to construct our waking dream are present realities displaced in time or the four-dimensional world. All that we do in constructing the waking dream is to select from the vast array of sensory impressions those, which, when they are properly arranged, imply that we have realized our desire. With the dream clearly defined we relax in a chair and induce a state of consciousness akin to sleep—a state, which, although bordering on sleep, leaves us in conscious control of the movements of our attention. When we have achieved that state, we experience in imagination what we would experience in reality were this waking dream an objective fact. In applying this technique to change the future it is important always to remember that the only thing which occupies the mind during the waking dream is the waking dream, the predetermined action which implies the fulfillment of our desire. How the waking dream becomes physical fact is not our concern. Our acceptance of the waking dream as physical reality wills the means for its fulfillment.

Let me again lay the foundation of changing the future, which is nothing more than a controlled waking dream.

1. Define your objective—know definitely what you want.

2. Construct an event which you believe you will encounter following the fulfillment of your desire—something which will have the action of self predominant—an event which implies the fulfillment of your desire.

3. Immobilize the physical body and induce a state of consciousness akin to sleep; then, mentally feel yourself right into the proposed action—imagining all the while that you are actually performing the action here and now so that you experience in imagination what you would experience in the flesh were you now to realize your goal.

Experience has convinced me that this is the perfect way to achieve my goal. However, my own many failures would convict me were I to imply that I have completely mastered the movements of my attention. I can, however, with the ancient teacher say: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize."

Chapter 3: Power of Imagination

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." —John 8:32.

Men claim that a true judgment must conform to the external reality to which it relates. This means that if I, while imprisoned, suggest to myself that I am free and succeed in believing that I am free, it is true that I believe in my freedom; but it does not follow that I am free for I may be the victim of illusion. But, because of my own experiences, I have come to believe in so many strange things that I see little reason to doubt the truth of things that are beyond my experience.

The ancient teachers warned us not to judge from appearances because, said they, the truth need not conform to the external reality to which it relates. They claimed that we bore false witness if we imagined evil against another—that no matter how real our belief appears to be—how truly it conforms to the external reality to which it relates—if it does not make free the one of whom we hold the belief, it is untrue and therefore a false judgment.

We are called upon to deny the evidence of our senses and to imagine as true of our neighbor that which makes him free.

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." To know the truth of our neighbor we must assume that he is already that which he desires to be. Any concept we hold of another that is short of his fulfilled desire will not make him free and therefore cannot be the truth.

Instead of learning my craft in schools where attending courses and seminars is considered a substitute for self-acquired knowledge, my schooling was devoted almost exclusively to the power of imagination. I sat for hours imagining myself to be other than that which my reason and my senses dictated until the imagined states were vivid as reality—so vivid that passersby became but a part of my imagination and acted as I would have them. By the power of imagination my fantasy led theirs and dictated to them their behavior and the discourse they held together while I was identified with my imagined state. Man's imagination is the man himself, and the world as imagination sees it is the real world, but it is our duty to imagine all that is lovely and of good report.

"The Lord seeth not as man seeth, for man looketh upon the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart." "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

In meditation, when the brain grows luminous, I find my imagination endowed with the magnetic power to attract to me whatsoever I desire. Desire is the power imagination uses to fashion life about me as I fashion it within myself. I first desire to see a certain person or scene, and then I look as though I were seeing that which I want to see, and the imagined state becomes objectively real. I desire to hear, and then I listen as though I were hearing, and the imagined voice speaks that which I dictate as though it had initiated the message. I could give you many examples to prove my arguments, to prove that these imagined states do become physical realities; but I know that my examples will awaken in all who have not met the like or who are not inclined towards my arguments, a most natural incredulity.

Nevertheless, experience has convinced me of the truth of the statement*, "He calleth those things which be-not as though they were."—Romans 4:17.* For I have, in intense meditation, called things that were not seen as though they were, and the unseen not only became seen, but eventually became physical realities.

By this method—first desiring and then imagining that we are experiencing that which we desire to experience—we can mold the future in harmony with our desire. But let us follow the advice of the prophet and think only the lovely and the good, for the imagination waits on us as indifferently and as swiftly when our nature is evil as when it is good. From us spring forth good and evil. "I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil." — Deuteronomy 30:15.

Desire and imagination are the enchanter's wand of fable and they draw to themselves their own affinities. They break forth best when the mind is in a state akin to sleep. I have written with some care and detail the method I use to enter the dimensionally larger world, but I shall give one more formula for opening the door of the larger world.

"In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep calleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction." —Job 33:15,16.

In dream we are usually the servant of our vision rather than its master, but the internal fantasy of dream can be turned into an external reality. In dream, as in meditation, we slip from this world into a dimensionally larger world, and I know that the forms in dream are not flat two-dimensional images which modern psychologists believe them to be. They are substantial realities of the dimensionally larger world, and I can lay hold of them. I have discovered that, if I surprise myself dreaming, I can lay hold of any inanimate or stationary form of the dream (a chair, a table, a stairway, a tree) and command myself to awake. At the command to awake, while firmly holding on to the object of the dream, I am pulled through myself with the distinct feeling of awakening from dream. I awaken in another sphere holding the object of my dream, to find that I am no longer the servant of my vision but its master, for I am fully conscious and in control of the movements of my attention. It is in this fully conscious state, when we are in control of the direction of thought, that we call things that are not seen as though they were. In this state we call things by wishing and assuming the feeling of our wish fulfilled. Unlike the world of three dimensions where there is an interval between our assumption and its fulfillment, in the dimensionally larger world there is an immediate realization of our assumption. The external reality instantly mirrors our assumption. Here there is no need to wait four months till harvest. We look again as though we saw, and lo and behold, the fields are already white to harvest.

In this dimensionally larger world "Ye shall not need to fight: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the Lord with you." Chronicles 20:17. And because that greater world is slowly passing through our three-dimensional world, we can by the power of imagination mold our world in harmony with our desire. Look as though you saw, listen as though you heard; stretch forth your imaginary hand as though you touched . . . and your assumptions will harden into facts.

To those who believe that a true judgment must conform to the external reality to which it relates, this will be foolishness and a stumbling-block. But I preach and practice the fixing in consciousness of that which man desires to realize.

Experience convinces me that fixed attitudes of mind which do not conform to the external reality to which they relate and are therefore called imaginary—"things which are not"—will, nevertheless, "bring to nought things that are."

I do not wish to write a book of wonders, but rather to turn man's mind back to the one and only reality that the ancient teachers worshiped as God. All that was said of God was in reality said of man's consciousness so we may say, "That, according as it is written, He that glorify, let him glory in his own consciousness."

No man needs help to direct him in the application of this law of consciousness. "I am" is the self-definition of the absolute. The root out of which everything prows. "I am the vine."

What is your answer to the eternal question, "Who am I?" Your answer determines the part you play in the world's drama. Your answer—that is, your concept of self—need not conform to the external reality to which it relates. This great truth is revealed in the statement, "Let the weak say, I am strong." —Joel 3:10.

Look back over the good resolutions with which many past new years are encumbered. They lived a little while and then they died. Why? Because they were severed from their root. Assume that you are that which you want to be. Experience in imagination what you would experience in the flesh were you already that which you want to be. Remain faithful to your assumption, so that you define yourself as that which you have assumed. Things have no life if they are severed from their roots, and our consciousness, our "I amness," is the root of all that springs in our world.

"If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins."— John 8:24. That is, if I do not believe that I am already that which I desire to be, then I remain as I am and die in my present concept of self. There is no power, outside of the consciousness of man, to resurrect and make alive that which man desires to experience. That man who is accustomed to call up at will whatever images he pleases, will be, by virtue of the power of his imagination, master of his fate. "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." —John 11:25.""Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Chapter 4: No One to Change But Self

"And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth." —John 17:19.

The ideal we serve and strive to attain could never be evolved from us were it not potentially involved in our nature.

It is now my purpose to retell and to emphasize an experience of mine printed by me two years ago. I believe these quotations from "The Search" will help us to understand the operation of the law of consciousness, and show us that we have no one to change but self.

Once in an idle interval at sea I meditated on "the perfect state," and wondered what I would be, were I of too pure eyes to behold iniquity, if to me all things were pure and were I without condemnation. As I became lost in this fiery brooding, I found myself lifted above the dark environment of the senses. So intense was the feeling I felt myself a being of fire dwelling in a body of air. Voices as from a heavenly chorus, with the exaltation of those who had been conquerors in a conflict with death, were. singing, "He is risen—He is risen," and intuitively I knew they meant me.

Then I seemed to be walking in the night. I soon came upon a scene that might have been the ancient Pool of Bethesda for in this place lay a great multitude of impotent folk—blind, halt, withered, waiting not for the moving of the water as of tradition, but waiting for me. As I came near, without thought or effort on my part they were, one after the other, molded as by the Magician of the Beautiful. Eyes, hands, feet—all missing members—were drawn from some invisible reservoir and molded in harmony with that perfection which I felt springing within me. When all were made perfect, the chorus exulted, "It is finished. "Then the scene dissolved and I awoke.

I know this vision was the result of my intense meditation upon the idea of perfection, for my meditations invariably bring about union with the state contemplated. I had been so completely absorbed within the idea that for a while I had become what I contemplated, and the high purpose with which I had for that moment identified myself drew the companionship of high things and fashioned the vision in harmony with my inner nature. The ideal with which we are united works by association of ideas to awaken a thousand moods to create a drama in keeping with the central idea.

My mystical experiences have convinced me that there is no way to bring about the outer perfection we seek other than by the transformation of ourselves. As soon as we succeed in transforming ourselves, the world will melt magically before our eyes and reshape itself in harmony with that which our transformation affirms.

In the divine economy nothing is lost. We cannot lose anything save by descent from the sphere where the thing has its natural life. There is no transforming power in death and, whether we are here or there, we fashion the world that surrounds us by the intensity of our imagination and feeling, and we illuminate or darken our lives by the concepts we hold of ourselves. Nothing is more important to us than our conception of ourselves, and especially is this true of our concept of the dimensionally greater One within us.

Those who help or hinder us, whether they know it or not, are the servants of that law which shapes outward circumstances in harmony with our inner nature. It is our conception of ourselves which frees or constrains us, though it may use material agencies to achieve its purpose.

Because life molds the outer world to reflect the inner arrangement of our minds, there is no way of bringing about the outer perfection we seek other than by the transformation of ourselves. No help cometh from without; the hills to which we lift our eyes are those of an inner range. It is thus to our own consciousness that we must turn as to the only reality, the only foundation on which all phenomena can be explained. We can rely absolutely on the justice of this law to give us only that which is of the nature of ourselves.

To attempt to change the world before we change our concept of ourselves is to struggle against the nature of things. There can be no outer change until there is first an inner change. As within, so without. I am not advocating philosophical indifference when I suggest that we should imagine ourselves as already that which we want to be, living in a mental atmosphere of greatness, rather than using physical means and arguments to bring about the desired change. Everything we do, unaccompanied by a change of consciousness, is but futile readjustment of surfaces. However we toil or struggle, we can receive no more than our assumptions affirm. To protest against anything which happens to us is to protest against the law of our being and our rulership over our own destiny.

The circumstances of my life are too closely related to my conception of myself not to have been formed by my own spirit from some dimensionally larger storehouse of my being. If there is pain to me in these happenings, I should look within myself for the cause, for I am moved here and there and made to live in a world in harmony with my concept of myself.

Intense meditation brings about a union with the state contemplated, and during this union we see visions, have experiences and behave in keeping with our change of consciousness. This shows us that a transformation of consciousness will result in a change of environment and behavior.

All wars prove that violent emotions are extremely potent in precipitating mental rearrangements. Every great conflict has been followed by an era of materialism and greed in which the ideals for which the conflict ostensibly was waged are submerged. This is inevitable because war evokes hate which impels a descent in consciousness from the plane of the ideal to the level where the conflict is waged. If we would become as emotionally aroused over our ideals as we become over our dislikes, we would ascend to the plane of our ideal as easily as we now descend to the level of our hates.

Love and hate have a magical transforming power, and we grow through their exercise into the likeness of what we contemplate. By intensity of hatred we create in ourselves the character we imagine in our enemies. Qualities die for want of attention, so the unlovely states might best be rubbed out by imagining "beauty for ashes and joy for mourning" rather than by direct attacks on the state from which we would be free. "Whatsoever things are lovely and of good report, think on these things," for we become that with which we are en rapport.

There is nothing to change but our concept of self. As soon as we succeed in transforming self, our world will dissolve and reshape itself in harmony with that which our change affirms.

I hope you have enjoyed reading Out of This World by Neville Goddard.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

X16
S1

THE PATTERN OF SCRIPTURE IS REAL

8 June 1970

Paul tells us that whatever was written in former times was written for our instruction. When he speaks of things "written in former times," he means only the Old Testament. He quotes no other book. He doesn't quote Plato, the Vedas, Upanishads, or any ancient book,-- only the Old Testament; and he tells us that they were written -- these books -- for our instruction. He tells us they were all brought to fulfillment; that all the promises of God found their "yes" -- their fulfillment in Him, meaning in the Lord Jesus Christ. He identifies the Lord Jesus Christ with God Himself.

Now he tells us that this is our hope. This whole picture of the past is man's hope because God has completed His plan of salvation. What he is really telling us is that our brain* actually backs up against Infinity, and Infinity unfolds itself creatively in us.

We cannot fail, for the whole drama is over, and our brain simply backs up against Infinity. So, we can only become what God already is. That is the story to us. It is God's pledge to Himself: that God became man, that man may become God. We are actually backed up against Infinity -- our brain; and the drama takes place, may I tell you? in the brain of man.

Now he tells us in his Letter to Timothy to keep this pattern that he has given to the world -- keep it in a faithful manner, and do not depart from this pattern. He doesn't spell it out completely, but he calls it the pattern of "the true word which you have heard from me" [II Timothy 1:13],-- that which was entrusted to you by the Holy Spirit who dwells in us, -- do not depart from this pattern of the true words which you heard from me.

Now the book is like this: I give you a map, and you can read a map, and you tell me where I would like to go on the map. The Old Testament is just like a map, but in this respect it differs: you tell me where I ought to go, based upon your ability to read a map. He could read the Old Testament; and when he found a pattern in the Old Testament, and the pattern that he found was this -- the pattern as described in the Gospel, the story of Jesus Christ, -- and how different was this pattern when experienced from the pattern that some one would point out for you!

How different the cubic reality of this room from any artist's depiction of it. Give an artist a piece of paper or give him a piece of canvas, and he can depict it beautifully; but how different is the cubic reality of this room when I am in it from any depiction of this room by the greatest artist in the world! So, they give me a pattern. He is telling us that when you experience the pattern that I've given you, you will know it unfolds in you as God. There is nothing but God in the world! Think of your home that you know far better than you know this room, and yet this room at this moment is more real to you than your home. The pattern of Scripture is real. It's perfectly real, but it will become all the more real when you actually experience Scripture.

---

*Neville frequently uses the word "brain" when he evidently intends "mind," rather than the organ through which it functions.

Now he is telling us of the experienced Scripture, for he experienced the Lord Jesus Christ as himself. He tells us, Jesus Christ dwells in us. "Do you not realize that the Lord Jesus Christ is in you?"

Well, the average person, if he is honest with himself, he does not know that Jesus Christ is in him. The pattern is in him, because we are backed up against Infinity; and Infinity only unfolds itself in us. Therefore we cannot become at any one moment in time other than what God already is! He has already played the part. The thing is over. But the awakening in us is not over. So, he warns Timothy that those who teach that the Resurrection is over and past are misleading the people. It has happened, yes; but it is not past. It is taking place in man.

Now he points out the pattern -- not every word. All the horrors are in Scripture. You cannot conceive of one thing in this world that is not recorded in Scripture openly: every vice, every horror, everything in the world. We think this is new? It's all in Scripture. And who actually experienced it? The Lord experienced it all! "Was it not necessary," said he, "that the Christ should suffer and then enter into his glory?" [Luke 24:26] Well, Christ-in-you is the one that is suffering! You have suffered. I know, I have and still am, and will continue until I take off this garment that suffers; but having experienced the pattern, when I take it off now, I take it off for the last time.

But it doesn't mean for one moment because I precede my brother in the taking off of the garment that I follow a different pattern; that I am better, that I am wiser, that I am anything other than what he is destined to be, for there is only one destiny: to awaken as God Himself! God is buried in man, and He plays all the parts in the world; and in the end, man awakens as God Himself!

So, he doesn't single out the individual sections. He tells you it's a pattern. I will tell you, from my own experience, the pattern as I have experienced it in the end. I have tried to tell it. I have recorded it in words, but not all of it. Many parts I didn't feel I should put in, because you are going to experience it; and you are going to feel, when you do experience it, that it has never been experienced before! The whole thing has been experienced and brought to its climax, as told us in the Gospel, leading the individual to believe -- well, he did it. No; you are going to know by your own experience that "I did it." The only one who was "born from above" -- I did it. I am born.

Now there are these questions asked. "And the Lord said, Can a man bear a child?" Well, obviously you say, No. Then, "Why then," did the Lord say, "I see every man with his hands drawing himself out of himself just like a woman in labor? Why is every face turned pale?"

Now in the same passage he tells you that he is the Lord, and "David is the king forever and forever," -- the same passage, the 30th chapter of the Book of Jeremiah. Read it from the 5th verse through the 9th. He tells you who he is going to set up as the king forever. He is the Lord of Lords. You are going to have this experience, and you will know you do bear a child! It is translated: "Why do I see every man with his hands on his loins like a woman in labor?"

And that little phrase, "with his hands on his loins" -- "on his loins" actually means, by the Hebrew word, "pulling himself out of himself." Just like a woman in labor: she pulls what she formed in herself out of herself. This was written in the day, -- and even to this day, China, India and the fabulous lands of the world with these enormous populations, -- they don't go to hospitals and have their women put into a twilight sleep and have a child delivered. While they are in the fields laboring, they stop for one moment and draw with their own hands out of themselves that which they have formed in themselves.

Well, God formed us in Himself! We are the God -- there is only God -- and we draw our Self out of ourselves, out of these garments. There are two births: one below formed by a woman, and one from above formed by God; and he draws himself out of himself, just as the woman drew that which was formed in her out of herself.

Well, when you see the thing out of which you come, it is ghastly pale. "Why do I see every face so ghastly pale?" the question is aske So, you draw it out of yourself. Every one is going to draw himself o of himself; and he who draws himself out is the God, and no one sees the garment. The garment has been removed, as we are told in Scriptur So, you ask all these questions of the Pattern, and the Pattern unfold in us.

But do not stop only at the pattern. We are still in the world of Caesar, and we go through hell. So, while we are here, learn what He gave us as the Law to cushion all the blows of the world. It is a simple law, but you've got to believe it, as you believe the most incredible story in the world. How can I tell you to convince you that I have actually gone through the entire story that is recorded in the Gospel concerning Jesus Christ? When I stand before you, aging month after month, year after year, with the inevitable end where they will take the body and put it into a furnace; but I tell you, exactly what is recorded in Scripture I have experienced. There is nothing left to be experienced. I've done it! Right up to the descent of the Holy Spirit in the bodily form of a dove, everything happened in me. And yet, here I am aging before you, and to come before you until that inevitable moment when the body has to be burned and discarded, and I leave you with only a pattern that I have gone through; and the patter leads one to God Himself. There is nothing but God. This is a patter that God went through. Well, he did not deny that he suffered.

"Is it not stated that the Christ must suffer, and then enter knto his glory? And then beginning with Moses and the Law and the prophets and the Psalms, he interpreted to them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself." Read this in the 24th chapter of the Book of Luke [Luke 24:26,27]. "Scripture must be fulfilled in me," he said. There is not a thing in the world that I came to do but to fulfill my Word. He is the Word, and "the Word cannot return void; it must accomplish that which I purpose and prosper in the thing for which I sent it" [Isaiah 55:11]. He is called the Word of God. He comes, then, to fulfill his own Word.

So, Scripture must be fulfilled in me -- not a thing else. I may own the earth. Well, that's not fulfilling Scripture. I may become anything in this world that I desire as a man, but that's not fulfilling Scripture. Scripture has a pattern; and there's a definite pattern, and that pattern is laid out for us in the Gospel, in the story of Jesus Christ.

It begins with his birth; but really it begins with his resurrection. The resurrection is his birth. I know that from my own experience. We are "born anew," said Peter, "through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." That's how man is "born from above," -- through the resurrection, when he awakes within his skull. For that's the skull -- that's the brain that is actually leaning back against Infinity. Infinity, having accomplished the entire thing, now unfolds Itself in the individual, so that man becomes only that which God already is. So, what he has already accomplished now unfolds itself in man, and man duplicates within himself the entire story of Jesus Christ.

So, it begins with the resurrection, where he awakes. The resurrection is only an awakening. That's all that it is. He awakes within himself. He's been dreaming you, because God laid Himself down within man to sleep; and as He slept, He dreamed. He dreams your life, my life, our lives. He is dreaming the life; and then He comes to that moment in time when He simply awakes.

As Paul said, when he came to the fullness of the day, then he awoke. He awoke within man. Awakened within me, I then duplicate all that I have read in Scripture concerning another; and it really is "Another," yes, -- it's God, but God is the only Reality; so that Reality unfolds Itself in me. This is the reality, compared to any depiction of it. When I read the story or hear the story, that is similar like some one depicting it on a flat surface; and then when it unfolds within me, then I experience the cubic reality of the story.

Now, in the story he tells us concerning a son. He names the son but man with all of his wisdom cannot find out that Son, and the son is David! In the story as it unfolds, David does stand before you, and you know who he is because it is a memory returning. If God has done it and then God unfolds in me, what is unfolding but the memory of God? He unfolds within me. So, Paul in that statement that I quoted tonight said, "the Holy Spirit who dwells within us." Well, the Holy Spirit, we are told, is memory; for, "I will send you the Holy Spirit, and He will bring to your remembrance all that I have told you" [John 14:26]. So the Lord tells us He sends this memory. If He sends the memory of all that He has done and the memory unfolds within me, then it is called in Scripture the Holy Spirit unfolding within me and bringing to my remembrance all that He told me, for:

> "All was foretold me; naught > Could I foresee!
> But I learned how the wind would sound
> After these things should be."
> [Edward Thomas, from "The New House"]

After it happened within me -- well, that is exactly what was foretold me; but I thought it was all about another, and it wasn't about another at all. It was all about God, and it is God unfolding Himself in me! And He unfolds Himself in you. Every one, in the end, is God! And there is nothing but God!

But I must suffer, as I am told; and you must suffer. The whole vast world is a suffering world for the end, and the end justifies all the suffering in the end, for in the end is only one Being that comes out, and the Being is God.

So, I go back -- all the way back -- to the beginning. He takes me back, and he began with the words of the Law. So, "beginning with Moses and the Law," -- and then he comes into the prophets, he has quoted one from the prophets; then he comes to the Psalms. "And I will tell of the decree of the Lord," said the Psalmist. "He said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee." So, he took all the Psalms into consideration. He took everything from Scripture, and he said the Scripture is all about me, for "in the role of the Book, it is all about me" [Psalm 40:7].

Now he brings it completely to fulfillment -- to climax, and then he tells us: Wait -- wait until you are clothed with power from above. The minute you are clothed with Power from above, then He is going to unfold within you.

Who?

The Very One who brought it to climax.

So, Jesus Christ is in you, and Jesus Christ will unfold within you as you; and you are the Lord Jesus Christ, and there is no other Jesus Christ! So, the whole vast world is redeemed, because it has already been redeemed by One having done it. And that One has formed the pattern. The Pattern is now in man to unfold in man as the man in whom it unfolds. And that's the story.

So no one can fail! The most horrible being in the world -- he can't fail. He is only playing a certain part. He is in a state of consciousness that demands that he plays the part that he is playing.

If tonight I slipped into the part of a thief, I will play the part of a thief. I may suffer the consequences if I am arrested and go to jail and be locked in for the rest of my days, if I slip into that state. But I am not the state into which I slip. I am the Being that the world calls "God." So are you!

When Blake was asked, "What do you think of Jesus? Who is he?" without batting an eye, he said, "Jesus is the only God"; but he hastened to add: "So am I, and so are you." [from "Auguries of Innocence"]

So, every one is this God-in-the-act-of-awakening, because the pattern is already set; but he said, "Follow the pattern of the true word which you have heard from me," -- God the truth -- "which has been entrusted to you by the Holy Spirit who dwells within us." Well, the Holy Spirit is simply the remembrance, for "when He comes He will bring to your remembrance all that I have told you."

Well, when he brings it to your remembrance, he doesn't talk as something coming from without. He brings it into a three-dimensional, cubic reality, and you experience it. There is all the difference in the world between having heard the story of the birth of Christ and having experienced it. Now I know exactly what it means when I read the story that he was born differently. He was "born from above." I can tell you, "I came from above." Speaking to himself, the lower man, "You came from below." "I am from above and you are from below." "You" came out of the womb of a woman; "I" came out of the Womb of God whihh is out of your own skull. For that skull of yours -- that brain -- is simply resting against Infinity; and Infinity having completely accomplished it, Infinity now unfolds itself in you. So, if I came from above and "you" rest against "me" and I am unfolding in "you," you too will be "born from above." You simply unfold from above, as I, too, became a man, He became a man.

He became obedient unto death, even death upon the cross. He, to was born from below -- not something entirely different. This whole thing happened just as you happened: You were born from below and you shall be "born from above."

You were born from below, and you suffer all the hell of the world, for every one has suffered, may I tell you? Today you may enjoy the most perfect health in the world and the comfort of finances, and the comfort of being known and being recognized in all the lovely things that people strive for; but you have suffered. And if you haven't, may I tell you? you will. No one will escape the sufferings of God, for God suffered; and if He unfolds Himself in you in detail, all that He experienced in the suffering, you are going to suffer.

But I will give you one thing. The Crucifixion is over. Don't think you are moving towards the Crucifixion. That is over. That came in the very beginning. "I have been crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live, yet not I, Christ lives in me, and the life I now life in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God Who loved me and gave Himself for me." [Galatians 2:20]

So, the Crucifixion is over, but the Resurrection is taking place So, don't think of that moment of the Crucifixion. That is completely over. And I will tell you from my own experience, it was not a sad moment. It was sheer ecstacy. It was ecstacy when I was crucified. I can't describe the thrill of the vortices on these six points of my body. Every one will one day have a little memory of that picture because it's all over. It has already happened to all of us.

I happened to remember it one night when I led this crowd towards the Holy City. When the whole thing re-enacted itself, it was sheer joy, not pain at all. But there is pain after the Crucifixion, and you have suffered, or you are suffering. I have suffered and am, and will continue until the very end. But the end justifies all the suffering because you will awake as God Himself! This is the only way that God expands, for there is only God. God seems to exist by constantly becoming -- constantly becoming, expanding beyond anything.

Here is a drama. He'll write another drama, maybe a more horrible drama, for His own expansion. But when He writes it, He will take us with Him and we in the end are God, for the word "God" is a plural word: "Elohim," -- one made up of others. That's God. So, all of us form God. We made the decision in the beginning, and we actually conceived the play, and it was played and brought to its climax, and then each one after the other unfolds the same drama within him.

Why on earth should I look back and see that face ghastly pale? I am a brown-skinned person. I am called "olive skinned." I have never been accused of blue eyes and blonde hair, save as a child when my hair was white. But here I am olive skinned; and yet when I came out of it, it was pale -- ghastly pale like death, yet moving its head from side to side, just as you are told in Jeremiah -- that 30th chapter of Jeremiah: "Why has every face turned pale?" And then they will all come and worship the Lord and his king David. David is mentioned all the way through; and yet until it actually happens, having been trained as all Christians have been trained, they will never see that David is the Son.

David does the will of the Father; and in the end, this personification of humanity stands before God, who is the Father of humanity, and sees that personification as a single being, and it is David. And then David calls you "Father." And you know it. You know as though you have always known it; therefore it's memory returning. The only thing that is coming back is your own memory! You had to completely forget Who-You-Are to become man. So you emptied yourself of your God-hood and became man, and you are playing all these things here.

Now tonight there are those who want to know how to change the immediate present. Leave out the pattern, for if I am destined -- and, as I say, you are destined, no matter what you have done, what you are doing, what you are going to do, you are destined to awaken as God the Father, the Creator of the Universe! You are destined for that. But now, in the meanwhile, while I am still dreaming and I do not know where the next meal is coming from or a better job, what can I do? Well, it's simple, but you really have to believe it.

Can I really believe that my imagination creates reality? Can I believe these words of Blake?

> "Babel mocks, saying there is no God nor Son of God; . . . . .
> That thou, O Human Imagination, O Divine Body, art all
> A delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou awakenest upon > My weary eye, even in this dungeon and this iron mill . . . . .
> Thou also sufferest with me, though I behold Thee not."

And then the Divine Voice replies:

> "Fear not; I am with you always.
> Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from Death
> Thy brother who sleeps in Albion."
> [from "Jerusalem"]

Just believe in Me! He equates God the Father with the human imagination; and he tells, now, Imagination: "Thou sufferest with me." Certainly! Could I suffer without my imagination being present? Take away imagination: you could cut the body into pieces; it could never suffer. Therefore, who suffers? So, the Divine Voice replies: "I am with you always." Can you divorce yourself from imagination? Could you be any place tonight where you are not aware that you are imagining? You couldn't. If you are any place where you are not imagining, what you left behind you cannot feel. You can cut it to pieces. But wherever you are and imagining, that's Reality! So, --

" . . . . . Fear not, I am with you always.
Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from Death
Thy brother who sleeps in Albion."

So, let the world mock. They don't know it. But may I tell you? they are forgiven, because the day will come, every atheist in the world -- every agnostic in the world -- will experience the story of Jesus Christ, and experience it in the first-person, singular, and a present-tense experience. So, forgive every one, no matter what he has done to you. Some of them use it only for a conversation piece -- just to get an argument. Well, I don't argue any more with them.

You don't believe in God? It's perfectly all right. I will not raise a finger to persuade you. I will only tell you, one day you will know; and maybe by reason of the fact that now you do not believe in it and you are so vocal, you'll become so filled with zeal to persuade others that God exists. So, it is perfectly all right. Let them go their way.

I tell you, every one is going to experience Scripture. "Scripture must be fulfilled in me." So, I begin at the very beginning, in Genesis, and I go through the entire Scripture, and you weave it like a pathway. And I tell you, the path that I have followed -- much of it is suffering. And there are highlights; they are all glorious -- the highlights. Then comes the end when the Holy Spirit descends upon you; and when He descends upon you and you hear that lovely voice coming, and the voice says He loves you, and that is why he penetrates this ring of offense to demonstrate His love for you; and here you feel and see the symbol of the Holy Spirit dwelling upon you as a dove It remains upon you, and it smothers you with love -- nothing but love And then you wake, knowing He is with you. He remains upon you; and forever and forever you are that Being spoken of in Scripture as the Lord Jesus Christ.

But you know every one is destined for the same thing. So, we are all brothers behind the masks that we wear. So, if you are suffering tonight, may I tell you? there is a Law given you. Listen to it carefully. It's very, very simple.

What would the feeling be like if it were true that I am now, -- not tomorrow, not next month, but now -- the one that I would like to be? What would the feeling be like if it were true? Assume that feeling. Just assume the feeling of that wish fulfilled; and, may I tell you? in a way that no one knows, you in the immediate future will project it as a reality, as a fact.

The words from Scripture that support it are these: "Whatever a man says, believing, it will be done for him." Whatever any one says in this world, believing what he says will come to pass, it will be done for him. "Therefore, whatever you ask in prayer, believe that you have received it, and you will." If you want the reference, it is the 11th chapter, the 23d and 24th verses, of the Book of Mark. These are the words of the One who completed Scripture.

I know from my own experience that when I have actually assumed, either for myself or for another -- seeming "other," for in the end there is no "other"; we are all brothers, all one, -- that if I persist in that assumption and really believe it, it invariably comes to pass. I could not tell any one how it's going to come to pass. I only know it contains within itself the power and the wisdom of Self-expression.

As I told you the story at the last lecture what I did with my friend Freedom,* it was quite simple to me just to "hear" him play and to put my hands on his shoulders and to thank him for the joy he gave me in that wonderful piano concerto. I did it three times in the interval of one week, and then he called to tell me the piano came back.

Here, the average person would not have given him one dollar for the return of that piano, for at the moment unnumbered things are stolen between the pick-up and the delivery. And the truck disappeared the contents disappeared, the driver disappeared. I have not heard from Freedom since, to get the details; but he did say when he first called, they have found the driver in San Luis Obispo, but he refused to give them any news concerning the truck or its contents. So, they put him in jail, and had to keep him there for five days before they could bring action because that's the law; but they put him in jail for five days. Now, why he confessed where the truck was, I do not know; but nevertheless he confessed, and they finally got Freedom's piano. So he has it back.

I only know what I did. I do not know anything concerning the case, other than what I did after he called me. I merely assumed the feeling of the wish fulfilled; and to do it, in my mind's eye, I saw him sitting at the piano. I "heard" the music. I felt his shoulders. I felt the thrill and the joy that was mine because of what he did at the piano; then I felt the piano. And in a week the piano was located.

Now, I will say to any one -- the driver who stole it -- if I were now in judgment, I would forgive him. I don't care what motive moved him to do it, I have reached the point: "Forgive him, Father. He knows not what he does." [Luke 23:34]

We all fall into these states: the state of the thief, the state of this, the state of the other; and forgive them. They do not know what they are doing! The occupant of the state is not wrong; it is the state, but these states were created in the beginning, and they are eternal states. They do not change, any more than this city changes when I leave it. The city remains, but I go on; but the city remains for any one else to enter the city. So I enter a state. The state remains when I leave the state.

So, if I am poor and I cease to be poor, poverty has not ceased to be a state. I may go on to a state of affluence; and affluence is a state, as poverty is a state. But the occupant entering the state lights it up, animates it and makes the state become real. So, if I move into the state of the thief, I've got to steal. If I move into the state of the affluent or being poor, or being anything, I must express that state.

How do I enter the state? I assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled. That's all that I do. You tell me what you want, as Freedom did. Freedom said, "I want my piano back. I'm only insured for two thousand dollars, but I can't replace the piano for four thousand dollars. I want my piano back. That's all that I want." He was beside himself -- too close to the problem to work for himself; so he turned to the one person in whom he had faith. And so, I just simply sat, in that week, on three different occasions; and the last one was the night before it came back. It came back at 4:30 in the morning, -- of all the hours of the day to deliver a piano!

*See "All-Powerful Human Words" dated 5 June 1970, Page 2.

But that night, I turned on KFAC, and this lovely piano concerto was coming through, and I used it to aid my imagination; and I imagined I was hearing Freedom play that concerto. And I so reveled in the music! It comes on every night between 8:00 anc 10:00, that lovel two hours, by the Gas Company; they sponsor it. And here, night after night, if I am home, I turn it on; and I imagined he was doing it. I didn't wait until the person announced who did it; I cut it off before I would be disillusioned in the one playing it. I "heard" Freedom; I imagined that he was doing it. I held him -- felt his shoulders, and embraced him and thanked him for the joy I received from the concerto he played.

The next morning at 4:30 his piano is delivered. When he called me the next day to tell me -- he has promised to write me, but he is not given to writing; he promised to give me all the details. I know what he is going to do; he is going to wait until he comes down, and then he is going to tell me in the flesh, because he is not given to putting anything down on paper.

However, this is the simple, simple technique of getting things done in this world. It's based upon the simple Principle that God exists in us and -- [end of recording].

---oOo---

#11
S1

PAUL'S PRAYER INTERPRETED

About fifteen or maybe twenty years ago, I heard the Archbishop of Canterbury speak at Trinity Church in New York City, which is at the head of Wall Street. That is, I heard him and saw him on TV; I did not attend the service. And he took as his theme that great benediction of fPaul, taken from the last verse of the 13th chapter of Second Corinthians: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of and participation in the Holy Spirit be upon you all." And he treated it beautifully. He's a cultured, educated man, but he treated it on this level, and they all loved it. It was perfectly wonderful. If they only knew the Benediction!

From time to time when I go to dinner at other people's homes, if they have the custom of saying grace before dinner, sometimes I am asked to say grace. Well, I will invariably use this benediction. I don't explain it. If I explained it to them, they would be mortified! For here, this most elaborate benediction of Paul is a description of an experience which was the central fact of Paul's life.

This is the center of the work, for he was pursued by the Great Lover. In spite of his resistance, in spite of his evasions, he was found. And then this is what he said in his benediction; he wishes every person in the world to have this experience. For this is God's method of regeneration. It is not spelled out, but this is God's method of regeneration.

Let me quote it again: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship and participation in the Holy Spirit be with you all."

Now, let us go into the story and find out what he means by it. Mary wonders,"How is this thing possible, seeing that I know not a man?" And the Angel said to her, "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you. Therefore the child to be born will be called Holy, the Son of God."

Here he tells us the theory of supernatural conception, how it's done. The power of the Most High he equates with the Holy Spirit; and in his benediction, now, he is wishing us to have this experience -- the experience of Mary. So, the office of the Holy Spirit is that the sons of God, by union with their Father, may by His grace become their own father. That is what he is asking for every one in the world. If you would actually transcend this level and enter what is called "the Kingdom of Heaven," or the New Age, you do it with the body you "wear" here; and you can only do it by a complete transformation and a radical transformation, which is brought about through union with the Father. And he tells us, the Father is all Love.

"And love of God," -- that's the Father. He emphasizes the Holy Spirit as the office by which this union is brought about, as told us in the story of Mary: that "the Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you." Now the power of the Most High is called Christ Jesus, for we are told: "Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God."

"Who touched me? for I perceive that force," -- that creative power, -- "has gone out of me," because some one touched him. Here is an actual creative act. On this level, it offends people, but on the highest level it is the most radiant, glorious, ecstatic event that you can ever conceive of, for you are being lifted up to an entirely different level.

On this level, it would seem immoral, incest; and here, the story is telling us, if we know the story as one should know it, that he who came out of his mother, as you are told in the story, was her Husband. He was his own father. "I and my Father are one." For, did he not say, all things were made by Him, and without Him was not one thing made that was made?

So, here, who then is Mary? Are we not Mary? Are we not the emanation of God, from whom God hid His face only for a moment, for a short while? As we are told in the 54th chapter of the Book of Isaiah: "Sing, O barren, and those who have not borne. Break forth into singing. You have not been in travail, for your Maker is your Husband; the Lord of Hosts is His name."

So, here we are the "barren ones." We haven't brought forth the Promise. The Promise was a son. That was the Promise made to Abraham, the beginning of it all. And man waits and waits and waits, and he gives up in despair, because he hadn't brought forth the son.

Now he tells us the time has come; and when it came, then there is a method, a definite method, by which it appears in the world, and the Great Lover finds you; and in spite of your evasions and your resistance, you are now one with Him. There is union between the Father and the Son, for He is going to make the Son one with Himself. And this union is an embrace of love; so he incorporates the three states: "and the love of God," -- he puts that into the benediction. And Love embraces you. That is, by the office of the Holy Spirit, who impregnates you, for you fuse with the Father, and you become one body with Him.

That fusion is oneness. You put Him on just as you would a garment. As you are told in Scripture: "All who are baptized into Christ put on Christ." So, the first event recorded in the Gospel, after the prelude of the mission of John, is that of baptism. This is the baptism. So we are told as John is coming to the end of his picture: "He on whom you see the Spirit descend and remain, he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit."

Here is a secret. He tells you it's a mystery. "He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit." He is the Holy Spirit. Therefore, He is the one who impregnates you. He impregnates you with an embrace after you have actually answered correctly, which is: Love is the greatest thing in the world. So, he incorporates into the benediction, "and the love of God." He starts off with the Son first; then he comes to God the Father, and calls it Love; and then he comes to the Holy Spirit, and he calls that now, "participating in the Holy Spirit." And he calls it a fellowship, a union.

So, here, if I wish you this, I could not wish you anything greater in the world, for if that wish was granted tonight, I could then prophesy whether you remain in this world or depart from this world, but it will still be "thirty years" from that moment of the wish being granted, when you are embraced and there is union with the Father; and thirty years later you are going to actually bring forth the sign of your "birth from above"; and in just a few months following that you are going to bring forth the consciousness of being God the Father.

#11
S1

So, it takes thirty years from the wish being granted; and so the Great Lover is seeking and calling us, one by one, in spite of our resistance and our evasions. He said, "I hid my face from you for a short, short while, but now I will give you my everlasting love, and will never take it from you again."

So, "Sing, O barren ones. Break forth into singing, you who have not borne, who have not been in travail."

So, here, this wonderful benediction that people, taking it on this level, have no concept of the depth of it -- what Paul is really wishing for every one in the world; for he ends the benediction, "with you all," -- not just a few. May all have this experience. He is describing an experience that was actually fundamental. It was basic in his life. That changed his entire world. He never knew the Old Testament until this experience took place; and then, in the fullness of time, it broke forth, and then he understood what happened to him thirty years before.

I know, when it happened to me, I only made a note of it. I did not understand the experience. And true knowledge is not merely experience, but the understanding of experience. I pondered it and talked about it. I told others about it. They pooh-poohed the idea: "That was a vivid, vivid dream, Neville." All right, -- to them a vivid dream. I still kept it alive in my mind's eye and pondered it, and I lived with it; and thirty years later, to the month, it erupted. And that embrace that took place thirty years before, which was an impregnation from my Father, unfolded within me and I discovered, I am my own Father!

I am the Father. He gave Himself to me. That is the purpose of God: to give Himself to man directly, without an intermediary -- just directly. So, these three mentioned in this benediction are one. This is not what the churches talk about -- about three persons; this is simply one. These are three offices: one is the creative act; one is God the Father, infinite love in unthinkable origin -- you can't conceive of the origin of it; and then here is the Son, the one who actually is brought forth who discovers himself to be his own Father!

So, you speak of these mysteries in the Scripture. How can a man be his own father? How can he be his father's father? All these questions are asked in Scripture; and if this benediction is accepted and realized by any one here tonight, I can prophesy for you, should you remain in this world for thirty years or should you depart this world, it will be thirty years between the acceptance of it -- the fulfillment of it when you are embraced and then the expression of it. And then you will know you are God the Father! So, in the end there is nothing but God the Father -- nothing but God!

So, here, this simple, wonderful statement of all of his benedictions -- I would say, every letter of his always has some blessing -- begins with it, or he ends with it, or maybe beginning and end. But this is the most elaborate of all. So, in my own case, I will always say it, but I never explain it. If called upon to say a blessing at grace, I will always use this; and they say, Isn't that wonderful; that's Scripture, and therefore that's nice. And they all say, Amen, and we start to eat, not knowing what I am asking for them.

But this story of Scripture, if really understood, would shake the entire structure of those who call themselves so proper and so altogether right, because the whole thing is one grand "sex" act, but on an entirely different level -- an entirely different level.

A few years ago, a book came off the press telling of the inside stories of the prominent people of Europe at the turn of the Century, in the days of Victoria. Well, she had quite a son; he was quite a boy who got around. And so it was rumored that he was living with the Duchess of -- I won't mention her name, but it is in the book. You can always find it in the book. And he was living openly. Every one knew he he was living with the Duchess; but the Duke could do nothing about it because, after all, he was the Prince. And some nosey lady went to Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who was very prominent in those days, -- she was an actress, accepted in all the circles, and told her that she had heard that "our Prince is living with the Duchess. Isn't that a horrible thing?" She was blaming the Duchess.

And Mrs. Campbell said, "I don't care what they do, so long as they do not do it in the street and frighten the horses."

Now, she would understand this benediction, Mrs. Campbell would. Others would simply be like the one who gossiped and told her about it; they were so completely disturbed that this man was living openly with the Duchess.

So, when one knows the inner side of the story of the Bible, you see the whole thing as one grand creative act; that the Father actually has union with His sons, that the sons may be the Father! And they are called one by one into such a union. "I will call you one by one, O Children of Israel." And one by one are called, and they are embraced after they have actually fulfilled their place by answering correctly; What is the greatest thing in the world? You are in the presence of the greatest thing in the world; you are in the presence of God, and God is Infinite Love. And Infinite Love asks you the question. Well, you can't think of anything but Love in His presence. You answer, Love. Then He embraces you; and that is ecstacy -- sheer ecstacy.

So, when you are "sent," then, back into the world, you tell only what happened to you, but you don't understand what happened to you. You are as innocent as the Virgin; and you can say with her, "I do not know; I know not a man. How could I possibly -- I was embraced by Infinite Love, but how can I have a child, seeing that I know not a man?" And, then comes that moment for delivery when suddenly you bring forth the child, and you are as surprised as any one could be, because you didn't know all along in these thirty years that you were "pregnant."

#11
S1

And so, it is said that "He began his ministry when he was about thirty years of age." It is thirty years from the moment of the impregnation -- not thirty years physically, because that is not when you started. You started at that moment when you were impregnated by God the Father. And thirty years later you bring forth the Son, which is your Self; but the Son is going to prove in the not-distant future that he is the Father, for five months later -- in my own case 139 days later -- you discover you are God the Father, because His Son stands before you and calls you, Father. And you know without any uncertainty that he is your son, and you also know that he knows you are his father.

So, evwrything is just perfectly told in Scripture, but it is all adumbrated. It is all foreshadowed. It is not spelled out in detail, any more than Paul's benediction is spelled out in detail. To say that this is his description of an experience is really to go a little bit far, because is it really described? Here, we are asked: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship and participation in the Holy Spirit be with you all." Why, that is an experience of Paul. But I can't really call that a description of the method by which he actually brought forth the child.

He does say in his Letter to the Galatians: "When it pleased God to reveal His Son in me, then I conferred not with flesh and blood." So, the Son came forward. He doesn't tell us it took thirty years, but Luke tells us he was about thirty years when he began his ministry. And here we find that this is all based upon baptism, and that is the baptism of the Holy Spirit. For, "There is one coming after me who will baptize you with the Holy Spirit." No one tells you what that baptism is; and they think it is simply going to church when a child is an infant and putting water on it in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit. That's a shadow. It conveys nothing concerning the deep mystery.

And, yet, millions of us -- I was baptized when I was simply three or four weeks old. My mother insisted that my son, when he was two, should be baptized or he wouldn't go to heaven; and she took that literally on this level. I said, "Mother, if it pleases you, I'll take him to church this coming Sunday, and we will baptize him." So, we did. He was two years old. It pleased my mother, because she said he could not go to heaven, should he die now, --"what's going to happen to him? He can't get to heaven unless he is baptized." She didn't know what baptism meant.

The baptism is union with the Father. That's baptism. Until one is actually embraced by the Father and actually has union with the Father, he doesn't have the Seal impressed upon him of the Father; so he can't bring forth the Father's image. So, here, he brings forth that Father himself! Not a likeness, -- he comes forth as the Father. And time proves that he is the Father.

So, here, when you read any portion of Scripture, know you are actually looking at a mystery. Paul uses the word "mystery" twenty times. He tells you it's a mystery. The whole thing is a mystery, but he doesn't explain it. I am trying my best to explain to you, not based upon any theory, but based upon my own experience; for if I would come and speak with authority, I must speak from experience. They say, "He speaks not as the Scribes and the Pharisees, but he speaks as one having authority," -- because he is speaking from his own personal experience.

Now, you have an experience; you don't quite understand it. Wait for the fullness of the time for that experience to flower, and then you speak with authority. I had no knowledge, no concept, for what that union meant. I felt the union. I was embraced; we became one -- Infinite Love. So, I actually put on, like I would a garment, the Being who embraced me, and the Being who embraced me was Love. But I didn't understand it until thirty years when He erupted within me; and then all that He embraced me and contained within Himself, for the story is His story; and as He embraced me, He simply transferred to me His story that I would unfold within my own being and become as He is.

So, the birth had to be just as His. The Resurrection had to be just like His. The discovery of David had to be just like his. The ascent into Heaven like the fiery serpent had to be just like His. The descent of the dove was just like His, because He impressed me with Himself. And that was giving Himself to me! For, "all things bring forth after their kind," so that the end is always like the origin. And here was the origin; so the end had to be just like the origin. For this is a basic law set up in the beginning; that all things bring forth after their kind. So, if He impresses me with Himself and I fuse with Him, when I bring Him forth, it has to be exactly what He is.

So, I say to any one: I can ask for nothing greater for you than that which is contained in this benediction. You will find it in the 14th verse of the 13th chapter of Second Corinthians: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ," -- and "grace" means the gift -- unearned, unmerited -- the gift of God Himself; that's the grace, because grace comes through Jesus Christ, -- "and the love of God," -- he brings that in because he is telling you exactly how it is going to happen; you are going to stand in the presence of Love, and you are going to use His words from the 13th chapter of First Corinthians, for these are His words When asked to name the greatest thing in the world, Paul answers, "Love"; so he brings in: "and the love of God." John tells us, "God is love." Then he brings in the office of the Holy Spirit, which is the "impregnating" one; but it's all one; the three are one. You are standing in the presence of one Being, and then you are embraced; but all these things are present: the gift is there, which is "the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ"; Love is embracing you, so the "love of God" is present; and then the actual impregnation is present, which is the Holy Spirit, for "the Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore, that which is to be born of you will be called Holy, the Son of God." Well, when the Son comes out in this form, the Son then blossoms into the Father, and he is God the Father.

So, this is the story of that simple, wonderful benediction which you can read in just a matter of seconds; and I would ask you to commit it to memory, and if you are ever invited to say grace, just say it. It takes just a matter of ten seconds to say it. And then they will all join with you and say, Amen; and you need not explain it to them, because they would be shocked just like any one else is shocked when they hear Mrs. Patrick Campbell's reaction to the Duchess.

So, here, we take this same theme, and put it now on this level. I was embraced, and then I brought forth the nature of the One who embraced me. So, now, you put yourself into a mood of empathy with some one that you want to help. Get into the mood. Wouldn't it be wonderful if she or he or they were this, that or the other? And bring them before your mind's eye, and wouldn't you normally, naturally embrace them because of their good fortune? Wouldn't you congratulate them? But I personally am given towards embracing people; so it's not difficult with me to embrace any one. I embrace them because I feel like it. I just want to do it. So, I embrace, and then feel the thrill that they have told me their good fortune; and the first reaction is to embrace them because they have just told you of something marvelous about them.

#11
S1

Well, take the same technique, and bring them into your mind's eye; put yourself, first, into a mood of empathy, not sympathy, -- empathy. You are rejoicing with them. And then, as they tell you, and in your mind's eye you listen to it, then embrace them, and feel the thrill that is yours because they have accomplished their objective in this world.

I can do that with male or female equally. In fact, when I embrace men publicly, -- my father, I always kissed him. I didn't care; I wouldn't go in behind the door to kiss him. If I came to the store at any time of the day -- and here I am, a man with my children -- I would embrace my father and kiss him. Always to me that was the most natural thing in the world, and he expected it. If I met him on Fifth Avenue, I always kissed my father. It wasn't strange. It wasn't something that -- well, you had some restraint about it. I always did it.

And, here, I meet my friends on Fifth Avenue, Broadway, any place, and I embrace them. I went down to see a friend off the other day to the Orient. He was gone for several weeks. And here was Charley waiting for me, and we had about twelve others coming to have cocktails to see him off. When I came to the door, he expected it and I wanted to; I embraced him and kissed him. He's a man a few years older than I am. And one man coming down, -- I had never seen him before, -- said, "What's going on here?" He thought that was a strange thing to do. Not to me, -- it isn't strange, because I love people. And male or female, it's all the same to me.

So, in my own case, I can practice this easily because it's natural with me to empathize with some one -- to feel a thrill because they really have what they want in this world. And when I feel myself working to that point, it's like a real creative act; wouldn't it be wonderful? and then at that moment I embrace them and feel the thrill for them -- not for me, it's for them. But at that very moment, I have imparted to them all that I am feeling. They've got to bring it forth. They will bring forth into their world what I was feeling when I embraced them, just as I brought forth what my Father felt when He embraced me.

So, He embraced me, and I was carried beyond any concept in the world that concerns ecstacy. You can't conceive of the ecstacy. And that's what He felt for me. He was actually within Himself -- all that He had He gave me. It was His purpose then to give me Himself; and the method by which I would unfold that Self that He gave me, and it was a definite method: First, He would awaken me within my grave -- my own skull, and then I would come out, and the symbols that He foretold in Scripture would surround me. And, then, I would go one step further and discover my Fatherhood -- that I am the Father. Not looking to a father; I am the Father. I am He. Then comes one more and one more, and all these unfold because they were all contained within Him. And when He embraced me, He gave me the method by which they would unfold within me.

So, here, this night, this simple, simple benediction, -- and I can't ask anything greater for you. If I asked this night that you be -- well, you name it, it would pale into nothing compared to this. If you wanted to be a billionaire, -- all right, so it's a billionaire, and maybe you'll leave it tomorrow for some one else to spend. And maybe you'd want to be famous in this world and have all the papers talk about you and your pictures; and then fade tomorrow. Well, this cannot fade. This is forever! So, could I ask anything greater for any one than this benediction, and quote it sincerely, meaning for them? But he included all people in the world: "with you all," said he, as he closed the benediction.

But tonight you can put it into the most practical manner and use it lovingly for every one that you meet. Fall in love with any one that you meet -- just fall in love with them; and then you don't have to meet them socially or go out with them. Just love them, because behind the mask there is your brother. Behind every mask is your brother who is in Eternity, and you are going to do it for him. And, so, you embrace him here.

And, then, one day our Father will embrace him, and he will become the Father. He can't volunteer for it. He's running from it. The whole vast world is running from it; but the Great Lover will find them, one after the other. And when He finds them, in spite of their protest, He embraces them. And then, in the interval of time, -- that "pregnancy" lasts thirty years, -- they will bring forth the Son; and then that Son will only reveal to him Who-He-Is, and he will have confirmation of that 139 days later. He is the Father.

And, so, when you read it, that "He on whom you see the Spirit descend and remain, he it is who will baptize you with the Holy Spirit." And, so, every one incorporated into that Body becomes the One who is doing the impregnation, for he is the Father! After incorporation and then the "birth from above," from that moment of the "birth from above," he is part of that creative power of God who is used in the impregnation. So, every one is coming, one by one; and we will all then be used in that one Body, for "There is one body, one spirit, one lord, one God and Father of all."

You know, our great poets, they tell this in their own marvelous way, and it is so hidden. I daresay that every one present has seen "Julius Caesar," and you've read it -- those who went through high school, undoubtedly you read "Julius Caesar." But you have pictures, and I have seen the play on Broadway a few times; I have seen it on the screen, and I had occasion to look up something in "Julius Caesar" this past week. So, I took my Concordance on Shakespeare, and I said I could find what I am seeking in the first act, the second scene. So, I started, and then my eye fell upon a simple little speech of Caesar. And here, what we are talking about tonight, -- these are the words of Caesar as Shakespeare put them into Caesar's mouth:

"Forget not in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia, for our elders say,
The barren touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse."

#11
S1

They "shake off their sterile curse." So, --

"Forget not in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia," -- for Calpurnia is Caesar's wife, the "barren one." She was barren. So, do not fail to touch her, --

"for our elders say,
The barren touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse."

Well, isn't that the student of the Bible? All great poets are students of the Bible, and they are inspired to tell it in their own way; so, here was this statement put into the mouth of Caesar. If you could but touch -- well, the Father touched me, and then my barrenness came to an end, for I brought forth the child, and he was simply taking the 54th chapter of Isaiah and putting it into his own wonderful words in the story of Caesar.

---oOo---

Neville 02-22-1963

PAUL'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Paul is the greatest and most influential figure in the history of Christianity. After you hear his story you may judge just who he is. After his credentials have gained him public confidence, Paul begins. Paul wrote 13 letters, if you take the double letters as two: like 1st and 2nd Corinthians, 1st and 2nd Timothy, and 1st and 2nd Thessalonians. He first appears in scripture in the Book of Acts - and bear in mind the Book of Acts was once part of the Book of Luke. The same author who wrote the Book of Luke wrote the Book of Acts. They were once one volume, or one book in two volumes. Our early fathers divided the two and placed the Gospel of John between them. He first appears in the book that we will call the Gospel of Luke, only we now call it the Book of Acts.

He was present when the first Christian martyr, Stephen, was stoned to death - and Paul consented unto Stephen's death. Those who stoned Stephen placed their coats at the feet of Saul. (His name was then Saul. Acts 7:2) In the 9th chapter, he starts the great journey to Damascus, and he carries with him letters to the high priest in Damascus. He pledges himself if he finds anyone belonging to "the Way," be he man or woman, he will bring them bound to Jerusalem. All who believed it were called "followers of the Way," not Christians. On the way to bind those who belonged to the Way, he was blinded by the light, and then the whole thing was revealed to him, and his name was transformed from Saul to Paul.

The remaining portion of the Book of Acts is devoted almost exclusively to Paul, at least the last 16 chapters, which would begin with the first verse of the 13th chapter to the 28th, where he ends his days still propounding this mystery and trying to persuade everyone of the truth of Jesus. Beginning with the law of Moses and all of the prophets, he explained to them in all the scripture the truth concerning Jesus. Some were convinced by what he said, while others disbelieved him. That's the story.

If I would read Paul and take one of his letters that will really explain Paul to me, I would go to the letter of Galatians for in Galatians (which scholars claim to be the first book of the New Testament - it came before the Gospels, it came before any book, so they say) in this letter, he makes the claim: "I Paul, an apostle not from men nor through man, but through Jesus Christ and God the Father, who raised him from the dead." Here is a declaration of complete religious independence from all men, and dependent on God, repudiating in this letter all authority, institutions, customs, and laws that interfered with the direct acceptance of the individual to his God. No intermediary between the individual and his God, none, called by any name. Then he said: "The Gospel which I preach is not the Gospel of man, for I did not receive it from a man, neither was I taught it, it was given to me by revelation of Jesus Christ." (Galatians 1:11) "For when it pleased God to reveal his son in me, then I conferred not with flesh and blood." (Galatians 1:16-17)

You ask the question of Paul: "Was he or Christ once really a man?" If you asked that of Paul, he would say: "Was?" "He is the heavenly man." Well, does that answer you? You are asking the question: "Was he really ever a man?" and you'll reply: "Not was - he is the heavenly man." "As we have borne the image of the man of dust, so shall we also bear the image of the heavenly man." That still doesn't satisfy. "Was he really a man as we understand a man?" He doesn't respond, in time. Then you read his words: "From now on we will regard no one from a human point of view, even though we formerly regarded Christ from a human point of view, we regard him thus no longer." (2 Corinthians 5:16) Then he makes the statement in the same chapter: "God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, not counting any trespasses against them, and entrusting us with the message of reconciliation." (v. 19) You will see later on what Paul is trying to tell us, if I would substitute the word "imagination" for "God," and "imagining" for "Christ." Imagining means the activity of imagination - that imagination was imagining, reconciling the world to himself and not counting any trespasses against them, and then entrusting to us this message of imagining.

Now we will go to this great Book of Galatians, 2:20: "I have been crucified with Christ; it is no longer I who live, but Christ who lives in me; and the life I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." Bear in mind imagining being that son, imagination being God the Father. Now let us go to the first two verses of the 3rd chapter: "O foolish Galatians! Who has bewitched you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified? Let me ask you only this: Did you receive the Spirit by works of the law, or by hearing with faith?" Listen to the words carefully: "Before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified." Do you know what "portray" means? I think we all know, but let me refresh your memory: "To depict in a drawing or painting; or in some verbal description; or as an action on a stage," a play on the stage. "O foolish Galatians! Who has bewitched you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified?" Answer me only this: "Did you receive the Spirit by works of the law, or by hearing with faith?" "Are you so foolish? Having begun with the Spirit, are you ending with the flesh?" Do you get it? The whole vast world has fallen victim to believing in the flesh of Jesus. Have you, having begun with the spirit - are you falling now, actually blind, and a victim of the flesh?

You were shown the whole thing like a play going on a stage tonight, and someone moved across the stage and they played the perfect play of God's only salvation, the only way that man could be saved. And he walks across the stage and he plays it, and every scene he enacts is a mystical scene to be experienced by the individual. That was all done. Now are you going to confuse it? Can't you now have that little spirit of observance and separate the action of walking across the stage from what he is trying to portray? For he is portraying it. If you go to a play and someone is shot, you know he will go home after being shot and have the most wonderful time - for their day begins at night. But you will weep, sitting in the audience, as you see him being shot, being abused. But he wasn't shot and he wasn't abused, save as an actor - but not the being who put on the mask, who played the part. So, let me repeat it: "Whose eye beheld Jesus Christ publicly portrayed as crucified."

The world thinks he was flesh and blood. No, he wasn't flesh and blood. This is the fulfillment of all that was told in the Old Testament, but no one understood it, [except] the one to whom it was revealed (you call him Paul now). "When it pleased God to reveal his Son in me, I conferred not with flesh and blood, and the Gospel that I preach to you is not man's Gospel. I did not receive it from a man nor was I taught it but it was revealed by Jesus Christ." The whole thing was revealed and I saw the mystery of it all, the mystery of salvation: that Christianity is based upon the affirmation that a series of events happened in which God revealed himself in action for the salvation of man. The thing happened, for the play said it did. I went to the play and I saw it and I was part of the gathering, and they hoped I would have the spirit of discernment to separate the action of the actor from what he was acting, and see the spirit, not the flesh. Did I see the spirit?

Then after a while come the teachers, who did not participate, and they tell you he is flesh and blood. He was born of a certain woman, on a certain day, in a manner that you were born - only he didn't have a physical father. And that isn't true at all. This birth is something entirely different, as told us in the Book of John: "He is born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." An entirely different birth takes place, which is all explained as the play unfolds. You saw the spirit - but don't go back, not to the flesh.

Now the story begins. We are called the followers of "the Way." Is that the way of salvation? I'll believe it. I will wait patiently until it unfolds in me, for that is the way of salvation. Then in the 14th [chapter] of John, we are told: "And now you know the Way." And Thomas said: "We do not know the way. We do not know where you are going so how do we know the way?" He said: "I am the way, and the truth and the light." It is not a man, "follow me home." All that you will see me do upon the stage, - that is the way - so, "I am the way." He didn't say I am this, that or the other - "I am the way." You follow the whole thing - that spirit that moves before you and you will see the way of salvation. They still didn't understand him. They said a way to what? A way to everything, but primarily "the Way to the Father." "For no one comes to the Father but by me." So, don't look upon me as flesh and blood - "I am the way." Follow my story through this series of events and you'll come to the Father. So the state unfolds on the stage and they all see the spirit, but many could not discern and discriminate between the action of the actor and what the actor was portraying.

We come back to Galatians: "Before whose eye Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified." There you see it. The whole thing is unfolding on a stage, but man cannot lose himself to the point where he gets beyond the action of an actor. And he cries and weeps with the actor. He's portraying something, but they can't get what he is portraying. Read the story of Jesus and don't think of Jesus as flesh and blood. He is God himself, unfolding it before you in the form of a man that can see a man walking across the stage.

So, is Paul the initial awakened being? You judge it - I don't know. I am led to believe he is, that Paul [is] the most influential, the most important figure in the history of Christianity, that he was the one to whom it was revealed. He was fiery in his destruction of everything other than the outer observation of the law, and then to him it was revealed. So take courage. If you are violent today in supporting something that is external that you must observe, it doesn't matter. Paul did the same thing and suddenly he was blinded by the revelation and he saw the mystery of life. And he saw that Christ was within him. "And when it pleased God to reveal his son in me, then I conferred not with flesh and blood." To whom would I turn and ask them to throw light upon an experience that is not understood by mortal mind? But having known the Bible as he did - he was well grounded in it - he could return to his Bible and see where it was all foretold, but he could not on that level understand it. It had to be unveiled. As it was unveiled he saw the interpretation of the ancient Scripture. Then in the end of Acts, when he stands before King Agrippa, he says: "Here I stand before you chained, condemned for hope in the promise made by God to our fathers. Here I have hope in that promise and stand in chains before you because I know it is true." And then he spent the rest of his days expounding the story concerning - what he called then - Jesus. And the whole world of Christendom thinks it is a man of flesh and blood.

Jesus means, "Jehovah saves," "Jehovah is salvation." There is nothing in the teaching of Paul but God and man - no intermediary. So God himself is inwoven in man and unfolds himself in man in a series of events. And as he then unfolds, as he unfolded in Paul, then he knew the mystery of the scripture. When he tries to tell it, those who followed him in the past (because he condemned and allowed the death of others for believing in it, then he himself fell victim to his belief) - well, who'll believe it?

As I go across this country the one question that is always asked me, whether it is a social gathering or any place: "Well, don't you believe in a physical Jesus?" No matter where I go, I get it. I go to a small little dinner party of four or five - "I know what you say Neville, but don't you really believe that he did live, that he walked this earth 2,000 years ago and was called Jesus, and his mother was Mary and his father was Joseph - or maybe it wasn't Joseph?" To the unprepared mind, how can you explain what Paul said in the first three verses of the 3rd chapter of Galatians: "O foolish Galatians who has bewitched you?" For they went astray to some physical sense: "Before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified." Now I ask you one thing: Did you receive the spirit from those works of the Lord, or by hearing with faith? Are you so foolish, having begun with the spirit are you now ending with the flesh?" For the whole vast world today is ending with the flesh and they can't see the spirit which is Christ Jesus.

Christ Jesus is in man, us, the way, "Christ in you is the hope of glory." And in 2 Corinthians 13, Paul says: "Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you, unless of course you fail to meet the test." I hope you realize we have not failed. If Jesus Christ is in me, then I should start looking to find out where he is. I have found him by a search and an experiment. When he said "God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not holding any trespasses against them and entrusting to us the spirit of reconciliation," so then, God is Christ and Christ is in me, then who are we? And I discovered that God is my own wonderful human imagination. God in action is Christ, and imagination in action is imagining. So, imagination imagining is reconciling the world to itself. Now to those who discover it, he entrusts this great secret of reconciliation.

So, you take every being in the world - all right, let them go astray, it doesn't matter. If with God all things are possible and he works and creates only through Christ, and Christ is now imagining - I could imagine you are what I want you to be, if I really believe in Christ, for "Christ in you is the hope of glory." And though at the moment you don't respond, and tomorrow you still do not respond, I'll persist, for that is the attribute of patience.

Read the fruit of the spirit. It is not only love and joy and peace - it is patience, it is persistence. In the end of the book of Galatians he gives you the proof of the spirit. So, I can persist, I can be patient. I will imagine they are as they ought to be, though at the moment reason denies it and my senses deny it, and everything denies it. But this is the fruit of the spirit. I'll be patient. I will imagine things are as I would like them to be. That is God in action, and God in action is Christ. I like what I am doing there, for the spirit bears the fruit of love, joy, and peace. These are the first petals that come out. Then come the other attributes and among them you will find there is patience, there is persistence.

So, Paul, to me, is the first in whom the vision took place. It came to one of the smallest tribes, Benjamin, a child of Abraham. Abraham is faith. It was all shown to Abraham and he believed it, and waited patiently for the fulfillment of what was shown him. He saw the play, too. It was all portrayed to Abraham. "And Abraham rejoiced that he was to see my day." Then he went into the foreign land, as he was led by the spirit, but he still remained faithful to what he had seen in the play. The play unfolded before him and God played the part and God was Christ Jesus.

You say: "How could this Lord, this exalted Lord become human?" Again Paul answers, in his letter to the Philippians 2: "He emptied himself and became obedient unto death, even death upon a cross." Again he is speaking in a mystery, for Paul is very fond of using the word "mystery" - in fact he uses it no less than eighteen times. This - the body- is the cross. To him the cross was not the grievance of God but the love of God, and that crucifixion is the most delightful state. It is not a painful state, as the churches portray it. They don't portray the true thing at all. It happened to me right in this present embodiment, where it was shown me so vividly how it was done. And the thrill that was mine the night my hands became vortexes, and my head a vortex, and my side a vortex, and the soles of my feet vortexes. I was in a pilgrimage over some invisible Mecca with some thousands of people, and a voice out of the blue announced: "And God walks with them."

"I have been crucified with Christ, it is not I who live, but Christ who lives in me, and the life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." Listen to these words: "If we have been united with Christ in a death like his, we shall certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his." The resurrection has taken place, but it is also taking place. It took place, and that first one - whether you believe it or not - is Paul, and from that moment on it is taking place in every being in the world, as we march toward this invisible Mecca. And along the way we are pulled out of the crowd one by one, and he awakens in the individual. And that one, without losing his distinctive individuality, is God.

So, Jesus Christ is God himself. The play is on. God became man and played the part and showed us all before we started the journey, but we can't quite discriminate between the action and what the actor is actually trying to portray. Go back and read the words carefully: "Before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified." An actor depicts the thought, but man can't quite discriminate between the thought depicted and the actor depicting the thought, and he thinks now the thing is flesh and blood - and it isn't.

You dwell upon it, and one day you will find yourself in that journey. The most colorful crowd in the world. Nothing on the screen compares to it in the color and the joy as you move towards this invisible Mecca, and you will hear a voice in the crowd, and the chances are it will always repeat itself in the same way. Someone will be at your side, and you will ask and they will ask: "But if God walks with him, where is he?" and the voice will come back: "At your side." And they will look into your face and become hysterical, it will strike them so funny that you - a normal man, with all the weaknesses of a man - could be God. And the voice will come back and all will hear it: "Yes, in the act of waking." Then, from the depths of your soul will come the same voice, and no one but you will hear it. And you - I put it in words that the world will understand, but the words differ: "And God laid himself down within you to sleep." It isn't that. "I laid myself down within you to sleep, and as I slept I dreamed a dream, I dreamed" - he is going to complete it -"I dreamed I am you." That is what you are going to hear.

Then, at that moment you are going to find yourself being crucified in the most unique manner in the world. You will be sucked back into the body that is on the bed. Your hands are real vortexes, your feet vortexes, your head a vortex, and the right side a vortex. It's a whirling joy as you are nailed once more to this body. Then you will know Paul's words: "I have been crucified with Christ. It is not I who live but Christ who lives in me and the life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." And the Son of God, in whom there is life, is your own wonderful human imagination. Imagining is life itself. What you imagine becomes animated, it takes on life, it takes on motion, vibration. Read the whole book of Galatians and that wonderful 3rd chapter, and see Paul's confession. No one taught it to him, he didn't receive it from a man - it came through a revelation of Jesus Christ. "And when it pleased God to reveal his Son in me I conferred not with flesh and blood." God will reveal his Son in you in an explosion and you will see him standing before you and you will see that Son as your Son. Then you will know the meaning of the words: "No one comes unto the Father but by me, for I am the way, I am the truth, I am the light." Not a man called Jesus, or Neville, or Peter, or any other name. No. "I AM the way." The Way is a series of mystical experiences. And you come to the Father in no other way save by me. So, watch this picture as it unfolds, for before you unfolded is the story. Before your eyes, Jesus Christ was publicly revealed in this garment.

So, that is the play. If you heard my story, that is the Way. There is no other way. Not a man called Neville - what he experienced is the Way to come to the Father. And you will be brought by this series of experiences, for Christianity is based upon the affirmation that a series of events happened in which God revealed himself in action for the salvation of man. We are told in Luke [of] a series of events, and you are the being spoken of and you are brought right up to fatherhood. But "no one comes to the father but by me." "I am the way." You go back and you see the first appearance of the Way is the story of Paul (Acts 9). He went through the experience of the Way, and he comes back and goes through hell, but not for one moment could he relinquish his experience. So, he closed his days explaining to everyone who would listen to him the story of the Way. And some believed him while others disbelieved him.

Now let us go into the silence.

QUESTION: Was Paul a man as we are?

ANSWER: If there is any man in the Bible that is a man as I am, it is Paul. If there is any man that walked this earth as you and I walked it, it is Paul. It's the story. The others are states of consciousness. There is one person in whom it began to awaken, and he was grounded in orthodoxy. As he claimed in his own confession: "I am of the tribe of Benjamin, child of Abraham, grounded in the law - and then he didn't understand the fulfillment of that law until it happened in him. He denied he ever heard it from a man, for no man could have taught it to him: "The Gospel that I preach is not the Gospel of a man, it came through a revelation of Jesus Christ. And when it pleased God to reveal his Son in me, then I conferred not with flesh and blood." Here is a perfect revelation of how this thing takes place. I can tell you: I hadn't the slightest concept, and I was raised in a strict orthodox Christian environment. I had no idea this thing was actually alive in man, in woman. It happened just as you are told in the scripture, only it happened in the depth of the soul - and he goes through all these experiences.

When I started to teach this, I was teaching only the Law of God. I started on February 2, 1938, and I only spoke of God's Law - and I have proven it and it worked. But I had no idea of the profundity of this teaching until it began to happen in me. All of a sudden the birth from above took place and everything as described in the Gospels, even to the story of the dove. That I never conceived to be an actual fact, and then it happened in the depths of my soul. So it happened to Paul. He is the one character I would swear actually walked the face of the earth.

QUESTION: Will you say something on "My yoke is easy and my burden is light"?

ANSWER: The cross in itself is light. He declared himself to be the light of the world. Yoke is union. Union is light. If you saw that unfolding as a picture on the screen, could you believe it? Belief is union, that's yoke. It is very easy to believe it, but man has to be free from his prefabricated misconceptions. If it comes with your prefabricated misconceptions and you see it, you will not find the yoke easy. Maybe in this audience tonight there are a few who are unwilling to believe what I said this night. They still believe in a Jesus of flesh and blood - and flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven. "Those who worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." If you still insist he is flesh and blood, then you will be unwilling to believe that he is simply portraying the state of God becoming man that man may become God. If you don't want to believe it - then don't believe it.

So, how can you share your vision with another who is unwilling to share it with you? But you tell it anyway. You tell it until the end of your earthly days, because you are making your departure. Can you tell the time of my departure? No. "I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith." These are Paul's last words. He has kept the faith. The faith of what? The faith of Abraham. He said: "My teaching is not new, it is as old as the faith of Abraham." It is the fulfillment of that faith, but no one knew it - and suddenly all that Abraham was shown in the beginning, is now fulfilled in him. And so, I do not bring a new religion. It is not man-made. It is one that is as old as the faith of Abraham, but who will believe it? When we think of Paul as being a convert - we think of a convert as one who was once a Jew and became a Christian, or vice a versa. That is not a convert, not in the true mystical sense of the word. It is the fulfillment of the vision. He never for once, not for one moment, ever gave up Judaism. His last plea before King Agrippa is: "I stand here in chains for the hope of the promise made to our fathers - by God Himself." He isn't denying that faith, he is only fulfilling the 53rd chapter of Isaiah.

Neville 4-26-1968

PERCEPTION

There is nothing that appears in perception which cannot be duplicated in fancy, and what the world perceives is all imaginative in character. Here is a graphic example: I am sure everyone knows what it is to detect the fragrance of a rose. Now smell is a chemical sense and depends upon contact for perception. But does one really need a rose to detect its fragrance? Cannot its fragrance be reproduced imaginatively?

Having smelled an Easter lily, can you not discriminate between the smell of a rose and a lily, imaginatively? Then they do not exist independent of you, but live on some level (or levels) of your imagination! Can you call upon your memory of an experience of long ago, bring it back, and duplicate it in fancy? If so, then this world is no different from your imaginal one!

In 1820, William Blake wrote "The Presence of the Divine Teacher," in which he said: "Man is all Imagination and God is Man and exists in us and us in Him. The Divine Body Jesus, we are his members." In this statement Blake does not separate the members from the one body, the one spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one God and Father of us all. There is only one Imaginal Body. We are all His members, for we are all Imagination!

You can reproduce and duplicate any perception you have ever encountered, in your imagination. A friend or dear one does not need to be physically present for you to think of him. Nor do you have to be in your living room in order to see its contents. You can see the plains of Kansas, the mountains of Colorado, or the great Mississippi River without being there. So when we think from the premise of this as a world of imagination, we start on solid ground, for imagination is He who creates reality. There is no fiction in the true sense of the world, for when a state is imagined, it is created. Prayer is imagination drenched in feeling. A desire, drenched in the feeling of fulfillment, objectifies itself. This I know to be true; so regardless of what the world thinks, when you reproduce anything in your mind it takes on form in your outer world.

Everything here was once only imagined. The clothes you wear, the chair in which you are now seated, the building which houses you - all were first only imagined. Everything begins and ends in the human imagination. The source of all phenomena is Divine Imagining, which is God Himself!

Scholars consider the 82nd Psalm as the most difficult psalm in the entire Bible. Thomas Cheyne, the editor of the Encyclopedia Biblica, said of this psalm: "The ideas may be perennial, but their outward forms have long since ceased to be understood, and give the greatest challenge to the imagination of any interpreter."

Here is the essence of the psalm: "God has taken his place in the divine council, in the midst of the gods he holds judgment.' I say, you are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you. Nevertheless, you will die like men and fall as one man, O princes.' "

The word which troubled the great scholars is "elohim." It is a plural word which may be translated as "God" or "gods". God (elohim) has taken his place in the divine council, proclaiming: You are gods (elohim). God is a compound unity of one made up of others. It takes all of the generations of men and their experiences to form the one God.

The elohim is not something distinct and separate from the many, for unity has a presence. Having fallen into division, we will return to the presence of unity. Divided in a world of generation where all things die, we will return to the divine society where all things live. The presence is being formed by the return of the fallen man who carried all of the gods with him in his fall.

It is not "I, and another called "the Lord". Everyone is the Lord, as told us in the Sh'ma, the great Hebrew confession of faith: "Hear, 0 Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one."

God has risen and is rising in all. He deliberately took upon himself man's nature. By that act of assumption, Jesus Christ became the pattern upon which the nature of man is molded. He didn't take a person called Neville upon himself, but my nature. And in so doing Jesus Christ became the type upon which I have been molded, raising this animal energy - called man, to divinity - called God.

Having fallen, God must now rescue himself. This he will do, for he has prepared a way for his return. You see, no man or group of men killed Jesus. It is he who said: "No man takes my life, I lay it down myself. I have the power to lay it down and the power to lift it up again." Experiencing death by taking upon himself the animal nature of man, Imagination takes that energy and transforms it into his own likeness.

God is the great lover and artist who will transform you - his son of division, into himself - the image of love! Loving you so much He died to begin his good work in you, he will complete it at the day of Jesus Christ. On that day you will rise to His level, to discover that you and He are one creative power of love!

There is only one way to return to the awareness of being God the Father, and that is to follow the pattern of the true words which you have heard from me. I tell you from experience: you will awaken, rise and are born from above. Five months later David will stand before you and call you Father. Four months from that date, your spiritual body will be split and He who wove it for you will unwind himself as you! Then two years and nine months later, the Holy Spirit, in the form of a dove, will descend upon you and smother you with love.

Do not believe in any being on the outside! Make a decision within yourself now to radically change your attitude toward another, and persuade yourself that what you believe is true!

If imagining creates reality, and you practice repentance by radically changing your mind, you can take anything that displeases you and change it. Then persuade yourself that the change is real. Expect it to mold itself in harmony with what you are thinking, and the man, woman, or room, will bear witness to your repentance.

When you change your attitude towards another, he must change his attitude towards you. Are we not told:

"We love him because he first loved us?" It always starts with self! If you want him to be different, you must initiate the change. And as you do, you are practicing repentance, for the time is fulfilled and the kingdom of heaven is at hand. It is now time to repent and believe the gospel!

Nothing is so well concealed as the goodness of God. Look around and you will see murder, rape, and crime at every moment of time, so how can God be good or loving? It is hard to believe, and will not be understood until the end, when that which has been concealed will be revealed.

We are told: "The spirit of the Lord will not turn back until he has executed and accomplished the intents of his mind. In the latter days you will understand it clearly." (Jeremiah 22) So in your last days, when you come to the end of the play, the goodness, the greatness, and the love of God will be revealed.

Do not concern yourself with those who have no interest in hearing the truth concerning the mysteries of God. Don't try to change them. If they are complacent, and believe theirs is the only truth, leave them alone and maybe when they die their death will force them to modify the ideas they have championed here. There will be no Jesus Christ standing on the outside to greet them, or angel to meet them. Rather, they will be restored to life in a body the same as before, only young. They will be in a terrestrial world like this, in an environment best suited for the work yet to be done in them. Even though the color of their skin may have changed, you will know them when you see them. No matter how many masks your friend may wear, you will always know the identity behind the mask.

He who started the journey is wearing your mask right now, and He will continue to wear masks until He has executed and accomplished the intents of his mind. God's original pledge to himself was that he would make Man in his own image. Then the gods descended; and the gods will ascend, for no one has ever ascended into heaven but He who descended from heaven. The gods, falling as one man, descended into division and broken unity. In time, they will all be gathered together into that one unity called God the Father.

Many believe scripture is a myth, but when it is experienced in the depth of the soul, it is literally true. This you will know from experience. Having reached the limit of contraction to experience the nature of man, you will ascend into a limitless expansion as God.

Returning with all that you have experienced, your tremendous power is added to God's already existing power. Then God, forever expanding, will decide on another adventure and we will all once again fall into a state like this in order to grow and grow and grow in our own wonderful human imagination!

Now remember: nothing appears in perception that cannot be duplicated in fancy. If you can perceive your desire, it exists. You cannot perceive an object that does not exist on some level (or levels) of imagination. Identify your human imagination with God, and because God calls a thing that is not now seen as though it were seen, you can call a state into being by assuming you are in it. And if you believe you have received your desire, you will, for belief will lead the way to its fulfillment.

If you look to reason rather than imagination, you are seeing the devil instead of God. The devil is the doubter in you. He questions your belief saying: "If you are the son of God then turn this stone into bread. Cast yourself down and his angels will lift you up." All of these challenges are made by self-doubt.

I urge you to practice the art of imagination. If you do, I promise you will prove it in the testing, even though you may have started out to prove it wrong!

Now let us go into the silence.

X19
S2

PERSISTENT ASSUMPTION

18 June 1968

Now, you and I look out on a world, and we think of the great men and women who are publicized in the world; and many of them are altogether wonderful. We speak of the great poets, the scientists, the businessmen -- all these fellows in the world; and we think, Well now, there must be something different about them.

Now, may I tell you? there's not a thing different about them. I want to convince you this night, if I can, that this inspiration that we think the poet has, the scientist, the great businessman, is not an influx of a spirit that is different. It's not different from the individual's own wonderful human imagination, because there's nothing greater. So, there is no greater influx of Spirit into a Blake, into a Shakespeare, into an Einstein, into you, than your own wonderful human imagination, for there is nothing greater. There is only one Spirit in man and the Universe!

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one."

There is not a greater spirit than your own wonderful human imagination.

In a little conversation that Blake had with his friend, Crabb Robinson, Robinson asked him what he thought of the divinity of Christ and he answered, "Christ is the only God, but so am I, and so are you.

Now don't forget it! When you think of Christ, you are making something bigger than yourself -- something greater than yourself. Blake said, "Christ is the only God, but so am I." If Christ is the only God "and so am I," I make myself one with him. Then he turns to Crabb Robinson and says, "So are you." So don't forget it.

If you forget this, you make yourself less than The One. You can't be less than The One; there is only One. There is only God in this world! There is nothing but God. And God is your own wonderful human imagination. That is God.

Now tonight, let us put it to the extreme test. If God is the only Reality, -- you can't have two; not two gods, -- and He is my own wonderful human imagination, and "All things are possible to God," -- all right, how would I go about proving it? for I am called upon to test it.

"Test it." I will dare to assume that I am the man that I would like to be. At the moment, reason denies it, my senses deny it; but I will dare to assume that I am it. Now, what am I told in Scripture that I should do? Well, listen to it carefully. These are stories told in Scripture of the necessity of persistence because we are "keyed low." The same God -- the God that created the Universe and sustains it by His Creative Power -- is the God that is sitting here in these chairs tonight. But here for a divine purpose, the same God is "keyed low."

So, would I bring about a change in my world? Then I am called upon in Scripture to be persistent, because I see this world, and everything that I have assumed is denied as I assume it by the things round about me. Now listen to these stories as told in Scripture.

A man came at the midnight hour to his friend, and he said, "A friend has called, 'I have no bread. Would you just let me have three loaves of bread?' and the one who opened the upstairs window said to him, 'It is midnight, and my children are asleep in bed. I cannot come down and give you what you want.'"

And the story as told us in the Book of Luke is this: He would not come down; but because of this man's importunity, he came down and gave him all that he needed. Well, the word translated "importunity" means "brazen impudence." He would not take "No" for an answer.

I don't ask you, as an individual -- I don't ask any outside god, as an individual; I am asking my Self to bring this thing to pass. That is what I am actually saying, because I am speaking to the only God. There is only God! And if God is my own wonderful human imagination, to whom am I going to turn when It doesn't respond, -- when don't take "No" for an answer?

So, within my own Being, I am assuming that I have received exactly what I need. Now the story is that even though it was midnight, he was in bed with his children, still he came down and gave him what he needed. You do not take "No" for an answer, becauae there is no "other," may I tell you? I don't care whether you speak of a Shakespeare whom you think, "My god, isn't he marvelous!" -- and he is; and the Blakes of the world, and they are marvelous; and the Einstein and they are marvelous. But the God of an Einstein does not differ from the God of your own wonderful human imagination. There is only God! There can't be two.

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one."
He is not a dual God -- one God. So, your own wonderful human imagination is this God, and you are not less than any being in this world But you have to be persistent.

When Bennie came home last night, he said, "Neville, have you forgotten my vision? when I was talking to some one and you came into the picture, and this one said to you -- and he asked this very simple question: 'Tell us the story of Jesus,' and you automatically said, 'The story of Jesus is persistent assumption.'"

Persistent assumption -- that's the stpry, for "Jesus" means "salvation." Well, if persistent assumption is the story of Jesus, I must dare to assume that I am what I want to be. I must continue in the assumption that I am it until that which I have assumed is objectively realized. That is the story of Jesus. For if I am one with anything in this world, and he is great and she is great, and I am not, and yet we are one? Well, now -- what is this fragmented Being when there is only one? I tell you, that One is your own wonderful human imagination, and don't let any one in this world tell you that an Einstein or a Shakespeare is greater because of some influx of a spirit of greater validity than their own wonderful human imagination, because there is no greater. Your imagination is God, and there is no other God. And there can be no other greater Being than your own wonderful human imagination.

Now you begin to imagine it. Well, now I will say, "I have assumed that I am the man that I want to be." I am still assuming that I am he, and I will continue to assume that I am he until that which I have assumed is objectively realized, as told us in the 8th Chapter of John:

"Unless you believe I am He," -- now when you read it, you think as you are taught by the churches of the world, that another greater than yourself is speaking. It is not "another" greater than you speaking, telling you unless you believe he is, -- it's your Self speaking. There is only God; because God is one and you can't get away from the Oneness, don't think of "another."

So, these words must be accepted in the first-person, present tense; so "unless you believe that I am He, you will die in your sins, -- you'll miss the mark. I must believe that I am the man that I want to be. If I do not believe that I am that very Being so that I can say, "Well, I am He," then I will continue what I formerly believed myself to be. This is the story of Scripture. So, we are all one -- every one here. You and I are one, because there can't be two. On this level, for a purpose, we are fragmented; but I am sent to tell you that we are not really many. We are one.

The word "Elohim" is a compound unity: one made up of others. So here it seems to be "others," but you and I are not really two, three, four, or many. We are one, in the most intimate manner that you've ever known, without loss of identity!

So, I ask you this night to simply dwell upon it, and simply try it. Just try it. It will never in Eternity fail you.

Here is a letter that came to me this past week. She said in her letter, "I was awakened by the laughter of my husband. He was laughing -- the sweetest laughter I have ever heard -- just a laugh. I have never heard him laugh like this. So I awoke, and here he's laughing a peculiar but wonderful laughter. And I said to myself, 'Well, he's undoubtedly dreaming something that is altogether wonderful.'

"And then the next morning he said to me, 'I had the loveliest dream last night. I dreamt that you were talling me it's so easy to believe that I am God.'"

Now I am going to tell him, -- he is here tonight alone; she isn't here, -- tell her, and you too, read it: the 126th Psalm. There is your answer. Only six verses. That was the laughter of God.

She said, "I heard a voice coming from within me saying, 'You've just heard the laughter of God!'"

Well, read the 126th Psalm, when all returned to Zion -- those who were left. They all left, and then they all are brought back into Zion; and here, you hear the laughter of God.

126 When the LORD restored the fortunes of Zion,[1]
we were like those who dream.
2 Then our mouth was filled with laughter, and our tongue with shouts of joy;
then they said among the nations,
"The LORD has done great things for them."
3 The LORD had done great things for us;
we are glad.

4 Restore our fortunes, O LORD, like the water-courses in the Negeb!
5 May those who sow in tears reap with shouts of joy!
6 He that goes forth weeping, bearing the seed for sowing,
shall come home with shouts of joy, bringing his sheaves with him.

[1] Or brought back those who returned to Zion

So, she heard him laugh in a way that she had never heard him before; and she had never heard this kind of a laughter. And she saic to herself, "He's undoubtedly having a wonderful dream."

Then the next day he said to her, "I had a dream last night, and in my dream you were telling me that it is so easy to believe that I am God!"

So, I tell you, you try it. This thing doesn't fail. There is only God. You are not something less than God. There is only God. And you and I, on this level, for purposes beyond the wildest dream, -- we are keyed low; but we are called upon to make the effort to rise from this level. And so, we do it in a business sense, in a scientifi sense, in an artistic sense; and so we begin to express this talent, which is our own wonderful human imagination, which is God. There is nothing but God!

So, I am called upon to assume that I am what I want to be, for, "An assumption, though false, if persisted in will harden into fact." [Sir Anthony Eden]

And as Blake said, "If the fool would persist in his folly, he would become wise." [from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell"]

There is nothing that is impossible to God. So, don't say that something cannot be, -- I don't care what it is. You may see some one in the world, and he is a fabulously wealthy person. Well, so what! Do you think for one second some influx of Spirit that differs from the Being that you are possessed him to make it? No. He either did it wittingly or unwittingly, may I tell you? but you can do it knowingly. If he does it unknowingly, which is the Self, and he loses it tonight, he may not know how to recover it. I am asking you -- without having anything -- to do it knowingly.

So, should you tomorrow fall into another state, and you remember the story, you simply come back and simply bring it back into your world as you want it, and simply multiply it, and live graciously, for there's only one God. You can't conceive of -- well, you can conceive of a second god, but it is a stupid concept because there is no other god. When the world thinks of numberless gods, they are stupid. There's only one God; and that God is your own wonderful human imagination!

And the day will come that you will prove it. You will actually witness The One God! He sets Himself up at the very beginning, and this God has only one Son. And when you awaken and that Son calls you "Father," -- and therefore you are the father of the only Son of God, -- well then, you know you are the only God! And then another one comes and another one comes; and eventually all come, and they see the same Son, and the same Son calls them "Father." Therefore, every one is the same God the Father! And there aren't two of us.

There aren't two. Forget all the pigments of skin. All this is part of the "play." To put me into an olive skin and one in a black, black skin, and one in a white, white skin, and one in a red skin; it makes it appear as though we differ. And therefore, because we differ there must be different gods. And yet, all will have that same Son, and that one Son will call all of us -- regardless of sex -- "Father," proving that we are only one God. And the purpose behind it all is simply to create an expansion of His creative power.

So here we are scattered -- fragmented into numberless parts. And then all are gathered together into one God, one Father. I am going to ask you all to try it -- really try it, because if you really prove it on this level, may I tell you? you will never forget it! And you will be sustained by this level; and then, all of a sudden, you will be "born from above." I cannot tell you when; that is a secret hidden from us here.

If you tell me when you were "born from above," then I can tell you all the other events that will follow and when it will happen. I can tell you that because I have recorded it. But the actual "birth from above" remains a secret. "It comes like a thief in the night." But when it comes, you are "born from above," and you are God! You actually are God!

Now to prove that you are, you can create -- create in this simple, simple way: What would it be like if it were true? Just what would it be like? How would I feel if -- and then you name it. How would I feel if she, or he, were as I would like them to be? So, you would like something lovely to happen to them, and then you feel it.

Now, can you persist in that assumption? I imagine it so to be. I am still imagining it so to be, and I will continue to imagine that these things are as I have imagined them to be until it is objectively realized. Can I do that? Well, if I can, they will conform to it. Must I get their permission? I don't need their permission if we are one. That is what I want for them. I don't need their consent if it is something I would like for myself.

Always ask yourself: "Would I like it for myself?" If they reject it -- and they can rejdct it; but I mean, take it on this level. If they should reject it, would I willingly accept it? If I gave you a million dollars and you wouldn't take it, would I be willing to receive it again? I would. Well then, give it in that same way. And may I tell you? you can do it.

If you don't have one nickel in the bank -- if you don't have a bank account, you can do it, because there is no one but your Self. There is only God in this world. God is I AM. There is nothing but God!

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one," -- the greatest prayer -- the greatest confession of faith that man could ever make. Read it in the 6th Chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy. I think it is the 4th verse. But oh! what a confession of faith!

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one," -- not two, not a dozen -- just one.

Well, if He is one, what is one in this world? When I say, "I am," that's one. If I say, "We are," that is multiple. But I AM, and that is His name. Don't forget it. Therefore, if I am, even though, now, something is happening, I am not receiving from some superior being -- there is no superior being than my Self. The inspiration for anything I write, -- if I sit down and write something that is all trivia or something that is altogether marvelous, it does not come from some other being who inspires me, because there is no greater Being. There cannot be another Being. So, when I sit down to write and I am in the mood, from my own Being it is coming out, and I am writing; but to say that some other Being is possessing me and they are taking over, -- nonsense! No other Being. There can be no other Being.

So, the poet, the Shakespeares, the Blakes, the great writers of the world, or any writer in the world, -- he doesn't have any Being influencing him, moving in some peculiar spiritual influx that is greater than himself. It cannot be. There is no one greater than himself. So, when some one tells me, "I was under the influence of something other than myself; it came from the outside," -- forget it. There isn't any one. It's all coming from the depth of your own Soul.

So, all of a sudden, you are an advertiser, and you are sitting and wondering, "Now what does my customer need?" And all of a sudden, from the depths of your own Soul it comes -- what you are going to say to promote that product. It isn't some influx of a spirit other than your Self. It can't be, because there is nothing greater than your Self. There is no other god. There is only one God..

So, you sit, and you are communing with Self, as told you in the Psalms: "Commune with your own Self." [Psalm 4:4] Well, you can sit on a chair or on your bed and commune with your own Self and be at peace. And all of a sudden the thing begins to flow from within, because there is only one God. And everything unfolds from within you. There is nothing but God. And in the end, you and I and the whole vast world of billions will be re-gathered into one body, -- and, oh! what a joy!

One fell purposely into this fragmented world, seeing "others," -- and fighting seeming "others"; and the horror within one's Self that a man's enemies are "of his own household," meaning himself. He is fighting with himself, not knowing that everything in this world is himself. All of a sudden he realizes, there is no other, -- just himself! And then he knows it, and he tells every one in this world, in the hope that he can convince himself, because it is himself he's talking to. For there's only one God -- only one Being.

And then as he rises within himself, he once more coalesces into the One Being, knowing in the depth of his Being that every one is going to coalesce into the same Being, and oh! what a joy when all are raised into the One Being that was that Being before the Fall.. And the Fall was a deliberate fall for the expansion of its power.

I can only expand my creative power by falling into this limitation and overcoming it. There is no other way to do it. And as I fell, I fragmented my being. I saw it so clearly in my vision. And the Being that fragmented was my Self, -- I saw it. I saw this whole rock fragmented. It all gathered together. When I looked, I am looking at my Self, -- a glowing Being like the sun glowing. I've never known that I could -- this little thing talking to you now.

Here every part of the body at my age -- naturally it gets older and parts disappear from it; and yet, I am looking at this Being sitting in a lotus posture and this fantastic beauty. I could hardly believe I could ever in Eternity equal that beauty! And yet I am looking at my Self! And here, this is His meditative world fragmented; and then it is all put back together, and I am looking at my Self. I can't tell you my thrill when I looked at it.

It was first a rock, and then the rock became fragmented. Then the rock was gathered together; but instead of being a rock, it's now a being -- a human being sitting in the lotus posture, meditating. And it's a glorious, beautiful being. I can't describe the beauty of that man. I'm looking at my Self! How can I ever be described as a man called Neville with such beauty? And yet, I am looking at my Self. Such majesty! such strength of character! such power! -- all woven into one being sitting in the lotus posture. And it glows and glows like a sun; and when it reaches the intensity of Power, it explodes. And then I awake here sitting in my apartment on 75th Street in New York City. That's why I am tell you what I know, what I've seen, what I have experienced. But that is true of every one.

You -- there is a Being in you that is meditating you. And the Being in you and the Being in me and the Being in all -- woven togethe -- form That Being that is the Ultimate God. And That Being is perfect. And may I tell you? I don't care what you've gone through, -- you could lose your eyes, lose your hands, lose your feet, be dishonored in this world; but That Being that is meditating you is the most glorious Being you could ever conceive. You have never known such beauty.

Oh, you can go to all the beauty parlors in the world, and they will bring you out and you will think, "Oh, isn't that lovely!" May I tell you? it's just like nothing, compared to this Living Being that is meditating you. And that Living Being, and every one's Living Being all united into one Being, forms the God that fell and fragmented Itself. And each fragment was perfect, and each fragment was the Father of the One meditating that one.

So, I tell you, try it here on this level. There is nothing in this world but God. This greatest of all confessions: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one," -- that there aren't two of us -- not really, in the true sense of the word. But here, you take my word and test it here on this level in the world of Caesar. You want a better future? All right. Dare to take this statement and try it, but try it for this one week:

> "I have assumed that I am the one that I want to be. I am still assuming that I am it, and I will continue to assume that I am it until that which I have assumed is objectively realized," -- and don't give it any time on this level. Just bear down on it, and dare to sleep in that assumption just as though it were true. Don't give it any time.

There is a time limit in what God, your own wonderful Father Who is in the depth of your own Being dreaming you, -- He has that time limit; but on this level, there should not be lengths of time. You are told in Paul's letter to the Philippians:

"He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ."

All right, -- that will take its own good time. You will be brought to the same perfection of the Being who is dreaming you. It is God dreaming Himself into a greater expansion of Himself. That's all that it is. You are the Dreamer and the dream! You are not "another." You are the Dreamer and the dream.

"He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ."

You'll find that in the 1st Chapter, the 6th Verse, of Philippians. So, you are the Dreamer, dreaming yourself into the image of your Self. That's perfectly all right.

But while you are here, then take it in the world of Caesar and bring about these changes in your world for yourself and for those that you love. Eventually you will love all; but if you don't love all now, do it at least for those that you do love, and actually assume it, and dare to say to yourself, "I have assumed it. I am still assuming it. I will continue to assume it until what I have assumed, and still am assuming, is perfectly realized." For, you are told: "Unless you believe that I am He, you will die in your sins." Is some one talking to me? No. I am saying to myself: "Unless I believe I am the Being I want to be, I die in my sins. I miss the mark." It's not another talking to me. There is only one God. There can't be two. And so, unless I believe I am that man that I want to be, then I remain as the man that I don't want to be; and therefore, I "die in my sins." That is the story as told us in the 8th Chapter of the Book of John.

It's not another being telling me I must believe in him. Believe in what? I am not called upon to believe in any other being, for any other being is a false god. There's only one God. So, to believe in another -- I don't care who the other appears to be, -- to believe in some one who calls himself the head of some great religious body, -- whether it be Roman Catholicism, whether it be called Protestantism, whether it be called Judaism, -- and to believe that he is the great leader? Why, that's a false god.

Unless I believe I am He, I die in my sins. But I don't say that unless I believe that some one is talking to me who tells me unless i believe that he is something -- nonsense! That's all stupid. I don't believe that any one else is. I must believe that God actually became me, that I may become God!

And so, His name is I AM. So, unless I believe that I am the man that I want to be, then I remain not being that man, and therefore die in my fruatration -- and die in my sins. You get it? Sure you do.

So here, I tell you, try it. It may seem difficult, but it will not be difficult if you dare to "go out on a limb" and try it. You are This Being! There is only God. There is nothing but God. Let no one tell you that he is better than you are. There is no one in this world greater than you are! And if any one dares to tell you that he is, turn your back on him and walk away. I don't care who he is -- or she is -- or they are. There is no one that is your superior, because you are God, and there is nothing but God in this world; and God became you, that you may become God.

So, I admire the great inspired poets. I do! I take Shakespeare and I read him and think, "Isn't this marvelous?" I take Blake. I can't quite follow the arguments of an Einstein, -- no. But here are inspired men -- all of them: the Shakespeares, the Blakes, the Einsteins, and all the great painters in the world. But let no one tell you that these inspired men have some influx of Spirit that in any way whatsoever was greater than their own wonderful human imagination, because there is nothing greater than their own human imagination. It didn't come from something outside of themselves. It was their own imagination awakening. And that same imagination is yours, because there is only one Spirit. There aren't two spirits.

So, the Spirit of Man is one with the Spirit of the Universe that sustains the whole vast world. That's the One Spirit. So, let no one tell you for one moment there is another spirit. There is no other spirit.

So, tonight when you go home, -- in fact, before you go, start it right here, -- and this lovely, wonderful feeling. And may I tell you? I can't tell you what a joy it is to sleep in the assumption -- in the feeling -- that "I am He."

All right, what comes in the course of the night, -- what does it matter? May I tell you? when you slip into the deep, you come hurtling through all kinds of things between the depths of unconsciousness from this level and then waking; and in that one short interval you can have numberless crazy little dreams between the hurtling back from unconsciousness to this level. And you give importance to the little dream, based upon the surface as you are coming through. But you do not know what depths you reach in what is unconscious relative to this level.

So, let no one frighten you. You are an Immortal Being. You cannot die. You just cannot die! And if some one today has arrived at a certain point where it is seemingly before you did, it doesn't matter. He or she -- they are no better because they got there first. There is no "first." Every one is coming into that level; and when all -- and if they don't all come in, may I tell you? it isn't finished. And when all come in, the whole race is over. And what a rejoicing among all who formed the one Body! We are that Body -- that one spirit, that one body, that one lord, that one God and Father of all. There is nothing but God the Father. And every one will prove to himself by the vision he is God the Father, and he does not resent any one else being God the Father. How could he?

When Bennie came home on Saturday, I can't tell you my thrill. Here is Bennie -- and put us together. Let us put Bennie on the stage right now. Our pigments are just as opposite az they can be, and we are the same Father of the same Child!

I said, "Bennie, tell me, what did he look like?" because we have fun together. It's not because we have martinis together. That comes, regardless. It was not because of any martinis. And I said, "Bennie, what did he look like?"

He said, "Neville, he was the sweetest blonde -- this blue-eyed, blonde, fair-skinned lad, and here is my Son, and he is calling me 'Father,' and I knew I'm his father. And I so loved him, -- I didn't care if the others left me, and left me with all these children. They are all my children anyway. I felt I was the father of all of them, but here was my Special One. Here was David!"

That's the same David that is my Son. Well now, he is the father of my son. Well, if he's the father of my son, are we not one? We are one! But on the surface, this strange, peculiar thing will be fighting each other, because he is of a very, very dark skin and I am of an olive skin. Then people think, "Well, my god, they are different!" And it isn't so! In the depths of our Soul, we are one, because God is one. God is not multiple. He is made up of the many, but God is one.

And when he tells me exactly how it happened, the thrill that is mine to see that he and I are one -- and he has the same child! That was the symbol of his "birth from above."

So, may I tell you? go on. On this level of Caesar, apply this principle. Cushion yourself against the normal blows of the world. It's only natural. You want to be cushioned. You have a wife, a husband, children, friends who cannot cushion themselves because they don't believe it. But you love them to the point where you want to cushion them, regardless of whether they believe it or not.

So, they don't believe it. All right, then you cushion them anyway, because you love them; and you want to leave them enough money to give them a cushion. You aren't going to stop the depth of their own being from giving them blows, but you did your part in so loving

Neville 03-18-1968

PERSISTENT ASSUMPTION

I tell you a truth: There is nothing greater than your own wonderful human imagination! It is he who inspired Blake, Shakespeare, and Einstein, for there is only one spirit in the universe! "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One." That one spirit is the human imagination! When Blake was asked what he thought of the divinity of Christ he answered: "Christ is the only God, but so am I and so are you." Don't think of Christ as someone greater than yourself. He is the only God, but so am I and so are you! Don't consider yourself less than Christ, for there is only God, who is your own wonderful human imagination.

Daring to assume that all things are possible to imagine, put this one reality to the extreme test by assuming you are the person you would like to be. Your reasonable mind and outer senses may deny it; but I promise you: if you will persist, you will receive your assumption. Believe me, you are the same God who created and sustains the universe, but are keyed low; so you must be persistent if you would bring about a change.

In the Book of Luke, the story is told of a man who came to a house at the midnight hour, and said: "A friend has arrived who is hungry. Would you let me have three loaves of bread?" The man upstairs replied: "It is midnight. My children are in bed asleep and I cannot come down and give you what you want." Then this statement is made: "But because of the man's importunity, he was given all that he desired." The word "importunity" means "brazen impudence." Having a desire, the man would not take no for an answer!

When you know what you want, you don't ask God as though he were another; you ask your individual self to bring about your desire, for you are he! And God - your own wonderful human imagination - will respond when you will not take no for an answer, as your denial is spoken from within and there is no other. It is within your own being that you persist in assuming you have received what you want. The story is, even though it was midnight and the family was asleep, the father came down and gave what was needed.

The God of a Blake, a Shakespeare, or an Einstein, does not differ from the God housed in you, as there is only one human imagination. There cannot be two. He is not a dual God. You and your imagination are not less than anyone, but you must learn to be persistent.

A friend recently shared a vision with me, in which I appeared and said: "The story of Jesus is persistent assumption." If this is true, and we are told to imitate him as a dear child, I must dare to assume I am the being I want to be. I must continue in that assumption until that which I have assumed is objectively realized. And if I am one with everyone, how can anyone be greater than I? Do not believe that someone is greater than you because of some influx of spirit or validity. Your imagination is the only God, and there is no other being greater than He! Claim you are what you want to be. Persist in that assumption. Continue to assume that role until that which you have assumed is reflected in your world.

Although the churches teach that another, greater than yourself, said: "Unless you believe that I am he, you will die in your sins" - these words were spoken by the human imagination! And because imagination is one, and you can't get away from that oneness, don't think of another. Accept these words in the first person, present tense; for unless you believe that you already are what you want to be, you will die in your sins by leaving your desire unfulfilled. If you do not believe you are all imagination, you will continue in your former belief, worshipping a God on the outside and not within.

On this level, we are fragmented, but we are all that one imagination. The word "Elohim" is a compound unity of one made up of others. Although we seem to be many, in the most intimate manner possible, we are one! On this level, you and I are keyed low for purposes beyond our wildest dreams, yet called upon to make the effort to rise above it. This is done in a physical, scientific, and artistic sense, as we begin to discover and express our human imagination. We rise above this level through the act of assumption; for an assumption, though false, if persisted in will harden into fact. As William Blake said: "If the fool will persist in his folly he will become wise."

There is nothing God cannot do! Do not think that one who is fabulously rich has an influx of spirit which differs from yours. He is imagining wealth, either wittingly or unwittingly; but you can do it knowingly. If he does not know what he is doing, he can lose his wealth and not know how to recover it. I am asking you, regardless of your financial situation, to assume wealth, knowingly. If, tomorrow you would again return to your former state, bring wealth back by claiming "I am wealthy," for there is only one God. He who creates poverty also creates wealth, as there is no other creator.

The world thinks of numberless gods, but there is only one. That one is your own wonderful human imagination. Possessing only one son, when imagination awakens, God's only begotten son will reveal you as God. The same thing will happen to another, then another - and eventually everyone will see the same son, who will reveal the individual as God the Father.

This world is a play, where divine imagination becomes human imagination by inserting himself into an olive skin, a black skin, a white skin, and a red skin. Although we appear to be different, we all will see God's only begotten son - proving that there is only one God. The purpose behind the play is to expand imagination's creative power. Here we are fragmented into numberless parts, destined to gather ourselves together into the one God, the one Father of all.

Begin now to actively, constantly, use your imagination; for as you prove its creative power on this level, you are awakening to a higher level and birth into the spirit world where you know yourself to be God. Prove to yourself that you are God by feeling your desire is now an accomplished fact. Listen to your friends talk about you. Are they rejoicing because of your good fortune, or are they expressing envy? Imagine their words are true. Persist in imagining they are true. Continue to imagine your desire is already an accomplished fact; and when it is objectively realized, proof will be yours.

Think of something lovely you would like to give another. Then ask yourself if you gave it to him and he wouldn't accept it, would you want to keep it for yourself? If, for instance, you gave a friend a million dollars and he would not accept it, would you be willing to keep it? I'm sure you would. Then imagine giving the money to him, then give to others in the same way. You may not even have a bank account; but you can still give, because there is no one to give to but yourself! There is only God whose name is I am!

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one." This great confession of faith is recorded in the sixth chapter, the fourth verse of the Book of Deuteronomy. The Lord is not two, not a dozen - just one. If I say "I am" that's one, but if I say "we are" I am speaking of many.

Jesus' name is "I am." He is not some superior being other than yourself. He is the inspiration for everything you write, be it trivia or profound. Inspiration does not come from some other being, because there cannot be another. When you sit down to write, the thoughts come from your own being! It is nonsense to think of some other being as possessing you.

The great poets - the Shakespeare's, the Blake's - had no great spiritual influx moving in them that is greater than the spiritual influx in you. It cannot be, for there is no one greater than self! When someone tells me he is under the influence of some greater power, I tell him that is not possible. The inspiration is coming from the depths of his own soul. Perhaps you have an item you would like to advertise. As you think of what your customer needs, the answer will come from the depth of your own soul, and you will know what needs to be said to promote your product. You do not receive some influx of spirit outside of yourself, for there is no one greater! There is only God, and God is one!

In the Book of Psalms, you are told to; "Commune with your own self." Sit quietly. Be at peace with yourself and suddenly thoughts will begin to flow within you, from God. In the beginning you were God! And in the end, you and I and the whole vast world of billions will be regathered into the one God. One imagination fell into this fragmented world of seeming others, yet the whole is within each one of us. A man's enemies are those of his own household, for they are all within him. Not knowing this, man fights within himself until he realizes there is no other, just himself. Then he tells others in the hope he can convince himself. And as he rises from within, he is called back into the one being he was before that the world was. The fall into division was deliberate for God's expansion into unity.

There was no other way to expand your creative power but by falling into limitation and overcoming it. As you fell, your being fragmented. I saw this so clearly in vision. First, a rock appeared. Then it fragmented and as it gathered together it took the shape of a man sitting in the lotus posture, meditating, glowing. And I knew I was looking at myself! And as it began to glow like the sun, I awoke in my apartment in New York City.

I am telling you what I have done, what I have seen, and what I have experienced. Each one of us has a being within who is meditating us. The being in you and the being in all, form the one perfect being, who fell and fragmented himself. One day, everyone's living being will unite into the one God, who fell and fragmented himself. Do you know what you would you like to be? Dare to assume it and, for one week, claim: "I have assumed I am the one I want to be. I am still assuming I am, and I will continue to assume I am until that which I have assumed is objectively realized." Fall asleep assuming it is true, and let that living being in you give it life.

God the Father is dreaming in the depth of your soul. It is he who began a good work in you, and it is he who will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ. On that day you will be brought to the same perfection as the Father in you, for God is dreaming himself into a greater image of himself and you, the dreamer, are dreaming yourself into the image of yourself.

While you are here, you can assume any desire for yourself and those you love. Then you can dare to believe in what you have assumed. And if you continue your assumption, you will express it. But you must believe, or you will die in your sins. Always talking to yourself, you are telling yourself that unless you believe you are the man you want to be, you will remain being the man you don't want to be, thereby dying in your sins.

To believe in another - whether he appear as a Blake, a Shakespeare or an Einstein - you have a false God. You must believe in yourself or die in your sins! You must believe that God actually became you that you may become God - for he did. His name is I am and unless you say within yourself: "I am what I want to be" and believe it, you will remain saying within yourself: "I wish I were what I want to be" and die in your frustration (your sin). I urge to you learn how to believe in yourself. It may appear to be difficult at first, but not when you are willing to go out on a limb and try it.

I admire the great, inspired poets. Shakespeare is marvelous. Blake is altogether wonderful, and Einstein truly great in his field. These were inspired men; but they did not have any influx of spirit that made them greater than your human imagination, for their imagination and your imagination are one grand, divine imagination, imagining! Their work did not come from something outside of themselves, but from their own imagination, awakening. That same imagination is yours because there is only one spirit. The spirit of man is one with the spirit of the universe and there is no other!

Start now to capture the feeling of being this one spirit. Fall asleep in the feeling that you are God, and as you come hurtling back from the depth of unconsciousness toward this level, you will have numberless crazy little dreams based upon this person you are coming through. You will give importance to these dreams; but oh, what depths you will reach in that which is unconscious relative to this level!

Let no one frighten you, for you are an immortal being who cannot die. Although I have awakened to my Godhood before you, I am no better because I got there first, for there is no such thing as being first. Everyone is moving toward that level, and no one can fail. And when all have returned, what joy will be expressed as we form the one body, the one spirit, the one Lord, the one God and Father of all! Everyone will have the vision and prove to himself that he is God the Father.

I urge you to apply this principle and cushion yourself against the normal blows of life. If your friends and loved ones cannot believe, cushion them anyway; for no matter what you leave them here, you are not going to stop the blows given by the depth of their own being. If you left each friend one hundred thousand dollars, you would cushion them for the moment; but the depth of their being will continue to take them through experiences, in order to awaken to the knowledge that they are the father of God's only begotten son, David.

The world is searching for the cause of the phenomena of life, not knowing he is their very self. What responsibility is yours when you discover that your awareness is the cause of everything that has happened, is happening, and will happen to you. But when you realize that you are causing all the blows, the heartaches, and pains, that happen to you, you will begin to change your thinking; and as you do, scripture will unfold in you.

Now let us go into the silence.

23 July 68

Power

by Neville

Tonight's subject is "Power." I do not mean the power of Caesar. I'm speaking tonigh of the power of God, for here in this world of Caesar I think all nations would admit that this land of ours is by far the greatest power in the world of Caesar: economic power, military power, And here we are, against a tenthOrate nation, and find on our hands the longest war in our history. We say we have an objective, and that we have the means to achieve it; but we are unwilling to use the means that we have. Well, then, modify the objective to fit the means that we are willing to use. That belongs to the world of Caesar. If we do not modify the objective to fit the means we are willing to use, then cut bait and forget it, and forget the socalled "saving face."

But I am not speaking of that kind of power. I am speaking of the power of God, which is called in Scripture, "Jesus Christ." Paul defines Christ as "the power of God and the wisdom of God." Here we find Wisdom and Power exalted and personalized as God's companion in the creation of the world. That power is your own wonderful human imagination. That's the power of God! That is Christ. As far as I am concerned, that is Jesus Christ of the scriptures.

now tonight we are ttalking just about this power. The earliest Gospel is Mark, and the first words we find on the lips of this Power: "The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand. Repent, and believe in the gospel." (Mark 1:15, Moffatt's translation). Now, the word "repent," as we use it in the world, is not what scripture means. when we use it here, we mean to feel remorse, regret. That hasn't a thing to do with the word "repent"- It's the Greek "metanoia":: a radical, but radical change of attitude; a radical change of mind.

Can I see an objective, and then everything tells me, well, I can't realize it: Well, do I have the power to realize an objective! I tell you, we have. We have the power. Well, what is the deeper meaning of "Power," but effectiveness in achieving one's purpose in life! Well, so I have a purpose. Do I have the power! I tell every one, Yes.

you can imagine the end, can't you? Can you imagine what it would be like if it were true? Can you feel what it would be like if it were true? Well, then, that the power!

Now, can you be persistent in it? Can you remain faithful to that end as though it were true?

Now, I don't care what the objective is. You have the power to achieve it if you know this power is the power of Christ. For all things are possible to him. He is personified in scripture. Let us go back and see how they first personify him. You'll read it in the eighth chapter of the Book of Proverbs, the 22d verse through to the end, the 36th verse; and these are the words: "God possessed me in the beginning of his way, the very first of his acts of old." (Proverbs 8:22, King James version) One translation has it: "He created me" (Moffatt); that's not a good translation. I can't say I create my capacity to think. I can develop it, but it was with me in the beginning. I can't say that I created my capacity to imagine; it was with me. I may not imagine correctly, but it was with me. So, "God possessed me in the beginning of his way, the very first of his acts of old" (Proverbs 8:22) -- before He brought forth the universe, before He laid out the foundations of the earth, I was beside Him like a little child. I was daily his delight, rejoicing before Him always, delighting in His inhabited world. Now, my sons, listen to me: He who finds me finds life, and obtains favor from the Lord; but he who misses me, injures himself. All who hate me love death.

You read these words in the eighth of Proverbs. Here he is personalized as a little child, God's companion in the creation of the world. When you read it, it doesn't make sense; but I tell you, from my own personal experience, having practiced the art of repentance and having experienced the birth from above with the little child, I know exactly what the Prophet meant when he was inspired to write those words. One day you will encounter this creative power in you, personified as a little child. The whole vast world has completely misunderstood it, and think it is a little child wrappen in swaddling clothes that was found by the shepherds two thousand years ago. That's a sign of the birth in man of the creative power of God.

So, God is actually bringing forth His creative power in man; and when it is brought to birth in man, so that man actually becomes part of the creative power of the universe, the sign of his birth -- the sign of his awareness of it -- is that of a little child.

So, here, I was like him, -- I was beside him like a little child when he brought forth the universe. So, in every one in bringing me forth a part of the creative power of the universe, then the signs of my arriving at that point is symbolized in that of a little child. When I find the child, I have found life. Now I have life in myself. I'm no longer an animated body; I am a life-giving spirit. If I miss it, I injure myself. "All who hate me love death."

Now, this world is the world of death. So, you tell the story to the world, and the majority would rather have the building across the street or this building -- something to them that is secure, than to know of a power. Take the building away, destroy the building, but leave me the power to recreate it. Don't take from me the creative power, but take all the things I create. But the world would rather have the things created than the power to create. And, so, "Those who hate me, they love death." They are in love with the whole vast world that decays. Well, everything that is built today gradually fades. It comes into the world, it waxes, it wanes, and it vanishes. But leave me the power to bring anything into this world, and take from me -- if you will-- anything that I bring into the world; but don't take from me the creative power, that I may actually create anything in this world.

Now, what does he mean by "repentance"? It means this: it tests the individual's ability to enter into and partake of the nature of the opposite.

I see some one, and they are behind the 8-ball financially. They have to pay rent, they have to buy clothes, feed themselves, and maybe they have obligations to society -- others to feed, others to clothe. They may be a father or a mother; and I meet them, and they are not employed. Now, it tests my ability to put them into the state where they are gainfully employed. I bring them before my mind's eye, and I represent them to myself as gainfully employed; and to the degree that I am self-persuaded of the reality of what I am seeing and hearing and doing -- to that degree, they become exactly what I am doing, -- all in my imagination.

Well, if tomorrow, or in the immediate present, they actually conform outwardly to what I am doing inwardly, I have found the creative power.

I try it again with another one; I try it with yet another one, and I keep on trying, and it works. Well, then, I tell it, and ask every one who will listen to me and believe it to try it. See if you can't exercise that same power in you. It's not a different power. There's only one Christ. There aren't numberless little Christs running around the earth, -- only one Christ, and that Christ is your own wonderful human imagination.

So, if I exercise my imagination and it proves itself in performance, and then you exercise your imagination and it proves itself in performance, it's the same imagination -- individualized as Neville, individualized as you, regardless of your name; then you share it with another, and you tell it to others. Well, if I can tell it to the point where they are persuaded to try it, and in trying it, it proves itself in the testing, then we have found Him. So, when you read in Scripture, "I have found him" (John 1:45) -- found whom? "I have found the one of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth." Well, the word "Jesus" simply means what "Jehovah" means; it means "salvation." It means "to save."

If I save some one from poverty by putting him into a state of affluence, well, then, that's Jesus. I am exercising the same power. If some one is unwell and I represent him to myself as being the embodiment of health and he conforms to it, then that's Jesus. He saved him -- from what? From being unwell. Well, but if I try it and try it and try it and it proves itself, what does it matter what others think? What does it matter what any one thinks about what I am talking about? I only know that it proves itself. It works. Well, if it works, then try it. So, this is the power of which I speak, -- not some peculiar little thing on the outside, -- you don buy it. It's innate. You exercise it.

So, you are told to repent, in the beginning of the exercise of the power; and when you reach a certain degree of intensity, that power is born. It is born in y and then personified as a little child, and you actually feel yourself comigg out of your own skull, and here is a little child wrapped in swaddling clothes, and it is your child. Now, you didn't form some little child in your head. The child is a sign of your birth from above. It's a sign of your arrival into the creative stream of God. You are now one with the creative power of God, -- and there's only God, nothing but God.

Man is all imagination, and God is man, and exists in us and we in him. The creative power of God is man's imagination. That is actually Jesus Christ Himself! There is no other Jesus Christ. So, all of a sudden you find that this is what the world is talking about: they have put him on the outside and made some little god of him, when he is housed in every one.

Now, let me show you from my own experience what I know about this law. I can waste power in the world of Caesar. We're doing it by the billions every year with our little war and all the nonsense we have in the world. This power you can't waste. You can misuse it, but you can't waste it. I can misuse it every moment of time by imagining unlovely things about people, unlovely things about myself, and I can use it hatefully; but I can't waste it. I'll show you why you can't waste it.

One night many, many years ago I suddenly became aware of two beings. I am the one perceiving them; so there are three, but I am the perceiver. Here above me stand the most beautiful woman imaginable, an angel -- an angel of beauty and of everything. She was lovely! And below me was the most monstrous thing that man could ever conceive, covered with hair like an ape; but it could speak. It spoke gutterally. I looked at it, and then it looked at me and pointed to this beautiful, angelic being, and it called this woman, "Mother." Well, I was so annoyed with this monstrous thing that I pummeled it. It gloated, it loved violence, it fed on violence. Every time I was violent, it became stronger. And this beautiful thing, glowing; but this one is calling it "Mother."! And suddenly, as I am beating this thing, I realize, Why, this is the embodiment of all my misspent energy, as this other one is the embodiment and personification of every noble thought I've ever entertained. I looked at this thing; I had no one with whom I could swear. I felt a compassion I have never known before. I looked at this monstrous thing and realized it is but the result of my own misused energy. It never should have been given birth; and I said to myself, "I'll redeem you if it takes me eternity." I pledged myself to redeem it, and do you know what happened? At that very moment, before my eyes, the whole thing withered. The monstrous thing, the embodiment of power -- horrible-looking thing, -- it all got smaller and smaller and smaller, and left no trace of ever having been present. But as it got smaller and smaller and disappeared, the energy returned to me! I felt infinite power. I felt like I would have done anything for the power to return to me it wasn't wasted, it was misused, but not lost. "Nothing is lost in all my holy mountain." ( )

So, you can't lose the power. You can misuse the power, but you can't lose it. But you are confronted one day with a monstrous thing like that. I knew exactly what I did. You won't wait to redeem him; at the very moment that you pledge yourself and you mean it, "I'll redeem you if it takes me eternity," -- at that moment, that monstrous thing withers. It gets smaller and smaller, and this other one glows; it becomes radiant like a star. She is the embodiment and the permanent personification -- getting ever greater -- of your own wonderful thoughts. Every lovely act of yo feeds her. Every ignoble act of yours feeds him; and they walk with you. This one whispers the lovely things, encouraging you to be noble, and this other one whispers the violent things.

If you are at the crossroads as to what you should do, this one wants to be fed. He can only feed on violence, and this other one can only feed on the lovely, noble thoughts of man. And man creates them! You see your own creation, and it's all the same power of your own wonderful human imagination. From then on, you know who you are. You are a creative power, and you go out to change everything in your world to make it conform to something lovelier. And you don't do it on the outside; you do it on the inside. You do it all in your imagination.

Imagination is God, and there is no other god! His name is "I Am" forever and forever and forever. That's God! And, yet, when you do meet the personification of your own imag/ination, you see a man; and that man is Infinite Love. You will also meet him in another garment, and he is Infinite Power. He is Infinite Wisdom. And you will realize that the Being that you really are is a protean being. He plays a the parts. When you meet him, his fundamental being is Love; but he also is Power, a you see him as Power. And he also is Wisdom, and you see him as Wisdom; and you don't have to ask any questions as to, "Who are you?" It's so obvious that you stand in the presence of Infinite Power, or Infinite Wisdom, or Infinite Love; and you know the h truth of these statements of Scripture/when it says, "God is love," you stand in the presence of God! Infinite Love, -- and it's a man!

Our scientists tell us of an impersonal force. This is not impersonal. This is very personal. God is a man. "You're a man; God is no more

Your own humanity learn to adore.."

-- Wm. Blake (?)

For everything here is God; and God being man, His every attribute is personified. So, when you meet God as Power, it's man. Meet Him as Wisdom, -- it's man! Meet Him as Love, -- it's man!

So, I tell you, this power of which I speak is right here in your own wonderful human imagination. Don't turn to another. Don't turn to anything on the outside. It's all within. "The Kingdom of Heaven is within you." ( ) And God is in his heaven. If I turn within, where do I turn? I turn to my own wonderful human imagination; and then I imagine what I want as real in my world, and persuade myself that it's true. To the degree that I am self-persuaded, it becomes true. It actually clothes itself in what the world calls reality, but the reality is not the visible thing they see; the reality is the unseen state which I have imagined.

You take the oak. Cut it down. It renews itself by the invisible state. The little lamb, you slay it with the knife; but the reality of that lamb -- that form that is forever -- is unseen by man.

So, here, in this wonderful world of ours, you have the power. You don't need nancial power. That won't do it. You can't buy health. You can't buy respect. Oh, you can buy it for a little while, but they don't really respect you. Let the money go, and they don't respect you. You don't need anything in the world of C

Caesar to buy what you want. "Come," we are told, "buy it without price, without ...ey." ( ) When he says, "Buy it without price," then you se it's not Caesar's coin that you use. You use your own wonderful human imagination.

I'll give you this story. A friend of mine down south, he went to this barber shop. There were four barbers. He went to the boss barber first; and after about three visits, the barber couldn't take him this day, and he took the fourth one -- the last chair. He rather liked the way this man cut his hair. He g to talking to him, and he realized the man loved barbering, -- he loved it. That i all my friend needed. "You really love it?" He said, "I just love it. I wouldn't do anything else but cut hair. I just love it."

Now, this is what my friend did. He imagined that man the head of the shop. He didn't consult him, he didn't consult the boss barber, he didn't consult any one Just this one, -- he liked him. He imagined that he was the head of not this shop, but a shop. Six weeks later the barber decided -- the owner -- to unload the shop. ...w he raised the money, my friend never told me, but he bought the shop and move from the fourth man, the low man on the totem pole, to the boss barber. In the last year, this one so loves it he came here to this city about two months ago. There was some meeting here, a contest among barbers. He brought two of his barber with him. One was committed and couldn't come that day. He brought two. They too back, out of five prizes, they took back four. He won two, a first and a second; and two of his barbers won two seconds. He just entered another contest of the entire region, -- that is, the seven western states; and he won it, plus a thousand dollars. The big plaque is now on his wall -- all because of my friend's use of imagination!

This man has a terrific control of this power. He is an advertising agent. About, I would say, in the early part of this year, his boss said to him, "This is our best account, and I don't want to lose it; but you know the industry today, it' on the skids, and we must do something to pull it out." Well, he sat down and sai "If imagining creates reality, my only problem will be to face these men who belie themselves so wise, and persuade them to let me go all out with my campaign from premise that it is already an accomplished fact. I can't advertise that this g is possible. I've got to say it has been tried and proven in my ads." He orked out the entire thing. When these twenty men, all multi-millionaires -- for this is one of the huge industries of the world -- this is an international industr

, -- when he worked the entire thing out and presented it to these twenty men on th board, they thought themselves above all this. They were ethically above all thing Their moral code would not allow it, but my friend persuaded them that this is how the law operates: that imagining creates reality. "So if you want something created, leave it to me. I will take your desire and make it something that is already a fact. You voice it."

The first quarter of this year that industry, not only arrested the motion dow ward, but turned it around and their profits -- not their gross, their profits fo the first quarter of this year was seventy-five million dollars more than the first uarter of last year, -- seventy-five million more. I am speaking of a net profit.

Now, these wise men, with their wonderful ethical codes, they allow it! They saw the money in the bank. They saw all these things, and their socalled ethical moral code went through the window because they saw another principle which they di not know.

His competitor -- I saw the letter, -- his competitor in the advertising field wrote the boss, my friend's boss. He said, "You know, I take my hat off to you.
You use a principle that we have always used in our work," -- which was a darned li
-- he never did it at all. He said, "I know exactly what you did." He's trying to fish him out to find out what he is doing, and in this letter he makes the claim that he actually knew and had always used it, -- "And no one can work for our concern unless he is aware of this principle and lives by it. We aen't concerned abou his religious background. He may be a Catholic, Protestant, Jew, or an atheist; but he has to live by this principle." Well, I saw that letter. The man was fishing -- just fishing to get the one who really conceived it to come forward and tell him what he did.

Well, here is the same one in the barber shop. He goes there every Saturday morning by appointment, and the boss barber waits for him right on the dot. Every Saturday he is right there for this chap. He loves him, and he took him from the low man on the totem pole and pushed him right up. He realized the man likes cutting hair. That's what he likes; he just loves it. Al- right, then be the best. If you like it, be the very best in the trade. Tell me what you want. Maybe you want to be a wife, or "give me a home." What's wrong with that?

My mother never went to work. She just had ten children and lived at home with her full complement of servants. My sister has never worked; so she lives at home with her servants. My wife worked until I could afford to keep her. The day I could afford to keep her, I said, "Now, you stop"; so she stopped. That was almost two years after we got married. Two years afterwards, I could afford to keep her; so, "From now on, you don't work," and so she hasn't gone back to work."

So, tell me what you want, and then let me persuade myself that if what you really want, you have. To the degree that I am self-persuaded you have it, you'll get it. If I can't persuade myself, then I have failed; but I haven't misspent the energy, because I tried it lovingly. So, any time you use your imagination lovingly on behalf of another, you use it wisely. Even if you didn't succeed in producing the results that you were seeking, you used it wisely. You will not, then, encounter the monster that I did; but the chances are, every one in his unknowingness built that monster, for every one has started to mis-use the energy, and it forms itself into this horrible, horrible thing. Did you ever sit down and wonder, "Where on earth did that thought come from?" It wasn't a lovely thought. It came from the thing that you built, that mis-spent energy, -- a monstrous being that one day will meet you on the threshold and confront you, and you have to redeem it, because Christ must be redeemed, and although He is the Redeemer, He also is one to be redeemed because He is only energy -- He's power. Infinite Creative Power is Christ the Power of God.

So the power of which I speak is your own wonderful human imagination. That is God. So, when I tell you that man is all imagination, and God is man, and exists in us and we in Him, the Eternal Body of man is the imagination, and that is God Himself! -- the Divine Body Jesus, and we are His members. Well, every one can imagine; therefore all are members of the One Body.

So, this is that One spoken of in the Eighth Chapter of Proverbs: "I was ~~xxx~~ beside Him like a little child. Find me, and you find life. Miss me, and you injure yourself. Hate me, and you love death." (Proverbs 8:)

So, the one who finds Him is born from above; a nd "unless ye be born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of God." ( ) And the birth from above is simply symbolized in that of a little child wrapped in swaddling clothes. It's not some little event that took place two thousand years ago once and for all. It is taking place! You start it with repentance. Repent, and believe the story of the Gospel. And"to repent"is simply to challenge you, to test you. Can you take a man from the lowest point in the barber shop and make him the boss? Can you represent him to yourself as one who is really in charge, who loves ~~i~~ and you love him? Well, then, try it. So, he loved him, brought him into his mind's eye as the one who really was important in his life, and the man simply rose suddenly, to the highest place in his shop. And, now, in the entire western area has won all the prizes.

And this one, in his advertising agency, -- he can write his own ticket today. The boss said to him, "What do you want?" The boss gives him, -- well, I would say three or four times a year, a huge big unsolicited bonus check. He wants to keep him. My friend has no desire to quit; but the boss is so eager to hold him, he gets one bonus after the other. And my friend? All right, he'll take it? Why ~~it? Why~~ ~~xxxxxxxxx~~ ~~xxxxx~~ shouldn't he?

So, I ask every one here to try it. Don't just listen to it, but try it. You are the operant power; it doesn't operate itself. And, so, when I know what I should, well, then, do it! Go to sleep tonight? All right, how am I sleeping? In what state of consciousness am I ~~bp~~ sleeping? ~~&~~ As some one who is unwanted? All right, then I'll rise tomorrow to find myself unwanted. Ignore the facts of life, and assume that you are wanted. Ignore the facts of life, and assume that you are affluent, and see how things work in your world. It will all come your way. You are creating out of a power that is infinite, and you don't need any contacts in the world. You don't need to know the right people or anything else in the world; all you need to know is Christ, and Christ is your own wonderful human imagination! What else do you need to know but Christ?

So, let no one tell you, He's out there and he looks like this. There is no personal representation in Scripture concerning Jesus Christ. Not one little thought is mentioned concerning what he looks like! Yet our churches have hundred and hundreds of paintings -- no two alike, each tell you that is what Jesus looked like.

He looks just like you. As you are told in Scripture: "It does not yet appear what we shall be, but we know this much: when he doe appear, we shall know him." Why? "We shall be like him", -- just like you when He appears. (First I John 3:2)

So, let no one tell you that He looks other than you, because that's not Chri ; and yet in spite of the Second Commandment, "Make no graven image unto me" (Exod), we have all these little indulgences that people buy, and they bow fore it and they call that Christ, -- something made with the human hand, and then they forget the Maker, and worship the thing made. Don't forget the Creator! The Creator is ~~yuu~~ your own wonderful human imagination.

Whatever you create is less than you, the Creator. So, you can create a for tune. All right, they take it from you. You can create another one. So, whateve you can make, you can keep on making it if they take it from you.

This is the power of which I speak, I am not speaking of any earthly power.

Many a man this night, -- Last year I was in Barbados for a few months, and my brother, who has made quite a fortune, was talking about these men, and he didn Elizabeth what he was saying. He mentioned five men, all multi-millionaires; and he got through telling me how they worked so hard and they did all this and had al this money, I said, "Vic, you admire them?" "Why, certainly! They're powerful."

I said, "What's powerful? You just painted five biographies for me, word pictures of five men. The last one you painted is only 63 years old. He has, you tell me, about twenty-five millions, and they have tell him when to eat; he doesn't know -- doesn't know his name -- doesn't know anything; and, all of a sudden, they put the food in his mouth, and they say, 'Chew," and he chews, and he keeps on chewing forever until they say, 'Swallow," and he swallows. And you call that a man? So, he has twenty-five million. So, what! And the others; they gave all their time toward making money, just making things; and every one you have mentioned and defined for me, I wouldn't put my worst enemy, if I had one, k & in his place. So, he has money but he is totally unaware of the fact that he has one nickel. So he has twenty-five million; and that's what you call a man! That's not my concept of a man I am telling you something entirely different, Vic. You have lots of money, and it may never happen to you; so you have millions, too. Do you want to be like that? All these fellows are demented. They gave their entire life to the making and bbb amassing of things, and they started to worship things. Don't you start worshiping things. You start worshiping God, and only God; and God is your own wonderful human imagination, and don't you forget it. So, this building is yours. Suppose it burns tonight? So, what? You know what you did to build it. Build another one. Tomorrow you may have the whole thing burn flat. So don't be concerned about what you have accumulated as things in the world. Find God, and worship only God; and God is not on the outside. You'll never see Him on the outside. You will see Him within, because can you see "I Am"? You can see "I am a man"; you see the man reflected. You can say, "I am a poor man," and see the man reflected in the eyes of those who know he is ppor; and you can see every concept you hold of Self, but the Conceiving Being you don't see. That's God! My concept of myself may be this, that, or the other. The ϕ concepts will be reflected in society; and men will tell me who I am conceivin myself to be, but no man knows who I really am! I, the conceiver, they don't know; but they know what I've conceived myself to be. My bank balance will tell the banker what I have conceived myself to be in the financial world. All these concepts -- men will see concepts, but they can't see me, the conceiver. Well, don't forget the Conceiver, -- that's God! And that Being is your own wonderful "I-Am-ness."// That's God, and there never was another! There never will be another.

So, God is bringing forth His own Being, because He is buried in us, and He is bringing it up into the stream of creativity, so that the same one Being -- God is infinite in potential; but God is not infinite in actual fact, because then He would be dead! He couldn't expand. He couldn't go beyond what He is. So, God is ever expanding. There's no limit to expansion; there is only a limit tto contraction. H took upon Himself that limit when He became Neville. That was the limit of contraction, the limit of ~~plasicity~~ opacity. Now, He breaks the shell by my exercising within me of the Law of Repentance. And, so, I exercise my imagination, and then He breaks the shell.

There's no limit, now, to expansion -- no limit to translucence. There was onl the limit which He placed upon Himself, which was the limit of death, which is opacity and contraction.

So, God is infinite in potential, and every one here is going to ~~join~~ join that wonderful stream of creativity, and be one with God!

Now, when you hear it, don't just hear it and forget it. Try it. Put it to th extreme test, and then tell another, and have the other tell some one else, and spread the good news. This is called "the Gospel," for the word "gospel" simply means "good news." It's the good news about God: How God became man, that man may become God.

Well, if God's name is "I-Am," -- I know I say, "I am," -- it's the core of my being. I can say, "I am sick," but I can get over sickness; but I can't get over being "I Am." I can get over being rich, and become extremely poor, but I can't get over being "I am"! So, he actually became the core of my being. That's the center. Well, now, that's my being. Well, if that is God, and that's my being, -- well, He became me! God actually became me, that I may become as He is. He took upon Himself this limitation, that I may become what He is, which is infinite, and expand forever.

So, you try it tonight. Try it with anything in this world. The unmarried, if you desire to be married, what symbol in the world would imply that you are married? A little band -- in this western world, a little band around this ring finger -- not arow any other finger, around this finger. It doesn't have to be the biggest aspadastra in the world -- just a plain little gold ring. If you wore it there, it would imply you're married. Sleep tonight as though you wore one. Don't put your physical thumb on it; put your imaginary thumb on it, and feel it in your imagination. You can do it!

Feel a ball. Can you feel it? Then feel a piece of silk. Feel this -- one after the other. Can you discriminate between all these different sensations? If you can discriminate between this and a tennis ball and a baseball and a piece of silk, then you can't discriminate between nothings. They must exist; though unseen by your eyes they still must exist!

So, if I can discriminate between these unseen objects; these objects, though unseen, must be real. Well, now take that and put it there; but feel, when you wear it, that you are proud of the one who put it there. You don't have to see what he looks like. When it's put there, you'll be proud of his name, to bear it, and you'll be proud of him. Just put it there..

Do you know why I know that? My wife did it. She did it! Actually, she did it. One day she was in the presence of a socalled "sensitive"; and this one said to her, "Why did you take off your wedding ring?" She said, "I am not married." "Oh," she said, "don't fool me.. You took off your wedding ring." She said, "But I'm not married." She said, "I'll even tell you his name"; and she started off with Neb -- Neba -- Neva, -- she didn't quite get it, but she was coming very, very close to it. She was actually sensing what my wife in consciousness was feeling. When I first met her, I wanted her; the very first day I knew her, I wanted to marry her, but I was entangled. Was I entangled! But, by this law, I disentangled myself. Without hurting any one, I disengaged myself from all these complexities, so that I could actually legitimately say, "Will you marry me?" But, in the meanwhile, she was wearing the ring. I hadn't yet put it there, but she allowed me to put it there and slept as though I had put it there.

So, I tell you unmarried ladies, if you desire to be married, -- maybe you don't if you do, that's the way to do it. And he'll come out of the nowhere. You don't hav to go and buy any one or tru to meet the right people. Usually when you try to mee the right one, he's always the wrong one. So, don't go searching. Those who go searching for love only make manifest their own love-less-ness, and the love-less never find love. Only the loving find love, and they never have to seek for it. So, you fall in love; you don't have to seek for it, -- you draw them. They come to you.

So, here, this is the power of which I speak: the power of the universe. The The power that created and sustains the universe is residentin you as your own wonde ful human imatination. That's God! Don't forget it. I know it's difficult, when man has been trained to believe in an external God; and he goes to church and gets o his kness, and he prays to an external God. And he goes home at night; maybe he do say his prayers, and he gets down on his knees and prays to an external God. Al right, maybe that's a nice thing for some one to do; but I tell you, He isn't out there at all. You won't be criticized for it, but He is within you -- very persona may I tell you? He is very, very personal, and is within you.

When you are told in Scripture: "Of the Rock that begot us, we are unmindful" (Deuteronomy 32:18), and that seems to be all a figure of speech; but how true that thing is!

One night sitting in the Silence, -- rather, it was an afternoon, -- I was thin ing of nothing in particular; and suddenly before my eyes came this force. It was a enormous force. As I looked at it, it fragmented itself, broke into numberless litt pieces, and then it reassembled itself. As it reassembled itself, it was not into a force, but into a man seated in the lotus posture. I'm looking at this man, all sea ed now, perfectly -- Perfect Man. As I looked at him, I'm looking at myself. Her I am, the perceiver, observing myself seated in the lotus posture, in this deep, dee meditation; and as I became aware that I am looking at myself, it began to glow; and it glowed and glowed and glowed. When it reached the intensity of luminosity, it ploded, and then I returned to this level. Where did I see him? Within me. That being is meditating this. This is but a projection of itself in the world. And whe

He awakes within me, -- completely wakes, I am He. God actually became me, that I may become God! And He's put me through all the paces, allowing me to make all the mistakes, to make a monster like the thing that I talked about earlier. I made that, and I made the lovely one; and He allows it in His meditation. He is the Dreamer in me, and He is dreaming this, and dreaming everything that I dream in this world. And when He awakes, this will cease to be, and I am He, and He is God!

So, I tell you, Go out and try it. Begin tonight. I'll make you this promise: if you try it faithfully, He will not fail.

Now, let us go into the Silence. Good.

Now, are there any questions, please? Make it a full evening.

(Question inaudible on the tape): Answer: "I have taken two nations unto my bosom." Scripture tells us, -- in fact, our present law in the world of Caesar is based upon it, -- the testimony of one is not acceptable in court. There must be two witnesses. We have an external witness in the form of Scripture, the written word. Man is the Living Word, and he has to duplicate it. All the stories of Scripture, he must experience. So, when he actually experiences Scripture, there are two witnesses his inner testimony of the Father and the outer testimony of the written word. So, we speak of the two in the eleventh chapter of Revelations, "my two witnesses."

If two different persons agree in testimony, it's conclusive. If one comes and swears, even though it's true, it's not acceptable in court. He may be telling the truth, but there must be a second to confirm it. Now, God's witness is the Bible, - that's the witness. Is it literally true? I tell you from experience, it's literally true; but it's not secular history. It's supernatural history. So, when you experience it, you will experience this in a remote region of the soul. It will duplicate the written history, which is supernatural history -- salvation history.

(Question inaudible): Why, certainly, my dear, -- you wouldn't be here. You wouldn't be here, were you not hungry to experience God. The world isn't hungry enough for it. We are tole, "I will send a famine upon the world. It will not be a hunger for bread or a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the Word of God." And when you have that kind of a hunger, only an experience of God can satisfy the hunger. All the men in the world couldn't satisfy it

All the money in the world couldn't satisfy it. When that thirst is upon you, not a thing in the world can actually quench that thirst but an experience of God; and His whole story is told in the Bible, and man experiences Scripture. Scripture must be fulfilled in me, so you have two witnesses: the living witness, which you have experienced, and the external witness of the written word.

Are there any other questions? Come on, make it a nice full evening. We still have ten minutes.

(Inaudible question) No, my dear, you were ~~sowing~~ sowing when you imagined. Imaginal acts are ~~sowing~~ sowing; but we do not recognize our own harvests when we see the imaginal act projected on the screen of space. We say, "I could never have imagined a thing like that"; but we must have, or we ~~could~~ could not encounter it. So, the act of imagining is sowing; and in its own good time, it crops out from that unseen journey and appears on the screen of space, and you see it, but you don't always recognize your harvest. But, I'll tell you one thing: Do not concern yourself with the means. Always go to the end. Dwell in the end, and you will hurt no one. But if you try to devise the means, you are -- well, messing the whole thing up. I have had people say to me, "You know, I want that man, and no other man." I said, "No, you don't; you want to be happily married. You don't want that man or no man." "Oh, yes," that man or no man." Then, of course, this always shocks them. I say, "If he ~~drops~~ dropped dead right now, would you want to be married?" "Well, he isn't going to drop -- " "I didn't ask you that. If he dropped dead right now, or if he is right this very moment accused of being the world's greatest ~~the~~ thief or murder, do you still want him?" "Well, now, why ask those questions, Neville? I want that man." But, you see, it isn't that man; they want to be happily married. I have gone to so many weddings where it was either that man or ~~neither~~ none; and it wasn't that man! And they are embarrassed when they see me standing in the aisle, because it had to be "that man or no man"; and here it isn't that man at all. And they walk down; they are happy with their new mate, but a little sheepish as they pass by, because they know I know he was not the man. You want to be happily married. All right, go to the end. You are happily married. Then let him come, clothed in all that it takes to be happy in you world. He doesn't have to be some matinee idol. What's their socalled world? They divorce one after the other anyway; so what does that do to the girl? Or she to him? So, that's not what you really want. You want something that is a man. He comes hom , the house is full. When he comes home and you aren't there, the house is empty. I know that's what I would like, and I have that. If I come home and Bill is not home, even if I have friends at home, -- I may have a party going on -- a cocktail party, ten people, twelve, -- "Where's Bill?" "Well, she isn't here." You know, the whole thing is empty until she comes? And if she goes out and says, "I'll be back at five," and she isn't there at five, but she comes back at six; well, between five and six I am not myself. Where is she? Every one should have that sort of relationship. The house is empty when the mate isn't there -- male or female. If I could come home and it didn't matter whether she was there or not, what on earth am I doing being married? If she isn't there and it makes no difference to me whether she is or not, well, then, that's not marriage. The house must be empty when she isn't ~~he~~ there or you aren't there. If I knew in her heart that I could go and come when I wanted and she wasn't concerned, -- oh, that's not my wife! I know I've got to depart someday and leave her behind me, or she goes and leaves me behind. That, I know, is inevitable. But while we are together, I want it to be so that the house is empty if the other one isn't there. And I'm selfish enogh to want her to feel the same way.

Any other questions, please?

(Inaudible question): Just as~~k~~ concrete. Man creates unwittingly just as well as he does wittingly; but in this world of ours, we should learn to create consciously. But I can't deny that the socalled unconscious creation is just as effective. . We walk the earth. We see a headline. We don't know the people involved, and we react. That reaction, felt intensely, was a creative act on our part. And we don't know the people at all. So, if you do it wittingly or unwittingly, it is still creative. Therefore, become aware of what you are doing. Or, I can say to every one, Become more and more aware, so that at all times you are selective. You and I would not go into a store and say, "Give me a tie." We select it. I say, "Don't just bring me three ties. Let me see some ties," -- fifty ties, a hundred ties; and I pick out one. I may pick out two. I don't go in and say, "Give me a suit." "Let me see some suit lengths." And from ~~many~~ maybe a dozen or more, I select one, -- ~~t~~texture, color, -- what I think I need in my wardrobe to augment the wardrobe. So, I pick it out and he makes it for me. So, I don't let him tell me what I should ~~want~~.

(Inaudible question) No, just as effective. All day long people are reaping t most horrible things in the world, and it all is what they have planted unwittingly. They sit down; in New York City they buy this little paper, the News, from beginning to end it's the biggest paper in our country; it has a daily circulation of over two and a half million. I think the Sunday circulation is about five million. It's a little tabloid~~k~~, and not one word in it is anything but negative. Who murdered whom, who is raping whom, who is living with whose wife, and all this sort of thing; and they love it. And, of course, their little lives are drab anyway; so it's sort of vicarious, and they fatten themselves with all this nonsense as they go to their job For one solid hour they are reading it. Well, when things happen in their world, continue to happen, in an abnormal manner, they don't realize that they are doing it But the whole thing is done by them. They are fattening on it. No discrimination a all. It's like going into a restaurant and asking, "What does the chef want to get rid of today?" It's the same thing. And he says, "We have too much of the stew; we had it for ~~a~~ four days and can't sell it, and that's what we want to unload." Call it by a different name today and unload it. Well, I don't go for that. Give me the menu.

A friend of mine taught me this ~~little~~ lesson once. We went into a restaurant, and the waiter was very, very careless, and he spilled a little of the soup, and my friend called him over and said, "Tell me, is this charity?" Well, the ~~waiter~~ waiter was flabbergasted. He said, "I am asking a very simple question. Is this charity?" And he said, "What do you mean, Sir?" "Do I pay for it?" He said, "Why, certainly, Sir." "He said, "Well, take it back, and bring me a nice clean plate and unspille soup." The man took it back and brought him a nice clean plate and unspilled soup. If it's charity, leave it there, -- I can't complain. But if I'm paying for it, yo take it back. Well, that is a lesson we should all learn. Too many careless thing go on and no one jacks them up.

(Inaudible question: Willingly. First of all, I don't divorce myself from God. I do not divorce myself from God. He only has one name, and I have the name; I can't point elsewhere to say his will. The minute I say, "His will," I am divorced from God. So, I ask myself, "What do you want, Neville?" Now, because the whole vast world is yourself pushed out, you aren't going to injure anyone, but you can't deny that you still desire. You want something. So, you want it. Well, you assume that you have it, and then let things happen. If it takes a thousand or ten thousand to aid the birth of that assumption, then they will be used; and they will be used either knowingly or unknowingly. But if I have to wait to say, "Is it God's will?" I'll wait forever. I'll wait forever. Is it God's will that I should pay rent? or be dispossessed? Well, then, if I am going to wait and say, "Well, let Him tell me first," because some friend will say, "You know, you need that experience. You need humility. You need all this thing to be fired out" I've had it! I don't need to learn the same lesson twice/ Oh, I've had that, when I thought God's will and allowed Him to do it, and I sat down and did nothing; then came the end of the month, and you can't pay rent. The landlady says, "You know, I can't carry you any longer. Out you go." I've had that experience by waiting for God to tell me what to do, and He never told me. I had to do it. And, so, when I got married, I knew I had an obligation to life. I had another one. Then came a child, and I had another one. It's my obligation. To have some external being tell me now? No. I know what I have to do. Put her through school? All right(an you make college? Do you want to? All right. Then it is my obligation/ to put her through college, and I did. But if I waited for some external being to talk to me and say, "Well, maybe she shouldn't go. It will be easier on you," I'm passing the buck. The whole vast world passes the buck.

No, my dear, make your decision. Even if you are wrong, make a decision. All right, you learn by it. But to be undecided, so that you will not make a mistake, - well, do you know that story? It's in Revelation: "Would that you were hot or cold but because you are neither hot nor cold, and that you are lukewarm, I spew you out. (Revelation :) You can't make coffee or tea with lukewarm water. Let it be hot or cold. Let man be intense. You know, the people who ~~are~~ oppose me and say, "Neville, I think you're a nut/ I think you are as insane as they come," -- well, I've been told that time and again. Those who really oppose me become my best students. But those who come and say, "Oh, I think you are wonderful," the first time they hear it, -- "Oh, I think you're wonderful," -- never come back. Well, those who say, "I think that man is insane," -- I've had them -- On Forty-Ninth Street in New York City; I came upon two ladies. One lady was showing her out-of-town friend all of New York City; and a big picture of mine was in a window with my books, and one said, "Do you know who he is?"/ and she said, "No." "Well, he is the mad mystic of Forty-Eighth Street. Oh, you've got to go and hear him. You8ve got to go and hear him, -- he's as mad as a hatter. We all go to hear him because he's so mad. It's fun," she said, "It's fun to go and sit down; it costs you nothing." In those days it was all a voluntary effort on their part, and so a thousand people would com three times a week to hear the mad mystic of Forty-Eighth Street. But those who heard and thought, "Now, he really is insane," and would challenge me from the ~~floor~~ audience, they became good students.. Those like the two on the street who said, "Oh, he's a mad mystic. Go and have fun," -- they never became students. They loved their little icons, and they prayed to the little icons. He never answered them, but nevertheless they prayed anyway in hope.

(Inaudible question) My dear, I believe in being as specific as one can be. I just knew what I wanted so often on certain things, and wanted it in detail, and ~~got~~ got it. If man cannot be that specific, all well and good, -- take an end, an overall end. But if you really are specific, God is very definite. Outline is perfect in God's world. Look at the thumb print. Not only a man's thumb print differs from all thumb prints, but his oder, of the boodhound couldn't find you. Just imagine three and a half billion of us, and ~~nt~~ no two have the identical odor. No two have the same sound to their voice, -- similar but not identical. See it on the tape as you speak, and that vibration will record it. You cannot reproduce it. Similar, ! No two, -- you are so unique, you are the only one; therefore, you cannot be replace (Completed from my notes; tape ran out at this point): There is no one in all eternity that can replace you. That is why you have to be saved, or the Living Temple cannot be completed. You are a stone in this living temple. God was very specific when He made you the unique being that you are.

I will not be "lost in the crowd," for the simple reason that God did not lose me in the crowd. I am individualized, and I tend forever and ever towards greater individualization.

(In answer to another question): To be "meek" is to be self-disciplined or well trained. "The meek shall inherit the earth" (Deuteronomy :) because they have learned to use their imagination.

---oOo---

Power

Tuesday, 23 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

by Neville

---oOo---

The power of God is called is Scripture Jesus Christ.

Paul defines Christ as the power of God and the wisdom of God.

Your own wonderful human imagination is power, and it is the Jesus Christ of the Scriptures.

Mark ~~1:1~~ 1:15 "The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand. Repent (Moffatt) and ~~believe in the gospel~~."

Repent = a radical change of mind,

Power is the effectiveness of achieving one's purpose in life.

Proverbs 8:22. "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old."

I cannot say that I created my capacity to think; it was with me in the beginning.

God's companion (?) is a little child.

One day you will encounter this power of God in you personified as a little child.

God is actually bringing forth His creative power in man.

The sign of man's awareness of this is a little child.

When I find the child, I have life in myself; before this, I was just an animated body.

The creative power of God is man's imagination.

You can misuse this power, but you cannot waste it.

You misuse the power by using it carelessly or hatefully.

When used hatefully, you will be confronted one day by some monstrous being, which is nothing but the personification of every ugly, ignoble, violent thing you have ever imagined.

Imagination is God, and there is no other God; but the personification will seem to be a man. God being Man, His every attiibute is personified.

Christ is the Redeemer, but He is also the one Who must be redeemed, because He is infinite power.

He is redeemed by your using your imagination lovingly.

Start with repentance.

Repent, and believe the story of Scripture.

Ignore the facts of life and assume that you are affluent; then see it develop in your world.

"It does not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." (First John 3:2 (Revised Standard Version)

God is infinite in potential.

Those who go searching for love only manifest their own love-less-ness.

You don't search for it; it is already right where you are.

Don't search for Love; manifest it.

Deuteronomy 32:18. "Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee."

Two witnesses are always necessary.

We have an external witness in Scripture; we ourselves are the other witness that must confirm the external witness.

God's witness is the Bible; but there must be another witness to confirm or duplicate it.

Man experiences Scripture

Scripture must be fulfilled in me.

There is no one in all eternity that can replace you. That is why you have to be saved, or the Living Temple cannot be completed.

You are a stone in this living temple

God was very specific when He made you the unique being that you are.

I will not be "lost in the crowd" for the simple reason that God did not lose me in the crowd.

I am individualized, and I tend forever and ever toward greater individualization.

Meek = to be self-disciplined., or well trained.

The "meek" shall inherit the world because they have learned to use their imagination.

Neville 10-04-1968

POWER AND WISDOM

Although man develops more and more power on earth, it is like kindergarten, compared to the power that is his in the New Age. Christ within you as your hope of glory is the personification of this power

Knowing himself to be all power, Jesus turned to those who followed him, and said: "Wait in the city until you are clothed with power from on high." You are clothed with that power when the Holy Spirit, symbolized as a dove, descends upon you.

Clothed with the power from on high, Jesus entered the synagogue, opened the Book of Isaiah to the 61st chapter, and read: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me. He has anointed me to preach good news to the poor and to release the captives." Closing the book, he handed it to the attendant and said: "Today the scripture you have just heard has been fulfilled." The Old Testament predicted the coming of the New Age, called the kingdom of God. By this statement, Jesus claimed to be its fulfillment, for when the dove descended he knew he was the Messiah, the embodiment of power and wisdom.

When Pilate, the personification of logic and reason, asked: "Where are you from?" Jesus did not answer. But when he said: "Do you not know I have the power to release or crucify you," Jesus replied: "You have no power over me unless it is given you from within." In other words, if I do not give my power to you, you have none.

In the above statement the word "anothen" is translated "from above," but its true meaning is "from within." This same word is used when Nicodemus is told: "Unless you are born from within, you cannot enter the kingdom of God."

The power from within is life-giving and entirely different from the power of this world. If you desired to physically leave this room, as an animated being I would have no power to hold you here. But as a life-giving spirit, I could hold and control your actions.

As a life-giving spirit, I have entered a scene from within. Those who were present could not see me; yet I was so alive with power in myself, that I knew if I arrested it, everything I perceived would stand still. I did, and instantly everyone and everything was stilled. I examined them to discover that they were dead as though made out of clay. Then I released that power in myself, and everyone once more became animated, and continued to fulfill their intentions. Possessing no power in them, I did not release the power in them but in me.

Only when you wear the Human Form Divine - which is the embodiment of love - will you exercise this power. It is never exercised here, for your power is too great. You could, by arresting an army, rearrange their intention, release them, and they would execute your instructions - even if it meant their death. But wisdom goes hand in hand with that power. Paul asks: "Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? In the wisdom of God the world does not know God through wisdom. The foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God is stronger than men."

God cannot be found through studying scripture. He must be revealed! God either reveals himself to you, or you remain ignorant as to who he is. God first revealed himself to Moses as destructive power, saying: "I AM the Lord. I appeared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as God Almighty, but by my name I AM I did not make myself known to them."

The patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob knew only sheer power, but Moses knew God as I AM. Revealing himself as power, then as I AM, when God's son calls you father, you will know who you really are. This is the wisdom of God as opposed to the wisdom of man.

A friend of mine shared this vision with me. He said: "I am driving my car, when suddenly I am airborne, gliding over the treetops. Navigating the car by body-English, it rises as I lighten my body and descend with my body weight. Suddenly I panic, and must have crashed because I lost consciousness and the next thing I knew I was in a humanoid body such as I have never seen. The outside was dead, beige dust like the coals of a fireplace, with two holes where the eyes should be.

"I am not alone, there are others but they seem to be mindless water carriers. Asking a question of one, he pointed to a large boulder made of the same substance as my body. I climbed this rock and saw you, Neville, wearing a similar body. At your side was a mindless, brainless automaton.

"We began to talk, and I opened my wallet to show you a card which implied I was a writer. The man at your side questioned you and you answered him very superficially, conveying to me with a look that the man was incapable of understanding anything. Then you and I were alone, and you said: ‘No one can deny you the next four reunions with God.’ I did not understand the words, but your manner implied they were very important, and a joy permeated my being as I awoke."

These fleshly garments look like the garments he saw, when seen from a certain level. Paul tells us that the first man (Esau, Cain, etc.) is the man of dust, but the second man (Christ) is the man of heaven. (I Corinthians 15)

These bodies of dust are moved by a power from within. Blake explained this so beautifully, when he said: 'Those in great Eternity who contemplate on death (this world) say thus, 'What seems to be is, to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences, to those to whom it seems to be, even of torment, despair and Eternal death. But Divine Mercy steps beyond and redeems Man in the body of Jesus.'"

Every vision has a single jet of truth in it. My friend who had the vision is now being redeemed; because no one - but no one - can prevent him from experiencing the four reunions with God, at which time Divine Mercy redeems him in the body of Jesus.

The first reunion is God's birth from within. The second is the discovery of his son, David. This is followed by the third mighty reunion, when his spiritual body is split in two and God ascends like a spiral of lightening into heaven. And finally, the fourth act appears, as the Holy Spirit embodies the form of a dove to clothe him - as you - with power from on high.

From that moment on, you are aware of an entirely different world. You will no longer be an animated body, but know yourself to be a life-giving spirit, moving through heavenly states, giving life and telling the eternal story.

Having joined those in great eternity, you too will contemplate on those who sleep in death and know that what seems to be is - to those to whom it seems to be. You will not raise a finger to change their experiences, as you will know they are necessary in the world of Caesar. Having entered the New Age, where there is no time or space, you will discover that you are every place at the same time if you so desire, and that you are the creator of it all.

You see, when you emptied yourself of your power and wisdom to take on the form of a slave in the world of time, it was at once a tragedy and yet a triumph. Just like a sucker, which breathes and feeds on its parent, knows tremendous tragedy when detached and planted separately -but it becomes the parent because of the separation. So your separation is a tragedy and yet a victory, for you do become aware of being God the Father because of it.

The fall into decay and death was purposely planned. We are all awakening and returning to the awareness of being the one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all. Having fallen into division, we are gathered into the unity of being the one Father, enhanced by our experiences in this world of death.

I can describe this power in words, but its true feeling must be experienced. One evening, while sitting in MacArthur Park, I watched a man walk by, stand on a corner, and light a cigarette. Then I arrested that power in me and the match remained lit, yet did not burn beyond the place it was only a moment before. The man, standing as a statue, appeared to be totally unaware of the lighted match, while the park took on the stillness of death. Then I released the power within me and watched the man blow out the match, throw it away, and continue to walk with the others. When you are clothed with the power from on high you feel it, and these things happen to you.

Because of his disbelief, man sees this power as foolishness. So Paul told the Corinthians: "Since in the wisdom of God man did not by wisdom know God, it pleased God through the folly of what we preach, to save those who believe." All that you are called upon to do is to listen to the eternal story of salvation, and believe by responding to it. Then go about your business by using your power to cushion the blows of life; and when it pleases God, you will be saved.

Although your power here is like a little firecracker compared to your real power, when you know what you want and believe you have it, your power of belief will make it so. Construct a scene which implies the fulfillment of your desire. Give it all of the sensory vividness you are capable of giving, and rest in the knowledge that its implication is the power to bring your desire into your world.

You don't have to be a brilliant scholar to use your creative power. In fact, the more brilliant you are, the less you are likely to try it. The so-called brilliant mind believes only in that which is physical and visible, and therefore does not believe a desire can be fulfilled by a simple imaginal act.

But I know the power of imagining, for I have sat quietly in my chair in my living room, constructed a scene which implied the fulfillment of my desire, gave it all of the qualities of naturalness so that it felt right - and let it be. Then, just as I would drop a seed into the ground and wait for its maturity, my seed of desire matured and fulfilled itself in my world.

Imagine whatever you desire. Believe you will receive it and go about your business in the world with patience and confidence, knowing your desire will erupt and become a reality. Use the law while you remain in the city waiting to be clothed with power from on high, for it will come.

Believe me, for God's pattern of salvation has unfolded in me. The divine drama has reached its climax. Only Caesar's history continues, and every child born of woman is fulfilling it. Moving across the screen of space for thousands of years, man experiences moments of joy and sorrow, sadness and pain, until the dramatic story of Christ unfolds from within. It takes 1260 days from God's first mighty act to the final one. Then, if the brothers decide it is your task to remain and tell the story, you will. Like Paul, I long to depart. I feel as though there is a thorn in my side and I pray to have it removed. But I will remain, knowing my grace is sufficient, for my power is made perfect in weakness.

I recall the first night I met Abdullah. I had purposely delayed going to one of his meetings, because a man whose judgment I did not trust had insisted on my attendance. At the end of the meeting, Ab approached me and said: "Neville, you are six months late." Startled, I questioned how he knew my name, when he said: "The brothers told me you would be here six months ago." Then he added: "I will remain until you have received all that I must give you. Then I will depart." He, too, may have longed to go, but he had to wait for me.

If you are serious about the study of the Bible, read the eighth chapter of Proverbs. Begin with the 22nd verse, and as you go through to the end you will discover it is all about wisdom.

Personified as a little child, wisdom says: "He who finds me, finds life and receives favor from the Lord. He who misses me injures himself. He who hates me loves death." One day, finding life in yourself, you will hold wisdom in your arms and receive favor from the Lord. But if you would rather have more of the world of Caesar, you will hate the idea of the child, because you love death.

The world and all of its conflict is essential to the work that is being done in you. But in the end, you will have these four wonderful reunions with God and find yourself in the kingdom of heaven. Your awakening and resurrection takes you from this world of death. The discovery of your Son, your ascent into heaven, and the descent of the Holy Spirit is your entrance into the New Age, where you wear the body of Christ, the power and the wisdom of God.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 04-21-1969

POWER CALLED "THE LAW"

Any presentation of a doctrine must show that it has specific reference to life now, as well as hereafter, for secularized man is far more concerned with the present than with the future. So, if you would interest anyone in the truth, you must first appeal to the power they can experience here and now; for the promise is so fantastic that if they heard it first they might turn away in disgust. Show them what they can do right here and now. Get their interest in the power called "The Law," and then perhaps they will desire to know of the promise.

Let me share with you now a couple of stories a gentleman shared with me this week. He said: "About ten days ago my wife told me of a little girl only fourteen months old who had developed lumps on her neck [in] which - when the doctor removed and tested a lump - there were signs of cancer. Three specialists had been brought in and each separately had declared the child had cancer. Only one doctor, looking at the results questioned the verdict, but they were keeping the child in the hospital for further examination. As I listened to her story I cued my wife's voice out to the point that I couldn't even hear what she was saying, but hearing her voice, I reconstructed the story and heard its revision in my minds eye. That night as I fell asleep I listened again and heard my wife tell me the revised story. A few days later the doctors made another test from another lump and the vote was unanimous, the child did not have cancer. And since they had performed no remedial treatment in the hospital, they determined she never did have cancer, for without treatment the child could not have overcome the condition. When my wife heard the new verdict she told the grandmother and the mother what I had done, but they could not believe that an imaginal act has any power of causation."

To the world it is the height of insanity to believe that imagining creates reality, yet every mystic knows that every natural effect has a spiritual cause. A natural cause only seems to be. It is a delusion of this world, as man's memory is so poor he cannot relate what is taking place now to a former imaginal act. Always looking for physical causation, man cannot believe he imagined anything that could have produced such a physical effect; yet I tell you: as you sit alone and imagine you are setting a cause in motion, and when you see its effects you may deny the imaginal state, but your "now" is alive and real to you because of an imaginal act on your part and for no other reason. Your imagination sets everything in motion, but your memory is faulty; therefore you may look upon one who claims life is caused by imagination as a fool - yet Blake would call you an idiot reasoner, not a man of imagination. Now, my friend continued, saying: "Driving home from work the other night I was thinking I could use a little more cash, as Uncle Sam would be making demands upon my income. Then I began to imagine lovely, green, crisp currency raining down on me. For about one minute I lost myself in a little shower of green currency. Then the traffic demanded my attention and I assumed my normal, alert state and forgot all about my imaginal act until the morning of the fifteenth of April. At that time my boss entered the office and said: `You will receive a ten per cent raise in salary retroactive to April first,' and handed me a check."

Now, let me warn you tonight, wait until you get home to try it. It's much better to imagine the crisp currency falling on your bed than on the freeway! But do it, for I tell you everything is an imaginal act. There is no such thing as physical causation. It's all imaginal, but the world will not accept it. They laugh at the man of imagination but they cannot disprove it. A man may physically strike another. That was the physical cause while the blow he received was the effect; therefore the whole thing appeared to be constructed physically, but I ask you: what preceded the impulse to strike? That impulse was the unseen cause, which was an imaginal act. The world is brought into being by imagination and sustained by imagination, and when imagination no longer sustains it, it dissolves and leaves not a trace behind. One must approach the gospel on this level first. If one's interest is aroused on this level and it is proved to be true in the testing, then they may be interested in hearing about the promise.

Now I go back to the little girl. Judged by human standards the garment she wears is only fourteen months old, but the wearer of that garment is as old as God himself, and God has no beginning and no end. He chose us in him, not when we came out from our mother's womb, but before the foundation of the world. Before physical creation you and I were chosen in him for a purpose, for without purpose what would anything matter if death was final? Many tyrants believe that, and with those kinds of thoughts you cannot blame them for being a tyrant. If you believed death ended it all you would no doubt do as they do. You would agree with Macbeth, when Shakespeare had him say: "It is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury signifying nothing." That's what the world would have to be if there was no promise, no purpose or meaning behind it. But if you can get their interest in the law enough to test it and it proves itself in performance, then you can tell them the greatest story in the world in the hope that they will believe or begin to believe it.

Not a thing said of Jesus can be proved outwardly. He can only be known by the visionaries. While living in this mortal body and known only by the mask I wear, the incredible story called Jesus Christ has unfolded in me. I have taken you, my friends, into my confidence and shared my experiences with you in the hope that you will believe me. You see me as alive and well, yet I know what it is to be crucified, buried, and resurrected. While in my heavenly body I chose one among you to give my immortal eyes that have been turned inward, not outward, that confirmation of my words may come from her. She has seen me nailed on a cross, which was burned to the ground leaving golden, liquid light at its base, just as I told her it had happened to me. No one can persuade her that she did not have that experience, any more than someone could persuade me that I did not have the experience.

Now this lady knows who Jesus is. Knowing me as a man with all of the weaknesses of the flesh and its limitations, she had gone beyond the mask through vision and seen who Jesus really is. He has made known unto me the mystery of his will according to his purpose which he set forth in Christ as a plan for the fullness of time, that he may unite all things in him - things in heaven and things on earth. Jesus is God's plan of salvation which is in you. That plan has erupted in me and I have shared my experiences with you who come here, and also in my book, Resurrection.

Now, only the visionary, only he who has the immortal eyes, will actually know who Jesus is, for he is from above and is not of this world at all. It was he who said: "You are from below and I am from above. You are of this world and I am not of this world"; yet, throughout history, man has been looking for Jesus in the Near East. Those who have not had the visions claim they know the spot where he was crucified and buried, the road he walked, and even claim to have a little piece of wood from the cross upon which he was nailed. They perpetuate a tradition, making void the word of God as told us in the 15th chapter of Matthew. Keeping the traditions of a physical Jesus alive, the truth has been made void, as Jesus is not a physical being but a pattern buried in every one. When this pattern erupted in me, I was as surprised as anyone could be, and although I still remain in this weak little garment of flesh and continue to suffer through all the temptations of the world, I cannot deny my visions.

Now I have given my immortal eyes to one who in turn gave them to another, who will in turn give them to another, that they may all become eyewitnesses, as Luke speaks of in the beginning of his story, saying: "Inasmuch as many have undertaken to compile a narrative of the things which have been accomplished among us, just as they were presented to us by those who from the beginning were eyewitnesses..." Then he added this thought: "…and ministers of the word, it seemed good to me also, to write a narrative, most excellent Theophilus, concerning the things which have been accomplished among us." Luke was able to tell all who loved God (called Theophilus) the truth because of the eyewitnesses. But when the eyewitnesses depart this world the ministers multiply. They are men without vision who never knew the one who, while walking in the flesh, gave his eyes to those who bore witness to his story. Having witnessed the drama as it unfolded within him, they depart this world and leave only the ministers of the word, who build organizations and make a little god out of the man who - while like all other men - experienced God's plan of salvation in him. They say nothing of the pattern's eruption, but only of the external man - when there is no external Jesus.

You could look from now until the end of time and never find any convincing evidence of the historicity of one called Jesus - yet he is real. He is your true being, your hope of glory. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless, of course, you fail to meet the test. Test him on his level. Test your creative power, called the law. Imitate my friend and allow a gentle shower of currency to fall upon you. Believe you have received them and you will. Then share your knowledge with others and show them that scripture has a specific reference to life, now! Do not start with the hereafter. You can tell them of the promise later. And remember: nothing is impossible to imagination and the world is created in the imagination.

As a reasoning being you are not responsible to make anything happen. But as a man of imagination you simply imagine it is! My friend knows nothing about cancer. If he saw a cancer cell under a microscope he wouldn't recognize it. He is not a doctor and knows no more about the human body than I do, but he does know what his wife would tell him if the verdict was reversed and the child was well. When his wife told her friend of her husband's imaginal act, the friend (as the world) dismissed the idea, for she could not believe that causation was mental. To her everything has a physical cause and must be cured physically, yet I tell you: life itself is an imaginal journey. My friend heard his wife tell him of the child and then, knowing what he wanted to hear, he changed her words in his imagination. That is all he did. And those words could not return unto him void, but had to accomplish that which he purposed on the inside. He did nothing on the outside to bring it to pass. He simply remained faithful to his imaginal act and it was fulfilled.

I ask you to try it, and then turn to your neighbors and say: "Did it ever occur to you that your world is caused - not by the obvious, but by an unseen imaginal act?" You may interest them that way and if you do, ask them to try it. If they do, and it comes to pass then you can present them with the promise. You can tell them how their weak little garment is transformed as they rise from the dead into life everlasting. I tell you: you will be a completely transformed being with a human face, human hands and voice; but the form you wear cannot be described other than light.

The one thing that separates man from all other creation is his hand. The monkey doesn't have a hand. It cannot fashion, but with a hand you can become a builder. The first word in the name YOD HEY VAV HEY means "hand." It is the hand of the creator that fashions. If you could not fashion a suit of clothes for your body you would have to go nude, but given a hand you can turn yourself into the Father's image, which is a fiery being that you will awaken and know yourself to be.

The majority of the people you speak to will not listen to you. They would rather remain the same little being they know themselves to be and to continue to wear a garment of flesh and blood which must be taken to the bathroom several times a day to perform its normal functions. Can you imagine the hell you would experience if restoration were perpetuated forever? But this is not the body you wear when you know yourself to be God. It is entirely different. It is a heavenly body - a body of fire and air that you are destined to awaken as, for that is the one body we will all know ourselves to be. But while you are here, don't neglect the law. Use it every moment of time. Nothing is beyond your ability to imagine it. You are not responsible for making it so, you simply imagine it is so and let it be so! That is how the world in which we live came into being.

Before you judge me I ask you to test my words. It would be foolish to pass judgment on something you haven't tested. I have known those who claim they do not like something even though they have never tried it, but I tell you: you can acquire a taste for anything. I remember the first time I had an oyster. I was about eleven years old when mother and I visited the little island of St. Croix. In those days there were no hotels, only rooming houses and we all sat at the same common table. Everyone there spoke Danish and I couldn't understand one word they were saying, so I watched and did as they were doing. On the plate before me sat a dish with six little things in shells placed on it. Since I had never seen anything like it before, I watched the hostess. She picked up a little fork, stuck it into one of the things, and as she placed it in her mouth her face burst into a wonderful smile. Expecting the same thing, I picked up my fork, stuck it in the thing and put it in my mouth. Well, it wouldn't go down and I couldn't spit it out. Paralyzed, I realized that if I died in the attempt I had to swallow that thing, and when I did I looked down and turned green as I realized I had five more to go. But I did it, and now I love oysters in any form.

So I say: you can acquire a taste for anything in this world as well as the heavenly world. Start with the law. Learn how it works, and after proving it in performance you may desire to discover who Jesus really is. You may have been taught that a woman called Mary was impregnated by God and brought forth a physical son who was named Jesus; yet I tell you: I am a normal person, not formerly educated, married, once divorced, with two children - but I have experienced everything said of Jesus Christ in the gospel. And I gave my immortal eyes to a friend (who, married twice, with children from two different men) that she may see me hanging on a cross which was set aflame and reduced to molten, golden liquid light. Seeing the body that sleeps on the bed placed on a pallet, and then on a cross, she has seen the body I wear at night, and now knows who Jesus really is. No, he is not the little garment of flesh you wear, but an eternal pattern of redemption who sleeps in it. He awoke in a garment the world knows as Neville. Having awakened, I know I am He who became humanity that humanity may become God.

God now sleeps in you. He will awake and you will experience the identical drama as recorded in the gospels by one called Jesus Christ, for there is no other and there never will be another being. Those who have been enriched by the law you have taught them may turn from you, because it takes quite a while for traditions to die - as told us in the 15th chapter of the Book of Matthew: "For the sake of your traditions you have made void the word of God." Keeping traditions alive by wearing all these silly little red and purple robes on the outside, the unthinking millions consider themselves blessed if - as he walks by - they touch his garment, or attend a service where the great one is conducting mass. But because of those traditional beliefs the word of God is made void.

I am telling you what I know from experience. Take me seriously, because I must soon depart and those of you with the incurrent eyes will see as I have told you that you would. Then you will depart to leave behind only the ministers, who will turn my experiences into their institutional concept and once again void the word of God.

Tonight use the law and prove its power by becoming the man you imagine yourself to be. But don't forget the promise, for without the promise what would it matter if you owned the earth? I recently read the book Stalin's daughter wrote about her father. In it she told of being present when he died. She said that he was paralyzed on one side, his brain was gone, and he was physically blind; yet he saw something that caused him to raise his good hand and motion with, it as an expression of extreme hate covered his face. It was as though he were defying the devil himself who stood before him. He could have seen a composite picture of the twenty million lives he destroyed, personified as one man, causing his little hand to be raised in defiance as he departed. He didn't believe in life hereafter. He didn't believe he would be restored to life, therefore he felt free to do everything and anything he wanted to. Standing on the balcony watching thousands cheer him, he would say: "Fools!" He saw them as the chaff of life, yet today these trivial people balloon Stalin as an important figure in history. But, he has to face himself now. No longer playing the part of Stalin, the same being is now a young man, healthy and strong, continuing his life, doing something that is consistent with his life to bring out that plan of salvation called Jesus, which - hidden in him - he denied while he was here.

I ask you to use this power called the law. Simply determine what you want and imagine a scene which would imply you have realized it. Enter into the spirit of the scene. Participate in it by giving it sensory vividness. Then relax as you feel its reality. Don't consider the means. Know your desire is already an accomplished fact and you are now reveling in it. Then have faith, for faith is loyalty to your unseen reality. Your imaginal act, although unseen, is reality for God did it. If I asked you who is imagining it, you would respond: "I am" and that is God's name forever and forever.

Learn to live in your imagination morning, noon, and night. This gentleman whose experiences I shared with you tonight told me that when he first heard me he thought I was crazy; but he tried it, and although it didn't make sense it worked. I know the law and the promise do not make sense from a worldly point of view, yet I tell you: there is a plan of redemption buried in you which will erupt in the fullness of time and you will experience all that is said of a man called Jesus in scripture. Then you will know he was never a physical being, but the name of a plan. Jesus is Jehovah, who is your own wonderful I AM.

The root of the Greek word translated "gather" in the expression used in the first chapter of Ephesians is "head." That is where we will all gather together, for that is where we were all crucified and buried. And it is from the head that we resurrect. Returning from this external world, we gather all together into the one state which is in the head. James Dean once said: "The creator of this infinite unity resembles an infinite brain and we but brain cells in the mind of the dreamer." And now the brain cell is expanding within the one brain!

Now let us go into the silence.

NEVILLE GODDARD

Prayer: The Art of Believing

Goddard Publications

145 West 55th Street

New York 1945

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

Contents

Chapter 1: Law of Reversibility 6

Chapter 2: Dual Nature of Consciousness 12

Chapter 3: Imagination & Faith 19

Chapter 4: Energy & Power 29

Chapter 5: Law of Thought Transmission 35

Chapter 6: Good Tidings 55

Chapter 7: The Greatest Prayer 60

Prayer is the master key. A key may fit one door of a house, but when it fits all doors it may well claim to be a master key. Such and no less a key is prayer to all earthly problems.

Chapter 1: Law of Reversibility

"Pray for my soul, more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of" (Tennyson).

Prayer is an art and requires practice. The first requirement is a controlled imagination. Parade and vain repetitions are foreign to prayer. Its exercise requires tranquility and peace of mind, "Use not vain repetitions," for prayer is done in secret and "thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." The ceremonies that are customarily used in prayer are mere superstitions and have been invented to give prayer an air of solemnity. Those who do practice the art of prayer are often ignorant of the laws that control it. They attribute the results obtained to the ceremonies and mistake the letter for the spirit. The essence of prayer is faith; but faith must be permeated with understanding to be given that active quality which it does not possess when standing alone. "Therefore, get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding."

This book is an attempt to reduce the unknown to the known, by pointing out conditions on which prayers are answered, and without which they cannot be answered. It defines the conditions governing prayer in laws that are simply a generalization of our observations

The universal law of reversibility is the foundation on which its claims are based.

Mechanical motion caused by speech was known for a long time before anyone dreamed of the possibility of an inverse transformation, that is, the reproduction of speech by mechanical motion (the phonograph). For a long time electricity was produced by friction without ever a thought that friction, in turn, could be produced by electricity. Whether or not man succeeds in reversing the transformation of a force, he knows, nevertheless, that all transformations of force are reversible. If heat can produce mechanical motion, so mechanical motion can produce heat. If electricity produces magnetism, magnetism too can develop electric currents. If the voice can cause undulatory currents, so can such currents reproduce the voice, and so on. Cause and effect, energy and matter, action and reaction are the same and inter-convertible.

This law is of the highest importance, because it enables you to foresee the inverse transformation once the direct transformation is verified. If you knew how you would feel were you to realize your objective, then, inversely, you would know what state you could realize were you to awaken in yourself such feeling. The injunction, to pray believing that you already possess what you pray for, is based upon a knowledge of the law of inverse transformation. If your realized prayer produces in you a definite feeling or state of consciousness, then, inversely, that particular feeling or state of consciousness must produce your realized prayer. Because all transformations of force are reversible, you should always assume the feeling of your fulfilled wish.

You should awaken within you the feeling that you are and have that which heretofore you desired to be and possess. This is easily done by contemplating the joy that would be yours were your objective an accomplished fact, so that you live and move and have your being in the feeling that your wish is realized.

The feeling of the wish fulfilled, if assumed and sustained, must objectify the state that would have created it. This law explains why "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" and why "He calleth things that are not seen as though they were and things that were not seen become seen." Assume the feeling of your wish fulfilled and continue feeling that it is fulfilled until that which you feel objectifies itself.

If a physical fact can produce a psychological state, a psychological state can produce a physical fact. If the effect (a) can be produced by the cause (b), then inversely, the effect (b) can be produced by the cause (a). Therefore I say unto you, "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye have received them, and ye shall have them" (Mark 11:24).

Chapter 2: Dual Nature of Consciousness

A clear concept of the dual nature of man's consciousness must be the basis of all true prayer. Consciousness includes a subconscious as well as a conscious part. The infinitely greater part of consciousness lies below the sphere of objective consciousness. The subconscious is the most important part of consciousness. It is the cause of voluntary action. The subconscious is what a man is. The conscious is what a man knows. "I and my Father are one but my Father is greater than I." The conscious and subconscious are one, but the subconscious is greater than the conscious.

"I of myself can do nothing, the Father within me He doeth the work." I, objective consciousness, of myself can do nothing; the Father, the subconscious, He doeth the work. The subconscious is that in which everything is known, in which everything is possible, to which everything goes, from which everything comes, which belongs to all, to which all have access.

What we are conscious of is constructed out of what we are not conscious of. Not only do our subconscious assumptions influence our behavior but they also fashion the pattern of our objective existence. They alone have the power to say, "Let us make man—objective manifestations—in our image, after our likeness." The whole of creation is asleep within the deep of man and is awakened to objective existence by his subconscious assumptions. Within that blankness we call sleep there is a consciousness in unsleeping vigilance, and while the body sleeps this unsleeping being releases from the treasure house of eternity the subconscious assumptions of man.

Prayer is the key which unlocks the infinite storehouse. "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Prayer modifies or completely changes our subconscious assumptions, and a change of assumption is a change of expression.

The conscious mind reasons inductively from observation, experience and education. It therefore finds it difficult to believe what the five senses and inductive reason deny. The subconscious reasons deductively and is never concerned with the truth or falsity of the premise but proceeds on the assumption of the correctness of the premise and objectifies results which are consistent with the premise. This distinction must be clearly seen by all who would master the art of praying. No true grasp of the science of prayer can be really obtained until the laws governing the dual nature of consciousness are understood and the importance of the subconscious realized.

Prayer—the art of believing what is denied by the senses — deals almost entirely with the subconscious. Through prayer, the subconscious is suggested into acceptance of the wish fulfilled, and, reasoning deductively, logically unfolds it to its legitimate end. "Far greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world."

The subjective mind is the diffused consciousness that animates the world; it is the spirit that giveth life. In all substance is a single soul — subjective mind. Through all creation runs this one unbroken subjective mind. Thought and feeling fused into beliefs impress modifications upon it, charge it with a mission, which mission it faithfully executes.

The conscious mind originates premises. The subjective mind unfolds them to their logical ends. Were the subjective mind not so limited in its initiative power of reasoning, objective man could not be held responsible for his actions in the world. Man transmits ideas to the subconscious through his feelings. The subconscious transmits ideas from mind to mind through telepathy. Your unexpressed convictions of others are transmitted to them without their conscious knowledge or consent, and if subconsciously accepted by them will influence their behavior.

The only ideas they subconsciously reject are your ideas of them which they could not wish to be true of anyone. Whatever they could wish for others can be believed of them, and by the law of belief which governs subjective reasoning they are compelled to subjectively accept, and therefore objectively express, accordingly.

The subjective mind is completely controlled by suggestion. Ideas are best suggested when the objective mind is partly subjective, that is, when the objective senses are diminished or held in abeyance. This partly subjective state can best be described as controlled reverie, wherein the mind is passive but capable of functioning with absorption. It is a concentration of attention. There must be no conflict in your mind when you are praying. Turn from what is to what ought to be. Assume the mood of fulfilled desire, and by the universal law of reversibility you will realize your desire.

Chapter 3: Imagination & Faith

Prayers are not successfully made unless there is a rapport between the conscious and subconscious mind of the operator. This is done through imagination and faith.

By the power of imagination all men, certainly imaginative men, are forever casting forth enchantments, and all men, especially unimaginative men, are continually passing under their power. Can we ever be certain that it was not our mother while darning our socks who began that subtle change in our minds? If I can unintentionally cast an enchantment over persons, there is no reason to doubt that I am able to cast intentionally a far stronger enchantment.

Everything, that can be seen, touched, explained, argued over, is to the imaginative man nothing more than a means, for he functions, by reason of his controlled imagination, in the deep of himself where every idea exists in itself and not in relation to something else. In him there is no need for the restraints of reason. For the only restraint he can obey is the mysterious instinct that teaches him to eliminate all moods other than the mood of the fulfilled desire.

Imagination and faith are the only faculties of the mind needed to create objective conditions. The faith required for the successful operation of the law of consciousness is a purely subjective faith and is attainable upon the cessation of active opposition on the part of the objective mind of the operator. It depends on your ability to feel and accept as true what your objective senses deny. Neither the passivity of the subject nor his conscious agreement with your suggestion is necessary, for without his consent or knowledge he can be given a subjective order which he must objectively express. It is a fundamental law of consciousness that by telepathy we can have immediate communion with another.

To establish rapport you call the subject mentally. Focus your attention on him and mentally shout his name just as you would to attract the attention of anyone. Imagine that he answered, and mentally hear his voice. Represent him to yourself inwardly in the state you want him to obtain. Then imagine that he is telling you in the tones of ordinary conversation what you want to hear. Mentally answer him. Tell him of your joy in witnessing his good fortune. Having mentally heard with all the distinctness of reality that which you wanted to hear and having thrilled to the news heard, return to objective consciousness. Your subjective conversation must awaken what it affirmed.

“Thou shalt decree a thing and it shall be established unto thee.” It is not a strong will that sends the subjective word on its mission so much as it is clear thinking and feeling the truth of the state affirmed. When belief and will are in conflict, belief invariably wins. “Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts.” It is not what you want that you attract; you attract what you believe to be true. Therefore, get into the spirit of these mental conversations and give them the same degree of reality that you would a telephone conversation. “If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. Therefore, I say unto you, what things soever you desire, when you pray, believe that ye received them, and ye shall have them.” The acceptance of the end wills the means. And the wisest reflection could not devise more effective means than those which are willed by the acceptance of the end. Mentally talk to your friends as though your desires for them were already realized.

Imagination is the beginning of the growth of all forms, and faith is the substance out of which they are formed. By imagination, that which exists in latency or is asleep within the deep of consciousness is awakened and is given form. The cures attributed to the influence of certain medicines, relics and places are the effects of imagination and faith. The curative power is not in the spirit that is in them, it is in the spirit in which they are accepted. “The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.”

The subjective mind is completely controlled by suggestion, so, whether the object of your faith be true or false, you will get the same results. There is nothing unsound in the theory of medicine or in the claims of priesthood for their relics and holy places. The subjective mind of the patient accepts the suggestion of health conditioned on such states, and as soon as these conditions are met proceeds to realize health. “According to your faith be it done unto you for all things are possible to him that believeth.” Confident expectation of a state is the most potent means of bringing it about. The confident expectation of a cure does that which no medical treatment can accomplish.

Failure is always due to an antagonistic auto-suggestion by the patient, arising from objective doubt of the power of medicine or relic, or from doubt of the truth of the theory. Many of us, either from too little emotion or too much intellect, both of which are stumbling blocks in the way or prayer, cannot believe that which our sense deny. To force ourselves to believe will end in greater doubt. To avoid such counter-suggestions the patient should be unaware, objectively, of the suggestions which are made to him. The most effective method of healing or influencing the behavior of others consists in what is known as “the silent or absent treatment.” When the subject is unaware, objectively, of the suggestion given him there is no possibility of him setting up an antagonistic belief. It is not necessary that the patient know, objectively, that anything is being done for him. From what is known of the subjective and objective processes of reasoning, it is better that he should not know objectively of that which is being done for him. The more completely the objective mind is kept in ignorance of the suggestion, the better will the subjective mind perform its functions. The subject subconsciously accepts the suggestion and thinks he originates it, proving the truth of Spinoza’s dictum that we know not the causes that determine our actions.

The subconscious mind is the universal conductor which the operator modifies with his thoughts and feelings. Visible states are either the vibratory effects of subconscious vibrations within you or they are vibratory causes of the corresponding vibrations within you. A disciplined man never permits them to be causes unless they awaken in him the desirable states of consciousness. With a knowledge of the law of reversibility, the disciplined man transforms his world by imagining and feeling only what is lovely and of good report. The beautiful idea he awakens within himself shall not fail to arouse its affinity in others. He knows the savior of the world is not a man but the manifestation that would save. The sick man’s savior is health, the hungry man’s is food, the thirsty man’s savior is water. He walks in the company of the savior by assuming the feeling of his wish fulfilled. By the law of reversibility, that all transformations of force are reversible, the energy or feeling awakened transforms itself into the state imagined. He never waits four months for the harvest. If in four months the harvest will awaken in him a state of joy, then, inversely, the joy of harvest now will awaken the harvest now. “Now is the acceptable time to give beauty for ashes, joy for mourning, praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord that he might be glorified.”

Chapter 4: Energy & Power

Everyone is amenable to the same psychological laws which govern the ordinary hypnotic subject. He is amenable to control by suggestion. In hypnosis, the objective senses are partly or totally suspended. However, no matter how profoundly the objective senses are locked in hypnosis, the subjective faculties are alert, and the subject recognizes everything that goes on around him. The activity and power of the subjective mind are proportionate to the sleep of the objective mind. Suggestions which appear powerless when presented directly to the objective consciousness are highly efficacious when the subject is in a hypnotic state. The hypnotic state is simply being unaware, objectively. In hypnotism, the conscious mind is put to sleep and the subconscious powers are exposed as to be directly reached by suggestion. It is easy to see from this, providing you accept the truth of mental suggestions, that anyone not objectively aware of you is in a profound hypnotic state relative to you. Therefore “Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in the bedchamber; for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter” (Ecc. 10:20). What you sincerely believe as true of another you will awaken within him.

No one need be entranced, in the ordinary manner, to be helped. If the subject is consciously unaware of the suggestion, and if the suggestion is given with conviction and confidently accepted by the operator as true, then you have the ideal setting for a successful prayer. Represent the subject to yourself mentally as though he had already done that which you desire him to do. Mentally speak to him and congratulate him on having done what you want him to do. Mentally see him in the state you want him to obtain. Within the circle of its action, every word subjectively spoken awakens objectively, what it affirms. Incredulity on the part of the subject is no hindrance when you are in control of your reverie.

Bold assertion by you, while you are in a partly subjective state, awakens what you affirm. Self-confidence on your part and the thorough belief in the truth of your mental assertion are all that is needed to produce results. Visualize the subject and imagine that you hear his voice. This establishes contact with his subjective mind. Then imagine that he is telling you what you want to hear. If you want to send him words of health and wealth, then imagine that he is telling you “I have never felt better and I have never had more,” and mentally tell him of your joy in witnessing his good fortune. Imagine that you see and hear his joy.

A mental conversation with the subjective image of another must be in a manner which does not express the slightest doubt as to the truth of what you hear and say. If you have the least idea that you do not believe what you have imagined you have heard and seen, the subject will not comply, for your subjective mind will transmit only your fixed ideas. Only fixed ideas can awaken their vibratory correlates in those toward whom they are directed. In the controlled reverie, ideas must be suggested with the utmost care. If you do not control your imagination in the reverie, your imagination will control you. Whatever you suggest with confidence is law to the subjective mind; it is under obligation to objectify that which you mentally affirm. Not only does the subject execute the state affirmed but he does it as though the decision had come of itself, or the idea or the idea had originated by him.

Control of the subconscious is dominion over everything. Each state obeys one mind's control. Control of the subconscious is accomplished through control of your beliefs, which in turn is the all-potent factor in the visible states. Imagination and faith are the secrets of creation.

Chapter 5: Law of Thought Transmission

“He sent his word and healed them and delivered them from their destructions.” He transmitted the consciousness of health and awoke its vibratory correlate in the one toward whom it was directed. He mentally represented the subject to himself in a state of health and imagined he heard the subject confirm it. “For no word of God shall be void of power; therefore, hold fast the pattern of healthful words which thou has heard.”

To pray successfully you must have clearly defined objectives. You must know what you want before you can ask for it. You must know what you want before you can feel that you have it, and prayer is the feeling of the fulfilled desire. It does not matter what it is you seek in prayer, or where it is, or whom it concerns. You have nothing to do but convince yourself of the truth of that which you desire to see manifested. When you emerge from prayer you no longer seek, for you have—if you have prayed correctly—subconsciously assumed the reality of the state sought, and by the law of reversibility your subconscious must objectify that which it affirms.

You must have a conductor to transmit a force. You may employ a wire, a jet of water, a current of air, a ray of light or any intermediary whatsoever. The principle of the photophone or the transmission of the voice by light will help you to understand thought transmission, or the sending of a word to heal another. There is a strong analogy between a spoken voice and a mental voice. To think is to speak low, to speak is to think aloud. The principle of the photophone is this: A ray of light is reflected by a mirror and projected to a receiver at a distant point. Back of the mirror is a mouthpiece. By speaking into the mouthpiece you cause the mirror to vibrate. A vibrating mirror modifies the light reflected on it. The modified light has your speech to carry, not as speech, but as represented in its mechanical correlate. It reaches the distant station and impinges on a disc within the receiver; it causes the disc to vibrate according to the modification it undergoes — and it reproduces your voice.

“I am the light of the world.” I am, the knowledge that I exist, is a light by means of which what passes in my mind is rendered visible. Memory, or my ability to mentally see what is objectively present, proves that my mind is a mirror, so sensitive a mirror that it can reflect a thought. The re-perception of an image in memory in no way differs as a visual act from the perception of my image in a mirror. The same principle of seeing is involved in both.

Your consciousness is the light reflected on the mirror of your mind and projected in space to the one of whom you think. By mentally speaking to the subjective image in your mind you cause the mirror of your mind to vibrate. Your vibrating mind modifies the light of consciousness reflected on it. The modified light of consciousness reaches the one toward whom it is directed and impinges on the mirror of his mind; it causes his mind to vibrate according to the modification it undergoes. Thus, it reproduces in him what was mentally affirmed by you.

Your beliefs, your fixed attitudes of mind, constantly modify your consciousness as it is reflected on the mirror of your mind. Your consciousness, modified by your beliefs, objectifies itself in the conditions of your world. To change your world, you must first change your conception of it. To change a man, you must change your conception of him. You must first believe him to be the man you want him to be and mentally talk to him as though he were. All men are sufficiently sensitive to reproduce your beliefs of them. Therefore, if your word is not reproduced visibly in him toward whom it is sent, the cause is to be found in you, not in the subject. As soon as you believe in the truth of the state affirmed, results follow. Everyone can be transformed; every thought can be transmitted; every thought can be visibly embodied.

Subjective words - subconscious assumptions - awaken what they affirm. “They are living and active and shall not return unto me void, but shall accomplish that which I please, and shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent them.” They are endowed with the intelligence pertaining to their mission and will persist until the object of their existence is realized; they persist until they awaken the vibratory correlates of themselves within the one toward whom they are directed, but the moment the object of their creation is accomplished they cease to be. The word spoken subjectively in quiet confidence will always awaken a corresponding state in the one in whom it was spoken; but the moment its task is accomplished it ceases to be, permitting the one in whom the state is realized to remain in the consciousness of the state affirmed or to return to his former state.

Whatever state has your attention holds your life. Therefore, to become attentive to a former state is to return to that condition. “Remember not the former things, neither consider things of old.”

Nothing can be added to man, for the whole of creation is already perfected in him. “The kingdom of heaven is within you.” “Man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.” Heaven is your subconsciousness. Not even a sunburn is given from without. The rays without only awaken corresponding rays within. Were the burning rays not contained within man, all the concentrated rays in the universe could not burn him. Were the tones of health not contained within the consciousness of the one whom they are affirmed, they could not be vibrated by the word which is sent. You do not really give to another—you resurrect that which is asleep within him. “The damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.” Death is merely a sleeping and forgetting. Age and decay are the sleep—not death— of youth and health. Recognition of a state vibrates or awakens it.

Distance, as it is cognized by your objective senses, does not exist for the subjective mind. “If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall they hand lead me.” Time and space are conditions of thought; the imagination can transcend them and move in a psychological time and space. Although physically separated from a place by thousands of miles, you can mentally live in the distant place as though it were here. Your imagination can easily transform winter into summer, New York into Florida, and so on. Whether the object of your desire be near or far, results will be the same. Subjectively, the object of your desire is never far off; its intense nearness makes it remote from observation of the senses. It dwells in consciousness, and consciousness is closer than breathing and nearer than hands and feet.

Consciousness is the one and only reality. All phenomena are formed of the same substance vibrating at different rates. Out of consciousness I as man came, and to consciousness I as man return. In consciousness all states exist subjectively and are awakened to their objective existence by belief. The only thing that prevents us from making a successful subjective impression on one at a great distance, or transforming there into here, is our habit of regarding space as an obstacle.

A friend a thousand miles away is rooted in your consciousness through your fixed ideas of him. To think of him and represent him to yourself inwardly in the state you desire him to be, confident that this subjective image is as true as it were already objectified, awakens in him a corresponding state which he must objectify. The results will be as obvious as the cause was hidden. The subject will express the awakened state within him and remain unaware of the true cause of his action. Your illusion of free will is but ignorance of the causes which make you act. Prayers depend upon your attitude of mind for their success and not upon the attitude of the subject. The subject has no power to resist your controlled subjective ideas of him unless the state affirmed by you to be true of him is a state he is incapable of wishing as true of another. In that case it returns to you, the sender, and will realize itself in you. Provided the idea is acceptable, success depends entirely on the operator not upon the subject who, like compass needles on their pivots, are quite indifferent as to what direction you choose to give them. If your fixed idea is not subjectively accepted by the one toward whom it is directed, it rebounds to you from whom it came. “Who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.” “There shall no evil happen to the just.” Nothing befalls us that is not of the nature of ourselves.

A person who directs a malicious thought to another will be injured by its rebound if he fails to get subconscious acceptance of the other. “As ye sow, so shall ye reap.” Furthermore, what you can wish and believe of another can be wished and believed of you, and you have no power to reject it if the one who desires it for you accepts it as true of you. The only power to reject a subjective word is to be incapable of wishing a similar state of another—to give presupposes the ability to receive. The possibility to impress an idea upon another mind presupposes the ability of that mind to receive that impression. Fools exploit the world; the wise transfigure it. It is the highest wisdom to know that in the living universe there is no destiny other than that created out of imagination of man. There is no influence outside of the mind of man.

“Whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things.” Never accept as true of others what you would not want to be true of you. To awaken a state within another it must first be awake within you. The state you would transmit to another can only be transmitted if it is believed by you. Therefore, to give is to receive. You cannot give what you do not have, and you have only what you believe. So, to believe a state as true of another not only awakens that state within the other but it makes it alive within you. You are what you believe.

“Give and ye shall receive, full measure, pressed down and running over.” Giving is simply believing, for what you truly believe of others you will awaken within them. The vibratory state transmitted by your belief persists until it awakens its corresponding vibration in him of whom it is believed. But before it can be transmitted it must first be awake within the transmitter. Whatever is awake within your consciousness, you are.

Whether the belief pertains to self or another does not matter, for the believer is defined by the sum total of his beliefs or subconscious assumptions.

“As a man thinketh in his heart”— in the deep subconscious of himself— “so is he.” Disregard appearances and subjectively affirm as true that which you wish to be true. This awakens in you the tone of the state affirmed which in turn realizes itself in you and in the one of whom it is affirmed. Give and ye shall receive. Beliefs invariably awaken what they affirm. The world is a mirror wherein everyone sees himself reflected. The objective world reflects the beliefs of the subjective mind.

Some people are self-impressed best by visual images, others by mental sounds, and still others by mental actions. The form of mental activity which allows the whole power of your attention to be focused in one chosen direction is the one to cultivate, until you can bring all to play on your objective at the same time.

Should you have difficulty in understanding the terms, “visual images,” “mental sounds” and “mental actions,” here is an illustration that should make their meanings clear: A imagines he sees a piece of music, knowing nothing at all about musical notations. The impression in his mind is purely visual image. B imagines he sees the same piece, but he can read music and can imagine how it would sound when played on the piano; that imagination is mental sound. C also reads music and is a pianist; as he reads, he imagines himself playing the piece. The imaginary action is mental action.

The visual images, mental sounds and mental actions are creations of your imagination, and though they appear to come from without, they actually come from within yourself. They move as if moved by another but are really launched by your own spirit from the magical store-house of imagination. They are projected into space by the same vibratory law that governs the sending of a voice or picture. Speech and images are projected not as speech or images but as vibratory correlates. Subjective mind vibrates according to the modifications it undergoes by the thought and feelings of the operator. The visible state created is the effect of the subjective vibrations. A feeling is always accompanied by a corresponding vibration, that is, a change in expression or sensation in the operator.

There is no thought or feeling without expression. No matter how emotionless you appear to be if you reflect with any degree of intensity, there is always an execution of slight muscular movements. The eye, though shut, follows the movements of the imaginary objects and the pupil is dilated or contracted according to the brightness or the remoteness of those objects; respiration is accelerated or slowed, according to the course of your thoughts; the muscles contract correspondingly to your mental movements.

This change of vibration persists until it awakens a corresponding vibration in the subject, which vibration then expresses itself in a physical fact. “And the word was made flesh.” Energy, as you see in the case of radio, is transmitted and received in a “field,” a place where changes in space occur. The field and energy are one and inseparable. The field or subject becomes the embodiment of the word or energy received. The thinker and the thought, the operator and the subject, the energy and the field are one. Were you still enough to hear the sound of your beliefs you would know what is meant by “the music of the spheres.” The mental sound you hear in prayer as coming from without is really produced by yourself. Self-observation will reveal this fact. As the music of the spheres is defined as the harmony heard by the gods alone and is supposed to be produced by the movements of the celestial spheres , so, too, is the harmony you subjectively hear for others heard by you alone is produced by the movements of your thoughts and feelings in the true kingdom or “heaven within you.”

Chapter 6: Good Tidings

“How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that pubisheth salvation.”

A very effective way to bring good tidings to another is to call before your minds eyes the subjective image of the person you wish to help and have him affirm that which you desired him to do. Mentally hear him tell you he has done it. This awakens within him the vibratory correlate of the state affirmed, which vibration persists until its mission is accomplished. It does not matter what it is you desire to have done, or whom you select to do it. As soon as you subjectively affirm that it is done, results follow. Failure can result only if you fail to accept the truth of your assertion or if the state affirmed would not be desired by the subject for himself or another. In the latter event, the state would realize itself in you, the operator.

The seemingly harmless habit of “talking to yourself” is the most fruitful form of prayer. A mental argument with the subjective image of another is the surest way to pray for an argument. You are asking to be offended by the other when you objectively meet. He is compelled to act in a manner displeasing to you, unless before the meeting you countermand or modify your order by subjectively affirming a change.

Unfortunately, man forgets his subjective arguments, his daily mental conversations with others, and so is at a loss for an explanation of the conflicts and misfortunes of his life. As mental arguments produce conflicts, so happy mental conversations produce corresponding visible states of good tidings. Man creates himself out of his own imagination.

If the state desired is for yourself and you find it difficult to accept as true what your senses deny, call before your mind's eye the subjective image of a friend and have him mentally affirm that you are already that which you desire to be. This establishes in him, without his conscious consent or knowledge, the subconscious assumption that you are that which he mentally affirmed, which assumption, because it is unconsciously assumed, will persist until it fulfills its mission. Its mission is to awaken in you its vibratory correlate, which vibration when awakened in you realizes itself as an objective fact.

Another very effective way to pray for oneself is to use the formula of Job who found that his own captivity was removed as he prayed for his friends. Fix your attention on a friend and have the imaginary voice of your friend tell you that he is, or has, that which is comparable to that which you desire to be or have. As you mentally hear and see him, feel the thrill of his good fortune and sincerely wish him well. This awakens in him the corresponding vibration of the state affirmed, which vibration must then objectify itself as a physical fact. You will discover the truth of the statement, “Blessed are the merciful for they shall receive mercy.” “The quality of mercy is twice blessed— it blesses him who taketh and him who giveth." The good you subjectively accept as true of others will not only be expressed by them, but a full share will be realized by you.

Transformations are never total. Force A is always transformed into more than a force B. A blow with a hammer produces not only a mechanical concussion, but also heat, electricity, a sound, a magnetic change and so on. The vibratory correlate in the subject is not the entire transformation of the sentiment communicated. The gift transmitted to another is the like the divine measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over, so that after five thousand are fed from the five loaves and two fish, twelve baskets full are left over.

Chapter 7: The Greatest Prayer

Imagination is the beginning of creation. You imagine what you desire, and then you believe it to be true. Every dream could be realized by those self-disciplined enough to believe it. People are what you choose to make them; a man is according to the manner in which you look at him. You must look at him with different eyes before he will objectively change. “Two men looked from prison bars, one saw the mud and the other saw the stars.” Centuries ago, Isaiah asked the question; “Who is blind, but my servant, or deaf, as my messenger that I sent?” “Who is blind as he that is perfect, as blind as the Lord’s servant?” The perfect man judges not after appearances, but judges righteously. He sees others as he desires them to be; he hears only what he wants to hear. He sees only good in others. In him is no condemnation for he transforms the world with his seeing and hearing.

“The king that sitteth on the throne scattereth the evil with his eye.” Sympathy for living things—agreement with human limitations—is not in the consciousness of the king because he has learned to separate their false concepts from their true being. To him poverty is but the sleep of wealth. He does not see caterpillars, but painted butterflies to be; not winter, but summer sleeping; not man in want, but Jesus sleeping. Jesus of Nazareth, who scattered the evil with his eye, is asleep in the imagination of every man, and out of his own imagination must man awaken him by subjectively affirming “I AM Jesus” Then and only then will he see Jesus, for man can only see what is awake in himself. The holy womb is man's imagination. The holy child is that conception of himself which fits Isaiah's definition of perfection. Heed the words of St. Augustine, "Too late have I loved thee, for behold thou were within and it was without that I did seek thee." It is your own consciousness that you must turn as to the only reality. There, and there alone, you awaken that which is asleep. "Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born, if He is not born of in thee thy soul is still forlorn."

Creation is finished. You call your creation into being by feeling the reality of the state you would call. A mood attracts its affinities, but it does not create what it attracts. As sleep is called by feeling "I am sleepy," so, too, is Jesus Christ called by the feeling, "I am Jesus Christ." Man sees only himself. Nothing befalls man that is not the nature of himself. People emerge out of the mass betraying their close affinity to your moods as they are engendered. You meet them seemingly by accident but find they are intimates of your moods. Because your moods continually externalize themselves you could prophesy from your moods, that you, without search, would soon meet certain characters and encounter certain conditions. Therefore, call the perfect one into being by living in the feeling, "I am Christ," for Christ is the one concept of self through which can be seen the unveiled realities of eternity.

Our behavior is influenced by our subconscious assumption respecting our own social and intellectual rank and that of the one we are addressing. Let us seek for and evoke the greatest rank, and the noblest of all is that which disrobes man of his morality and clothes him with uncurbed immortal glory. Let us assume the feeling “I am Christ,” and our whole behavior will subtly and unconsciously change in accordance with the assumption.

Our subconscious assumptions continually externalize themselves that others may consciously see us as we subconsciously see ourselves and tell us by their actions what we have subconsciously assumed of ourselves to be. Therefore, let us assume the feeling “I AM Christ,” until our conscious claim becomes our subconscious assumption that “We all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord are changed into the same image from glory to glory." Let God Awake and his enemies be destroyed. There is no greater prayer for man.

I hope you have enjoyed reading Prayer: The Art of Believing by Neville Goddard.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

PREDESTINED GLORY

Tonight's subject is: "Predestined Glory." In the Epistle to the Hebrews, the author speaks of God as "bringing many sons unto glory." (Hebrews 2:10) What is "bringing many sons unto glory"? Well, if you read the Scriptures carefully, you will see that "glory" and "God" are synonymous. "I will make my glory to pass before you," or: "While my glory passes by . . . I will cover you with my hand" (Exodus 33:22), and: "When I pass by, I will remove my hand" (Exodus 33:23).

So, here we find "my glory" is equal to "I." "My glory passes by," and "When I pass by . . . " What is He doing? He is bringing His sons to Himself. He has chosen His sons -- unnumbered sons; and, yet, there is a number to it, but it seems like an infinite number. And the word "glory" means to "magnify," to "make self many." So,He is transforming us into Himself, -- actually one with God, as God. That is the story -- the great mystery of the Christian faith.

He said, "I consider the sufferings of this present time not worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed in us." (Romans 8:18) Then He tells us that He calls us "according to His purpose, for those whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be -- " conformed to the image of the Son . . . "and those whom He predestined, He also called; and those whom He called, He also justified; and those whom He justified, He also glorified." (Romans 8:28-30)

So, here we have five terms: "foreknew," "predestined," "called," "justified," and "glorified," -- the affirmation of predestination. And there is no way of interpreting these terms to avoid such a conclusion. You are predestined to be God!

Now, you may say, "Well, now, look at the things that I have done, the horrible things that I have done!" It doesn't really matter. We have all done them, or we are doing them, or we will do them; but that does not interfere with God's predestined plan. There we have in five terms the structure of God's plan of giving Himself to us, not as something that is great on the outside, but giving Himself to us. So, we actually become God!

Now, I know the priesthoods of the world scare us to death trying to make us conform to their concept of what a man ought to be in order to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. May I tell you? fitness for the Kingdom of Heaven is the consequence, not the condition, of His glory. When He calls you, -- and He calls you individually, -- you could be the most unclean being in the world, judged by human standards; but God calls us according to His purpose. Now, when He is ready, He'll take you into His body, for His body is the Eternal Temple, now made up of living stones -- not dead stones; and only God knows that you are not fitted, but you are fitted by reason of His call. When He calls you, He incorporates you into His body, and that incorporation fits you for the Kingdom of Heaven! So, "fitness" is the consequence, not the condition, of His glory.

Now, let me share with you my own experience of the Call. It was this month back in 1929. I was then a dancer. I was 24 years of age, searching -- searching for an experience of God. If any one went into blind alleys looking, I did. I tried everything, trying to find Him. No; I didn't try dope; I didn't smoke marijuana. No, I didn't go in for that. First of all, I couldn't afford liquor, and Prohibition was on in those days, and I wasn't in the habit of drinking. I couldn't afford it, and there was no liquor around unless you went to some expensive "speak-easy." Well, I couldn't afford it. But I was searching for God. I thought maybe a certain diet, like a strict vegetarian -- maybe that would do it. I tried that.

When I was 24 I went to sleep perfectly normally, as I do today; and during the night I was taken in Spirit into the Divine Assembly, and I was taken into the presence of a Recording Angel. And here sat this heavenly being -- a desk at a slant, with a huge ledger open before her, with a quill pen. She said nothing. I said nothing. I was simply taken in Spirit. I had no control of the action; it was all automatic. I stood at her side -- at her left side. She turned, and she looked me in the eye -- turned her left face and just looked at me. Then she turned back to the ledger, and wrote something or checked someting in that ledger.

Then I was taken into the presence of the Risen Lord -- Infinite Love -- Man. Yes, -- Man! And here is the "Ancient of Days" -- not an old man -- but a man without beginning, without end, -- an Eternal Being -- all Love. All I can say of this one: He is the "Ancient of Days." And he asked me to name the greatest thing in the world, and I replied with the words of Paul, automatically as though I were prompted. I didn't stop for one second to think. I just simply automatically used the words of Paul: "Faith, hope and love; these three; but the greatest of these is love." (First Corinthians 13:13) At that moment, He embraced me. At the moment of our embrace, our bodies fused, and I became one with the body of the spirit of the Risen Lord.

Until you experience it, you will never know such infinite love -- just love, sheer love. And while I am embraced by Infinite Being, who is all Love, a voice rang out -- out of the blue, and it said, "Down with the bluebloods." At that moment, I found myself in the presence of Almighty Power, -- Man. Yes, it's a man! Not the Ancient of Days, -- the face differed now; and here is Almighty Power, but a man; and without using his vocal cords, without using his lips, I heard what he thought. He commanded me, without using words by the use of lips; and I heard within me that which he thought, and he said to me, "Time to act." And with that, I was simply propelled -- catapulted out of that Divine Assembly back into this little body that was reclining on its bed, about 4:00 in the morning in the month of July of 1929. From that moment on, things began to happen within me. I had no idea what it meant to act. But he said, "Time to act," and then within me things began to unfold.

Every one will be called. Every one will be incorporated into this one body, for "There is only one body, one spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all." (Ephesians 4:4-6) Each will be called in his own good order. No one can tell me that he feels himself fit for the Kingdom of Heaven. There is not one man in the world, -- by "man," I mean generic man, -- that thinks himself so good that he thinks he is worthy of it. No one can tell me honestly he thinks himself worthy of it. So, forget it when some one tries to scare you into believing you've got to make an effort beyond the effort that you have made in order to qualify for the Kingdom, for fitness is the consequence, not the condition, of His glory. When He fuses us, He has already made the choice at the beginning. "Before the foundation of the world, He chose us in Him," (Ephesians 1:4) -- then sending us into this world of horror. This is a world of horror, a world of death; and we pass through all the furnaces of experience in this world; and while we are in it, we are called. At the very moment of being called, the embrace purifies you, -- at that very moment.

Now, the body of flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven; so I was not in this body when I stood before His presence. I was in a spirit body, but I was conscious of being Neville.. I was conscious of being all that, as a man called "Neville," I thought I had done. I wasn't proud of my 24 years on this earth. I had done many things of which I was ashamed; and yet, in spite of all the things I had done in 24 years, He still called me, for at that moment in time that one stone was necessary. He is rebuilding His temple. The temple has been shattered purposely, deliberately; and we are the fragmented parts of that temple. And the parts go through all the furnaces of experience in this world; and He knows exactly what stone He wants now, at this moment. And He calls that stone. It's a person -- it's you! And He is calling you to glorify you, but He glorifies you with Himself.

So, here are the five terms: "Those whom he foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His son; and those whom He predestined, He also called; and those whom He called, He justified; and those whom He justified, He glorified." (Romans 8:28-30) Justification is the Divine Acquittal. Whatever I did in all ages that passed between that moment when I fell with God, -- for He brought us all into one body, and one body fell and fragmented itself into the unnumbered races and nations in the world.

Now, He calls us, one by one; and when you are called, though unfit, He justifies you; and justifying you is simply Divine Acquittal. You are acquitted of all the things that you have ever done. Then comes glorification; and glorification is the gift of Himself to you. You become one with God, -- because there aren't two gods; you are God, though you remain in the little garment of flesh for a while. You remain in this little garment of flesh -- still weak, still limited, with all the limitations of the flesh, until that moment in time when He takes it off for the last time, and you awake then as God, without loss of identity.

So, let no one scare you that you are not fitted for the Kingdom of Heaven. That choice has already been made. "You were chosen in Him before the foundation of the world" (Ephesians 1:4), and you are sent out and told that you are going to suffer. Read it in the Book of Genesis. You will go into a land -- a strange land, and you will be enslaved there -- enslaved for "four hundred years," -- not four hundred years as you and I measure time. This cross of flesh (indicating the physical body) is "four hundred," for four hundred is simply the numerical value of the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, whose symbol is that of a cross. It is the "taw," the 22d letter; and this is the cross on which God is crucified, and you suffer while you wear the body of flesh and blood. We are enslaved by the body that we wear.

No matter what you own in this world, -- if you owned the whole vast world, and all were your slaves, you could not command one slave in your world to eat for you and assimilate for you. You have to eat, assimilate and eliminate for yourself. You are a slave of the body that you wear; and you will wear it for the "four hundred years," until that moment in time when you are called.

Now, when you are called, you are incorporated into the Body of Love. From then on, you "taste of the powers of the age to come" (Hebrews 6:5, Revised Standard Version). The powers are so fantastic; nothing known to mortal mind compares with the power that is yours to be exercised after you are called. And then the body comes off for the last time. But you could not exercise this power until you are first incorporated into the Body of Love. For, if you had this power, minus Love, you could destroy the universe!

Nothing in the world compares with this power. You could stop the whole vast world, and make time stand still, then change the motivation of these slaves on earth, and make them do your will; and it would be the most horrible will in the world. But you wouldn't after you were incorporated into the Body of Love. Your every motive, then, is governed by Love.

So, first comes the call. Predestined, yes; foreknowledge, yes, before you are called; and He predestined. But now comes the break, and now He calls. And He calls us, one by one, to be incorporated into His own Being, the one Spirit. For, he who is united to the Lord becomes one spirit with Him. So, in the end, you and I, without loss of identity, -- we are God Himself! This is the Glory of which I speak. This is the glory that was foretold in Scripture, the greatest book in the world, and the most misunderstood book in the world. It is all about you.

So, we are told: "And the Lord will rise upon you, and the Lord will be seen upon you, and His glory will be seen upon you." (Isaiah 60:1,2)- Revised Standard Version)

His glory is Himself. And I am telling you from my own experience, we will be seen by others, and be identified by others as God Himself! And, yet, the friend of the one who sees you -- they will stand amazed, knowing you as their friend, and yet they cannot deny what they now see. They will see you as God Himself; and there will be no uncertainty in their minds when they see you as God Himself, -- a face raised to the N^{th} degree of beauty and majesty and character beyond the wildest dream of anything on earth. And, yet, you are God; and they will know it. The day you wear the actual Body of Love, -- any one who sees that will see the most glorious sight in the world.

But the glory of which the Bible speaks is God Himself. "For I will make my glory to pass by; when my glory passes by, I will cover you with my hand" (Exodus 33:22). And then I pass by. So, the "I" is equal to "my glory." "Though you will not see my face; you will see my back, when I pass by." Why? Because. "Only the Son knows who the Father is" (Luke 10:22). So, when Paul speaks of this revelation, he speaks of it in the text that "when it pleased God to reveal His son in me."

When He reveals His son in me, He reveals me as Himself, because "No one knows who the Father is except the Son, and no one knows who the Son is except the Father" (Luke 10:22).

And, so, no one has ever seen God; but the only Son who is in the bosom of the Father, he has made him known, for it takes the Son to reveal me. When God's son stands before you and calls you "Father," then you know who you are. And that son is David. "I will tell of the decree of the Lord, and He said unto me, 'Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee.'"

And the Lord is Jesus Christ Himself. Let no one tell you otherwise. They will tell you, but don't believe them. Jesus Christ is God the Father! And David is the sum total of all the experiences that man has ever had in this world. Take all the generations of men and all their experiences, and fuse them all into a single state. The state personified comes out as God's son, and that is His anointed one called "David."

And David said, "I will tell of the decree of the Lord. He said unto me, 'Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee.'" He stands before you; and from then on, you know the Eternal Son, and the job, so far as you are concerned, is over.

Now you will understand the words: "Return unto me the glory that is mine, the glory that I had with thee before that the world was. Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, for I have accomplished the work thou gavest me to do."

What work did He give me to do? What work did He give you to do? Well, in the world of Caesar, I have been a dancer, I've run an elevator for Macy's, I've filled bins for J. C. Penny; I did all kinds of things. And, then, in 1938 I started telling this story, and I haven't stopped since then; but before 1938 I had many jobs. But they are unimportant, -- it doesn't really matter. The only thing that man has come to do, and must accomplish, is to fulfill the Word of God. And don't be concerned -- you are going to fulfill it, for the simple reason, God fulfills it in you. He has completed it, and He's buried in you. The whole thing is brought to a climax already. It's assured. You cannot fail. No one, in eternity, can fail, because it already has been brought to its climax, and it's finished.

"I have accomplished the work Thou gavest me to do." Now, the One who made that proclamation is buried in us. He is the Pattern Man buried in every man, and that pattern will unfold in man; and every one will be the Lord Jesus Christ. And the Lord Jesus Christ is God the Father! There is no other "God the Father."

The day will come, you will know it, -- you will experience it. And what you know from experience, you know more thoroughly than you know anything else. I can tell you now that you will do it, and I trust you will believe me. I can't persuade you to the point of conviction; but when you have it, it doesn't matter what the whole vast world will say. The whole world could rise in opposition, -- it would make no difference to you, for the evidence has already been given to you.

"And so, when it pleased God," Paul said, "to reveal His Son in me, I conferred not with flesh and blood." (Galatians 1: 16) What man still in the consciousness of being a man of flesh and blood could in any way illuminate it for me? How could he analyze it for me? He would tell you, maybe, that you are suffering from some hallucination.

But the great poet saw it so clearly. Robert Browning, in a poem called "Saul," -- as you know, in Scripture Saul was demented; he was insane. He was the choice of man for a king. Israel said they wanted a king; and then the Lord said unto the Prophet Samuel, Warn them as to the result of wanting a king, that he will enslave them; that he will simply take from them their sons and their daughters and everything, and their money, to keep his kingdom going. But Israel wanted to be like other races and other nations, and she insisted on a king; so Israel selected Saul because of his outer appearance. He was tall and handsome and strong. So, they got exactly what they wanted -- a king. He was insane. He was rejected, and the Lord picked David in his place, and anointed David. And so, from that moment on, the Spirit of God came mightily upon David and never left him, for David was the choice of God, and Saul was the choice of man.

Now, this poem called "Saul" is based upon the 16th chapter of First Samuel, where David is explaining to the demented king the meaning of Messiah and the coming of Messiah. And these are the words of the poet Browning. David stands before Saul, and David makes the statement:

> "O Saul, it shall be
> A Face like my face that receives thee; a Man like to me,'
> Thou shalt love and be loved by, for ever: a Hand like this hand > Shall throw open the gates of new life to thee! See the Christ > stand!"

They called Saul. Here, David stands before the demented king who does not recognize his own son, for you would have to be suffering from amnesia not to know your own son. So, he stands before him and tells him a prophecy and declares: "A Face like my face shall receive thee." What is "my face"? Then he tells him:

" . . . a Man like to me,
Thou shalt love and be loved by, for ever; a Hand like this hand
Shall throw open the gates of new life to thee!"

Now, said he: "See the Christ stand!"

He was the Anointed One. David was the one whom the Lord anointed. He said, "That is he. Rise and anoint him." (First Samuel 16:12) And from that moment on, the Spirit of God never left David.

David is the sum total of all the generations of man and all their experiences fused into a single being and personified. And that is the resultant state of our experiences in this world of sin and death.

So, really, in the end, there is only God. And God is Jesus Christ. There is no "other" God. So, let no one scare you. Your salvation has already been predestined. You are already redeemed because you have already been predestined. Predestined glory; and glory is nothing more than the magnifying -- "making Self many." So, each becomes the Face of God, every one knowing that he is God, and every one knowing that the other -- his brother -- is God. And there is nothing but God!

So, God is made up of the brotherhood behind all the masks, -- whether they be male or female, -- is the brother; and that brother is God. We are the sons of God that God redeemed and brought to glory. "He is bringing many sons to glory," as we are told in the second chapter of the Book of Hebrews: bringing us all to glory, and "glory" is Himself. So, He is bringing us all to be one with Himself, because there cannot be two Gods, -- only the one God. And, so, you are destined to be that God!

I can't tell you the thrill that is in store for you the night that it happens. And when it comes, it comes so suddenly, -- as told you in Scripture,"just like a thief in the night." (First Thessalonians 5:2) No preparation for it! You go to bed feeling just the normal person that you are; not overly proud of what you have done, not ashamed beyond measure, but you wish it was a better sort of a day. You wish you hadn't entertained the thoughts you did that day; but in spite of your uncleanliness in your own eyes, and maybe even in the eyes of others, it was the moment in time that was ripe, and God chose you at that moment in time.

So, He chose us. We didn't choose ourselves. He calls us when that stone is ready to be inserted into the Body of the Living Temple. But while we are here in this world, to cushion the blows, -- and only to cushion the blows, -- He has given us a Law. And the Law is simple -- very simple. And the Law is:

Imagining creates reality.

It's a simple, simple law. These are my words, but I only take them from Scripture -- based upon Scriptural words: "Whatever you desire, believe that you have, and you shall." (Mark 11:24) So, putting it into my words, I say: "Therefore, imagining creates reality."

I have to imagine. So, if I imagine now that I am what, at the moment that I imagine it, reason denies and my senses deny, -- if the Scripture is true and I persist in that imaginal state, it shall become a fact. Well, having tried it, -- and it works, -- I share that knowledge with others.

Know what you want. Try not to hurt another. It doesn't really matter about "others." Others will aid you in the birth of that assumption.

So, you assume that you are the man that you want to be, though at the moment of your assumption reason denies it and your senses deny it. But you dare to assume it and persist in that assumption; and your assumption, though false, if persisted in, will harden into fact.

So, you cushion the blows in this world while you wait for the Call. But the Call will come. You can't rush it. Everything comes in time. We are all called according to His purpose; and when the "stone" that you represent is ready in His eyes, -- not because of your fitness, but because that is the time for it to be incorporated into the Body of the Risen Lord, you will be called. And you will tell the story that I am telling. And you will have the same reception: some will believe you, and some will disbelieve you. Don't stop to persuade those who disbelieve you. Encourage those who do, that they too may be called. On the other hand, you can't promise them that tonight will be the night or tomorrow night. "No one knows the hour," (Matthew 25:13) -- only the Father.

So, they will be called in the Father's good time. But you cam tell every one they will be called. I can tell that to a Hitler, if he stood before me with his hands dripping in blood, as they are. If I told it to a Stalin, who was a monster on earth: "You will be called," I am not sanctifying or justifying his behavior as a man, -- no. But I can say that the Being behind the "mask" that is a Stalin, that is a Hitler, is God; and in the end, God forgives all, He said, "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do." (Luke 23:34)

But you, knowing now what you do know, -- you can play this game beautifully, all in love. All you do is follow the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." (Luke 6:31) You can't go wrong! You can't go wrong. If any one asks you to hear that some one is dead that he may get their estate, that is not what you want done to you; therefore you would not accept that request. "Go elsewhere, but don't come to me." But if they ask you to help them hear that they have a fortune, or that they are secure, or that they are contributing to the world's good, believe them, because I would like to do those things myself. Who wouldn't want to be secure? Who wouldn't want to feel that he contributes to the good of his environment? -- to the good of his country? Any one wants to feel that. Therefore, if the request was along that line, believe it when you hear it. So, dare to assume that they have what they now request; and if you persist in that assumption, they will get it. You don't have to concern yourself as to how they are going to get it.

A friend of mine wrote me concerning my book, "Feeling Is The Secret"; that we never get what we want, we only get what we are. Well, he knows if he reads the book carefully that you can make what you want what you are, by an assumption. I start with a want. Yes; I want to be. By the mere saying that I want to be, I am confessing that I am not. Well, if I dare to assume that I am what reason tells me that I am not until that wanting ceases to be, because I feel that I am it, -- before I have the evidence to testify and to bear witness to it, I must precede it by an assumption that I am it.

When you know what you want, you are told in Scripture, "Believe that you have received it, and you will." That follows' your daring mood to believe that you are what, at the moment, reason denies that you are. So, I would not go back on what I have said in that book. I maintain, I've said it correctly: that you do not get what you want, only what you are. Through what you want to be, you can live to be what you are. Assuming it long before there is evidence to support that assumption, then the evidence will come like the fruit coming out of a tree. If you do not know the nature of the tree, wait until the tree is bearing; and when it bears, all arguments vanish, for the fruit will tell you what the tree is. So, all of a sudden, things will happen, based upon what you are.

You don't have to will it. No; people are always trying to will things into being. It is not done wilfully, nor even care-fully. People gather around themselves everything, and they call themselves "careful operators," -- taking advantage of. No! It is simply the core of integrity. You come right down to: Am I really that? Am I really serious? Well, if I am serious, I should see it all day long as I walk the earth.

My friends know me as I am now. Any change in me, they will see the change; they will hear it through the grapevine, if suddenly something happens to Neville. Whatever happens, one friend will tell another friend, and the other will tell another, and then finally they all will become aware of changes in me.

Well, now, let the change take place in me first, that I may see them in my mind's eye. Today I see my wife. She knows all the things that are taking place in me. Any change in me, she observes it. A change in my fortunes, she knows it. If the bank deposit goes down, she knows it, -- she keeps the books.

If it goes up, she knows that. If I get a big dividend check one year, she knows it. If the next year, they perhaps don't give a check -- they simply pass it, she knows it. So, anything that happens to me so far as my fortunes go, she knows it. Now, would I like to change that and see it tripled? Well, assume that it already has been deposited and is tripled. Well, now, let me think of my wife. Wouldn't she see it in me? Wouldn't she know it? Certainly, she would. Well, I assume that she knows it. I let her see me as she would have to see me if it were true. And, so, another feeling.

Now, in the course of a day, am I going to go back on that? I think of her whether she is physically present; or if she is absent, I think of her. So, when I think of her, would she see me in that change? She would. Well, then, let me be constant in myself. Let me be constant to that change in me until it becomes the very core of integrity. I am faithful to that change in me; and I use her, and use my friends, as the barometer to register the changes that I have tried to produce in myself. So, if I produce them, they would reflect it. If they are not reflected, I have not succeeded in producing in me the necessary change.

If I succeed in producing the change in me, they should reflect it. So, I will not go back on what I have said: You don't get what you want, -- you get what you are. But take what you want and make it what you are. Let go of what the present state is, and put that in its place as a substitution.

It's called in Scripture, -- I call it "revision," but Scripture speaks of it as "repentance"; but unfortunately the word "repentance" has been misused. It originally meant, and still does mean, what the ancients intended that it should mean. Originally it meant a radical change of mind. It wasn't remorse. You don't go down and be remorseful and regretful. That has not a thing to do with the word "repent." "Repentance" is a radical change of attitude towards yourself, towards the world; and to the degree that you succeed in changing that attitude towards yourself, and therefore the world -- to that degree, the world will change to reflect that, -- all taking place within you.

So, you make what-you-want what-you-come now and then into a sense of being, for whatever I am, I am going to raise it. I am going to expel it into my world.

So, here, you are predestined to be glorified; and when you are glorified, it is because God at that moment of glorification has succeeded in giving you Himself. That is why we are told in Scripture: "The law came through Moses, but grace and truth came through Jesus Christ." (John 1:17)

"Grace" is God's unmerited, unearned gift of Himself to you. That's Grace. You don't earn it, and you certainly do not merit it. It is God's unmerited gift of Himself to you. So, Grace comes through Jesus Christ. And the Truth comes through Jesus Christ. We talked a bit last night about Truth. Truth: He said: "I am the truth, I am the way, I am the life." (John 14:6) He is the Pattern Man.

So, when Paul writes his Letter to Timothy, he says: "Hold fast to the pattern of true words which you have heard from me." (Second Timothy 1:13, Revised Standard Version) I have given you the pattern of the true words. Now, read his letters, because they came first in the Bible. They preceded the Gospels -- preceded everything else in the New Testament. They came first by twenty-five or thirty years. He tells us to hold onto these patterns "that I have given you." There is no other pattern. There is no other way to the Father, other than this pattern "that I have given you." Now, read it carefully, and you will find the pattern.

When it unfolds in you, you ask yourself: Who is Paul? Just who is he? He is named in Scripture, but he is not named in any book of the First Century outside of the Bible. Well, how would a person like Paul go through all that he claimed that he did? He was imprisoned in Rome, -- imprisoned in all these places all through the Near East, and yet there is no record of his imprisonment, -- not any record outside of the Bible! If he was imprisoned, and we take it literally, then the record ought to be there, for these records were kept. Yet his name is not mentioned in one book in the First Century outside of the Bible. So, who is Paul? He is you!

He was first named Saul. When that amnesia fades and then memory returns, you are God!. God is a father; and as a father, He has a son, and His son is David of Scripture. So, when memory returns, you recognize your son, and you don't have to ask him: "Whose son are you, young man?"

You see, his first name was Saul, of the same tribe of Benjamin, a descendant of Abraham; the same identical descent and background of Saul the king in the Old Testament is that of Paul in the New. They name him, but the name has changed now. A radical change took place in him from Saul -- from asking, for Saul means "to ask." [Saul asks David, "Whose son are you?"] So, if I put my daughter before me or my son before me and ask them: "Tell me, whose children are you? I can't remember." well, am I not insane? Am I not suffering from amnesia?

So, Saul looked into the face of the Only Begotten Son, -- and he is supposed to be the king, and he doesn't recognize his son. He can't, because his name is Saul. Now, his name is transferred from Saul to Paul, and Paul knows the Son. "And it pleased God to reveal His Son in me, and I conferred not with flesh and blood." (Galatians 1:16)

So, we all pass through the identical pattern; and the pattern will come to you; and suddenly when it appears, may I tell you? it's like something coming out of the blue. And there is no uncertainty as to the relationship between you -- the Father, and the Son -- who is David. And the Son sets you free. You are told: "You are free indeed" (John 8:33), for he has promised to set the father free -- the father of the one who destroyed the enemy of Israel. And David destroyed the enemy, the Philistine giant, Goliath. And having destroyed him, the king is looking for his father, and he asks him, "Whose son are you, young man?" because the king did not know his own son; therefore, he is still waiting -- waiting -- waiting.

When the king's mind returns, he is no longer Saul; his name is Paul. And then Paul recognizes the Son. "And it pleased the Father to reveal His son in me, and from that moment on, I conferred not with flesh and blood." (Galatians 1:16) What man on the face of this earth would I go to, and ask him to explain to me the meaning of this experience of mine when David called me "Father"?

If I want to the most outstanding psychiatrist, psychologist, -- call him by any name in this world; he wouldn't understand it. What on earth would they know about this mystery of Christianity when, to them, every thing is sex? They will tell you, you are simply disturbed sexually, or something, because that is all they have put it on, the Freudian concepts of life, -- some sex complex. It hasn't a thing to do with sex. It is the vision returning, and suddenly memory returns; and there is no uncertainty as to the relationship between you, the Father, and the Son who calls you "Father."

All you can do, then, is simply go and tell it, and try to change somewhat the prefabricated misconceptions of Scripture. For the whole vast world -- if you are a Christian, as I was born and raised one, -- I was taught to believe that Jesus was the Son. My Mother never taught me that Jesus was the Father! When I went to school, they never taught me that Jesus Christ was God the Father. It happened; and when it happened, I knew it, because in Scripture, David calls him,,"my Lord." David calls him, "my Father." "If David calls him, 'my Father,' how, then, could he be David's son?" (Matthew 22:45)

So, here is the story. He unfolds within you; and the whole thing is contained within you. It was God's purpose in the beginning to give Himself to you, as though there were no others in the world, -- just you and God; and then eventually, only God, -- and God is you!

Just before I came up, a friend of mine who has a wonderful in-current eye, -- an in-current eye is the eye that actually sees inward into the world of thought, into Eternity. And that eye is ever expanding within the bosom of God. So, an in-current state is that which gives passage to a current flowing inward, like a sponge giving passage to a current flowing inward. And she said, "I came in vision into a place and I wanted to borrow some money. It was like a loan company. And I went in to the owner, who was also Chairman of the Board. I went to the door, and as I came through the door, there you stood behind the desk. All the papers on the desk, and you were the owner and the Chairman of the Board. And I became almost hysterical, because I knew that whatever I asked of you would be granted. You were Infinite Love, and granted every request ever made of you. No collateral, -- just ask. And I said, 'He is a victim of his own love'; to myself I said it, not to you. I looked at you, and I knew you would not say "No" to my request, no matter how fabulous it was. I also knew that you were a victim of your own love. When I went out from where I saw you in the role of Love, I met a woman who was distraught and she was downcast; and she was at her very wits' end. She had tried every place in the world to get a loan, and was turned down. And here she came. Her last resort was to come here; and I smiled to myself because I knew she was going to go through that door and she would get it, and then I woke."

Well, that is the God-in-you. He grants every wish that you ask. But when you ask, ask believing. If you ask believing, you will get it. As we told you last night, when you ask believing, it's nothing more than the subjective appropriation of the objective hope. What do I wish for as an objective fact? Well, the subjective appropriation of the objective hope is prayer. And it never fails you!

So, tonight when you go out, go in the deep conviction that you are predestined to be glorified, and know that the glorification of which the Bible speaks is God's gift of Himself to you. He doesn't give you His son as a companion. He gives you His son by giving Himself to you. For if you are God, and God is a father, I must be the father of God's son! So, God gives me His son as my son; and in that way, I know I am He.

So, I am told: "Unless you believe that I am he, you will die in your sins." (John 8:24) And you will know it, and won't have reason even to believe it, because you have an assured "I know" after the experience.

---oOo---

S.F.

PRE-EXISTENCE

16 July 1969 San Francisco

Tonight's subject is: "Pre-Existence." For every child born of woman, there is a "son" of God in the heavens, who is his ancestral Self. He is buried in you. He is the Reality of man. The Bible speaks of this "son" as Jesus Christ, the true identity of every child born of woman.

"God became man, that man may become God." [Blake, from "Jerusalem"

What we read in the Bible concerning Jesus is all about you. It's your biography. The Old Testament is the prophetic blueprint of the life of Jesus, and the story of Jesus as told in the New Testament, which is the fulfillment of the Old, is your story. And the day will come when you will experience everything recorded in the New Testament concerning Jesus Christ, -- but everything. This is the great mystery of our being.

We are not some little product of evolution, as many teach today. We didn't come out of some little amoeba. You are the emanation of a son of God! As we are told in the Book of Deuteronomy, the 32d chapter:

> "The Lord has set bounds to the peoples > according to the number of the sons of God."

Today they are speaking of curtailing the reproduction of humanity, limiting the births of men. Then we are told, not one child could be born, were it not for a son of God who is the life of that child. For He has actually "set bounds to the peoples according to the number of the sons of God." Read it in the 8th verse, the 32d chapter, of Deuteronomy.

You couldn't breathe as a child, were it not that God is within you. And then you say, "I am," -- that's Him. That is the Son of God; and the Son of God is one with God. "I and my Father are one."

"I came out from the Father, and I have come into the world. Again, I am leaving the world and going to the Father."

Isn't that pre-existence? I came out from the Father, and I have come into the world. Again, I am leaving the world, and I am going to the Father. But I will not leave this world -- this earth -- until I awake as Jesus Christ.

Now, this world does not terminate at the point where my senses cease to register it. I can't follow a friend who goes beyond through the gate we call "death." And I think he is gone from the world. He hasn't gone from any world! He is in this world! "This world" does not cease to be when my senses cease to touch it -- to register it.

He is in a world terrestrial, just like this, in a garment clothed as these "garments" [indicating the physical body] are, of flesh and blood. And he passes through similar conditions; and the One within, Who is the Son of God, he is guiding him, sending him through all the "furnaces of affliction" that are necessary to awaken him as Himself. And the son of God is the Power of God and the Wisdom of God," as told us in the first chapter of Corinthians:

"Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." [I Cor. 1:24]

So, in the end, there is only God, and everything is the expansion of God. Now here is a Psalm, considered the most difficult Psalm of the hundred and fifty. It is the 82d. What is currently considered the best interpretation of Scripture is the Interpreter's Bible. It comes in twelve volumes and four extra in the form of a dictionary -- 16 volumes of around a thousand pages to a volume. A perfectly marvelous work! In this it says that "in truth we do not know very much about this Psalm. We can only hope that we are not far away from the truth."

Well, the most scholarly of all Biblical criticisms we find in a book called "The Encyclopedia Biblica." The one who is the head of the Hebraic section of that, and also one of the editors of the entire work, Thomas Chaney, speaking of this Psalm says, "This is the most difficult Psalm for the scholar, that the meaning might have been understood." It might have been in some strange way something that some one at one time understood. "But I must confess that none of us understand it today." Now, this is Thomas Chaney. At the time that he edited this work back in the end of the last Century, it was considered then -- and still is today -- the most scholarly of all the higher forms of Scriptural criticism. Now this is the story. This is what it says:

"God has taken His place in the Divine Council." This literally means in the congregation of the gods. God has taken His place in the congregation of gods, and now God speaks. In the midst of them, now, He is holding judgment.

> I say, "Ye are gods,
> sons of the Most High, all of you;
> nevertheless, you will die like men,
> and fall as one man, O Princes."

God stands in the congregation of His sons. All the sons make up God. The word translated here as "God" is the word "Elohim." It's a plural word. It is also translated in the plural, "gods."

"God has taken His place in the Divine Council," -- that word is "Elohim." "In the midst of the gods He holds judgment," -- that word "gods" is "Elohim," the same word.

But the scholars can't quite understand. Here we have the word "Elohim," and it's defined in the singular; and then a little farther on it's defined in the plural, "gods."

He has taken His place in the congregation of the gods. He is in the midst of the gods now; He is holding judgment. And now He speaks to the gods. He tells them that they are sons of the Most High -- all of them, but every one. Nevertheless, they will die, -- "die like men, and fall as one man, O Princes."

Do you know who He is speaking to? He is speaking to you! We are the "gods" who came down into the world of "death," and took upon ourselves the limit of contraction, which is man, and experienced "death."

Then we are told in the Letter to the Philippians: "Jesus, though he was in the form of God, ... He emptied Himself, and took upon himself the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of men. And being found in human form he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even death upon the cross." [Philippians 2:6-8]

Well, this [indicating the physical body] is the only "cross" that Jesus ever "wore." The human form is the cross of God! He humbled himself. In what way? He took upon himself the form of a slave. No matter how powerful a man is in this world, -- if I owned the earth, and if every one in this world is a slave of mine, I have no power to command any one to perform the natural functions of my body for me. I am a slave of the body that I "wear." Every function of my body that is natural must be performed for the body by the being -- called a living form. I myself must perform it! I must eat and assimilate; and what I can't assimilate, I must eliminate. And no one in the world an do it for me. I am a slave of the body that I "wear." So, "he took upon himself the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of men. And finding himself in human form, he humbled himself," -- that's his humility, -- "and became obedient unto death," -- everything here dies. Everything in this world dies. No matter what it is, it comes in, it waxes, it wanes, and it disappears. No matter how well it is made or how old -- four thousand years old -- things are destined to vanish from the face of this earth. Everything comes, it waxes, it wanes, it vanishes. This is the world of "death"into which God came, for one purpose: to expand His creative power, His wisdom.

We are the gods that came down! And you say, "I am"? That's He. "That is His name forever." Your own wonderful human imagination is God! And there is no other god. In every form, regardless of appearances -- the same God. No difference, because God is one, though He appears as many. One in many; that's the word "Elohim," -- a compound unity, one made up of others. But the scholars cannot understand this statement:

> "God has taken His place in the Divine Council;
> in the midst of the gods He holds judgment."

And now He speaks:

> "I say, Ye are gods,
> sons of the Most High, all of you;
> nevertheless, you shall die -- die like men,
> and fall as one man, O Princes."

Just one man fell, carrying with him all!

As told in Scripture, "He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world. And one man fell into division; and we have all the races, all the nations, all the religions; and yet all are contained in one. And we will remain on earth until we are called, one by one, back into that body; but this time when we are called, the body that is resurrected, -- going back one by one to incorporate into that same one body that fell. And what a glorious reunion because of the experience of "death"! He comes into the world of "death" and conquers it. He has overcome death. Here everything dies, and yet he overcomes everything in this world. It is a world of "death."

So, the Bible is your own wonderful biography. Jesus Christ is the true identity of every child born of woman. A little child comes out of the womb and you see it; the reality of that child is Jesus Chris Hold it in your hands -- you are holding that child that is Jesus Chris in your hands! But that child, to leave this world of "death," has to be "born again."

The "second birth" is not reincarnation. It hasn't a thing to do with reincarnation. We are born first "from below," -- from the womb of woman. We are born the second time from the skull of man. By "man," I mean generic man. "Male female made he them, and called their name Man." Read that in Scripture: "Male female made He them, and called their name Man," -- capitalized. I speak of generic Man. The "second birth" is out of the skull of man, not from the womb of woman. The womb of woman brings us all in slavery, forming "garments" that leave man in slavery. I am the slave of this "garment" until I take it off.

And if tonight I am not "born from above," I will find myself, if you call me "dead," restored to life in a world just like this, but young -- about 20 years of age. I do not go through the womb of woman any more. I am found in a world terrestrial, just like this, where I grow older, as I do here; where I struggle to make a living as I do her where I have friends and enemies, as I have here; where I am weaving a garment of joy and woe, as I weave it here. I will "die" there, as I die here, and be restored once more into, once more, a lovely young bod resembling this, only about 20 years of age, in an environment best suited for the work yet to be done in me. And I will repeat that until that moment in time when He Who made the decision to enter "death's door" awakens within me. And when He awakens within me, I am He! And who then am I? Jesus Christ! There is no other. "I and my Father are one."

So, "No one takes away my life. I lay it down myself. I have the power to lay it down, and the power to lift it up again."

Yet in spite of these statements in the Book of John, we find through the ages many people speaking of a race of people called the Jews who crucified Jesus! It's not so. Haven't you read the Bible ca fully? Read these words in Paul:

"I have been crucified with God. It is not I who live, but Chris who lives in me; and the life I now live in the flesh I live by faith of the Son of God who loves me, and gave Himself for me."

Here the Son of God emanating is the being in man; and He so love His emanation that He entered "death's door" -- the human skull, and freed His emanation. And He laid down in the grave with me -- the human skull -- and there He dreams the dream of life as I am dreaing i now, until I awake; and when I awake, we aren't two -- we are one. "I am He."

Every one will awake. Every one returns to the Father out of Whi they came; and returning to the Father, they are the Father.

So, I came out from the Father, and I came into the world. I ca and I am leaving again, and I am going to the Father. That is the sto of every child born of woman. So, let them be; they are having a drea -- some dreams, noble dreams; some dreams, ignoble dreams; but in the end, we are all being called; and all will be justified; for, as we ar told in the 8th chapter of the Book of Romans:

SF

"Those whom He foreknew He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son; and those whom He predestined, He also called; and those whom He called, He also justified; and those whom He justified, He also glorified."

There is the complete predestination. So, He justified. What is "justification"? Divine acquittal, for this is a "play." This whole vast world is a play, and you and I are playing our parts; and these parts are forever. We leave the "parts" behind. And we are the actors playing; the part is left behind.

I have seen at least twelve "Hamlets." And no two actors interpreted Hamlet alike. Yet, they use the same words. I recall seeing my last Hamlet played by Richard Burton; and he played it adorably, and he stepped upon the stage wearing a pair of grey slacks, the color of the slacks I am wearing now. And he had a black pullover shirt with short sleeves; and he played the entire "Hamlet" in that same costume: grey slacks and black pullover shirt. And he gave an entirely different meaning to the familiar passages of Shakespeare. It's the same "Hamlet"! He came out on cue, and he departed on cue; and every one entered on cue and departed on cue. But he, the central figure -- Hamlet -- he gave an entirely different interpretation to the passages with which you and I are familiar.

When he spoke to his mother -- and in that passage he says to the mother, -- and you know this; it's a familiar one: "Assume a virtue if you have it not." Well, I have heard that time and again when it was treated seriously. He didn't He treated it lightly, because he didn't believe she could ever assume a virtue. She had poisoned his father, and she now marries his uncle; and he despised her. And he says to her satirically as he sees her coming, "Oh, assume a virtue if you have it not." He didn't believe for one moment she could ever assume a virtue! So, he took the identical words that other "Hamlets" took and gave it an entirely different meaning.

So, you are playing a part, and you are allowed to interpret the part; but you came in on cue and you will depart on cue; and in spite of what our wise men called doctors today are telling us that they can prolong life -- they are not prolonging life -- you were born on time, as told you in the 3d chapter of the Book of Ecclesiastes:

> "A time to be born, a time to die;
> a time to laugh, a time to cry;" . . .

There is not a thing new under the sun. The play is finished.

It is being said about the landing on the moon: "See? This has never happened before." It has been in ages past, but there is no remembrance of former things. We have a little memory -- no remembrance of former things; nor shall there be any remembrance of things that will come later among those who come after. We think it is all now, like a play.

You go to a play tonight. I saw a play last night. But to you, these are all new, and you'll laugh tonight, as I did the night before. And you'll cry, as I cried the night before. And you will think it is all new as the whole thing unfolds before your eyes; and I saw it the night before. And this is a marvelous "play" in which we are cast for a purpoge. There is a purpose behind the entire thing.

So, we are not little beings that began. I began humanly almost 65 years ago? No, -- I came out from the Father, and the Father has no beginning -- no father, no mother, no genealogy. He is without gender, without number. I came out from that Source that has no origin It is the Origin of all! And I came into a world that seems to begin and end. That is how God expands Himself. He takes upon Himself the limit of contraction -- the limit of opacity; that, having reached the limit, He can again begin to expand. There is no limit to expansion, and no limit to translucency. So, He sends part of Himself off to go beyond what He was only by first reaching the limit of contraction. And that is how God is perpetually expanding Himself. And we are the "sons of God." But it takes all the "sons" to make God!

So, when we are gathered one by one back into that resurrected form -- the Risen Lord, we do not lose our identity. I will know you in Eternity. Do you know why? I knew you before you put on this "mask," And you came into this world and put on this mask. I can't see behind the mask; it's like a masquerade -- a great ball. And here my most intimate friend is wearing a mask, and I don't see him. He's wearing a black face, or he's wearing a white face, or he's wearing a yellow face; but he is wearing a face that I don't recognize. I can't recognize him at all. But behind the "mask" is my brother that I knew in Eternity, and I will know once more when he awakens from the dream of life and I awaken from the dream of life.

We return to the same form, improved beyond measure, for we came out of the world of "death," having deliberately, consciously entered the world of "death." And every one has a part they play in this world, into which we all volunteered when we came.

No one can take away my life. I laid it down myself. I have the power to lay it down, and the power to lift it up again; and no one takes it from me! We deliberately came down into this world to play these parts that we may expand our consciousness beyond what it was prior to our descent into this world. For:

"No one can ascend into heaven who did not first descend from heaven."

I could not emerge from the tomb, were I not in it. I could not emerge from this world of "death," did I not first descend into it. For: "No one can ascend but he who first descended, even the Son of Man."

So, the "Son of Man" is a name for the "Son of God." And that "S of God" you are!

So, whoever you are -- if you bear the name of John, or some other name, your real name is Jesus. Because when you come out, He gives you a name that is above every name; and any name other than Jesus on earth and in heaven shall bow and confess Jesus is heir to the Glory of God the Father. And you are that Being! And there never was another. Jesus is the true identity of every child born of woman. And Jesus-in-you is your own wonderful human imagination. That's Jesus.

Now, in this world you can test it. You can test it, because he is the power of God and the wisdom of God. How do I test it? I dare to assume that I am what reason denies, and walk in the assumption that I am that; and if I persist in that assumption, it will harden into fact. And if "by Him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made, and then suddenly I am confronted with the thing itself, having assumed that it is, and I assumed it when reason denied the fact, haven't I found Him? If "by Him all things are made," and I dare to assume what my senses deny and reason denies it; and yet I persist in the assumption, and then eventually it hardens into fact, -- well, did I not find the One Who makes things? And if "by Him all things are made, and without Him was not anything made that is made," and I have found exactly how I did it, -- and I did it by simply assuming that I am what I would like to be, even though at the moment of my assumption everything denies that I could possibly be that, and then I became that, -- well then, I have found Jesus.

I only assumed that I was what my reason denied. How did I do it? By imagining. I have found my imagination to be the Lord Jesus; but eventually I will awaken as the Lord Jesus. How do I know? I know from experience that everything recorded in Scripture concerning Jesus, I have experienced -- everything, -- I don't care what it is.

I "wear" this "cross"; and may I tell you? when you and I were crucified on these "crosses," it was sheer ecstacy. It was not painful at all, in spite of what the churches teach. It was sheer ecstacy when I felt myself "nailed" upon this "cross." There were whirling vortices: each hand a vortex, my head a vortex, each foot a vortex, my right side a vortex. And here are these six vortices, and I can't describe the ecstacy -- sheer joy -- when this night I relived the moment of the crucifixion. No one nailed me upon a wooden cross. This [indicating the physical body] is the "cross." And I did it deliberately. Then memory faded. I am in a world of "death."

So the crucifixion was not a painful act. It was a delightful act deliberately taken by God when He actually nailed Himself by vortices upon the cross of man. Now you go through all the parts, and then comes the moment that you are about to depart this world for the last time; and that begins your resurrection. And your resurrection is a glorious thing. It really is.

You awake to find yourself completely sealed in your skull. Your skull is a tomb, and you find yourself waking from a long, long sleep. You have no memory as to who put you there, but you know your skull is a tomb; and there you are in a tomb, but the tomb is your skull! And you awake, and you stand up in your skull, a being just as you are. And not a thing is in that skull but you! Not a thing is in it.

And now, you have one consuming desire, and that is to get out, and you have an innate wisdom as to what you should do; and you push the base of your skull, and something gives. It rolls away, leaving a little opening. Then you put your head through, and you squeeze yourself out inch by inch, like a child coming out of a womb -- only instead of this being the womb of another, it's the skull of your own being! You are "born from above." And all of the imagery of Scripture now surrounds you. Here the "wise men," -- normal men as you are, seated where there is the body out of which you came; and these three are the witnesses of your "birth." They can't see you because you are now spirit, but they know who was born. And one will say -- calling you by name, -- in my case they say, "It is Neville's child." They find a little infant wrapped in swaddling clothes lying on the floor; and they announce whose child it is. In my case, one of them said, "It is Neville's baby."

The other two, in the most incredible voices, asked: "How could Neville have a baby?"

He doesn't argue the point; he just displays the evidence. And I took the evidence -- the infant wrapped in swaddling clothes, and held it in my arms, and I said, "How is my sweetheart?" And then the whole thing began to dissolve, and I awoke upon my bed.

Here, this unearthly wind is present all along. The wind is the spirit, for the words "wind" and "spirit" are the same in Hebrew and in Greek. This unearthly wind is there through the entire drama.

Then everything said in Scripture concerning Jesus begins to unfold, and it unfolds in one thousand two hundred and sixty days, as told us both in Revelation and in the Book of Daniel. And here four mighty acts take place, and you are the central figure in the drama.

You can hardly believe that something unnumbered centuries ago could be so accurate concerning a blueprint -- a blueprint of salvation Every one will pass through the same technique, the same drama; and every one will awaken as the Lord Jesus Christ! And because there aren't two -- only one, all will be gathered together into "one body, one spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all," who is above it all, through all, and in all. Only one, all gathered without loss of identity, and all are the father of that one son which comes into your experience in the second act. In the second act he stands before you and calls you, "Father"; and you know you are his father, and he knows he is your son; and there is no uncertainty as to the relationship between you and the son, who is the Son of God. So, only through the Son will you ever know Who-You-Really-Are.

In this world you may have many sons and many daughters; but there is only one Son that comes through as God's Son. And you are the father of that Son. And only when He stands before you and calls you, "Father," do you really know Who-You-Are.

So, in the end, every one returns to the Father as the Father! And you and I are one Being when we return from this division, which is for a purpose. So, we are pre-existent beings. You did not begin in the womb of your earthly mother, and you do not end in the grave when some one puts you there in the not-distant future. Don't be afraid; you've gone there unnumbered times! But you are only born twice: once through the womb of woman, and once through the skull of man -- generic man.

"Unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven."

"You, a master of Israel, and yet you do not know, Nicodemus, that unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven?"

No, he didn't know that; yet he was a member of the Sanhedrin. This is like saying today that he is a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church, -- a priest of the church, if he didn't know it, any more than they today know it, or the Pope knows it. Until it happens in them, they cannot speak from experience. And I am not theorizing, and I am not speculating; I am telling you what I know from my own experience. I also know that every one will have the experience, and no one will fail, or God would fail, and that's impossible.

All His sons came down, for He gathered them all together in Himself; and not one child can be born in this world who does not have as an ancestor a son of God, who comes with him. And that Son of God cannot give up.

Now, Scripture tells us in so many lovely ways. John does not tell the story of the birth as Luke tells it and as Matthew tells it, but John is the most profound of all the Gospels. John tells it, but he tells it in symbolism that is not understood by the people. He tells it in the form of the skull. It is called Golgotha. "Golgotha" means "skull." When they laid him in the tomb, the tomb was empty, but the linen clothes were there; and lying near the linen clothes, but not with them, was the napkin. Well, John wrote the most profound mystical doctrine. He is telling it in symbolism for those who understand.

The "linen clothes" are called by all mystics the "garment" -- this garment of flesh and blood -- that which the female wove for man. So, the body was there out of which the spirit ascended. Then what is the "linen cloth"? The "linen cloth" -- that is the body. Then what is the "napkin"? In the ancient world "napkin" has a far greater number of meanings than today. Today a "napkin" means -- we speak of a dinner napkin, a cocktail napkin, a sanitary napkin. But in the ancient world "napkin" meant the afterbirth -- the placenta, that which is not part of the body -- after the birth, but it must be ejected from the body. And so, it's not part of the body after something that is born. So, after the Lord is born, that is only the sign of His birth. So, the "napkin" was not found with the "linen clothes." It was found apart from the "linen clothes." Those who understand symbolism will know what John is trying to tell the reader; that a birth took place -- where? In the skull, for this is a description of the skull.

They came to Golgotha where he was buried. He was crucified in Golgotha, and he was buried on Golgotha, and he rose from the same tomb in which he was buried; and it's Golgotha, which means the skull! "Skull" means the "cranium." "Calvary" is the skull. So, here you find two objects; the body, symbolized as the "linen clothes"; and then you find the symbol of the birth, and that was the "napkin." Well, the napkin simply was the afterbirth, signifying to those who understood symbolism what took place in that skull. A birth took place, but he who was born is now Spirit, and mortal eyes cannot see Spirit. God is Spirit. And you aren't going to see the wonderful form, -- it is God being born! You will only see the "garment" out of which He was born.

So, he came into the world and took the "cross" and remains in this world. Unnumbered times he passes through the gate called "death," and is restored in a similar body to continue the struggle until the end; and at the very end, then he is born -- "born from above." And that "birth from above" is God being born!

"Unto you this day, in the City of David, God is born," -- a Saviour is born; and the "Saviour" in Scripture is the Lord.

"I am the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, -- your Saviour; and beside Me there is no Saviour." The only saviour to be born would be the Lord God Jehovah. So, the Saviour is born; but they can't believe. They see the form out of which He came, and they see the evidence of the birth when they see the napkin. So, John, the most profound of the Evangelists, told it in his own wonderful unique way.

When you read it now in the Book of Luke and in the Book of Matthew, it is told so clearly to a normal birth that people have confused it with the natural birth from the womb of woman. It hasn't a thing to do with the womb of woman, for that bears all beings into slavery. Every child coming through the womb of a woman is bearing the cross of the slave; but when you come out of the skull of man, you are now free from the world of "death," and it is God that is born!

So, you came from the Father, and you came into the world. Again, you will one day leave this world of "death" and return to the Father. But when you return, you -- the Creative Power of God and the Wisdom of God -- have been expanded beyond the wildest dreams. You are then truly glorifying God. And you can say, as in the 17th of John: "I have finished the work Thou gavest me to do. Now glorify Thou me with Thine own Glory, with the Self that I had with Thee before that the world was.

If I had this "Glory with Thee before that the world was," isn't that pre-existence? I am asking now, having emptied myself of my Glory to perform this work in the world of "death," -- I am asking now to return to that which I gave up in order to come down into the world of death.

I cannot pretend that I am here. I don't pretend that I am a man. I took upon myself all the weaknesses and all the limitations of man. If I came into this world knowing I was God all along, I could not accomplish anything. I had to completely empty myself of my Father in order to fulfill the plan. If I came knowing --well, I could do anything if I knew the power of God; but I had to completely empty myself.

When I say, "I," I am speaking collectively -- all of us. So, we are not pretending that we are men. We had to actually become man in this state called "death," and "wear" the "cross" of man -- not pretending, but actually feel it so we could cry on the cross: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" I can so completely forget Who-I-Am that I cry out to a god other than my Self as though there were such a god, and ask him, "Why did you forsake me?" proving I did not pretend I was a man. I had to actually become a man and completely forget that I was God, and empty myself before I could become man.

You are a pre-existent being, but at the moment you are not yet aware of it. I hope it is not too far from now that you will awake and have all the experiences of which I have spoken that I have experienced. I speak from experience. The story of Jesus is the story of humanity. And one day, every one -- every child born of woman -- will have that experience of Jesus and know he himself is the Lord Jesus Christ!

SF

(Following the Silence):

QUESTION BY A LADY: You have told us that when we leave this segment of time, we are restored to another world just like this one. Do we come back and play these parts again?

NEVILLE: No; you have played them. But "Hamlet" remains after Burton played the part, to be played by other actors who will interpret it a little differently. When Blake made that statement that seems to confuse so many scholars -- he said, "Many suppose that before Creation, all was solitude and chaos." He said, "That is the most pernicious idea that could enter the mind of man, for it takes away all sublimity from the Bible . . . . . and makes the one who entertains the thought" a little groveling worm. Now he makes this bold, bold assertion: "Eternity exists, and all things in Eternity, independent of Creation, which was an act of Mercy." [from "A Vision of the Last Judgment"]

He looks upon the whole vast world, with all that is in it and all the combinations -- everything as part of the eternal structure of the universe. What he means by "creation" is that here this structure is animated by spirit entering the body. I enter "Hamlet," and Hamlet becomes, now, not just a costume hanging in a play, but he becomes a living, animated being. So, first we animate the body, but that is not the ultimate of creation. I then must become, not only a living being, I must become a life-giving spirit. That is when we awake from the dream of life where we only dream of the journey, and we are life-giving spirits -- one with God the Father.

For, "As the Father has life in Himself, so He has granted the Son also to have life in himself." So, until that is part of my being, I am only an animated body -- animating the form that I "wear." So, these "garments" will be "played" by actors, and "God only acts and is in existing beings or men." The Actor-in-Man is his imagination. That's God.

QUESTION BY A MAN: Is there any clue by which one can know that it is time to awake?

NEVILLE: I will bring that up on Friday* night in "Eschatology." "Eschatology" simply means the doctrine of the last things. But when these things appear, you will know that the time is at hand. That's eschatology, the doctrine of the last things.

So, if you are prophesying, as some of these people said the other day -- they said that California is going to sink into the ocean or something, you have no idea how many intelligent people left the State and went elsewhere, Now they are coming back very sheepishly.

I have a few friends, -- they wouldn't tell me why they left, but they called me up suddenly one day. He has a lovely income without working. He has a beautiful home in Encino -- lovely home. I've gone there several times. He is a perfectly wonderful host. They have no children -- he and his wife; they have a dog and a lovely home, with beautiful gardens and lovely fruit trees. They left that home and move to Arizona, and they gave me the excuse that, "Oh, the smog was so terrible." We've had that for years now; but suddenly, after all these years, he can't take it. But I knew exactly when he spoke on the 'phone -- I knew intuitively exactly why he was leaving. He waited six weeks, and it didn't sink; so he came back. After about two weeks he called me up, and I knew from his tone of voice that he was hoping I would not suspect; but I would never tell him! It would be unkind to tell him I knew that. But he listens to all these little radio programs at night be these people they get to sell toothpaste; and all through the night he sits up, instead of reading the Bible or reading some wonderful work -- read a beautiful poem -- the great poets, read them. No; he turns on the radio, and then all through the night, he makes notes of these silly things by the way. He even puts them on paper -- writes letters to the papers. Well, of course, he doesn't have to work; he has a lovely income, but maybe he needs a job to keep his mind occupied with all this nonsense. But you have no idea what people will do, and they are intelligent people! This man is a very intelligent man, judged by human standards. But "the wisdom of men is foolishness in the eyes of God." So, what can you do? Leave them alone.

* Friday, 18 July 1969

QUESTION BY A LADY: [The question is largely inaudible on the tape. Do they have warnings of these experiences?

NEVILLE: My dear, no. They come suddenly upon you "like a thief in the night," without warning. It was right here in this City, -- in that hotel, -- it was there that mine began, and then when I went back to my home in Southern California, the other three major events took place over a period of three and a half years, or one thousand two hundred and sixty days. You can count it out to the very day, and it comes to exactly one thousand two hundred and sixty days, just as told in Scripture.

You don't have ny warning, but you do have something that happens prior to that. But I will tell you; I will tell you on Friday. There is a shock that comes to the mind first; the mind is shocked. And then suddenly without warning, the child is born, -- you are born. You will come to David. All those things happen in you, as though they were taking place in a world just as real as this. But I will bring this out in detail, as well as I can, when my subject is: "Eschatology."

Now, they all speak of "eschatology," but I wonder how many of them know what I am talking about? I read in the paper that some one was talking about eschatology; but what he means by "eschatology" is so far removed from "eschatology" -- he means that Jesus Christ is coming in the flesh in the not-distant future, and he hopes that he will be here to meet him. Something coming from without. He has not the slightest idea who Jesus Christ is, -- not the slightest idea! He doesn't realize that "Jesus Christ" is the Cosmic Christ that is buried in humanity. Humanity is the "cross" that he "wears." And when he comes, he comes, not from without; he comes from within as he in whom He rises!

He is looking for some being to come from without, and he is going to be there to shake the hand of a person on the outside. He has got fifty thousand people to come up and confess to Christ. What Christ? Well, that is the peculiar thing that he has in his mind's eye concerning Christ. He hasn't the slightest idea what Jesus Christ really is.

QUESTION BY A LADY: [The question is inaudible on the tape.]

NEVILLE: First of all, this is Scripture, as recorded in the Bible

He did not know Scripture, and he told them so. The one that is named is Nicodemus; and Nicodemus followed him. The others thought they knew it by conforming to the letter. He said, "I have come to interpret Scripture. Scripture must be fulfilled in me"; and they thought it was fulfilled on the outside by obeying socalled external commands, and it was not so at all.

So, I cannot be silent when I see these flagrant contradictions of the greatest myztery in the world; and a highly publicized individual means nothing to me. I am not impressed by any publicized individual. I can take any press agent and send him out if I had enough money, like this little thing called Maharishi-something,* and I heard him on TV. They said to him, "Now you are publicizing yourself. Jesus didn't do this."

Do you know what he said? He said, "Well, that's why he took so long to get started."

THE LADY: [Something about "cruel."]

NEVILLE: Cruel? Well, my dear, if that is cruel, I am sorry. But I can't see anything cruel in taking nonsense and shutting it up. If you gave me a piece of paper now on which you wrote something to me that is completely wrong and false based upon Scripture, and I tore it up, I wouldn't call that cruel. I am instructing you.

Man lives in this world by struggle. The first thing you do with a baby when it comes into this world is spank it to make it cry so that it will breathe. Spoil him, and you are going to get a bunch of hippies in the world.

QUESTION BY ANOTHER LADY: Is the Bible correct when it says -- [most of this question is not clear on the tape.] I would like very much to know. It's very important to me to understand what that means.

NEVILLE: My dear, the Bible is not secular history. So don't look at July the 2d or any other date or time of the year. The Bible is sacred history. It does not record any event that ever took place on earth. It is not speaking of any man who ever walked the face of the earth. You are completely mistaking personifications for persons.

THE LADY: But if you look at the chapter --

NEVILLE: I don't care what chapter, my dear. It is mot secular history. The Bible is sacred history, and it has already been brought to climax and fulfillment. The climax is Jesus Christ. It is already finished; the "play" is finished, like the plays of Shakespeare are finished, but they are being played over and over and over, and each one brings to climax the final curtain. One day you will come into the climax of the "play," and you are Jesus Christ; and no one is going to know it. You will tell it to those who will listen to you, but you are not playing to the gallery. It doesn't matter who on earth knows that you awoke within yourself as Jesus Christ. Those on high who wait for your return are rejoicing. Those on earth are giving all their praise to the highly publicized people. There was a time not far removed from now when tens and tens of millions cheered Hitler, and thought that he was the saviour of the world. Tens of millions cheered Stalin. He saw to it that statues were built for him. He renamed one of the cities

* Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

PROOF, THE LAW WORKS!

5 April 1971

Paul, in his Letter to the Galatians, says: "I see that you observe days and months and seasons and years. I am afraid I have labored over you in vain." Now here we are, this crowded week of observing these different days; and this is the season, and naturally it is the year. What did Paul give to the world? What he gave to the world is this: that the Spirit of God and the human imagination are one. He said, "We did not receive the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is from God, that we may understand the gifts bestowed upon us by God."

Here is the One that became the many, that the many may become the One, for: "One must be All, and comprehend within himself all things, both small and great" (Blake, from "The Four Zoas"). Everything in the world -- "All that I behold, though it appears without, it is within, within my imagination, of which this world of mortality is but a shadow" (Blake, from "Jerusalem").

So, we are told that: I, if I be lifted up, I will lift all men and draw all men unto me. Now we are told he is lifted up; therefore all men are already redeemed! But they have to experience it within themselves. They are already redeemed; but in this world of mortality, -- this must be now, I would say, "repeated" within the individual, for he must contain and experience all within himself. There is only God in this world. "God only acts and is in existing beings or men" (Blake, from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell").

Now let me share with you a story that was given to me last Friday night. This lady's husband's name is Ray. When I use the word "Ray," I am speaking of her husband. She said, "Last year Ray said to me, 'It's going to cost a thousand dollars to put on a new roof. We need the roof, but it will cost a thousand dollars.'"

She didn't say they could not afford it; she said, "I saw the new roof. Right then and there, I saw the new roof!" Then she said, "I was working at my sewing machine; it's an old one, but it was adequate. It did the job, but I would like a new one," she said, "and so I imagined a new one. Here is the old one, but I imagined a new one. Then I was putting away my tape recorder, and I felt, 'How heavy this thing is! I would like a new, light-weight one.' I put the old one away -- the heavy one; but I thought I would like a new one that is light of weight. So, I put away the new one that was light of weight."

Then she said, "Ray said to me 'My new shoes hurt.' He had just bought them and they were hurting. Well, I wanted him to have shoes that did not hurt. I did that in my imagination. All of this was last year. Then came the turn of the calendar year, and we had a robbery. No, they didn't steal the roof, but they took the other movable objects; and this past week I got a settlement from the insurance company for two thousand and fifty-odd dollars. I now have my nice, new sewing machine. I have my nice, light-weight tape recorder. Ray's shoes do not hurt. And there is money for the roof, with much, much, much left over. Now, who instigated the robbery?"

Now on Friday, you will hear, if you go to service, the Seven Words on the Cross: three taken from Luke, three from John, and one from Matthew and Mark; it's the same one from Matthew and Mark, which is the fourth one: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" That is the one taken from these two Gospels. But the first one used on the Cross is from Luke: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Everything is moving under compulsion. No one sees the invisible causation. No one sees the invisible imaginal act that is putting pressure upon every one who is bent in a certain direction to perform the needed act to produce the imaginal act that is completely unseen by the world.

Here, "Every natural effect has a spiritual cause, and not a natural. A natural cause only seems. It is a delusion of the fading, vegetable memory." (Blake, from "Milton")

Now, in her letter to me she said, "These things I remember. They were all last year, but I remember them." In her case she is blessed that she can remember when Ray said to her, "It's going to cost a thousand dollars to put on the new roof," and "I saw the new roof, even though at the moment he thought he could not now afford a new roof. When I used my sewing machine, it was adequate, it was good, it did the job; but I would like a new one, and I 'saw' a new one. And when I put away my tape recorder, it was all right; it was adequate, but it was heavy when I put it away. I thought, I've seen all these nice new, light-weight ones, and I would like a nice light-weight one, a good one.

"Now," she said, "I have all of them. I have my nice new, light-weight recorder, my new machine; Ray's shoes that do not hurt; and the roof will be a new one. The money is there and much left over."

So, the first cry on the Cross: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do." They are all asleep, moving under compulsion. And men and women unwittingly -- most of them, some wittingly -- are setting the whole thing in motion. And they simply move. So, some one given to the feeling of getting something for nothing, he takes the recorder. If he sells it for anything, that's profit. It cost him nothing. No matter what it cost her, whatever he could get for it was sheer profit. If he goes out and finds something that he stole and he could move it quickly for $15 and one gets a bargain, he made $15. It cost him nothing; his investment was nothing. And there are those in the world who think that way. They are all passing through the "furnaces."

So, the first word on the Cross -- a "word on the cross" does not mean a single word; it's a completed thought. So, the shortest "word" is: "I thirst," but there are two words. The next one, from John, is: It is finished"; there are three words. All right, -- still it is one "word" when you take the seven "words."

So, the first word is from Luke: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do." And then oomes Luke's second; then comes John's first; then comes Matthew and Mark; then come two from John; and then Luke completes it: "Father, into Thy hands I commit my spirit."

This little punctuation mark has been pushed around in the second word on the cross, which is from Luke. And the thief turns to him and asks him to have mercy on him; and he said, "Behold, I say unto you, Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise." Well, you can alter the punctuation and put the comma after "today"; but no, leave it just as it is: "Behold, I say unto you, Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise."

This is, now, Resurrection. "And I, when I am lifted up, I will draw all men unto me," -- for all things are in my own wonderful human imagination; and I am all imagination. So, when I am lifted up, I draw all. At the very moment, I draw them all with me. But they individually must have the experience that I have had, but they are already redeemed because I took them up with me. Because, "All things exist in the human imagination"; and any one who is resurrected -- but he can't be resurrected and leave behind him any part of himself; so, the whole world is raised up with him.

I am telling you from experience, the heavenly chorus sings when this thing takes place. They sing the fall -- the actual fall into division, and the resurrection into unity. They sing it out; and then the regeneration through resurrection from the dead. They actually sing it out; and the words, "It is finished," -- I heard it, but I didn't sing it. The heavenly chorus sang it.

When I walked by and every one was made perfect because I was perfect; and then at the very end, the chorus sang out, "It is finished," that was the sixth word on the cross. And the last one is when this garment comes off, and that is the 31st Psalm, the 5th verse: "Into Thy hands I commit my spirit." Complete the verse: "Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, Faithful God." That was the Promise in the beginning: I would fall into division and become fragmented, dwelling in all; that not a thing in this world could be apart from me because how could I be apart from something that I am going to influence? Because, --

"All things by a law divine
In one another's being mingle."

(Shelley)

If I am not penetrating you now, I couldn't see you. You couldn't hear me if I did not penetrate you and you penetrate me. So:

"All things by a law divine
In one another's being mingle."

So, when I am lifted up, I take with me my entire universe, -- my whole vast world, -- knowing that every one that is now shattered in that world will have a repetition of the same experience. For, One fell into division, and then resurrected into Unity, bringing all back together into The One.

So, in her case, I can't tell you how thankful I am that she shared it with me; that she could now actually feel that the robbery which seemed at the moment such a shock, -- she lost the tape recorder, she lost this -- all the movable objects; and then came the settlement from the Insurance Company for two thousand and fifty-odd dollars, which replaced these with the new ones -- all the light ones, and enough to put on a new roof, and then some still left over. So, "Father, forgive them." Yes, -- the thieves are thieves, -- it's your Self "pushed out" anyway.

Here some one tonight is accused for stealing maybe what? A little cup or a saucer. And yet the bank where I bank -- the United California Bank -- they are still looking for the internal thieves who stole fifty million dollars last year from their subsidiary in Basel, in Switzerland, -- fifty million dollars! And they know it is all on the inside; it can only be on the inside by trusted employees. They think they can bring it down to six -- six trusted employees! They can't quite put their fingers on it because in Switzerland they have all these strange hidden accounts. But they are missing fifty million dollars. So when some one goes into the bank and holds it up and gets a thousand dollars, and we balloon the whole thing, -- the other thing is "hush-hush."

Here is a bank in Illinois a few months ago that lost close to seven million dollars; and they still can't quite put their finger on how it happened on the inside. No one came in and robbed them. And we speak of the little shop-lifting on the outside, and the poor little girl goes off to jail, or the little boy goes off to jail. I am not condoning it. If you could stop the embezzlement from the inside, your dividends would jump from their present little three per cent or four per cent to twenty per cent, if you could only stop it from the inside. All things happen really, in the true sense of the word, from the inside.

So, every socalled "act" in the outer world that seems a cause in itself, -- may I tell you? "Every natural effect has a spiritual, imaginal cause, and not a natural. A natural cause only seems. It's a delusion," -- of what? " -- the fading memory." Man can't quite remember. Luckily, she remembered when Ray said, "We could use, and need, a new roof; but it would cost a thousand dollars, and so that is put into the future." She remembered when he complained the new shoes were hurting. In her mind's eye she revised it instantly, at the moment -- the roof and the shoes. When she worked on her machine, she revised it. It was adequate, but she said, "I have a new machine -- sewing machine." And putting the heavy tape recorder away, she wanted a new one that was light of weight; and she revised it, and she got in her mind's eye a light-weight, new tape recorder. Then she goes home one day to find the house had been robbed. She had carried insurance; so she brought in the insurance people, and here they paid her the two thousand dollars, which replaced all these things in a new way.

So, I tell you, the story is the greatest story ever told. There is no story like it. But Christianity needs forever and forever to be saved from secular history. It is not secular history. It's the history of your own wonderful human imagination. God and your own imagination are one. They are one. You are an Immortal Being. You cannot "die," because you are all imagination. When you actually know it from experience, then you can wipe your tears. Nothing can pass away.

You may not see them with the mortal eye, touch them with the mortal hand; but they are in a world just as real as this -- just as real, continuing the journey until they reach that moment in time when they are resurrected, and then the scattered body begins to be collected and they are gathered together into one. So:

" . . . . . One must be All,
And comprehend within himself all things both great and small."
(Blake, from "The Four Zoas")

And you are that one that actually fell; and then, in falling, you became fragmented. You became divided into the unnumbered parts, and each seems to be independent of you as you look out on it. You are only looking out on your Self "pushed out." And your whole vast world must make real your unknowing imaginal acts, or your knowing imaginal acts.

I ask you to trust this teaching. Believe in your imaginal acts. You may not see it tonight or tomorrow; but believe in it. Actually assume the most glorious thing in the world for yourself or any aspect of yourself. Trust it. And that imaginal act, if it takes a thousand or ten thousand or a hundred thousand of your projected selves, will use them to make that thing become real in your world.

As she said in her letter to me, "You may call it imagination, or some may call it thought; but this I do know, having remembered what I did last year: I can say it does produce reality."

And I've told you time and time again that: --

IMAGINING CREATES REALITY

-- that all the objective facts in the world are produced through imagination. There isn't a thing that you can name in this world that wasn't first imagined. But you can veto it the minute you imagine it. You can say, as she could have said, "We can't afford it," and stop it. She didn't say, "We can't afford the thousand dollars for the roof"; she saw the roof, and it was new. But she didn't see the robbery. That's the means.

Let us turn you now to the 55th Chapter of Isaiah: "My ways are higher than your ways, and my thoughts than yours." This is the chapter where you are told: "My word shall not return unto me void, but it must accomplish that which I purpose and prosper in the thing for which I sent it." So, "My ways are higher than your ways." Don't concern yourself with how it's going to be done, for the same voice who spoke these words said this in the 32d Chapter of Deuteronomy, the 39th verse:

"I, even I, am He. I kill, and I make alive; I wound, I heal; I do all these things, and none can deliver out of my hands."

He is playing all the parts. And if one is basically inclined to steal, he will use him to produce the necessary means to get the money to put on the roof. So she comes home, and there was a robbery. All the things have been replaced with new ones and better ones, as she desired them. At the moment, it seemed to be a shock; but she set the whole thing up in motion, for she's the one who spoke those words: "I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; and none can deliver out of my hands." For the Spirit of God and the human imagination are one; and there is nothing but God! "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made."

And so, if all things are made by Him, is there a thief in the world? He's playing that part! Is there a socalled "hero" in the world? He's playing that part. A coward? He's playing that part. He is playing every part in the world; and it all adds up to produce the unseen imaginal acts of men.

So, you are alone, and you think, "No one sees me and this means nothing. It's only my imagination." And you carry on your lovely imaginal act. And so that's it, -- not knowing that you are actually producing tomorrow's effects in this world. And when it comes into the world, that natural effect has an unseen, invisible, imaginal act as cause, and not a natural cause. "A natural cause only seems. It is a delusion," -- a delusion of what? Of your fading memory. You don't remember when you did it. So, when confronted with your own harvest, you can't quite believe it. You can't remember when you did anything that could actually be like this.

I didn't rob myself! I never thought for one moment of robbery to get the money. No; but I did see the whole thing done. And there are "thieves" in the world -- all over the world, and they are all played by God! There is nothing but God.

"God only acts, and is, in existing beings or men." (Blake, from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell")

Now, let me find that Actor, because God only acts, and He is in all existing beings or men. Well, I'm a man. I've got to find that Actor, for the thing that I see reflected in the mirror when I shave in the morning is a mask. That's "persona." Now, who is wearing that mask? I am. You simply say, "Neville," and I turn around and say, "Yes? Here I am"; but who is the Being that is there? I am. That's my real name. But the mask is called "Neville." But I will say, "I am Neville." So, the wearer of the mask called "Neville" responds. That Being in that mask,behind that mask, that no one sees is God!

And now the whole vast Christendom will celebrate this victory of God; that he actually died -- literlly died. But God's first attribute is Mercy.

And God turned Death into Slepp; and then rose the sexes to work and to weep." (Blake, paraphrased from "To Tirzah")*

And so all the sexes rose en masse when God "died." He buried Himself in humanity and died; and then His first attribute -- Mercy -- turned it into sleep. That is what Blake meant when he said:

"Eternity exists, and all things in eternity, independent of creation, which was an act of mercy." (from "A Vision of the Last Judgment")

That was the merciful act: to turn "death" into sleep. And God is dreaming this dream.

One day He will awake. And when he awakes, he resurrects; and then he gathers into his own Being all his scattered beings. So, all are gathered together.

When I depart this time, may I tell you? I am taking everything in the universe with me. And "I, when I am lifted up, I will raise all unto me." Read it in the 12th Chapter of John. Not one can be left, because all things exist in the human imagination. But it's not raised up until He who is scattered is awakened to Unity. And then He draws into His own Being all that was scattered.

So, they sing his fall into division, and his resurrection into unity - His fall into the generation of decay and "death," and his regeneration into the resurrection from the "dead." So, when he actually is raised from the dead, he gathers all into his own Being. And they are all with him. No matter where he goes, he has the whole vast world raised up. He hasn't left one behind him. But every one shattered in the world will have a reproduction of that drama in themselves.

---

* "But Mercy chang'd Death into Sleep;
The Sexes rose to work and weep."

So, what is now being dramatized as a memorial this week -- for this is really a memorial; this is simply a great memory, a remembrance of what God has already accomplished. And so they are perpetuating it through Good Friday. Then comes the burial on Saturday. Then comes the Resurrection on Sunday. But the whole thing is done! It's all done, only to be repeated in the individual; and then the individual who is seemingly scattered beoomes the unit, and he draws his vast world unto himself, and he is resurrected.

So, the One becomes the many; and then the many become the One. So, whenever one is raised, he takes the whole vast world with him, even though it seems to be left behind; and every aspect that seemingly is behind becomes the unit, and then it raises up. So, one must be all.

That is the story of the Christian mystery: One must be all! So, the first cry on the Cross: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do." And they do not know what they do. They go blindly on under compulsion, executing the unseen imaginal acts of humanity. And they move under compulsion.

I told the story, and I was severely criticized for it by a lady at a dinner party one night when Fred Bailes, who is now gone from this world, gave a party at the Ambassador Hotel. And I had told this story about two weeks before to one of his great -- I would say -- contributors who would come and always write a huge big check at the end of a year or the end of a month to keep that going. And she was most critical that night. I didn't feel well that night at all. And she said, "You know, I can't quite understand how you could take the platform before an audience of twenty-six hundred, a thousand who could not get in -- they were all overflowing at the Fox Wilshire, and tell what you told about your wife," -- this was my first wife.

I told a simple story to explain that everything in this world must be forgiven, no matter what it is. When I met the girl who now bears my name and who is the mother of my daughter, -- the very first time I met her, I knew she was going to be my wife. She didn't know it, but I knew it. I said to myself, "She doesn't know it, but she is going to be my wife." We sailed for Barbados six months later, and she met my mother and met my family -- met them all. They all loved her. That was back in 1936.

In New York City, because of the archaic law that is now past, you couldn't get a divorce unless she was insane for seven years or for adultery; and that's all. The orthodox Christian churches had sewed the whole thing up so that it made life miserable and made everything simply a burden to all. When I met her, I had just such an entangled background. And here it's New York City, the most archaic city in the world concerning such laws.

I went to bed and slept as though I was happily married to the girl who now bears my name. I did not have any physical emotion with her: just that she was sleeping there, and I am here, and it's blissful. I did that for one solid week. Then comes a telephone call from the court one morning, telling me that I must come dwwn to this federal court on Tuesday morning. Well, I was groggy; it was early in the morning, and in those days I didn't rise as early as I do now. And so, I just said, "All right," and I hung up.

Well, on Tuesday morning that I am supposed to be there, I made no effort to go there. And about 9:30 the 'phone rang. It's the court, and they said to me, "You are supposed to be here in court this morning. We meet at 10:00."

And I said, "What on earth am I supposed to be in court for?"

They said, "Well, it happens that your wife is arrested, and we thought maybe you could throw some light on the reason for her arrest. That's why we are asking you to come down."

Well, I wasn't shaved. I simply threw myself into sone clothes, and off I went in a taxi down to the court. I got there just as they were bringing her in. A man whispered into -- there were three judges -- into one judge's ear that I was in the audience. The judge asked me to take the stand. "You don't have to swear, but will you please take the stand and throw some light on the behavior of your wife? She tells me you have been separated now for almost fourteen years."

I said, "Yes."

"Is it a religious reason why you have been separated?"

I said, "No, none whatsoever. We knew we were wrong the very first day we got married. We knew it was completely a failure right away."

Then he read the case. She was picked up for shop-lifting. They went to her home and found other things in her home.

He said, "What can you say for this?"

I said, "As far as I am concerned, I don't think that really she is a shop-lifter. As far as I am concerned, she just moved under compulsion. Take into consideration her age. She is eight years my senior, and she is passing through a certain emotional state. And do be lenient. We have a son who lives with me, and I don't want anything to happen to his mother that would cast any shadow on his life. He is a wonderful boy. He is in my charge by law. He is in my home, lives with me, and I don't want anything to happen to her that in any way would reflect upon my son."

The judge said, "You know, in all my years on the bench, I have heard no plea by one for another who has every reason in this world to get her committed, because that in any other state would be enough for a divorce; and yet he pleads for her."

He sentenced her to six months; and then, on my plea, he suspended it. She met me on the outside, and said, "Neville, that was a very decent thing to do. Give me my papers." She knew I was looking for her. My dancing partner had told her I was looking for her to serve the papers and therefore to be scarce and move out of New York City. So, she did.

But she had to commit the act, and they had to call me and ask me to throw light upon that. How could I condemn her? Who was the actual cause of her shop-lifting? I! I slept as though I were blissfully married to the girl who now bears my name; and I had to get the evidence. I had to get some reason to bring the action. And here, my wife actually gave me the papers.

I said, "I don't have the papers with me."

She said, "I am driving home to your place right now, and you can give me the papers."

That is illegal to serve your own papers; but she drove up to my hotel where I was living. I went to my room and came down to the lobby and gave her the papers -- did my own serving! Now that is an illegal thing in this world. Then I got my divorce in the City of New York; then I could marry the girl who now bears my name.

When I told that, I told it only to tell people of that one "word," the first word on the cross: "Father, forgive them, for they know now what they do." They are all moving under compulsion; and he unseen causation is hidden from the world. They do not know who is "treading in the winepress." And I was "treading in the winepress" to be happily married to a girl who was not then engaged to me. I couldn't be engaged to her under the circumstances. And then my wife behaved in such a manner that it made it real and natural for me to do what I did. How could I blame her?

So, the first word on the cross: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do," -- they have to do what they do. I had to fall into division and fragment my being into the unnumbered parts called "humanity," and then rise into unity, and gather all my scattered members together and rise as God Himself. That's the story. It is God who fell, and God who rises.

So, I know from my own experience that nothing "dies." Those who have not had the experience here -- all right, they are restored in a world that is terrestrial just like this; and they continue their journey until that moment in time when they are resurrected. And Resurrecion is resurrection into Unity. And the outpictured world -- the whole vast universe -- it's himself "pushed out" -- is gathered together then; and they move up. And I, when I am lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me. See it? This is the mystery of which we speak here night after night.

You are not some tiny little thing just pushed out. You are the Whole. "One must be all." And the day will come, you will find that you really are the All!

So, not one person in the universe could be outside of you when you are resurrected, because as you are raised up, you raise all with you. And each will have the experience of being raised up, and all eventually will be The One. And in that day, "they shall be one, his name one," as we are told in Zechariah. But Blake tells it so beautifully in his "Dream of Nine Nights," called Valla or the "Four Zoas." And then he tells the story of the falling into division; and when they are all gathered together, this one man they call Jesus, -- and they in him and he in them, -- live in perfect harmony in Eden, the Land of Life.

Well, you are the Lord Jesus Christ, whose resurrection they are going to celebrate this coming Sunday. You tell that to the priests, and they will slap you, or tell that to any minister -- because they are sound asleep. They do not know who the Lord Jesus Christ is! I tell you, the Lord Jesus Christ is buried in you, and He is your own wonderful human imagination. That's the Lord Jesus Christ. And when He is raised in you, you will raise all in this universe within you. That is the story.

So, I want to thank my friend for sharing with me her experience, and being big enough to remember. If man could only remember his imaginal acts! She remembered when the roof needed repairs or a new one, and the cost was excessively high for them at the moment. She remembered her husband complaining about the pain the new shoes caused, the weight of the tape recorder, and then working on the machine -- the sewing machine, and it was adequate -- it was good, but she would like a new one; and then came out of the Nowhere a robbery and took all these movable objects, and then came the insurance that sent the check for two thousand-odd dollars that replaced all the movable objects and paid for the new roof with much, much over. So, she can actually say, "Forgive them, Father," -- those who took it. Did they not do her a favor? And yet, they are thieves in their own eyes, and thieves in the eyes of society; and they are. Do you know who played the part? God! And do you know who actually made them do what they did? The lady who wrote me the letter.

Now she knows the words in that 32d Chapter of Deuteronomy: "I, even I, am He, and there is no God beside me. I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; and there is none that can deliver out of my hand."

So, no matter what happens, if we only had the memory we could trace it to a forgotten imaginal act on our part!

---oOo---

Prophetic Sketches

18 July 1968 by Neville

The Old Testament is a prophetic blueprint of the life of Jesus, and Jesus is the true identity of every child born of woman. Prophecy is over. What people call "prophecy" today is simply a little nonsense called fortune-telling. You can use all the little -isms in the world; but true Prophecy is over, and that is in the Old Testament. The New Testament fulfills it, but that is the life of Jesus; and Jesus is the true identity of every child born of woman. So, the climax has been reached. It's been done, for all the Promises of God find their "Yes" in Him.

So, in every one everything said of Him, the individual will experience. The whole thing is unfolding in man -- in every child born of woman. It's not written so that you could read it as you would the alphabet. It wasn't intended in that manner.

As this theologian said to Blake, "You need some one to elucidate your ideas, and Blake said to him: "You ought to know that that which is grand is necessarily obscure to weak minds, for that which can be made explicit to the idiot isn't worth my care. And the Ancients considered what was not too explicit as fittest for instruction, because it rouses the faculties to act."

Then he asked the theologian: "Why do you think the Bible is more entertaining and instructive than any other book? Is it not because it is addressed to the imagination, which is spiritual sensation, and only mediately to the understanding or reason?"

So, the Old Testament is simply an adumbration; it's a foreshadowing in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. They are sketches; and the sketches are done in an over-all picture, leaving out the particulars, to rouse the faculties to act.

Now, here we will take, say, as many as we can get in tonight in this hour. Genesis is the "seed" plot of the entire Bible. It begins: "In the beginning God" (Genesis 1:1); and it ends on this note: "In a coffin in Egypt" (Genesis 50:26).

"In the beginning God" . . . . . "in a coffin in Egypt." Well, who is in the "coffin"? A man, and his name is Joseph, the dreamer. The Bible has only one source of dreams. All dreams proceed from God. So, then, who is Joseph? The Prototype -- the prototype of God. Well, God is Man. You are a man.

"God is no more;

Your own humanity learn to adore.

God appears, and God is Light,

To those poor souls who dwell in night;

But does the human form display

To those who dwell in realms of Day."

-- Wm. Blake (from "Auguries of Innocence

God is man, and you're a man. You contain the whole drama within you, and the whole will unfold within you. So, "In the beginning God" . . . . . "in a coffin in Egypt."

Now, the entire Bible, -- here is the "seed" plot. How does it end? The end of Revelation: "Come, Lord Jesus." (Revelation 22:20) Here is the fulfillment, for all of the Promises of God find their "Yes" -- their fulfillment in Him. So, Come -- Come, the fulfillment of all these Promises in me!

Now, here, everything in this world -- every child, every chair, house or tree -- I don't care what object you see, -- everything in this world contains within itself the capacity for symbolic significance. God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and unveils Himself through the medium of vision.

Well, here, a lady has this experience. She said: "I found myself in the strangest, darkest area -- it was so dark -- yet; and here, in spite of the darkness, I am holding in my hand what appeared to be almost the shape of a shoe box. It could be a small coffin; but, because it was so small, I thought of it in terms of a shoe box. Yet, it did resemble a little coffin. And in the darkness, I knew that I was in it. I was in it! But I didn't understand. How could I be in it when I am looking at it and I am holding it in my hand? And here is a little, tiny shoe box or a coffin, and I am in it! And in my dream, I turn over; and as I turned over, I seemed to turn towards the light, and the light was blazing. And as I turned towards the light, the light seemed to illuminate me in the sense that I understood; and then came a relief -- a peculiar relief, because I knew what I was. Prior to that, I didn't know what I was -- who I was; I only knew that I was in it, and then I knew beyond all doubt that I was Joseph, and I could not get out of that box until I became Jesus."

Now, she came to me with this dream, and she said, "What on earth could that mean?"

Well, you go to any one without the knowledge of Scripture, and what would they tell you? And here is Scripture: "In the beginning God" . . . . . "in a coffin in Egypt." But he exacts a promise that they will not leave him in Egypt they'll bring him out.

Now, God is being formed in man. Here is the Unbegotten forming Itself in man; and when it is completely formed, it comes out. And who comes out? The Lord Jesus Christ. There is nothing but Christ; so He comes out.

So, here is this lady -- a perfectly lovely lady. She's married, she didn't have a child, but she adopted one. They live happily in their sphere with this adopted son; so she's a normal, natural person, having a simple dream; and she turns to ask, "What on earth could it mean?" Well, here is Scripture. She is actually seeing Scripture in an adumbration. It's a foreshadowing, but not in detail. It leaves out the details -- leaves out the important points, because if it didn't, -- well, then, we could not be roused. So, we are roused to find out, What on earth does this mean? And you begin to speculate. You begin to stir within you. And, so, "If it can be made explicit to the idiot, it isn't worth my care." (Wm. Blake)

So, here, every one -- And who is that box? What is the box? This (indicating the physical body) is the box; this is the elongated box -- the coffin in which God is buried. He's buried in every one born of woman. And one day He will come out of the box. Who comes out? God. So, He's buried in the box, and He's buried as a man. You're a man. I'm a man. We are Man -- generic Man. And after all the unnumbered blows that society gives us, we simply emerge from this box, and we emerge as the Lord Christ Jesus.

It frightens people. But may I tell you? Don't be scared, and don't be cynical about it, because you are going to have it anyway. You only delay it by your cynicism. So, if you're a cynic, -- all right, be one, if you must be; but I tell you, you are only delaying the inevitable -- the inevitable "birth" of God-in-you. What does it matter if you own the earth and you didn't have this? You are building on sand, for you are going to leave everything you build behind you, -- but everything! You'll depart this world, maybe tonight, and leave everything behind you but the unfoldment of Scripture within you. The only purpose of life is to unfold the Promise of God!

And, so, the entire Promise is contained in the Old Testament, and you come into the world to fulfill it. And only to the degree that we have fulfilled Scripture, have we really built anything, for we can only take the fulfillment of the Word of God. Everything else is left behind.

I don't care what name you call yourself, what position you occupy in the world, -- the presidents of the world, the kings, the queens, the czars, -- they all vanish and leave no trace behind them. All they take with them is that portion of Scripture they have fulfilled. That's all they are taking, and they take no more. So, you either believe it or you don't believe it.

So, here are the prophetic sketches. We will take a few. Who would believe this sort of a statement: "Can a man bear a child?" (Jeremiah 30:6) Now, the Lord is asking the question of the Prophet Jeremiah: "Can a man bear a child? Well, the obvious answer is, No, he can't do it. "Then why do I see every man with his hands drawing himself out of himself, just like a woman in labor? And why is every face turned pale? Oh, of the day there was no daylight," (Jeremiah 30:6, Revised Standard Version) -- the most incredible thing that could ever be said of a man: "How could a man bear a child?"

So, now, it's just simply stated in the 30th chapter of the Book of Jeremiah and dropped -- just dropped. It's an adumbration; it's a foreshadowing. Now, that book was written six hundred years B.C. (600 B.C.). Who knew that it really was intended one day to be fulfilled in man? So, you and I are walking the earth, just as we are today, -- not understanding, not knowing a thing about it. There it is, and so we read it, and people speculate, and we wonder, What on earth is he talking about? Was Jeremiah insane? So many statements that he made seem insane. Was he insane? And here they are considered words of God.

And then we are told not to add to it. "Do not add to the Word of God, and do not take from it." (Deuteronomy 12:32), for the Word of God will prove itself in performance. And don't take from it; leave it just as it is, whether you understand it or not. Well, men not understanding through the centuries, -- they altered it. And now today it reads: "Can a man bear a child? Why, then, do I see every man with his hands on his loins just like a woman in labor?" (Jeremiah 30:6, Revised Standard Version)

It hasn't a thing to do with any loins. The word in Hebrew is "khawlets" (pronounced "shall-ets"), and it means to draw oneself out of oneself, using one hands. That's exactly how it takes place!

But man, not understanding that, has said, Well, now, we'll just change it; so they changed the meaning of the word. But fortunately for us, we do have the original word and the original meaning of these words, and they didn't make sense. They didn't make sense then; they do not make sense now. It only makes sense to the one who has experienced it; and when all of a sudden you awake within yourself, and when you start moving out of your skull, you actually use your hands and pull yourself out of yourself, just like a woman giving birth to a child in the fields. In the ancient days, they didn't go to the hospital. There weren't any hospitals. You were in the fields when the child was delivered; and you took your own formed being, -- you formed it within yourself, and with your own hands you pulled what you formed within yourself out of yourself.

Well, you form this within yourself, and the body of man is the Womb of God; and He forms Himself within man, and then pulls Himself -- that which is formed -- He pulls it out of Himself, just as a woman pulls the child out of her womb, -- that is, primitive woman did. Today we go to the hospital, and you are put into a sleep; and when you awake, you're told you have a child, and you know nothing of it. But this Book was not written when you went to hospitals and you had sleep imposed upon you. You were in the field when suddenly it became necessary to take out of your own being what you had formed within your being.

Well, this is the grand miracle! How did it form in the skull of man? How did man, who is God, -- how did God form Himself -- the Unbegotten, forming Himself within Himself -- within a mold called "man"?

So, here, that is an adumbration, isn't it -- a foreshadowing? But it does not give it in detail. It purposely leaves out all the little -- I would say -- things that the rational mind could hang onto, leaving man to live by faith. Can he really live by faith? So, here, the entire Book is nothing more than a blueprint. It's the foreshadowing of what every child born of woman one day will experience.

Now, what came into the world? Let me show you in this manner. I've told you in the last few days what you are destined to be. I tell you what I've experienced. You may believe me. You may doubt. It doesn't really matter. As far as I am concerned, it really doesn't matter! It does matter to you if you believe it. And I will show you to what extent I mean, it does matter to you if you believe it.

I tell you that I've been "born from above." I tell you that there's only Jesus in the world. Every one who is "born from above" is Jesus Christ -- every one. Now, you can see a man, but you don't believe it. Why did you see him? Well, he is "born from above." To leave it on this level, all right, it makes no difference; you have to actually have the experience of seeing him on the level above, and know the truth of what he is talking about.

Now, why is that important? I'll show you why it's important. A lady just dropped dead -- yesterday, really, when the call came through. The last time I saw her was the last Friday in June; and sitting at the table were four enjoying a very nice, simple lunch. She said, "Oh, what a strange feeling!" and the head fell over, and she's gone from this world. And, so, those who know her, -- well they regret the departure of Marta; but Marta is free. Marta is not restored to life; Marta is free. I'll tell you why Marta is free.

Six months ago Marta had the vision of the carriage coming up, self-propelled and I got out; and when I came into this room where she was -- and she was seated she knew that I am the being you know I am. I am Neville. And I was clothed in power -- sheer, almighty power -- just power. I began to speak on power; and while Marta sat and looked, she said, "Why, he is Neville, and he is God." And she kept on repeating audibly to herself: "He's Neville, and he's God. He's Neville, and he's God." Well, here, Marta actually saw God, clothed in power,, wearing the face of a friend, -- the one she knows as Neville. I said, "There only God in this world; He wears all the faces."

So, she saw the power of God wearing the face of a friend. Now listen to the words: "I call you no longer servants. I call you no longer servants, because the servant does not know what his master is doing. I call you friends. All that I have heard from my Father, I have told you." (John 15:15, Revised Standard Version)

When you see Him, and see Him as a friend, you are set free. How? In the Eighth of John: "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall set you free." (John 8:32) The truth of what? That two and two make four? No, -- I am the truth." "I have told you all that I have heard from my Father," and "I am the truth."

Now you see me. You see God wearing as a "garment" power, sheer power; but you see a face, and the face He's wearing is your friend. "And so I call you no longer a slave, for slaves do not know what their master is doing; I call you friends." And, so, you see a friend, and the friend sets you free.

So, Marta, by that one vision of six months ago, today is not restored to life; she is set free. You can only see it in vision; you can't see it here. Here you see a man, with all the weaknesses of the world; but in vision, He unveils Himself in vision. So He unveiled Himself, and He was wearing the body of a man; yes, but the body was sheer Almightyness, -- all Power. And, then, He wore the face of Marta's friend -- the same Being; so she knew the truth of what I taught. So, she said, "I am your friend, for all that I have heard from my Father I have told you." So, she saw the entire drama gathered together into one marvelous picture. The self-propelled carriage comes up. Out steps this Being called Neville. He comes in and begins to proclaim the power of God, and he's clothed in power. The first appearance of God to man is power, almightyness, called El Shaddai.

"I made myself known unto Abraham and to Isaac and to Jacob as El Shaddai. By my name, I Am, I did not make myself known." (Exodus 6:3, Revised Standard Version; also see footnote.)

He made Himself known as "I Am" to Moses first; but to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, He appeared only as Power -- sheer power. And strangely enough, the night that I stood in the presence of Infinite Love, when He embraced me, and then I heard the cry "out of the blue"; and then I found myself before Might -- sheer Almightyness; and He wore, as she saw me wearing it, an Inverness cape, -- the One who commanded me to go into the world and tell it. And His words were: "Time to act!" He wore an Inverness cape, and He was Infinite Might. There was no compassion in that Being; and one second before I was embraced, and I was one with the Body of Infinite Love. And, yet, when I was commanded to go, it wasn't Love that commanded me, -- it was Might -- Almightyness.

Now, she didn't know this; and yet when she saw me, the face wearing Infinite Power, -- here was Neville, and he was all power. Well, it was Power who sent me. Love didn't send me. Love embraced me, and I became one with Infinite Love, but it was Almightiness that sent me into this world to tell the story -- to tell the story of Might -- the story of Power.

And, so, when she saw me this night, I was wearing the same cape that He who sent me wore; therefore the words are: "He who sees me sees Him who sent me (John 8:19) If you knew the One who sent me, then you would know me; and if you knew me, you'd know the One who sent me. Who sends me is the One that I resemble When she saw me, I was wearing the same thing that He wore when He sent me.

Now, this is a strange, peculiar mystery, but it is true. Every word I tell you is true. So, Marta tonight -- this simple, sweet lady, my age who worked up until the very day -- she went down to Laguna to the Art Festival, and it is a perfectly marvelous festival that meets every year. The four of them enjoyed the festival, and on their way back stopped in to have a simple Mexican meal; and there is no alcohol stronger than beer in these Mexican restaurants, -- and, so, a glass of beer -- she's not a drinker. And sitting there with the simple little meal and a glass of beer, she said, "Oh, what a strange feeling!" and then her head began to move towards the table, and she'g gone suddenly. And Marta did not find herself, I know, restored to life in a world like this; no, Marta is as free as any one can be. She's obtained the glorious liberty and freedom of the "sons of God," because she saw the vision six months before. She saw the vision of God clothed as man -- clothed in Power, wearing the face of a friend, -- the one called Neville. And then as she saw me, she said, "He's God, and yet he's Neville; he's God, he's Neville!" because there's only God in this world, and He'll wear every face in the world.

And, so, tonight as you tell the truth as you hear it from the depths of your own soul, tell it based upon, not speculation; tell it based upon experience. Well, then, tomorrow you could be worn, clothed as Power; and he who sees you in that garment of Power -- but sees you, and you are his friend -- he sees a friend clothed as Power; and, therefore, he is set free. That's how God frees them in this world.

Now, it doesn't make sense on this level; but, I tell you, it is true! And, so, should I drop a tear for Marta? No; Marta has been set free. She's not restored to life to continue the drama and the horrors and the sorrows of the world.

So, everything in Scripture is true. Everything is true. So, I ask you to believe it. I have been set free; so it doesn't make any difference to me, as far as I am concerned, but it makes all the difference in the world to you whether you believe it or not. If you believe it, as Marta did, then you will have a similar vision. I may not be the one used; some one else who tells you a similar story, based upon his own experience, for I'm only telling you what I've heard in the depths of my own soul -- what I've experienced. So, having told exactly what I have experienced, my face is used among those that come to me. But others could come in my footsteps and tell you of a similar experience, and maybe their face will be used, because all faces are the faces of God! He is a Being of infinite faces, and every face is His face.

So, do you really believe the story as you've heard it? If you do, as she did, you may this night encounter a similar experience; and then when the story comes to its end in this little world of Caexar, instead of being restored to life, -- no, you aren't restored, you are set free. You are in an entirely different world, the world of Heaven, above it all.

So, here: "In the beginning God" -- there's only God; "in the coffin in Egypt." (Genesis 1:1 . . . Genesis 50:26) And that "coffin" is every little form that was formed in the womb of woman.

Now, here is a little adumbration. You read it in the Fourth Chapter of the Book of Galatians: "And Abraham had two sons. One was by a slave, and one was by a free-woman . . . Now, this is an allegory." (Galatians 4:22,23) Well, if this is an allegory, what on earth are the priesthoods and the ministers and the rabbis of the world doing when they teach this story as history? Listen to the words: "Abraham had two sons; one was born of a slave, and one of a free-woman -- and these are Paul's words: "Now this is an allegory." Do you know what an allegory is? It's a story told as if it were true, leaving the one who hears it to discover the fictitious character of it and learn its lesson. Well, if the story of Abraham is an allegory, -- now listen to these words as the New Testament opens: "And this is the book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham." (Matthew 1:1) Well, if the story of Abraham is an allegory, then what is the genealogy of Jesus?

Listen to it carefully: Read the Fourth Chapter of Galatians, which is the earliest book in the New Testament. That came first. It was written long before the four Gospels. That was the Godpel, and Paul claims it to be the Gospel, -- "my gospel"; and he said, "Any deviation from this, let him be accursed, (Galatians 1:9), because: "This came to me, not by man -- I was not taught it by a man; it came by revelation" (Galatians 1:12). Now, he tells you the story is an allegory, because that was revealed to him. The whole thing was an allegory. Well, if it's an allegory, can it be history? Can it be secular history? No.

Therefore, if Abraham begins the whole in the story of Matthew, culminating in Jesus Christ, and that story is an allegory, then what is the culmination? It doesn't mean it's untrue, but it's not as the world believes it to be true. So the world believes it to be secular history, and it is not; it's supernatural history. The whole thing is completely outside of this sphere, just as my coming into view in a self-propelled carriage into the presence of a woman, and I unveil myself to her. I unveiled myself as the Being that I'm telling every one in this world that I am. But you choose an individual, and you unveil yourself to that being. I know I've been "born from above"; therefore I'm one with the Being called Christ Jesus, and he is God. So, in this moment of time, I took Marta. In the depths of my soul I knew Marta had just a matter of moments in this sphere; and here was Marta's faith, and so I unveiled myself in that picture. And she had no doubt -- no uncertainty in her mind, -- she's looking at God and she's looking at Neville -- the same Being, and yet it's man; it's Neville, and it's God. And she awoke, and there was no uncertainty on this level. Reason begins to analyze it and tear it apart. Luckily for her, she wrote the whole thing down and then said, "Now, Neville, I don't understand it, but this is what happened. When I saw you, I knew you to be God - I had no doubt. I had no uncertainty. As I talk to you now, I know you are Neville, and you have all the weaknesses of the flesh; and still I know that was true."

Well, that was Marta; and she goes, enjoying lunch with three friends. So, that moment of departure, she simply found herself in Heaven; and Heaven is the last -- the final union of man with God. So, that's where Marta is now. Not only that, listen to these words: In the 9th Chapter of Corinthians, when they questioned Paul concerning his claim that he was an apostle, he said, "Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen the Lord Jesus?" (First Corinthians 9:1) He said, The indispensable prerequisite for apostleship and freedom from this world of death was to have seen the Lord Jesus, and to know it. And that's what Marta did.

He states it in the first verse of the 9th chapter of First Corinthians: "Am I not free?" Freedom depends upon seeing and knowing the Lord Jesus. You can see Him, but not know Him. You can walk the street as Him, seen by people, but they don't believe it. They do not know it. To see and to know are the same; so they didn't really see. Well, had they really seen him, they would have known him. But Marta saw me in the true sense of the word; and having seen, she knew me, for the words "see" and "know" in Greek are the same. To see Him in the tru sense of the word is to know Him. So, had you really known me, you would have known my Father; but you know neither my Father nor me, for had ye known me, you would have known my Father. So, you have seen me, but you see me what? As the carpenter or the carpenter's son?

So, in the very, very end, He appears, and they did not recognize Him. They thought he was a carpenter. This is after the Ascension. And then they said, "Did not our hearts burn within us when he interpreted to us the Scriptures? He opened our minds and interpreted the Scriptures, and did not our hearts burn within us?" But they didn't know Him! At the very end, He was still unknown, -- unseen by those who followed Him all through life.

But an individual really believes it -- and the whole thing is determined from within, based upon faith; and, so, the one who really believes it will be singled out; and a drama similar to that will unfold, and he will see, or she will see, Him. He'll be wearing the face of the friend -- the body of a man, and the body will be all power -- sheer Almightiness; and she will know, or he will know, she stood in the presence of the Risen God! And she saw Him as a friend; and so seeing Him as a friend, she is set free, and he is set free, -- free from the world of sin and death, no more returning to this world at all.

And I don't mean reincarnation. The Bible does not teach reincarnation. It teaches restoration, but not reincarnation. You are restored. Every one is restored in a body that is unaccountably new -- wonderfully new, in a world just like this; and you move on, playing the part that you must play, until that work is done in you. When the work is done in you, then He is formed in you; and so you will actually be telling the story that I am telling you now.

The day will come that you will become so hungry, not for food, -- as you are told in the Book of Amos: "I will send a famine upon the world. It will not be a famine for bread, nor a hunger nor a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the word of God" (Amos 8:11). And not a thing in this world can satisfy that thirst or that hunger but an experience of God.

So, Marta had to have a thirst -- a hunger to experience God; and so I told her what I had experienced, and that God and man are one. She believed it, and she had to come to the point where she could experience God as a friend. "So I call you no longer slaves, for a slave does not know what his master is doing; I call you friend, because all that I have heard from my Father I have told you. (John 15:15, Revised Standard Version; NOTE: in the text the word "servant" is used, but in a footnote the translation "slave" is noted.) In other words, all that I have experienced from my Father, I have told you. I haven't held one thing back.

There isn't a month but what I get invitations from people, little groups, saying: "You certainly must have something more than you tell publicly. Would you form a class? We'll pay anything you ask." And they are willing to pay any price for an exclusive class of, say, twenty. I have not one thing I could tell a class of twelve, twenty, or one, that I haven't told you! I have not a thing that I have kept back as a secret. I have no secret. So, I couldn't possibly, unless I was a liar -- if I formed a group as an exclusive class to tell them something I haven't told publicly, it would be only to make the dollar that they've offered me. It's quite a temptation. When twenty people get together and say, "I'll give you one thousand dollars each," -- so twenty thousand dollars, and you say how long the class will be -- one week, two weeks, -- well, it's quite a temptation not to take the twenty thousand dollars in two weeks. But what could I tell them and live with myself that I haven't told every one in the world? I tell it to my maid. She comes home once a week, every Monday, and she's like a member of the family. When Doris comes to the house, we discuss. When I hear some statement from her that is on the negative side, I jack her up; and then I will spend five, ten, fifteen minutes with Doris. I'm paying her, mind you; so I am simply stopping her doing the work she is supposed to do by telling her something. What more could I tell some one else than I tell Doris? I can't find anything that I've held as a secret. "All that I have heard from my Father, I've told you" (John 15:15) So, I have not a thing that I could give to any private class that I cannot give, and haven't given, to the public class. No private class, none whatsoever. But there are those who believe you have a secret that you haven't yet revealed, and it's something they can put their fingers into and claim that they had something that no one else had. Well, I don't have that. So I call you friends. I called Marta a friend. I call Marge, with whom she was when she dropped dead, -- and Marge had a similar experience; only Marta saw it as God, -- he's Neville, and he's God; but Marge, with whom she was when she dropped dead, saw me as Jesus standing on the beach, facing this enormous crowd of people, all of different faiths, and I am speaking in a language they all understand, yet they differed, but each heard me in the language of his own tongue; and she said, "Why, he's Neville, but he's Jesus!"

It seems the height of blasphemy to say this, but I am telling you what I know from my own experience. But it doesn't take place here. Jesus as a man never walked the face of this earth -- not here. The Bible has no reference to any man that ever walked the face of this earth. It's a supernatural drama unfolding in man. So every child born of woman is the Jesus-to-be; and that is simply a pattern unfolding within him. He is the Pattern Man. And when it unfolds, he knows who he is. He tells it to his friends; some believe him, some don't. The majority will not. He tells it to his family, and they laugh at him.

As you are told in the 7th Chapter of John: "His brothers did not believe him, and they turned from him." (John 7:5, Revised Standard Version) They did not believe him. No one believed him, save a very few -- just a handful; and at the very end of the drama he walked with them and said, "What is all this ado about? and they said, "Haven't you heard?" and they began to tell him, but they thought he was the gardener. They still did not recognize him! (Luke 24:17, 18)

But the glory to me this night is that Marta recognized it here, and that today, by that recognition, she's been set free. Free as the wind, -- no more restoration to life in the world of Caesar; and the same thing is happening -- will happen eventually to Marge when Marge falls from this world -- the same thing. And every one will have it who really has faith in what I am talking about and they will see me because I will have the urge to unveil myself. He unveils . . self in a vision, and reveals Himself in that manner. He speaks in a dream, as Marge had the dream of the box like a little coffin, and she knew that within it she was there and she was Joseph. She knew she couldn't get out of that box until in that box she became Jesus, for only Jesus resurrects. And, so, he resurrects. Who resurrects? He is designated "Son of God" in power by his resurrection from the dead. So, only Jesus resurrects; so she has to actually form herself into Jesus to resurrect, and every one who resurrects is Jesus. There's not a thing in this world resurrects, but Jesus! So, even though your name is John or Mary or Peter, when you rise from the dead, you are Jesus without loss of identity of being Mary, being Peter, being Neville, or being any other name. This is the mystery.

Now, these mysteries of the Bible are not matters to be kept secret, but they are truths that are mysterious in character. It's difficult to convey them to the rational mind. The mind stands still before the mystery of God. You are trying to rationalize it. You can't do it.

So, here, the entire Old Testament is an adumbration -- a foreshadowing in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. It is like a rough sketch. That's why, when Paul said to the Galatians, -- he said: "Oh, foolish Galatians, who has bewitched you? Before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified?" (Galatians 3:1)

He's asking them: Have you forgotten? Let me ask you only this: "Did you receive the Spirit by the hearing of the law or by faith? Are you so foolish? Having received it, the Spirit by faith, are you now returning to the flesh?" (Galatians 3:2,3)

Are you going to see Jesus as a being of flesh and blood? He's not flesh and blood; He's not of this world, -- "I am not of this world." (John 8:23)

"You are from below, I am from above; you are of this world, I am not of this world." (John 8:23)

Are you going to see Him of this world? "Oh, foolish Galatians!" (Galatians 3:1) you say Him "portrayed --" Go to a play and see the drama unfold before you. Do you really believe what you see as the fact; or are you going to extract from it, like the allegory, and take from it what it really intends to tell you? So, here is a play unfolding before you. That's not the fact; that's the allegory. Now, try to extract the meaning of the story as you saw it unfold before you, for it was portrayed before you.

Then said he:: "From now on, I consider no one from the human point of view. Even though I once regarded Christ from a human point of view, I regard Him thus no longer." (Second Corinthians 5:16) So, he believed in a physical Christ, as the whole vast world does; then when the Light came to him and the whole thing unfolded within him, he couldn't see a physical Christ. He said, "I regard no one from a human point of view. Even though I once regarded Christ from a human point of view, I regard him thus no longer." (Second Corinthians 5:16) Read it.

So, here, you and I are the One Being, wearing this cross (indicating the body); and from this cross we will rise and when we rise, we are the Lord Jesus Christ. And then dramas like the one I've told you will take place, and you will set free those who believe it. "And every one who believes me now," he said: "You will know the truth, and the truth will set you free." (John 8:32)

The truth? Well, what truth must I know? He said, "I am the truth." (John 14:6) The truth? Well, what truth must I know? He said, "I am the truth," -- in other words, Know me. I've told you who I am, and the day will come that I will unveil myself to you, and you'll know me; and therefore you'll be knowing the truth, and that truth will set you free.

You will actually know me as I have told you I am; and in that day you'll be set free the minute you know me. For the minute I unveil myself before you, I'll be wearing the body of a man, for God is man. I'll be clothed in that of power, for He is Infinite Power. But I will wear my face, and my face is your friend. And, so, I will be your friend, and call you no longer a slave, for the slave will not know what I am doing; but I will call you a friend, for I've told you all that I've ever heard from my Father -- all that I've ever experienced in the mysteries I've told you. So, then, you are my friend, and you will see me as I've told you that I am; and in that moment that you see me and you believe it, because you have no uncertainty within you, you are set free!

So, when your little moment comes in time to depart this world and you drop the body, you are not restored; you are free. You are a child of God, -- immortal, wearing a glorious, glorified body in the Body of the Risen Christ.

Every one is going to have it. We can only postpone it by our cynicism and our -- well, unbelieving attitude towards it. It's the most difficult thing. I'm not saying it's the easiest thing in the world to grasp, but it's true. Every word of it is true. And can you conceive of anything worthwhile dwelling upon, other than this? It doesn't deny the world of Caesar. Oh, in the world of Caesar you can have anything you want, -- but anything you want you can have! It's all here for the taking. If you dare to assume that you are now what you want to be, and do not fail in the assumption, you'll get it. If you walk as though you were what you would like to be, you'll get it.

Here is a friend of mine in L.A. He comes to all the meetings, a handsome, wonderful lad of about 40 years of age. He says, "In my office this perfectly lovely girl, she serves all the different gentlemen who are in the office, and we all love her. One day she came into my office, and she spent twenty minutes telling me of the horrors of this world, where there are so few eligible men for marriage, and so many jerks -- millions of jerks and so few eligible men. So, after she poured it out for twenty minutes, I didn't say a word to her; she left the office, and I sat there for a few minutes, and I heard within me -- I heard her tell me that she had met the man -- the most glorious man that ever walked this earth, and they are dating and -- oh, she's just walking in the heavens. I did it at that moment. On my way home, driving on the freeway, I did it again. The next morning when I was shaving, I thought of her, and I did it again. Well, in ten days I had no confirmation of it. She still came into the office bringing the papers; and as she came in and she still seemed to be gloomy, I did it again. Well, ten days went by, and all of a sudden she came in, and here is sheer ecstacy! She spent one-half hour of my precious time telling me of the man of men in this world. They are dating, and they are dating night after night. Why, there's not a person in this world comparable to this man."

Well, what did he do? He simply used his imagination to give her what she wanted. She wanted a man, and not a jerk; so he simply got a man. And, now, as far as she is concerned, he is just the best man in this world. Well, I closed on the very last Friday in June; so I do not know if it is consummated or not, -- I don't know. But they are dating every, every day; and as far as she is concerned he is the only man in the world. But who did it? My friend; his name is Ray Lee. He sat down, -- he likes her as a friend, and all the men in the office -- they like her. She has worked in the office for a while. It's an advertising office. And Ray, knowing this principle, he figures, All right, we'll forget all of the people in this world that she thinks are no good, and I will now see that she has a perfect man. And that's all that Ray did. On his way home, he did it; next morning when he was shaving, he did it; and he was reminded by her gloom that something must be done more than what he did; so he did it again. So, he did it maybe four or five times in that interval; and in less than two weeks, she finds an angel on earth. Of course, he may not always be that; but, nevertheless, at the moment, he is all that he (Ray Lee) wanted her to find.

You can have anything in this world, -- I don't care what it is, -- if you'll apply God's law. And God's law is simple: Whatever you desire, believe that you have received it, and you will. Well, if you believe that you've received it how would you feel? Just how would you feel? That's the feeling, -- catch it! Catch that feeling, and don't let it go! You have found Me; well, don't let Me go. Let all the others go, but don't let Me go. You have found salvation in that mood. That mood, were it true, would save you from all that you formally had but you didn't want.

Now, this mood will save you. Catch this mood, for that's the mood that will save you, -- and walk in it. That belongs to the world of Caesar; but while we are in the world of Caesar, why not use it? And use it wisely; use it lovingly. But I am trying to get you beyond the world of Caesar to something that never passes away, because the most glorious romance in the world today must come to a end, and death will end it.

You love your child, and you'll die this very moment for your child. If you and your child were held by some monster in the world, and they said, "One of you must die," no father in this world would hesitate for an Nth part of a second, who loves his child, to say, "Take my life." He couldn't for one moment, if he were father who loves his child, hesitate to say, "What are you asking about?" You don't ask those questions; it's just, "Take my life." What does it matter? "But promise me as a man and save hers. Don't take her -- you can't take both. You take my life."

You wouldn't hesitate if you loved some one. Yet it has to part; either you go first or she goes first; and every man worthy of his name wants himself to go before the ones he loves. He wesn't want to say Good-bye to one here that he truly loves. He wants to go first. But it has to be a parting in the world of Caesar, but not in the world of Heaven. There is no parting. It's an immortal body. It is a body that is forever, and relationships are forever; they are not parted. And it is harmony, and one body holds it all. One Lord, one body, one spirit, without loss of identity.

So, here, while we are here, even though we know we've got to part, you go into a building or you go into a city, and a building that you knew and loved -- where is it? It's gone. I go to New York every year. You can get into a taxi and say, "Take me to So-and-So." "That's gone, Sir." "Well, I'll tell you what, -- take me to that restaurant." "Why, that's gone, too, Sir." Then you get another restaurant; after a while, you think, What's left? You had better stick to something that you think is left, because you mention this hotel, -- that hotel is gone; and I'm not kidding. I mean from experience, -- I lived there for years and years. I came to New York City in 1922, and I have lived in New York City. I knew every square inch of it. And here, these lovely hotels where I used to go to dinner and different restaurants, -- well, that hotel is gone now, that restaurant is gone, and they are all gone. New buildings are in their place, yes; but you don't know these buildings, and you don't know the personnel of the restaurants. They are all gone. So, not a thing is permanent in this world. It all vanishes. But while vanishing, -- all right, you have to live in the world of Caesar, apply His law, and have all the happiness that you want in this world.

Don't let any one tell you that any limit is placed upon the power of belief. There is no limit placed upon it. But don't forget the Promise. Dwell upon the Promise, for that's the only important thing in this world: When you awake and you are God, without loss of identity, -- and, may I tell you? no matter what you might think of yourself today, as a man, -- and you know every person in the world can be improved in his body, in his face, -- I am telling you, when you se the face that is your face, there is no room for improvement. There is no room for improvement! I don't care what you may think of yourself today, or what any one in the world may think of you, there is no room for improvement. That face i God's face! It's perfect, and yet it's your face; and every one will know they are looking at you, and yet, it's your face, and there's no room for improvement. It's God's face!

And the body is man, and you may wear the garment of power, or you may wear the garment of wisdom, for both are the definitions of Christ. "Christ is the Power of God and the Wisdom of God." (First Corinthians 1:24)

In the case of these two: I wore the garment of Power in one, and I wore in the other the garment of Love, for that is God's true garment. But you don't wear it because you're simply a man in the eyes of Caesor, and a very weak, limited, fragile person.

Now, let us to into the Silence. Good.

Now, are there any questions, please?

(Question was inaudible on the tape)

Neville: No; I said that man can, by his cynicism,, as told in Scripture, turn his back upon the Truth. He's not going to stop it from coming into fulfillment. He could, by turning away from it, delay it as far as he is concerned; but he's not going to stop the ultimate end, because it's God's will that not one be lost, and all will be saved.

Every one is going to be saved, -- I don't care who he is, even the Hitlers and the Stalins of the world. Not one will be discarded. But if I scoff at the Word of God, as we are told in the Second Letter of Peter: "In the latter days, scoffers will come scoffing saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" (Second Peter 3:3, 4)

Well, ever since the fathers fell asleep, all things have continued as they were from the foundation of the world; and they forget that a thousand years is as a day in the eyes of God. So, they are wondering what has happened since the fathers fell asleep. Well, you and I are "the fathers," and we are asleep, and u don't believe these things.

For instance, I find greater belief among strangers than I would in my family Among my family, I have no belief whatsoever. My wife, yes; my wife believes. My son, no. As far as he is concerned, this is all stupid. My daughter, she is believing; but like all these young girls today, -- she is 26, a college graduate -- and no one is more stupid than your father when you're 18; and then by the tim you are 24, it's amazing how quickly he became wise! In four short years he became so wise; but at 18, he was the most stupid person in the world, because she knew that I couldn't pass any examination that was given her to enter college. I would flunk any college examination; and so, therefore, she catalogued me right away as stupid. And the wisest people she ever knew, which was in college, were the teachers. Every one was simply a giant in her eye; but all of a sudden, they become just normal people; and then her father, who was stupid, -- well, she doesn't voice it, but I know that she has changed her attitude. But my brothers and my sister at home, they can't give me one word because they don't believe one thing I say. First of all, Neville is simply one of the boys. Well, I am one of the boys, -- I can't deny that. And, so, what on earth is he talking about? because they all believe in the historicity of Scripture. I tell my sister it isn't history, not secular history. It's Salvation history. It's eternal history but it's not secular history. Well, my sister is a pillar of the Christian church -- the Anglican Church. She contributes, not only her time, but her money. She gives generously to the church -- supports the old men's home, the old women home -- all the homes; and she is the most generous one because she has it. She has oodles of money, and she gives generously to the church. But she also gives her time to the church, and she's always in the church Sunday morning, whether she feels well or not; her husband has to drive her to church, and she goes. She has to be in church. So we get together and over the morning's breakfast, she doesn't want to discuss it; but something will always come up to -- you know, -- prompt some little thing. But it's an irritant as far as she is concerned. That will disturb her, and she doesn't want to be disturbed. She's satisfied that Jesus is a man, as she was taught -- not as she discovered from Scripture or from a vision, but as she was taught by her ministers. And they are just as blind as my sister.

And as far as my brothers are concerned, they have made all the money in the world that they want or they need, -- and don't disturb them. As my brother Victor said, "Look here, you are interested in what is going to happen after this world. I didn't know what was going to happen when I came into it, and I made a good world of it. I came here without knowing what I am supposed to do, and I did a darn good job," said he. "Well, when I go into the other world, I'll do a good job, too." So, that's his concept. So, "just don't bring up any of these things because I'm not interested."

So, when I go home, I leave them alone, -- only to fulfill Scripture. This whole thing is fulfillment of Scripture. "His brothers did not believe him." (John 7:5, Revised Standard Version)

I have an Aunt, -- she's 92 years old. The family supports her. She lives in Jersey. She and I, when I was just a boy and the visions began, she thought herself one marvelous, wonderful Christian. She couldn't let her daughter marry the son of the devil only because he was a Christian, but of a different denomination; so he was the son of the devil. So, they got married anyway. And here is this Aunt of mine, and one day I said to her, "Don't you know that Jesus had brothers?" because I knew that she believed in the literal word of the Scriptures. She said, "Our good Lord had brothers?" and she just got up and ran out of the room. She couldn't be in the presence of the devil, who was her nephew!

So, when she came back, I said, "Do you have a Bible?" "Yes." I said, "Go and get it." She brought it in. I said, "Open it up. Turn to the 6th chapter of Mark and start reading." Well, you only get to the third verse when they name the brothers: James, Joses and Simon and Judas, and "his sisters are with us this day" (Mark 6:3) -- plural; and when she read it she took the book -- and she could have eaten it, because I made her see what she hadn't seen before.

She wants the literal word. Well, read the literal word. He had at least -- at the very least, it was a family of seven. And, so, she wants to believe in this strange, peculiar rigidity, -- No!

A man came to my meetings every night when I lectured in L.A. until one night when I said, "I am Mary." I said, "I am Mary, and birth to God must give,
If I in blessedness for now and evermore would live." [redacted]

And he said from the audience, -- he was in the first row, -- "You don't look like Mary to me." I said, "May I tell you that you are Mary, too? You call yourself a man." He's a Green Beret -- always wore his green beret; he's from the Green Beret Regiment, and very proud of it. He always wore it, even though he was in the meeting -- he never took the hat off.

I said, "You are Mary; and just as I gave birth to Christ, you must give birth to Christ or live in hell for the rest of eternity, for the only salvation is to bring forth Christ, and you will give it.."

He never came back. After the meeting, he came forward and said, "You know, I want to tell you something, Neville; you do teach some of the truth, but not all the truth."

I said, "Well, thank you very much."

(End of tape recording.)

---oOo---

Neville 01-08-1963

PROPHETIC BLUEPRINTS

Tonight's subject is "Prophetic Blueprints." Now we could take it on this level, but I will not. To summarize it on this level, may I tell you: if you could conceive of an infinite might as a great computer, and if the imaginal activities of all of us – every man, woman and child in the world – make us free to change this activity at any moment in time, then you could predict the future for this level; for this level is the outpouring or outpicturing of the imaginal activities of men, women, and children in this world. You can prove it in your own individual life by setting a goal and imagining that you are at the end of that goal. Remain faithful to your goal, and no power in this world can stop it in your peculiar individual life. Take it and multiply it by the world, and you will see what it would be on this level. You will see that you and I are free to imagine things that are in conflict with God's purpose, and in the short run we can accomplish them. Yet, it is God's purpose that is ultimately the only true end and that is realized. So, tonight we will take it from a higher level.

If you would know your future, study the story of Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is the actual realization of God's prophetic blueprint for man's redemption. Everything said of Jesus Christ will one day be said of you, individually. Everything that he ever experienced, you will experience. Jesus Christ is only the fulfillment of all that was told us in the Old Testament. The old is the plan, the plot, the purpose of God - and Jesus Christ is the fulfillment of that purpose. There is a rabinnical principle that what is not written in Scripture, is non-exisistant. Now, when they speak of Scripture, they meant only the Old Testament. There was no New Testament. The drama of Jesus was this principle. As I stand here tonight, I am speaking from experience. I make no claim to be any other than the man you know me to be. I do not differ from you at all - just a man with all the weaknesses and limitations of any man in this world. Yet, I know this story to be true, and I know it to be true from experience. The five words in the end of Luke could summarize the entire Gospel: "They told what had happened." Moffit describes this phrase in Greek. As he translated it: "They related their own experience." Tonight, I will relate my own experience, to tell you how true this is.

The entire drama of Christ Jesus took place in the fall of man. It did not take place on the surface, like this. It did not take place here at all. Therefore, no one believed him. At the very end of the journey a few – just a remnant – accepted it, and the rest rejected it because he could not share with the world what he had experienced in the depth of his own soul. The cue was given in the earliest of the gospels, Mark. Here, we are told the very first sign to appear: "Immediately the heavens opened and he saw the Spirit like a dove descending upon him" and then we hear the words – seemingly from out of space – "This is my beloved son with whom I am well pleased."

Now it is said (if you read it carefully): no one experienced this but Jesus. It is recorded in scripture, but he must have told it, because no one saw the heavens open or saw the spirit like a dove descending upon him, but him upon whom it descended. If Mark records it as an experience, then it could only be an experience that was told him by the one who experienced it. The other gospels modify it somewhat and imply that John saw it, but they pull forcefully upon the earliest gospel, which is Mark. I can tell you my experience of that scene, and it is true. The same simple man, limited as I am, had that experience. No one saw it from this level. I can tell you, and you can either believe it or reject it.

You are told: "Immediately the heavens opened." It does, suddenly, and you see nothing but infinity, translucence, infinite expansion– and hovering above you is a dove of a light beige color, and the dove is looking at you and you look at the dove unconcerned, and it is all anchored on you. It remains there over you, seemingly without effort on its part, and yet it is alive and looking at you. Then you automatically lift your hand (in my case it was my left hand) and it descended and perched on my index finger. I brought it down to my face, and it smothered me with kisses. I had the impulse to take it across my head, and it kissed and kissed me.

Then a woman on my left made this statement: "He loves you." I heard no voice saying: "This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." I only heard the woman's voice, and she said: "He loves you," meaning the dove, symbolizing the Holy Spirit. Then she said to me: "They (now using the plural, and speaking of birds) do not come near man," And she gave me the reason: "To them, we are like a large bowel – a consuming bowel, and we give off to them a most offensive odor, so they try to avoid contact with man. But this one pierced this ring of odors and came through because of his love for you." And the only sign of "I love you" was the demonstration – the actual physical demonstration – of a dove smothering me with kisses all over my head and ears and neck. So I know that story is true. I can share it with you only in words. You may believe it or disbelieve it. The choice is yours.

We are told in John 7:3-8: "So his brothers said to him, 'Leave here and go to Judea, that your disciples may see the works you are doing. For no man works in secret if he seeks to be known openly. If you do these things, show yourself to the world.' For even his brothers did not believe in him. Jesus said to them, 'My time has not yet come, but your time is always here. The world cannot hate you, but it hates me because I testify of it that its works are evil . . . Go to the feast yourselves; I am not going up to the feast, for my time has not yet fully come.'" The disciples had not yet seen any demonstration of the power of which he spoke.

Our time is always here, and this time is curved, and we are moving on a circle that is a recurring circle, and we have a short memory and cannot remember the things that have happened; therefore we cannot foresee the things that are going to happen, for this is a wheel of recurrence. Our time is always here, but he has tasted of the power of the New Age and can only describe the satisfaction of that power of the New Age, but cannot demonstrate it to the satisfaction of anyone in this age. Here he speaks of this power and he knows, and tells them quite firmly: "You will experience it." He knows everyone will experience it. It was on this level. In this age none believed it – it is too fantastic. He rises into a world completely subject to his imaginative power. Now, here is a sign: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." Bear in mind the symbol: this [the body] is the earth, and I, if I be lifted up from this garment called "earth," I will call all men unto me.

I see in the audience tonight a gentleman who wrote me a letter last Saturday. His experience preceded mine. He is much younger than I am. He does not look any older than my son, who will be 39 in May of this year. In his letter he said it happened to him in 1940. In my case, it happened in 1941. I was coming through the Caribbean Sea on a freighter from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad to Mobile, Alabama. I retired early that night. Suddenly I am lifted up from this earth, and as I am lifted up, a heavenly chorus comes into view and they are singing: "Neville is risen, Neville is risen." Here I am – I do not need the sun, or the moon, or the stars for light, for I am light unto myself. It is not brilliant, but it is luminous beyond the wildest dream – but it is a gentle light. Then I came upon an infinite sea of human imperfection – the blind, the withered, the halt. I had no human compassion, may I tell you. As I walked by, there was not a shred of human compassion in me. I simply demonstrated this new power called, "the power of God." As I walked by, I fed every one of the thousands waiting for my appearance. Not everyone wants meat or bread. I gave them their most urgent need. One wanted eyes, another wanted arms for empty sockets – and lovely eyes were molded into empty sockets and arms into empty sockets. Everything that was missing in the human body came into being as I walked by. As I came to the end and the last one was completely satisfied with whatever he needed, then this chorus exalted: "It is finished." Then I – in a world of luminosity, of infinite expansion – contracted into this world of opacity, and reached the limit of this contraction called "earth," which is the body I am now wearing. Here is this experience verifying the truth of that statement that "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

These experiences are adventures of the soul. It did not take place on this level. To this day, in 1963, our most brilliant scholars, reading this ancient manuscript do not understand it, because you cannot grasp it without these experiences. And here is one who has had them, and I am going to say to you: I am confident that some of you present tonight must have it before you taste death. Of that I am convinced. This is the statement made in Mark 8:36: "For what does it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?" Then he said: "Truly, I say to you, there are some standing here who will not taste death before they see the kingdom of God come with power." (Mark 9:1) I tell you: there are some seated here tonight that will not taste death before they see the kingdom of God come with power. It has all to do with the age to come, and you will taste of the power of that age to come. In other words, you will experience that power before you taste death, for all things in this world die. These are mortal garments and they all die. Who are you? No one knows – no, not the angels of heaven, only the Father. When the curtain begins to lift in him and Christ is in him, wherever he goes there is a remnant – whether ten, or a thousand, or a million – a remnant present will not taste death until they see the kingdom of God come with power. Who you are, I do not know. That is hidden from me.

Listen to these words: "The prophets who prophesied of the grace that was to be yours, searched and inquired about this salvation. They inquired what person of them was indicated by the Spirit of Christ within them when predicting the sufferings of Christ and the subsequent glory." It was revealed to them that they were searching not themselves, but you. Not the things that are now announced to them by those who preach the good news – things unto which angels long to look; therefore, set your hope fully upon the grace that is coming to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ. Here are men organized by divine providence for spiritual communion, and from the depths of their soul Christ is speaking. Listen: "Christ in them predicts this." Not Christ on the outside – there is no Christ on the outside. If any man tries to influence you to trust him as a leader, do not believe him. Christ in you is slowly being unveiled, the only Christ in the world. "The prophets who prophesied of the grace, that was to be yours," meaning God's gift of himself to man, unearned, unmerited – you cannot earn it. It is too good. No one could ever in this world earn it. It is given to you by God. You will receive it as an inheritance. God tells us "They shall have no inheritance; I AM their inheritance; and you shall give them no possession in Israel; I AM their possession." (Ezekiel 44:28) You inherit God – you inherit his kingdom, for there cannot be a kingdom without a king. You inherit the whole as he slowly unveils himself in you, and the plot of his unveiling is described in the New Testament.

They searched the scripture (the Old Testament) and could not find the Christ of whom they were told. They searched it from beginning to end and could not find who he is. "What person of them was indicated by the Spirit of Christ in them when predicting the sufferings of Christ and his subsequent glory?" They could not find it. Have you ever had a toothache? Who suffered? Christ did. Have you ever been cut? Christ was cut. You witnessed a friend go through "the gate" and you wept? It is Christ weeping. Christ suffers. There is nothing but Christ, and he is your own wonderful human imagination. He suffers until the moment of that last day, when he begins to unveil himself in you as you.

And so, the prophetic blueprint for you, individually, is revealed to us in the New Testament. You cannot find it in the Old Testament until it begins to unfold itself in the New, and then you go back and see where the prophets have recorded it – but they could not understand it. Like all of us, they were looking for a person. Where will he come from? They asked a simple question. When Christ comes, no one knows where he comes from. The last words asked him by Pilate were: "Where do you come from?" He does not answer. If he answered he came from a certain area, he is not speaking of the outer garment, and he could not tell them because they would not understand it. So, that is the fulfilled scripture in the last book of the Old Testament.

Suddenly he appears in a temple, and no one knows where he comes from. Who appears? The Lord. He appears so suddenly in you that you do not have the slightest idea what is taking place. (Malachi 3) And suddenly you are in possession of a power no being on earth dreams of – greater than any power on earth. What power on earth could take unnumbered eyes and hands and arms and legs and mold them in perfect bodies? They cannot make a hair of your head. Here, a man walks by, unmoved by human compassion, and he could make anything appear that was urgently needed. He is exercising a power. Seeing this human imperfection, the question is asked: "Who sinned? This man, or his parents?" "Neither this man nor his parents, but that the works of God be made manifest." What did I care who sinned, when I saw the blind and the lame and the halt made perfect! It is an entirely different world into which we are all moving.

Every being is moving into this world, and God's will surely will be manifest, even by the cruel surgery of war. "He has made everything for its purpose – even the wicked for the day of trouble." His purpose is to give us himself, that we may inherit God. We inherit God, that we may live and function as God in an entirely different age. But you do not change your identity. I have not changed my identity. From my own experience, there will be a radical discontinuity of form. The lady said to me: "We are to them (the birds – the symbol of the Holy Spirit) but large bowels giving off the most offensive odor to these beings of peace and gentility. The dove is not only the symbol of gentleness and peace, but the symbol of the creative power of God. When he is smothering you with kisses, he is transferring to you the creative power of his own being. Slowly the whole thing begins to unfold in symbols – actual mystical experience – and you will see that that offensive area of your body will be completely transformed. You cannot describe it to anyone. Identity remains; hands, feet remain, but what that large bowel is transformed into, I cannot tell you.

Look for the large bowel on the leaf in the cabbage patch and you see the caterpillar – but you cannot see the butterfly. Suddenly comes the state of the limit of contraction –or chrysalis – unmoved. Out of that seemingly dead state comes the butterfly. You could not have predicted it when you looked at the large bowel consuming the leaf. Something altogether different comes out. Hands, feet, legs remain, but what the transformed bowel is, is a power beyond the wildest dream of man. It creates without the divided image it sees. It does not need any transforming itself. It, in itself, is life. You are life in yourself and need nothing to sustain life – no food. I know on this level when one enjoys a good meal, it may not be the most desired anticipation. But in that age, you are life in yourself. No need of any substance from without. You will have these demonstrations of the power of the New Age. I am speaking from experience.

There is a strange reversal of order in these experiences. The first experience recorded in Mark is the descent of the dove. In my many mystical experiences, that has been my latest. It happened on the 1st of January of this year. So, I do not know. I will not speculate. He has nothing recorded earlier than that. How close to departure from this level, I have not the slightest idea. It makes no difference to me at all. The earliest recorded in Mark is my last experience. Those he recorded all the way down, coming to the end, were my earliest experiences. When he said: "I am the Light of the world," I have had that experience. It happened when I had just turned twenty. An infinite sea of liquid light, and I am it. That comes late in the story as he unfolds it, and the one that comes first, is my latest. If this thing recorded for us in the scripture is by design or by accident, I do not know. If the evangelist recorded it by design and mixed the things up so you would not question as to how they would unfold, I do not know. It could be that the parchments were dislocated. We had no printers in those days. I only know: if I told you the story as it has unfolded in me, the order of arrangement would radically change, because we are all unique in God's eyes, and the experiences would naturally come differently.

My friend who is here tonight had this experience in 1940. I do not think he could have been more than a boy in his teens. He was a scoutmaster. He was happy with the boys and felt delighted with their accomplishments. He went to bed feeling pleasure with the accomplishments of the day. This night, he too, was lifted up on high and heard this heavenly chorus. I heard the words: "Neville is risen." In his letter to me, he used the pronoun "he." Whether he heard that as recorded in scripture, or his own name called, I do not know. I heard my own name called over and over, and that was the theme of this heavenly chorus as it swelled through the heavens. But because we are different in God's eyes, these eternal experiences would take on certain changes as we individually experience them. We could sit tonight in a concert and no two here would have heard the same thing. But I do hope you will hear and believe it. There are some seated here tonight who will not taste death before they see the kingdom of God come with power. One here tonight – and he has not left this garment of flesh – has tasted of this experience. There is always one, everywhere, who has tasted the unveiling of Christ. Everyone will be Christ-like without losing his distinctive individuality. Not one will fail, because God would fail, and that is an impossibility.

So I tell you: believe this prophetic blueprint of which I speak this night. It may not be to the satisfaction of those who want a bigger and better job tomorrow. But that is simple – all that is easy. You can have a plot and plan contrary to God's purpose, and execute it. But you will not thwart God's purpose. He is not concerned whether you are rich or poor, known or unknown. He does not care about these superficial values on this level. "What does it profit a man who would gain the whole vast world and forfeit his soul." Yet, there are such men. I saw in this morning's paper – and undoubtedly he has left hundreds of millions behind him – suddenly he fell back and is gone. The dust to dust returns from whence it was taken, and the spirit returns to God.

Don't for one moment forget this, when people tell you they need not suffer. They predict the sufferings of Christ. Only through suffering can you turn into Christ. God is looking for the guileless heart, not the guileful heart. He does not care how you can out-trick any being in the world. He is looking for other than that. He is looking for the heart of the Israelite: only the pure in heart can see God. Nothing in this world matters but the unveiling of Christ, and Christ is buried in every being. "I have been crucified with Christ. It is not I who live but Christ lives in me and the life I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of God who loved me and gave Himself for me." He actually became me, and I did not know it. I went about my business between receiving the promise, and receiving that which was promised.

There is a vast difference between receiving the promise and receiving what is promised. When we receive the promise, we are recipients of the inheritance. We are declared recipients of the inheritance. When we receive what is promised we obtain the inheritance. And, between these two points, of receiving the promise that I will inherit God, and actually receiving what is promised – that is God Himself – lies the life of the individual.

And, so, we move from receiving the promise to receiving what is promised, and we pass through hell. That is the Hades through which Christ passes after the crucifixion. In the beginning we are crucified with God and then come all of these experiences. And then comes the end, and the end is an unveiling process. And everything said in the gospels about Christ Jesus will be one day experienced by you as your own personal experience, and then and only then, will you know who Christ Jesus is. Revelation is the unveiling of Jesus Christ in you. And when you are unveiled, then you resurrect.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 09-22-1967

PROPHETIC SKETCHES

The stories recorded in the Bible are prophetic sketches of events predestined to take place in the individual you!

We are told in the seventh chapter of John: "We know where this man comes from, yet we are told that when the Christ appears no one will know where he comes from." Speaking of the Father and the higher realm to which he now belongs, Jesus says: "A time will come when I will no longer speak to you in parables, but tell you plainly of the Father." Trying to convince man of man's own Fatherhood from which he came and to which he will return, Jesus said: "I came out from the Father and I have come into the world. Again I am leaving the world and returning to the Father." Now, where does he speak plainly? In the 14th chapter of John, saying: "He who sees me has seen the Father," and in the 10th [chapter] of John, when he states: "I and the Father are one."

Now let us take the first great sketch as recorded in the Book of Genesis (the seed-plot of the Bible). The Book begins: "In the beginning, God" and ends, "…in a coffin in Egypt." In the 37th chapter it is stated: "Behold this dreamer cometh." The one placed in the coffin is the dreamer, called Joseph. It is he who dreams that the sun and the moon and eleven stars come down and bow to him. And while gathering the sheaves, he saw his sheaf stand erect while all the others bowed to him. And when the father heard of these dreams, he said: "I and your mother and brothers will bow to you and serve you?" Well, time proved that it was true, for Joseph became the sovereign ruler over all. This outline, this prophetic sketch, is all about God! "In the beginning God" 9and the first and the last are one). :"I am the beginning and the end, the alpha and the omega, the first and the last." In the beginning God laid himself down in a coffin in Egypt. He dreams the dream of life in the coffin of you, for there is nothing in this world but God. Your "I am" is the God of scripture who is buried in the coffin called by your mortal name.

Now, Genesis ends on a mute note…a coffin. It's the overture to the exodus, where God is led out of the coffin in which he was placed, bringing with him the man in whom he is buried. This exodus is accomplished by signs and wonders. The foundation of the entire drama is the resurrection, for you cannot enter the New Age until you are a Son of the resurrection. "This age" is the age of death, while "that age" is the age of the resurrected.

The first sketch is given to us in the 11th chapter of the Book of John. It is the story of Lazarus, which means "God has helped." Now, Lazarus is only mentioned in the Book of John, yet in the 10th chapter of the Book of Luke his sisters Martha and Mary invite Jesus to be a guest in their home. Now, surely if the story of Lazarus was to be taken on this level, he would have been mentioned in Luke, but his story is a foreshadowing of that which is going to happen in you!

Many signs and wonders are incorporated into this story. When told: "He whom you love is ill," Jesus turned to his disciples and said: "The sickness is not unto death. It is for the glory of God, that the Son of God may be glorified." Having waited two extra days, he turned to his disciples on the fourth day and said: "Lazarus is dead, but let us go to him." Then to the sisters he said, "Your brother will rise again." When Martha said: "I know he will rise in the resurrection at the last day," Jesus replied: "I am the resurrection." Then the stone is rolled away and Lazarus is resurrected.

Prior to the resurrection the statement is made: "By this time he stinketh, for he has been dead four days." Why was this remark included in scripture? Because the evangelist who had the vision was recording his own personal experience. Only when you have had the experience can you see how these events are tied together. And when this first prophetic sketch has been fulfilled in you, the new age has begun.

As I said earlier, we are all buried within the coffin of ourselves; but we don't know it and will not know it until the last trumpet, on the last day. It is a mystery in which we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet shall sound and the dead will be raised, raised into the immortal body to wear immortality, as told us in the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians.

The Mormon Temple has a statue of a man blowing a trumpet, but the word "trumpet" means "reverberation; to vibrate." And may I tell you, when that day comes upon you, you will know a vibration such as you have never known before. Centered in your head, it comes in the twinkling of an eye, at that last trumpet. This statement implies that there are other vibrations, but this is the final one, for from it you will awaken and rise from the dead from the coffin in which you are buried.

I never once entertained the thought that I was in a coffin, that this skull of mine was a tomb. I looked upon my skull as something very much alive and hoped that it would not be injured, for everything that I knew in this world I had brought forth from this head of mine. Yet, when the vibration possessed me I began to awaken as I have never awakened before, to find myself completely entombed in my skull. I was alone and the tomb was completely sealed. There was no way out except by rolling away the stone, which I did from within, with no help from one on the outside. I knew intuitively that if I pressed, something would roll away from the base of my skull. I did it and came out, inch by inch, just like a child comes out of the mother's womb. I who had been dead had awakened because of the vibration called the trumpet, awakened to realize who the Christ of scripture really is.

I have told you my story. I have finished the race and now the time for my departure has come. But when I depart I will send the Holy Spirit who will bring to your remembrance all that I have told you be reenacting the story of Jesus Christ, in you, casting you in the central role.

Who is Christ Jesus? The very breath of every being in the world. You could not live if Christ was not buried within you. His death turned your life onto a profound sleep. Those in great eternity see this world as a world of the dead, but in the third sketch of the resurrection, Christ awakens in each one of us individually, by the blast of the last trumpet.

In the 27th chapter of the Book of Isaiah we are told: "I will gather you one by one, O people of Israel." Each one of us is unique in the eyes of God, and each has his place in God's body; therefore not one can be lost, but everyone will be called individually, in his own time.

When you read scripture don't take any word for granted. Look it up in the Strong's Concordance to determine the original meaning. The trumpet spoken of in scripture hasn't a thing to do with any outside symbolism such as the one atop the Mormon Temple, which depicts a man blowing a trumpet to awaken the world with its sound. One by one, each will hear the trumpet call and enter the body of God, the only church of scripture. The word "church" means: "the assembly of the resurrected; the redeemed." How can all be gathered into one? The same way that millions of atoms in your brain can be gathered into the human skull. It's a mystery, the greatest mystery known to external man.

These prophetic sketches are sketches of events which will happen in you. In the 37th chapter of the Book of Genesis, Joseph - the one God loves most and who is the prototype of Christ Jesus - is made a coat of many colors. Entering Egypt, Joseph is sold into slavery and appears in the New Testament in the form of a slave, made in the likeness of man. But no one killed God. Did he not say: "No one takes my life, I lay it down myself. I have the power to lay it down and the power to lift it up again." No Roman soldiers or Jews ever killed Jesus. The story hasn't a thing to do with any race of men. These are prophetic sketches. They are adumbrated, faint outlines omitting all the details, all the figures. They show the individual, when it unfolds in him how Christ comes the second time. The drama unfolds in each individually, so in the end there is Jesus only. Not Jesus and a bunch of redeemed men. It is God's power and wisdom (called Christ) in man that is resurrected, so in the end there is nothing but Jesus and his Christ.

When the question is asked: "What think ye of the Christ, whose Son is he?" They replied: "The son of David." Then he questions: "Why then did David, in the Spirit call him Lord? If David in the Spirit calls him 'Lord' how can he be David's son?" Man matures when he becomes our own father's Father! You see, Christ, God's power and wisdom, is buried in humanity. And humanity collectively is all the generations of men and their accomplishments. When these are all fused into a single moment of time, humanity is personified as David. And out of humanity (both the whole and individually) comes the Christ, as God's power (which is God himself) coming from the Davidhood of Man.

In the 7th chapter of 2 Samuel, the prophet said to David: "The Lord declares to you, "I will raise up your son after you, who will come forth from your body. I will be his father and he will be my son." I didn't realize I was so sound asleep that I was dead, until the night when I was awakened and came forth from the coffin of myself. The Lord declared through his prophet Samuel that he will be my father, but I did not know it then.

Now we are told: "Do not touch me as I have not yet ascended to the Father." Even though you are born from above you do not know you are God the Father, and will not know it until David, in the Spirit, calls you "Lord." Only then will you be touched by the realization of who you really are.

Everyone is destined to discover his Godhood, but we aren't a bunch of gods running around. The word "God" in the sentence, "In the beginning God" is "elohim." It is a plural word, a compound unity of one made up of others. Everyone will one day ascend to the Father and encounter David of Biblical fame. And when you look into the eyes of your son, David, your memory will return and you will know you are his father and he will know he is your son.

In the 22nd Psalm, David cries out: "My God, my God why hast thou forsaken me? The dogs surround me."

When you read that you may think of dogs surrounding a young lad, but the word "dog" in scripture means "the male temple prostitute." When David appeared to reveal my fatherhood, homosexuals stood nearby looking concupiscently at him. Then I told them the supposedly ancient story of how David brought down the giant Goliath, thereby becoming victorious over death. This 22nd chapter of Psalms is used through the New Testament as messianic, and everyone is going to have the experience recorded there.

Don't take any word in scripture for granted. Our scholars chose the words that made sense to them or made the sentence more beautifully expressed, but not necessarily the meaning the authors meant to convey. Take the preposition "in" as in the statements, "Scripture must be fulfilled in me" and "When it pleased God to reveal his Son in me." Some scholars have changed the preposition to read "to" me, but when God's son is revealed in you, you will confer not with flesh and blood. To whom could you go? In my own case I haven't found a priest, a rabbi, a Christian Science teacher, Unity, or minister of any ism who will accept the revelation of David as the son of the Lord Christ Jesus. But if Jesus said: "I am the Father" then he must have a son, for how can a person be a father without a child? When Phillip said: "Lord show us the Father" he was told: "I have been so long with you Philip and yet you do not know me? He who has seen me has seen the Father, how then can you say "Show us the father?"

We call the pope the great father, yet he claims he's a celibate. Extending his hand, he declares that the one hundred thousand who stand in the square and the five hundred million who watch him on television are his children. What a lot of nonsense. You have a child, a child who is the embodiment, the quintessence of all humanity. That child is David.

To the Hebrew mind history consists of all the generations of men, plus all of their experiences, fused into a single whole. That concentrated time into which all are gathered and fused is called "eternity, a youth, a lad, a stripling." This is what God has put into the mind of man, yet so that man cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end. Putting the quintessence of all humanity, its races and nations in man's mind, when man has experienced them all, they are fused into a youth and personified as David, the one to whom God spoke saying: "Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee."

Now the statement is made: "We know where this man comes from, but when the Christ comes no one will know where he comes from." Why? Because he comes from within, for that's where he died. Entering death's door, the human skull, God lay down in his grave and shares with you His visions of eternity until He awakes. And when He awakes you are God. But you will never know that you are He until His Son reveals you.

Listen carefully to the words in the 20th chapter of the Book of John: "Go to my brethren and say to them, I am ascending to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God." How will you ascend? By God's Son calling you Father. When it pleases God to reveal his Son in you, then you are sent. This comes five months after your resurrection. "Do not touch me as I have not yet ascended to the Father." Here you discover that there are intervals of time between the resurrection and the statement: "I am leaving the world and going to the Father, for you go to the awareness of being the Father when David calls you Lord. And from that moment on, although you walk in the world as flesh and blood, you are in the world but no longer of it.

These are prophetic sketches which begin in Genesis and end in Revelation. You may ask why it was not made plainer, to which I will quote the words of Blake: "That which can be made explicit to the idiot is not worth my care, and the ancients discovered that what was not too explicit was fittest for instruction because it rouses the faculties to act." When you were a child you thought as a child, you reasoned as a child, but when you become a Man you give up childish ways. The outer concept of life is for the child mind, but if you are hungry to go beyond the obvious and nothing in this world can satisfy that hunger but an experience of God, you have become a Man and are willing to give up your childish concepts.

I can't tell you my thrill when I read the letters I am receiving from you who attend, telling of your awakening. We are all that one Father David comes to reveal. It seems strange to be gathered one by one to unite into a single man who is God, but it is true. I tell you, you have but one Father and you are He. Coming out from yourself, you entered the world, now you are leaving the world and returning to yourself. This you did for a divine purpose. Having reached the limit of contraction by taking upon yourself the limitations of man, there is no limit to expansion. Reaching the limit of opacity by limiting yourself to the physical senses, there is no limit to translucency. When you break these bonds you become more expanded, more translucent until you are above the organization of sex. Knowing you are not male or female you will say: "Forgive them for they know not what they do, for whatever they do I am the cause. My every thought is a vibration, drawing to me that which it is implying."

This was set up in the beginning. "As a man sows, so shall he reap." It's the law of identical harvest, called "seedtime and harvest" in scripture. There will be no change. You plant weal, you reap weal. Plant wheat and wheat will grow, all caused by the human imagination. As you imagine you vibrate and call forth that which you have imagined. Your world is forever bearing witness to what you are imagining. You may not recognize your harvest and deny you have ever had such a horrible thought, but no one did it to or for you, you did it yourself.

In the beginning you promised that you would take the consequences of your imaginal acts, good, bad or indifferent. And you can try from now until the end of time to change the outside, but only when you change your way of thinking can you change your world. Give a man something on the outside to support him and you have conditioned his world and he will curse you when you stop it. But show him how to use his imagination to attract what he wants and you have given him the gift of life.

In all of these prophetic sketches, prophetic behaviors are laid out from beginning to end. The life of Jesus is a prophetic blueprint which everyone will experience within himself. Every character spoken of in scripture is within you. The parable of Lazarus is unique in the sense that the character is named. Other parables begin: There was a judge; a rich man came; a widow, but no name given to the character.

In the 16th chapter of the Book of Luke the story is told of a poor man named Lazarus who, after death found himself in Abraham's bosom. A rich man, filled with anguish, could not reach the state of faith. He found a gap between the two ages. This gap remains until God, in his infinite mercy, brings you from this age of sin and death up to that age of the resurrected. So the word "Lazarus" means, "God has helped." In this world of sin and death we are awakening one by one to unite into the single Man who is God.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard

January 28 1964

Purified by the Death of Your Delusions

Tonight's subject is about one's delusions: "Purified by the Death of Your Delusions." You may find it, well, I don't say you will find it profound, no, but I've always felt that whatever is most profoundly spiritual is in reality most directly practical, and you'll find this very practical. But, it does take us into other areas.

Possibly the most…if I could choose among the Beatitudes, I would choose the sixth, if I could choose. But it seems arrogant on anyone's part to choose among the great Beatitudes. The sixth Beatitude is "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God" (Mat.5:8). This is a profound statement because man becomes what he beholds, and no man becomes God until he can see God. It's God and God alone who unveils himself that man can see him. But it's an everlasting expansion of the unveiling, as we are told so clearly in Paul's letter to the Corinthians, the 3rd chapter of 2nd Corinthians: "And we all, with unveiled face, beholding the glory of the Lord, are being changed into his likeness from one degree of glory to another; for this is by the Lord who is the Spirit" (verse 18). So he unveils himself in our presence and we at that moment are transformed into the image of what we behold. We invariably become what we behold. The veil that we wear is this garment, and so he simply lifts it and exposes himself, and we behold him as we become him.

But, we are told there's a condition imposed upon it. And you might think, can I meet the condition? Let me repeat it, the condition is: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." You might wonder which is the more difficult, the condition or the promise, purity of heart, or seeing God? Well, let me tell you from my own experience, God is infinitely merciful. He initiates the process by which you and I are purified. You could sit from now to the end of time and you couldn't purify yourself. God initiates the entire plan of purification, and then devises the means by which we are purified. It happens so suddenly; you'll never dream in eternity how it happens.

So let me share with you a story told to me this past year in the city of San Francisco, this past fall. He's one perfectly marvelous chap. He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, the only child of parents who came here from Ireland, raised in a very rugged environment where he thought if he fought daily he was a man. Come home with bloody noses, black eyes, and he thought that was the way to live. He went through life that way. Then came the 2nd World War, and so he went off to war. He was a sergeant in this company and he found himself in New Guinea. The Japanese had pinned them down, the entire company was flat on their faces, dug in, and they couldn't move. He said, "Neville, let me now make a confession. Raised in my limited environment, in an Irish environment in Boston, Massachusetts, I had two extreme hates in my life, not dislikes, hates: I hated Jews and I hated Negroes." You can't justify a prejudice, because you can't. There's no reason in God's world why one should hate anything. But he hated; that was his confession.

He said, "I as a sergeant gave this Jew, who was a private, every dirty thing in the world to do when I was his superior. And here we are now pinned down in New Guinea by Japanese machine gun fire. We couldn't move. If I barely raised my head I would feel on my steel helmet the bullets ricocheting off my helmet. You couldn't budge; they had us completely pinned down. And this Jew to my left said to me, 'Sarge, do you have any hand grenades?' and I said yes, and I detached three from my belt, and could get them to him without being detected. And this Jew jumped up suddenly and completely wiped out the entire nest of Japanese snipers with their machine guns. He was severely wounded, but it wasn't mortal. At that very moment, I overcame all of my prejudices for the Jew. All the walls of Jericho came tumbling down, all of these ancient evils in me collapsed.

And then I understood that statement which I had read but I didn't understand it before: You see these buildings and you're so proud of them—as I was proud of my prejudices—I was an Irishman and I was Catholic, better than any other religion in the world, better than any person in the world, and all these were things that I hated. And then suddenly I remembered this statement: You see these buildings? Not one stone will be left standing upon another that will not be thrown down (Mat. 24:2). And the ancient prejudice, the ancient evil, crumbled within me, and I not only did not hate the Jew, I loved them. So when I came back to this country and worked myself into a position where I had my own business in masonry—bricks, mortar, everything that went into the building of a building using masonry I supplied in San Francisco—and the Jew got the first chance at any job available."

"Then came something that happened by accident seemingly and some explosion took place in the factory and I am burning. My body is aflame, my overalls are burning, and all of the Caucasians in the place they didn't rush to save me. A Negro rushed forward, threw me on the floor, rolled me over, and put it out, burning himself in the process. I was lit, burning, but he was burned. At that very moment, my hate turned to love. So today in my business in San Francisco, you want a job, you either must first be a Jew or a Negro. My hate turned into love. For I could not have plotted that, I couldn't have planned it. It just happened that it happened this way."

Well, I'll tell you, it happened that way because God planned it that way. God became man that man may become God. There is nothing but God in this world. And so, when you sit there this night and you say "I am" that's his name. That's his great name, his only name. So, I am what? I am prejudiced? Alright, that's the wall he is going to tear down. I am prejudiced against this, that or the other? He will bring it down. As he brings it down, he unveils himself at a certain level, and lifts your veil, and you behold him, and you become what you behold. So, as we are told: And we all, with unveiled face, beholding the glory of the Lord, are changed into his likeness from one degree of glory to another; for this is by the Spirit of the Lord who is the Spirit.

And so, don't plot it, it's going to happen. If tonight you're prejudiced, may I tell you, you are not outside of salvation. God has plotted the way of salvation for you, and will place you into a situation just like this chap. His name is Bill Donovan…you can't get a more Irish name…well, here is Bill, and today you couldn't meet a nicer person. But to show you how he was really searching for God, when he came West he went alcoholic, with all of his prejudices, he went alcoholic, completely blind. He was searching for the Spirit and he saw the false spirit in the form of alcohol. He didn't know it. And then he joined AA, and for the last dozen years Bill hasn't touched a drop. Took me out to dinner, he knows I take a drink, he said, "Neville, you have all you want, but Becky and I (his wife) we never touch a drop. We both were AA and met in AA because of our problem." I didn't tell him then that he was searching. He knew it in the depth of his soul he was searching for God and saw God in some spurious form of alcohol. That's really what it is; it's simply another form. It's spirit, the same word spirit, spirit is alcohol. And so, he was searching for it and saw it in a form that was false. And then, joined it, and now today you couldn't in any way tempt him to take one little drop, he just doesn't want it. But he overcame the prejudice and then all these things crumbled within him.

So I say, if today you are prejudiced, don't be concerned. Everyone in this world is prejudiced, and these things are built around them that God may awaken. So you are placed into an environment where you don't know it. He was brought into this little environment in Boston, surrounded with a certain prejudice, a hatred, and he grew into it. And then God placed him in a certain environment where the two he hated most were his saviors in this world. The Jew saved his entire company and the Negro saved his personal life, and today the two are the most employed in his very successful business. So I say it works this way. So don't be, if you have it this night, don't be concerned. God will plot it; God will plan it. The initiative for man's salvation is with God, and, may I tell you, it isn't prompted by any good deed that man has done. Man's salvation is by grace and grace alone. No one can earn it. No one in this world is good enough to earn salvation. Salvation is becoming God: God became man that man may become God. And it's a series of unveiling, unveiling, unveiling, where suddenly man awakens to find himself transformed: this finite, fallible being transformed overnight into an entirely different being. And yet, the veil has not been completely lifted…another veil, and still another veil, for Truth is an ever-increasing illumination. But, it is all man.

So here, man is purified by the death of his delusions. But listen to this carefully, for this is from the greatest, in my mind, the greatest mystic that ever walked the face of this Earth, William Blake. He claimed that the entire poem Jerusalem was dictated by God, so he claimed. I wouldn't question Blake's right to make that claim. He makes it not only in the poem itself but in his letters to his friends, and they're all on record. Well, here is his statement, he claims it was dictated: "Then those in eternity who contemplate on death said thus." Who are they in this great eternity who contemplate on death and what is the death on which they contemplate? May I tell you, the beings contemplating are those who said, "Let us make man in our image," the Elohim, the gods. Let us make man in our image by the same process of unveiling ourselves; and because man becomes what he beholds, they'll become us, as I unveil them, as they become pure in heart.

"And those in great eternity said thus…" and what did they say? They are contemplating on death. You might think of death when you see someone go into the grave. That's not death—this is the grave. Everyone seated here seems so animate, so alive; these are the sepulchers of God. God is buried in every child born of woman, and that's the grave that these in great eternity contemplate. "And those in great eternity who contemplate on death said thus." Now listen to it carefully, what did they say? "What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be, even of torments, and despair, and eternal death; but Divine Mercy steps beyond and redeems man in the body of Jesus" (Jerusalem,Plt.36). And then the whole vision returns to its perfection: length, breadth, and height take on the original divine vision.

Come back to the statement that he is now saying. What did he say? "What seems to be." To Bill Donovan, it seemed that a Jew was a coward and he proved himself the bravest of them all in New Guinea. To Bill Donovan what seemed to be, is, to those to whom it seemed to be: the Negro was below him in courage, and in intelligence, and in everything—and he was his savior. When no white man came to save him, the Negro walked forward, threw him on the floor, and rolled him over, burning himself in the process, and saved him. And he overcame at that very moment all hatred. So go back, "What seems to be, is, what it seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be, even of torment." Wasn't that torment? A man living with a prejudice, isn't he tormented? Anyone in this world with a prejudice, isn't he really living in hell? And doesn't he despair, can't get out of it? And it is eternal death… and they are contemplating on this eternal death. But, and this is our great comfort, the "Divine Mercy steps beyond and redeems man in the body of Jesus." He plots a play by which man overcomes his prejudice, where the walls of Jericho fall and the ancient evils crumble. And suddenly, he can unveil you, and that moment he unveils you, you see him who unveils you, and you become what you behold, one step higher. And then another play, and still another play, and we go on forever and forever becoming God; for God actually limited himself to man; he became man that man may become God.

So all of us in this world are one; there's only one. There's only one God; there aren't two Gods. As we're told in Zechariah: "And the Lord will be king over all the earth; on that day his name will be one, and the Lord will be one," only one. And he set up the only way in this world that he could reveal the oneness of us all. There is only one way that he could ever reveal that you and I are one. I answer to the name of Neville. You say "Neville" and I will say yes. Then all of a sudden I say "Charlie" and someone present, "Charlie," you'll say, yes, I'm here. And we seem so different, so distinct; and we are, we're unique in the eyes of God as separate visions of God. And yet I tell you we are one, we're actually one, because we're all being unveiled as God.

God only has one Son, only one Son, and that one Son's name is David. At the moment of the unveiling he unveils David, and then you see the relationship between yourself and David. And you look right into the eyes of David and he calls you Father; and you know, there's no doubt in your mind of this relationship, we are father-son. You go back into the ancient scripture and you read that "Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee" (Ps. 2:7). It's to David these words are spoken. And you know in the depths of your soul every being in this world will one day be unveiled in the presence of David and David will call him Father. If David calls you Father, and he's already called me Father, are we not one? There is no way in the world that God could ever reveal the unity of humanity save through a son. And so, "God so loved the world he gave his only begotten Son," not to walk with me as a friend but to reveal me to myself (John 3:16). God is unveiling himself in us: "For let us make man in our image." If I am the image of him, and I am he, then I am the father of his son. He can't make me less if he fulfills his purpose, and it's God's purpose to give himself to man; and so completely give himself to man that there is no one in the world, simply God and that man. And finally only that man: God completed the gift and he is God. So God becomes man that man may become God, and it's the unveiling process. And the only way in the world he can reveal the gift is through his Son. So we are told: "No one knows who the Son is except the Father; and no one knows who the Father is except the Son and anyone to whom the Son chooses to reveal him" (Mat. 11:27). So when the Son chooses to reveal himself, the relationship is Son-Father. It will happen to every being in this world.

So, until it happens we have our prejudices, we have our superstitions, we have our grand buildings and we're so proud of the buildings. But God sees the heart. So, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." We think a man because of his greatness in this world—he may be a very good soldier, a very good banker, a very good scientist, a very good and you name anything in this world, artist—and he need not be a good man. Well, God isn't seeing the status symbol on the outside, with the medals on you because you are a good scientist; and maybe you'll win the prize this year and get $50,000 from some great foundation, and the world will hail you because you did in the eyes of the world appear as a very good and great scientist. But God sees not the outward appearances; God sees only the heart. As we're told in the 16th chapter of the Book of Samuel, 1st Samuel, and they brought before the prophet the first son of Jesse. And he said to himself, Surely this is the Lord's Anointed—look at his height, look at the beauty, the greatness of this man. His name is Eliab: Eli means, my God, and Ab is father, so "my God is father," and surely he is the Lord's anointed. The Lord said to the prophet, "I have rejected him; for the Lord sees not as man sees; man sees the outward appearance, and God sees the heart" (16:7). Then he brings another; I've rejected him. He brings a third; I've rejected him. And he marches seven before him; I rejected them. And then comes David, he said, "Rise and anoint him." So David was the anointed (16:12).

And then we come into the unfolding of the story. When Paul tells the story of David, he said, he put these words into the mouth of God, "Here is a man after my own heart" (Acts 13:22). So here he sees a man after his own heart; and so, you behold David (you are he). David is his Son, yet you are his father. For listen to these words, "the Son of man, who is called the Son of God"…but the Son of God is also God the Son, don't forget that. The Son of God is also God the Son, for "I and my Father are one." So he sets up a Son, called David, and he is your son, therefore, you are his father—and the Father of David is God. But you are the one that he brought out of humanity called David. David symbolizes the whole vast world of humanity, and he draws you out, and reveals himself, glory after glory after glory. It's himself being revealed.

So, as you are brought out you are the Son of God. Now listen to the words: "I will raise up after you your son, who shall come forth from your body. I will be his father, and he shall be my son" (2 Sam.7:12). So you're brought forth as the Son of God; for the Son of God is also God the Son, one, "I and my Father are one"…"though my Father is greater than I" (John 10: 29,30). For the thing symbolized in this world is greater than the symbol. So, I come symbolizing him who unveiled himself before me, and then I became him. Then he sent me back into the world, once more encompassed in my prejudice; and then he will tear it down, and unveil himself with a still greater glory, and send me back again. For there's no limit to the expansion of God unveiling himself in me, no limit. So Truth is an ever-increasing illumination, forever and forever. And every being in this world is one; there's nothing but God. God and God alone became us that we may become God; and he had set up the means by which he unfolds it in this world.

So I know we are purified that we may see God through the death of our delusions. When someone has numberless delusions… what is a delusion? Well, the dictionary defines it as a mental error, a false belief; especially that belief that is persisted in, that when one goes through it becomes, that's a fixation. Well, don't despair. Love them dearly, because God has plotted the means by which he's going to tear that building down. That building will crumble. Whether it be someone who thinks himself because he has a billion dollars he's better than someone else, and there are those who have it, God will tear it down. And don't despair when it crumbles. Someone who could not give them one penny to add to their fortune will be their savior; and then he sees that not the rich came to his support but the poor one. He will see. He may be prejudiced this day against rich people, you know. That's a prejudice too. That comes down. You can be very, very poor and you may have a frightful prejudice against those who have things; and those who have things, have no reason to save you will save you. That's how God plots it, that's how he plans it.

I speak from experience. When my father had the blow of blows in Barbados and no one came to see him because he was accused, wrongfully, but accused. Those who were playing it safe…no one came home even to say "How are you feeling, Joe?" Joe sat alone. And a man came, a very wealthy man, a very prominent person socially, financially, intellectually. He came to Barbados for his health years ago and made a fortune. But he came out as a perfectly trained gentleman from England; he was cultured, he was a great athlete, he was a Blue at Cambridge, he had all that it took. He was the only one that came home to see my father, and he said to Daddy, "Well, Joe, what can I do?" Well, he said, "I have all these children to feed and the servants to feed and I have no money." Well, he said, "What do you want to do?" He said, "All I know is simply what I've done before, a grocery business…just what I did before. I did a good business and I was falsely accused. They took everything from me by the false accusations, and if I had money I'd go back into the business and run it as I did before, successfully."

He went back to his office and he said to his people, "Mr. Goddard will open up in the next month or so a business and I want you to extend credit to the limit. Whatever he orders you fill the order and no bill must be sent to him. When he has it he'll pay." And so, we opened up a little business and he stocked us to the tune of about $40-50,000 in merchandise. We had no money, and when we sold it we paid him. And when he died and his son took over, if his firm had a match to sell and it was a cent more per box than any competitor, don't come near the Goddards. He and he alone sold us the match. And so, when, say five, six years ago, I know this much, they were doing with us in excess of $500,000 a year business. That was their initial investment. And so, if my father had any prejudice of the wealthy people of the world, for he had nothing as a boy, he certainly…that building collapsed and crumbled, that ancient prejudice, because one very wealthy, cultured gentleman came into his life and made it possible to once more start in a marvelous way.

So your prejudice need not be against a certain race or religion, it could be against wealth. Those who have none could be prejudiced against the wealthy and the wealthy may be prejudiced against something else, and it goes all over the world. These are the buildings spoken of in the 13th chapter of the Book of Mark, "You see these great buildings? I tell you not one stone will be left standing on the other but all will be thrown down" (verse 2). So, if today you have it, I know God has plotted and planned your redemption and no one will be unredeemed. And so, he will plot it and plan the scene by which the prejudice collapses in your presence and you fall in love with that formerly which you hated. And so, you actually fall in love with it.

And then eventually the whole veil is lifted and God's only begotten Son calls you "Father." You know, as he does it, you are not alone. He's going to call every being in this world Father; therefore, really, you are one with every being in the world. Then you understand the poet: "All things by a law divine in one another's being mingle." All things by a law divine. So every being in this world is actually interwoven. And so, when Dunne wrote the words: “I am involved in mankind. Every man’s death is the death of me. Never send to ask for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for me.” You read that something happened today across the water and someone was killed violently, don’t ask for whom the bell tolls, it tolls for me. Well, I’m involved in mankind and every man’s death is the death of me. For there’s nothing but God buried in these graves in the world.

So “Those in great eternity who contemplate on death said thus”—and listen to it because it works in the most practical way on this level: “What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be, even of torments and despair and eternal death.” Let us stop it there now. If it does this with torments and despair and eternal death, it will do it with joy and everything else in this world. So “What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be.” I wonder what the feeling would be like were I the man that I want to be? Suppose now that I had, and I name it, x-number of dollars a year…and I name it. All things being relative, suppose now I took just an outside figure, I had $35,000 a year. Well, living modestly as I do, wouldn’t that be wonderful, $35,000 a year! Well then, what seems to be, is, to those to whom it sees to be, and is productive of that which it seems to be. If I dare to assume that I am it and walk this earth just as though it were true, if I could live just as though it were true, then I would prove that statement.

Now Blake claimed that these words were dictated to him by the Spirit of love who is God. Blake makes that bold statement and I trust him implicitly, “What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be.” But could I persuade myself that I am what at the moment reason denies? I’m taking this word “delusion” in a different manner, because “delusion” is to entertain a false belief, well, could this now prove true? Well, when a man may have a false belief that the Jew is not his equal, and until this thing happened he acted so that he proved it to his own satisfaction; and when he did it to the Negro, did he not prove it to his own satisfaction? Well now, we take the same principle: What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be, and take it in a different light and prove it… though the whole thing will fade in the end. For in the end all will fade and only God remains. You will remain but everything else will go. All your buildings will collapse, whether they be made of gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay or stubble. All will collapse, but you will remain, the builder.

So, I can now build using the same principle: What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be. Well, can I not assume that things are as I would like them to be, for myself, for you, for anyone else in the world? And as I do it…a friend of mine this night before I came on the platform, he said he’s been working on himself towards actually feeling the good of another. After all, he’s working with others…it’s up to him as a good man in his company to congratulate a salesman who brings in a big deal. But he said, “You know, in the past I must confess there was a certain envy on my part when I heard of a great sale on the part of another. I wanted to congratulate her or congratulate him, but I couldn’t deny in my heart I wish I had done it. But when I could really let go and sincerely mean it, and say…I’m doing it all in my mind’s eye; I didn’t do it physically, I did it in my mind’s eye, and really felt it. This past week a lady comes in having closed a $50,000 contract.” Now, he said, “I know that’s a tremendous amount of money for her, and I said to her, thrilled, I am not envious, I am thrilled that she could close that deal. In the past there was a reservation, I wish I had done it, and so my congratulations were not completely from the heart to the point where I was really pure in heart.” But now he knows.

You can congratulate every being in this world for every good thing they do, because it’s yourself. There’s only one in this world, only one God, and one God became the seeming many. The stone became fragmented into unnumbered parts with different pigments. Some wear white pigments, some red pigments, black pigments, brown pigments; but only one in this world, all fragmented. And in the end, the Lord will be one and his name one. And may I tell you, that name, although the grand name is I AM, which is called Jesse, there is another name given to it, a glorious name, and that name is Jesus Christ. People don’t believe it, but that name is Jesus Christ. It is I AM, granted, but if you read the story carefully he reveals the grand I AM—“I am the door, I am the true vine, I am the way, I am the life, I am the truth, I am the resurrection"—it's the same grand I-am-ness, but the name is a glorious name, and the name is Jesus Christ. Don't make a fetish of it, for he became you, he's unveiling himself in you, and when he completely unveils himself you are Jesus Christ. That's the story.

Now let us go into the Silence, and let us believe that what seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be. And may I suggest that this night you take the most glorious concept of yourself, I don't care what it is, make it bigger than you now even hoped to realize, because all things are possible to God. Whatever is your present ambition make it a noble ambition but make it bigger; and then try to persuade yourself, as we go into the Silence, that it is true. Assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled, and then view the world from that assumption—that you can see reflected on the faces of these imaginary friends that expression which implies that they see in you the man that you are assuming that you are. Now let us go.

* * *

Now first, may I call your attention to the book table. As you know, every book on that table I recommend. My books are there, my friend Freedom Barry's is there; any book on that table has my endorsement. And so, may I call your attention to it. On the way out please stop and look them over If you have one and you want to share your good fortune with another if you loved it, then you may get one for a friend.

Now, are there any questions, please? Yes, sir.

Q: (inaudible)

A: To repeat the quote, it is The Gospel of Thomas from the Apocrypha where man believes or women are taught to believe that they are secondary. Women are not secondary, because man is not a male and man is not a female. Man wears the garment of male and female, but man is the image of God. And so, no one knows man; man is the wearer of these garments, male and female. So as we are told in Timothy, "Woman will be saved by the bearing of the child." Not bearing children, as priesthoods the world over have tried to convey to womanhood…that's bearing children. Everyone in this world will one day go through a certain mystical experience who is now wearing the garment of female, where they will actually find and feel themselves male; and then, they will also know that they are man, wearing that garment. I speak from experience. Man in the resurrection is above the organization of sex, in the resurrection. We are told, that question was put to him in the most marvelous manner: Master, Moses in the law said that if a man marries, and dies leaving no issue, and has brothers, the brothers should marry his wife to raise up issue for the brother who died. Well, there were seven brothers, and the first one married, and died leaving no offspring. The second took her, and he died leaving no offspring, and the third, fourth; and finally seven of them married her, and they left no offspring. Whose wife is she in the resurrection? And he said, You do not know the scripture, for "the sons of this age marry and are given in marriage; but those who are accounted worthy to attain to that age, to the resurrection from the dead, they neither marry nor are they given in marriage…for they are sons of God, and sons of the resurrection" (Luke 20:28-36).

We're being prepared here to enter a new age altogether, where we don't need the relationship of male-female. It's a brotherhood, where we create out of our own wonderful Imagination. Everything is subject to our imaginative power. We don't need the divided image of male-female. We are man; and man is not a male, and man is not a female, because man is God. You're looking at his face, yes…to me when I looked into the face as it was unveiled before me, it's man, granted, but above the organization of sex. So, that book is not included in our canon but it's a glorious book. And I'll say to every lady, I know that my mother, my wife, my daughter, and all the ladies that I know in this world will one day confront David as David's father, not David's mother. He has no mother. And so, the most scholarly of all Biblical criticism is the Encyclopedia Biblica, and that gives no mother to David. And the manuscripts, the oldest known manuscripts mention no genealogy outside of a father whose name is Jesse. And the word "Jesse" is any form of the verb "to be"—I AM, that's what it means. So, “Whose son are you? I am the son of your servant Jesse” (1 Sam. 17:58). In other words, I am the son of I AM. He comes out of me, and so he looks at me, well, I am his father; therefore, he’s the son of the being that I am…whoever I am. So when they said, “What shall I say?” “Just say I AM who I AM” (Ex. 3:14). He didn’t say what it is…I am what I am, I am that I am, I am what I will be. So, he turns to me and calls me Father, and so he is the son of the being that I am, whatever that being is. So that’s the name. No mother, just the father. So every being in this world, male or female, will one day have the experience, the thrill of thrills, to be called Father by God’s only begotten Son (Ps. 2:7). And then he will know that he’s God. There’s no other way to know he’s God unless the Son reveals it, for no one will know the Father unless the Son reveals him. So he tells us in the 14th of John, “No one comes unto the Father save by me.” Any other questions, please?

Q: Your idea then is purification consists in ridding oneself of delusions?

A: Yes, yes sir, definitely. And yet, as I said, if it is a very difficult thing, don’t despair. God has plotted and planned the way that that building, that ancient prejudice, will crumble. He will put you into the position where the one that represents that prejudice will be your savior, as it was in my friend’s case, Bill Donovan. And Bill today, you couldn’t meet a nicer person. You could hardly believe that he was that violent creature who fought all over Boston, and thought it marvelous to be always fighting, coming home with black eyes and all kinds of things. He thought that’s the way that one should live—to prove yourself a man you must fight all day, so go into the street and fight. If he found a Negro, he would fight, if he found a Jew, he would fight, and come home to his mother with a black eye. But she was just as prejudiced as he because they were the best. First of all, they were Irish and they were Catholic. Well, you can’t get any better in the environment of the Irish Catholic; that’s part of the setup. So he had to prove to himself that that’s not really God’s only begotten child…that everyone is. And so, this thing happened to him. But he was big enough to tell me. For one night in San Francisco, last spring, I was talking on how man overcomes these strange delusions, and I was using stories. Then he said to me after the meeting, “Neville, are you free for dinner tomorrow?” I said I dine very early because I take the platform at 7:30. Well, he said, “I’ll eat as early as you. You want to make it five?” I said yes. So he and Betty and I went off to a very lovely French restaurant, and then he told me this story, told me this perfectly marvelous story. When you meet Bill, you couldn’t meet a sweeter, kinder person. His story is the one I told here the other day. He went off to Mexico, the boat went off to sea, and he re-enacted the scene as though it were now anchored safely on the beach. And then he plunged in, bravely, into this ocean, and here he is going to drown when suddenly a wave lifted him up, and he sees a boat that should not be in the area with three men aboard. He screams on the crest of the wave and they came and that’s Bill. So you see, everyone is not only redeemable, everyone will be redeemed….they got him, took him out to sea, and brought back the little boat that was drifting away.

So this moral purity is not sexual, having to do with moral perfection. Because, the word “pure” in Semitic speech includes mind and emotion, and has no reference whatsoever to sexual morality or any moral perfection, none. It’s a prejudice that God is seeing. Because, who is going to lay down the foundation of what is right sexually? What person in this world would dare to set himself up as the criterion of what is the right thing from a sexual point of view? To those who become celibate, either because nature made them that way, or they thought they could obtain the kingdom of heaven by becoming emasculated, and there are others who go through other forms of it—but it hasn’t anything to do with any moral or sexual perfection, because, who is going to set up the standard? It isn’t that at all. It’s this strange, peculiar delusion that is a prejudice, a fixed, fixed false idea that will crumble. And God will see that it will crumble. As it crumbles he unveils himself. As he unveils himself, you become the one that you behold, so that’s one more glory you are. So read it carefully in the 3rd chapter of 2nd Corinthians, I think it’s the 18th verse, that wonderful unveiling of God, from one glory to another. And this is done by the Spirit, so no one can brag, no one can boast, because it’s God and God alone who plots and plans the whole thing. In the end, we’re all one. What a play! What a glorious play! That’s why the cry at the very end, “Father, forgive them; they know not what they do" (Luke 23:32). They don't know because we are completely veiled.

But you take tonight's story: "What seems to be, is," believe me, "to those to whom it seems to be" whether we are prejudiced or you dream of good fortune. You dream of lovely fortune? What seems to be, is…believe it! I'm from a background where I'm a son of one who didn't have two pennies to rub together, and ten children to feed, and a wife, and himself, and a mother-in-law, and servants in the house, and not two pennies. But, "What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be." So when he died five years ago, he could leave quite a fortune to his children. So that the speaker, if he so desired, need not work, if he so desired. But I'd rather drop dead this night than not do what I'm doing. The day that I'm not doing what I am doing don't let me just live on what he gave me, let me make my exit tonight. Perfectly alright, I know exactly where I'm going. But to remain here just because I could afford to eat and vegetate, I don't want that. I want to be here as long as I can do it. But the day I can't do it, just let me not vegetate; let me make my exit from this world. But he left me all that it takes to live graciously in this world of Caesar without raising a finger. Goodnight.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. Question: What is the meaning of the insignia on your book covers?

Answer: It is an eye imposed upon a heart which, in turn is imposed upon a tree laden with fruit, meaning that what you are conscious of, and accept as true, you are going to realize. As a man thinketh in his heart, so he is.

* * * * * * * * * *

2. Question: I would like to be married, but have not found the right man. How do I imagine a husband?

Answer: Forever in love with ideals, it is the ideal state that captures the mind. Do not confine the state of marriage to a certain man, but a full, rich and overflowing life. You desire to experience the joy of marriage. Do not modify your dream, but enhance it by making it lovelier. Then condense your desire into a single sensation, or act which implies its fulfillment.

In this western world a woman wears a wedding ring on the third finger of her left hand. Motherhood need not imply marriage; intimacy need not imply marriage, but a wedding ring does.

Relax in a comfortable arm chair, or lie flat on your back and induce a state akin to sleep. Then assume the feeling of being married. Imagine a wedding band on your finger. Touch it. Turn it around the finger. Pull it off over the knuckle. Keep the action going until the ring has the distinctness and feeling of reality. Become so lost in feeling the ring on your finger that when you open your eyes, you will be surprised that it is not there.

If you are a man who does not wear a ring, you could assume greater responsibility. How would you feel if you had a wife to care for? Assume the feeling of being a happily married man right now.

* * * * * * * * * *

3. Question: What must I do to inspire creative thoughts such as those needed for writing?

Answer: What must you do? Assume the story has already been written and accepted by a great publishing house. Reduce the idea of being a writer to the sensation of satisfaction.

Repeat the phrase, "Isn't it wonderful!" or "Thank you, thank you, thank you," over and over again until you feel successful. Or, imagine a friend congratulating you. There are unnumbered ways of implying success, but always go to the end. Your acceptance of the end wills its fulfillment. Do not think about getting in the mood to write, but live and act as though you are now the author you desire to be. Assume you have the talent for writing. Think of the pattern you want displayed on the outside. If you write a book and no one is willing to buy it, there is no satisfaction. Act as though people are hungry for your work. Live as though you cannot produce stories, or books fast enough to meet the demand. Persist in this assumption and all that is necessary to achieve your goal will quickly burst into bloom and you will express it.

* * * * * * * * *

4. Question: How do I imagine larger audiences for my talks?

Answer: I can answer you best by sharing the technique used by a very able teacher I know. When this man first came to this country he began speaking in a small hall in New York City. Although only fifty or sixty people attended his Sunday morning meeting, and they sat in front, this teacher would stand at the podium and imagine a vast audience. Then he would say to the empty space, "Can you hear me back there?"

Today this man is speaking in Carnegie Hall in New York City to approximately 2500 people every Sunday morning and Wednesday evening. He wanted to speak to crowds. He was not modest. He did not try to fool himself but built a crowd in his own consciousness, and crowds come. Stand before a large audience. Address this audience in your imagination. Feel you are on that stage and your feeling will provide the means.

* * * * * * * * * *

5. Question: Is it possible to imagine several things at the same time, or should I confine my imagining to one desire?

Answer: Personally I like to confine my imaginal act to a single thought, but that does not mean I will stop there. During the course of a day I may imagine many things, but instead of imagining lots of small things, I would suggest that you imagine something so big it includes all the little things. Instead of imagining wealth, health and friends, imagine being ecstatic. You could not be ecstatic and be in pain. You could not be ecstatic and be threatened with a dispossession notice. You could not be ecstatic if you were not enjoying a full measure of friendship and love.

What would the feeling be like were you ecstatic without knowing what had happened to produce your ecstasy? Reduce the idea of ecstasy to the single sensation, "Isn't it wonderful!" Do not allow the conscious, reasoning mind to ask why, because if it does it will start to look for visible causes, and then the sensation will be lost. Rather, repeat over and over again, "Isn't it wonderful!" Suspend judgment as to what is wonderful. Catch the one sensation of the wonder of it all and things will happen to bear witness to the truth of this sensation. And I promise you, it will include all the little things.

****

6. Question: How often should I perform the imaginal act, a few days or several weeks?

Answer: In the Book of Genesis the story is told of Jacob wrestling with an angel. This story gives us the clue we are looking for; that when satisfaction is reached, impotence follows.

When the feeling of reality is yours, for the moment at least, you are mentally impotent. The desire to repeat the act of prayer is lost, having been replaced by the feeling of accomplishment. You cannot persist in wanting what you already have. If you assume you are what you desire to be to the point of ecstasy, you no longer want it. Your imaginal act is as much a creative act as a physical one wherein man halts, shrinks and is blessed, for as man creates his own likeness, so does your imaginal act transform itself into the likeness of your assumption. If, however, you do not reach the point of satisfaction, repeat the action over and over again until you feel as though you touched it and virtue went out of you.

* * * * * * * * * *

7. Question: I have been taught not to ask for earthly things, only for spiritual growth, yet money and things are what I need.

Answer: You must be honest with yourself. All through scripture the question is asked, "What do you want of me?" Some wanted to see, others to eat, and still others wanted to be made straight, or "That my child live."

Your dimensionally larger self speaks to you through the language of desire. Do not deceive yourself. Knowing what you want, claim you already have it, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give it to you and remember, what you desire, that you have.

* * * * * * * * * *

8. Question: When you have as assumed your desire, do you keep in mind the ever presence of this greater one protecting and giving you your assumption?

Answer: The acceptance of the end wills the means. Assume the feeling of your wish fulfilled and your dimensionally greater self will determine the means. When you appropriate a state as though you had it, the activity of the day will divert your mind from all anxious thoughts so that you do not look for signs. You do not have to carry the feeling that some presence is going to do it for you, rather you know it is already done. Knowing it is already a fact, walk as though it were, and things will happen to make it so. You do not have to be concerned about some presence doing anything for you. The deeper, dimensionally greater you has already done it. All you do is move to the place where you encounter it.

Remember the story of the man who left the master and was on his way home when he met his servant who said, "Your son lives." And when he asked at what hour it was done the servant replied, "The seventh hour." The self-same hour that he assumed his desire, it was done for him, for it was at the seventh hour that the master said, "Your son lives." Your desire is already granted. Walk as though it were and, although time beats slowly in this dimension of your being, it will nevertheless bring you confirmation of your assumption. I ask you not to be impatient, though. If there is one thing you really have need of, it is patience.

* * * * * * * * * *

9. Question: Isn't there a law that says you cannot get something for nothing? Must we not earn what we desire?

Answer: Creation is finished! It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. The parable of the prodigal son is your answer. In spite of man's waste, when he comes to his senses and remembers who he is, he feeds on the fatted calf of abundance and wears the robe and ring of authority. There is nothing to earn. Creation was finished in the foundation of time. You, as man, are God made visible for the purpose of displaying what is, not what is to be. Do not think you must work out your salvation by the sweat of your brow. It is not four months until the harvest, the fields are already white, simply thrust in the sickle.

* * * * * * * * * *

10. Question: Does not the thought that creation is finished rob one of his initiative?

Answer: If you observe an event before it occurs, then the occurring event must be predetermined from the point of view of being awake in this three-dimensional world. Yet, you do not have to encounter what you observe. You can, by changing your concept of self, interfere with your future and mold it in harmony with your changed concept of self.

* * * * * * * * * *

11. Question: Does not this ability to change the future deny that creation is finished?

Answer: No. You, by changing your concept of self, change your relationship to things. If you rearrange the words of a play to write a different one, you have not created new words, but simply had the joy of rearranging them. Your concept of self determines the order of events you encounter. They are in the foundation of the world, but not their order of arrangement.

* * * * * * * * * *

12. Question: Why should one who works hard in metaphysics always seem to lack?

Answer: Because he has not really applied metaphysics. I am not speaking of a mamby-pamby approach to life, but a daily application of the law of consciousness. When you appropriate your good, there is no need for a man, or state, to act as a medium through which your good will come.

Living in a world of men, money is needed in my every day life. If I invite you to lunch tomorrow, I must pick up the check. When I leave the hotel, I must pay the bill. In order to take the train back to New York my railway fare must be paid. I need money and it has to be there. I am not going to say, "God knows best, and He knows I need money." Rather, I will appropriate the money as though it were!

We must live boldly! We must go through life as though we possessed what we want to possess. Do not think that because you helped another, someone outside of you saw your good works and will give you something to ease your burden. There is no one to do it for you. You, yourself must go boldly on appropriating what your Father has already given you.

****

13. Question: Can an uneducated person educate himself by assuming the feeling of being educated?

Answer: Yes. An aroused interest is awarded information from every side. You must sincerely desire to be well schooled. The desire to be well read, followed by the assumption that you are, makes you selective in your reading. As you progress in your education, you automatically become more selective, more discriminating in all that you do.

* * * * * * * * * *

14. Question: My husband and I are taking the class together. Should we discuss our desires with each other?

Answer: There are two spiritual sayings which permeate the Bible. One is, "Go tell no man," and the other is "I have told you before it comes to pass that when it does come to pass you may believe." It takes spiritual boldness to tell another that your desire is fulfilled before it is seen on the outside. If you do not have that kind of boldness, then you had better keep quiet.

I personally enjoy telling my plans to my wife, because we both get such a thrill when they come into being. The first person a man wants to prove this law to is his wife. It is said that Mohammad is everlastingly great because his first disciple was his wife.

****

15. Question: Should my husband and I work on the same project or on separate ones?

Answer: That is entirely up to you. My wife and I have different interests, yet we have much in common. Do you recall the story I told of our return to the United States this spring? I felt it was my duty as a husband to get passage back to America, so I appropriated that to myself. I feel there are certain things that are on my wife's side of the contract, such as maintaining a clean, lovely home and finding the appropriate school for our daughter, so she takes care of those.

Quite often my wife will ask me to imagine for her, as though she has greater faith in my ability to do it than in her own. That flatters me because every man worthy of the name wants to feel that his family has faith in him. But I see nothing wrong in the communion between two who love one another.

* * * * * * * * * *

16. Question: I would think that if you get too much into the sleepy state there would be a lack of feeling.

Answer: When I speak of feeling I do not mean emotion, but acceptance of the fact that the desire is fulfilled. Feeling grateful, fulfilled, or thankful, it is easy to say, "Thank You," "Isn't it wonderful!" or "It is finished." When you get into the state of thankfulness, you can either awaken knowing it is done, or fall asleep in the feeling of the wish fulfilled.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

17. Question: Is love a product of your own consciousness?

Answer: All things exist in your consciousness, be they love or hate. Nothing comes from without. The hills to which you look for help are those of an inner range. Your feelings of love, hate or indifference all spring from your own consciousness. You are infinitely greater than you could ever conceive yourself to be. Never, in eternity will you reach the ultimate you. That is how wonderful you are. Love is not a product of you, you are love, for that is what God is and God's name is I am, the very name you call yourself before you make the claim as to the state you are now in.

* * * * * * * * * *

18. Question: Suppose my wants cannot materialize for six months to a year, do I wait to imagine them?

Answer: When the desire is upon you, that is the time to accept your wish in its fullness. Perhaps there are reasons why the urge is given you at this time. Your three-dimensional being may think it cannot be now, but your fourth dimensional mind knows it already is, so the desire should be accepted by you as a physical fact now.

Suppose you wanted to build a house. The urge to have it is now, but it is going to take time for the trees to grow and the carpenter to build the house. Although the urge seems big, do not wait to adjust to it. Claim possession now and let it objectify itself in its own strange way. Do not say it will take six months or a year. The minute the desire comes upon you, assume it is already a fact! You and you alone have given your desire a time interval and time is relative when it comes to this world. Do not wait for anything to come to pass, accept it now as though it were and see what happens.

When you have a desire, the deeper you, who men call God, is speaking. He urges you, through the language of desire, to accept that which is not that which is to be! Desire is simply his communion with you, telling you that your desire is yours, now! Your acceptance of this fact is proved by your complete adjustment to it as though it were true.

****

19. Question: Why do some of us die young?

Answer: Our lives are not, in retrospect, measured by years but by the content of those years.

****

20. Question: What would you consider a full life?

Answer: A variety of experiences. The more varied they are, the richer is your life. At death you function in a dimensionally larger world, and play your part on a keyboard made up of a life time of human experiences. Therefore, the more varied your experiences, the finer is your instrument and the richer is your life.

* * * * * * * * * *

21. Question: What about a child who dies at birth?

Answer: The child who is born, lives forever, as nothing dies. It may appear that the child who dies at birth has no keyboard of human experience but, as a poet once said:

"He drew a circle that shut me out, Infidel, scoundrel, a thing to flout. But Love and I had the wit to win! We drew a circle that took him in."

The loved one has access to the sensory experiences of the lover. God is love; therefore, ultimately everyone has an instrument, the keyboard of which is the sensory impressions of all men.

****

22. Question: What is your technique of prayer?

Answer: It starts with desire, for desire is the mainspring of action. You must know and define your objective, then condense it into a sensation which implies fulfillment. When your desire is clearly defined, immobilize your physical body and experience, in your imagination, the action which implies its fulfillment. Repeat this act over and over again until it has the vividness and feeling of reality.

Or, condense your desire into a single phrase that implies fulfillment such as, "Thank you Father," "Isn't it wonderful," or "It is finished." Repeat that condensed phrase, or action in your imagination over and over again. Then either awaken from that state, or slip off into the deep. It does not matter, for the act is done when you completely accept it as being finished in that sleepy, drowsy state.

****

23. Question: Two people want the same position. One has it. The other had it and now wants it back.

Answer: Your Father (the dimensionally greater you) has ways and means you know not of. Accept his wisdom. Feel your desire is fulfilled, then allow your Father to give it to you. The present one may be promoted to a higher position, or marry a man of great wealth and give up her job. She may come into a great deal of money, or choose to move to another state.

Many people say they want to work, but I question that seriously. They want security and condition security on a job. But I really do not think the average girl truly wants to get up in the morning and go to work.

* * * * * * * * * *

24. Question: What is the cause of disease and pain?

Answer: The physical body is an emotional filter. Many human ailments, hitherto considered purely physical, are now recognized as rooted in emotional disturbances.

Pain comes from lack of relaxation. When you sleep there is no pain. If you are under an anesthetic, there is no pain because you are relaxed, as it were. If you have pain it is because you are tense and trying to force something. You cannot force an idea into embodiment, you simply appropriate it. It is attention minus effort. Only practice will bring you to that point where you can be attentive and still be relaxed.

Attention is tension toward an end, and relaxation is just the opposite. Here are two completely opposite ideas that you must blend until you learn, through practice, how to be attentive, but not tense. The word "contention" means "attention minus effort." In the state of contention you are held by the idea without tension.

****

25. Question: No matter how much I try to be happy, underneath, I have a melancholy feeling of being left out. Why?

Answer: Because you feel you are not wanted. Were I you, I would assume I am wanted. You know the technique. The assumption that you are wanted may seem false when first assumed, but if you will feel wanted and respected, and persist in that assumption, you will be amazed how others will seek you out. They will begin to see qualities in you they had never seen before. I promise you. If you will but assume you are wanted, you will be.

****

26. Question If security came to me through the death of a loved one, did I bring about that death?

Answer: Do not think for one second that you brought about a death by assuming security. The greater you is not going to injure any one. It sees all and, knowing the length of life of all, it can inspire the other to give you that which can fulfill your assumption.

You did not kill the person who named you in his will. If, a few days after your complete acceptance of the idea of security, Uncle John made his exit from this three-dimensional plane and left you his estate, it is only because it was time for Uncle John to go. He did not die one second before his time, however. The greater you saw the life span of John and used him as the way to bring about the fulfillment of your feeling of security.

The acceptance of the end wills the means toward the fulfillment of that end. Do not be concerned with anything save the end. Always bear in mind that the responsibility to make it so is completely removed from your shoulders. It is yours because you accept it as so!

* * * * * * * * *

27. Question: I have more than one objective Would it be ineffective to concentrate on different objectives at different periods of concentration?

Answer: I like to take one consuming ambition, restrict it to a single short phrase, or act that implies fulfillment, but I do not limit my ambition. I only know that my real objective will include all the little ones.

****

28. Question: I find it difficult to change my concept of self. Why?

Answer: Because your desire to change has not been aroused. If you would fall in love with what you really want to be, you would become it. It takes an intense hunger to bring about a transformation of self.

*"As the hart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O Lord. "*If you would become as thirsty for perfection as the little hart is for water that it braves the anger of the tiger in the forest, you would become perfect.

****

29. Question: I am contemplating a business venture. It means a great deal to me, but I cannot imagine how it can come into being.

Answer: You are relieved of that responsibility. You do not have to make it a reality, it already is! Although your concept of self seems so far removed from the venture you now contemplate, it exists now as a reality within you. Ask yourself how you would feel and what you would be doing if your business venture were a great success. Become identified with that character and feeling and you will be amazed how quickly you will realize your dream.

The only sacrifice you are called upon to make, is to give up your present concept of self and appropriate the desire you want to express.

* * * * * * * * * *

30. Question: As a metaphysical student I have been taught to believe that race beliefs and universal assumptions affect me. Do you mean that only to the degree I give these universal beliefs power over me, am I influenced by them?

Answer: Yes. It is only your individual viewpoint, as your world is forever bearing witness to your present concept of self. If someone offends you, change your concept of self. That is the only way others change. Tonight's paper may be read by any six people in this room and no two will interpret the same story in the same way. One will be elated, the other depressed, another indifferent, and so on, yet it is the same story.

Universal assumptions, race beliefs, call them what you will, they are not important to you. What is important is your concept, not of another, but of yourself, for the concept you hold of yourself determines the concept you hold of others. Leave others alone. What are they to you? Follow your own desires.

The law is always in operation, always absolute. Your consciousness is the rock upon which all structures rest. Watch what you are aware of. You need not concern yourself with others because you are sustained by the absoluteness of this law. No man comes to you of his own accord, be he good, bad or indifferent. He did not choose you! You chose him! He was drawn to you because of what you are.

You cannot destroy the state another represents through force. Rather, leave him alone. What is he to you? Rise to a higher level of consciousness and you will find a new world awaiting you, and as you sanctify yourself, others are sanctified.

* * * * * * * * * *

31. Question: Who wrote the Bible?

Answer: The Bible was written by intelligent men who used solar and phallic myths to reveal psychological truths. But we have mistaken their allegory for history and, therefore, have failed to see their true message.

It is strange, but when the Bible was launched upon the world, and acceptance seemed to be in sight, the great Alexandria Library was burnt to the ground, leaving no record as to how the Bible came into being. Few people can read other languages, so they cannot compare their beliefs with others. Our churches do not encourage us to compare. How many of the millions who accept the Bible as fact, ever question it? Believing it is the word of God, they blindly accept the words and thus lose the essence they contain. Having accepted the vehicle, they do not understand what the vehicle conveys.

* * * * * * * * * *

32. Question: Do you use the Apocrypha?

Answer: Not in my teaching. I have several volumes of them at home. They are no greater than the sixty-six books of our present Bible. They are simply telling the same truth in a different way. For instance, the story is told of Jesus, as a young boy, watching children make birds out of mud. Holding the birds in their hands, they pretend the birds are flying. Jesus approaches and knocks the birds out of their hands. As they begin to cry, he picks up one of the broken birds and re-molds it. Holding it high, he breaths upon it and the bird takes wing.

Here is a story of one who came to break the idols in the minds of men, then show them how to use the same substance and re-mold it into a beautiful form and give it life. That is what this story is trying to convey. "I come, not to bring peace, but a sword." Truth slays all the little mud hens of the mind; slays illusions and then re-molds them into a new pattern which sets man free.

****

33. Question: If Jesus was a fictional character created by Biblical writers for the purpose of illustrating certain psychological dramas, how do you account for the fact that he and his philosophy are mentioned in the nonreligious and non-Christian history of those times? Were not Pontius Pilate and Herod real flesh and blood Roman officials in those days?

Answer: The story of Jesus is the identical story as that of the Hindu savior, Krishna. They are the same psychological characters. Both were supposed to have been born of virgin mothers . The rulers of the time sought to destroy them when they were children. Both healed the sick, resurrected the dead, taught the gospel of love and died a martyr's death for mankind. Hindus and Christians alike believe their savior to be God made man.

Today people quote Socrates, yet the only proof that Socrates ever existed is in the works of Plato. It is said that Socrates drank hemlock, but I ask you, who is Socrates? I once quoted a line from Shakespeare and a lady said to me, "But Hamlet said that." Hamlet never said it, Shakespeare wrote the lines and put the words in the mouth of a character he created and named Hamlet. St. Augustine once said, "That which is now called the Christian religion existed among the ancients. They began to call Christianity the true religion, yet it never existed."

* * * * * * * * * *

34. Question: Do you use affirmations and denials?

Answer: Let us leave these schools of thought that use affirmations and denials. The best affirmation, and the only effective one is an assumption which, in itself implies denial of the former state.

The best denial is total indifference. Things wither and die through indifference. They are kept alive through attention. You do not deny a thing by saying it does not exist. Rather you put feeling into it by recognizing it, and what you recognize as true, is true to you, be it good, bad or indifferent.

* * * * * * * * * *

35. Question: Is it possible for one to appear dead and still not be dead?

Answer: General Lee was supposed to have been born two years after his mother, believed to be dead, was buried alive. Lucky for her she was not embalmed or buried in the earth, but in a vault where someone heard her cry and released her. Two years later Mrs. Lee bore a son who became General Lee. That is part of this country's history.

* * * * * * * * * *

36. Question: How could one who was deprived in his youth become a success in life?

Answer: We are creatures of habit, forming patterns of the mind which repeat themselves over and over again. Although habit acts like a compelling law which drives one to repeat the patterns, it is not a law, for you and I can change the patterns. Many successful men such as Henry Ford, Rockefeller and Carnegie were deprived in their youth. Many of the great names in this country came from poor families, yet they left behind them great accomplishments in the political, artistic and financial world.

One evening a friend of mine attended a meeting for young advertising executives. The speaker of the evening said to these young men: "I have but one thing to say to you tonight,and that is to make yourself big and you cannot fail."

Taking an ordinary fish bowl, he filled it with two bags, one of English walnuts and the other of small beans. Mixing them with his hand, he began to shake the bowl and said, "This bowl is life. You cannot stop its shaking as life is a constant pulsing, living rhythm, but watch." And as they watched the big walnuts came to the top of the bowl as the little beans fell to the bottom.

Looking into the bowl the man asked, "Which one of you is complaining, asking why?" Then added, "Isn't it strange, the sound is coming from the bowl and not the outside. A bean is complaining that if he had had the same environment as the walnut he, too would do big things, but he never had the chance." Then he took a little bean from the bottom of the bowl and placed him on top saying, "I can move the bean through sheer force, but I cannot stop the bowl of life from shaking," and as he shook the bowl, the little bean once again slid to the bottom.

Hearing another voice of complaint he asked, "What's that I hear? You are saying that I should take one of those big fellows who thinks he is so big and put him on the bottom and see what happens to him? You believe he will be just as limited as you because he will be robbed of the opportunity of big things just as you are? Let's see."

Then the speaker took one of the big walnuts and pushed him right down to the bottom of the bowl saying, "I still can't stop the bowl from shaking," and as the men watched the big walnut came to the top again. Then the speaker added:

"Gentlemen, if you really want to be successful in life, make yourself big."

My friend took this message to heart and began to assume he was a successful businessman. Today he is truly a big man if you judge success by dollars. He now employs over a thousand people in the city of New York. Each one of you can do what he did. Assume you are what you want to be. Walk in that assumption and it will harden into fact.

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 15 July 1970

QUESTION: Do you believe in the theory of evolution?

NEVILLE: No, I do not believe in evolution as to the creative power of God. I believe in evolution only in the affairs of men. Instead of digging the field with my hands, I now use a tractor. That's evolution. Instead of walking across the country, I can now take a flight and be there in a few hours. Instead of going across the ocean and large bodies of water on a raft, I go now propelled by atomic power. So, this is evolution in the affairs of men, but not in the creation of God.

God's plan was "before that the world was." This is not any "emergency" thinking. The whole thing is done; and to this day, we have no evidence whatsoever to support the theory of evolution, -- none whatsoever! It is still a marvellous, glorious, exciting theory, but it remains a theory. There is no evidence to support the fact that a fish became an animal and the animal became man -- none whatsoever.

So, they speak of a "missing link." Well, that justifies anything, -- beautifully written, exciting; and then it is compulsory reading in all the universities and schools of the world, and man has accepted the theory. Yet we cannot read in our schools God's word! Call that a theory, too; but they never read it, because you read the other theory. They say you can't produce any evidence for the historicity of Jesus, -- and we can't. All right, read it anyway as theory.

If we are compelled to read as fact what has no fact to support it, then why can't we read this and then call it theory?

But I do not, for one moment, accept the theory of evolution as fact. It's not fact. But I do accept evolution in the affairs of man. But don't tell me that the little tool that is called a hoe in some strange way changed itself and became a tractor. Man changed it from the hoe to a plow drawn by a horse or drawn by an ox; and then he changed that to something even better. Then he changed his way of sailing a boat. He still sails a boat, but the boat didn't suddenly go through a metamorphosis in itself and become a steamship. No; man's imagination conceived this strange thing for himself, and we call that "evolution."

When you stand in the presence of the Risen Lord, you see man; and he's Infinite Love -- Infinite Love. And you will never exercise Infinite Power until you first are incorporated into the body of Infinite Love, because to have such power without love, you could ruin the universe! So, you will never come into such power until you are incorporated into the body of Love and become one with the body of Love. For, he who is united with the Spirit becomes one Spirit with It; and, therefore, you exercise the power through love.

But evolution -- let them have it! I would let every man have everything he wants in this world. Let him have it. He has an imagination, and you can't stop him from using it. Today there are people who love war -- the excitement of war. A war correspondent, -- he wants war. A professional soldier, especially if he is an officer, -- why, the most boring thing in the world for the professional soldier who is an officer is peacetime! Why, he's an ambitious man. He wants more things on his shoulder. You can't get them in peacetime. These fellows live for a long time, unless they die off or resign, or disappear. You can't promote them. They can have only so many of one rank and another rank. You can't have numberless five-star Generals! So, they either die off or have another war, or get killed off or something.

So, a man, if he's ambitious, he wants to transcend whatever he is. If he is in business, he wants to expand beyond what he is. You can't blame him; that's what he wants. If he has made a million this year -- turned over a million, he wants to turn over two next year. That is part of business. When he turns over two, he isn't satisfied with that; he wants to turn over four. It is perfectly all right.

Well, the same thing is true if you are trained, not in business, but trained as a professional soldier. When you come out of an academy, you come out as a Lieutenant. You don't want to remain a Lieutenant. You are either going to quit the service and go into some other thing; or, if you remain in the service, you don't want to die a Lieutenant! You can't afford a wife.

But if war breaks suddenly, -- our President who was a five-star General -- Mr. Eisenhower, -- when the war broke, I think he was a Major. He quickly, in three years, rose to be General of all the Armies of Europe; and then, with that popularity, he couldn't fail to carry the country when we were all aroused, and then we gave the victory to the one who led the Army. So, who could defeat him running for office? So, he rose from Major to the top rank in the Army, and then from that to the highest position in our country; and he was loved to the very end. He was dearly loved. Every one loved him, even those who were on the other side of the political picture -- they loved him. But from Major to that in a few short years!

So, in peacetime, the most horrible thing for a professional soldier, -- well, if he's ambitious, -- You see, all these things happen in God's world. You use your mind -- your imagination, and have a noble goal, a lovely goal.

And don't let anybody tell you that you aren't entitled to it. Why aren't you entitled to it? If you are not born to wealth, why can't you earn it? There is no reason why you can't earn it. Some are born to it, and some earn it; and there's no reason in the world -- you have the same talent. He gave you a "talent" and that talent is your own wonderful human imagination.

But have faith in God. If you have faith in God, you have confidence in yourself, for God and man -- the true Man -- are one!

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 15 July 1970

VERNE HANSON: In one of your books, Neville, -- I think it is "Feeling Is the Secret," -- you say that you have to have a change in conception to have a change in feeling; but from the lecture platform you tell us that when we hear others tell us they can't do this because, -- and so forth, we should use our imagination to help them.

NEVILLE: Why, certainly. I will repeat that.

VERNE HANSON: My question is this: If that person will not change his conception, how can we change it for him?

NEVILLE: If you realize that the great confession of the Jewish faith is: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One," -- you look out upon the world, and there seem to be billions of people; but one day you'll discover it's only your own being fragmented. There is no "other." The whole vast world is yourself "pushed out."

So, if my daughter fell down the stairs, as she did as a child, I don't scold her. I rush down and pick her up and bring her back and comfort her. I don't say, "It serves you right." Let her learn her lesson.

I told her one day, "You want a dog. All right, you'll have a dog, but you will take the dog out and air it"; and she didn't want to go down sixteen flights, -- we lived on the top floor, -- to the street and walk up the sidewalk to air it; so she was allowed to take it on the outside of the apartment. We had a lovely little garden on the outside, about 30 square with lovely plants. I said, "You may take the dog out and air the dog there; but you have to clean up the mess." And after about four days it wasn't clean; so I said to her, "You know, Vicki, I told you, you can have your dog, but that little place has to be clean."

Well, at the moment it didn't suit her, butsshe had to clean it; so she went outside with her broom and her pail, and she was cleaning like mad. We have three long French doors, all glass; and in her anger she struck the glass and broke it. I didn't complain. I said, "You see what temper does. Learn your lesson. You simply smashed the door. I'll put it back. But learn your lesson now. Your anger -- your emotion -- caused this thing to happen. Yet, you are supposed to clean this place. You know that. We gave you the dog; we allowed you to have a dog. All right, but you have to do what we said was your condition on owning the dog." She understood it. She has never forgotten it.

So, in her case, if she is injured, I don't blame her. As her father who loves her, I don't blame her; I paint a mental picture of her as I would like her to be, and persuade myself that she is what I believe and want her to be.

So, help every one in the world. Tell them the story, that they may stand upon their own feet; but in the end, you are God, and God is One; and the whole vast world is yourself "pushed out." This is just fragmented Being, the whole vast world. But you do it by starting with yourself just where you are, and then you push out your circle. You start with your family. My wife and my daughter are dearer to me because they are right at my home -- my responsibility. But I can't just limit it to that. I have friends; and then from friends to other friends, and others and others, and then finally it pushes itself out to the whole vast world, taking in races and nations, because I can't limit it just to one. But you do start with the circle where you are. And it should be in your case, or any one's case who has a wife -- it should be right where the wife comes. Or if it is a woman, where the husband comes. If an offspring is there, then naturally the children; and then you start spreading it out. If one cannot help himself, I would not say, "All right, it serves you right." You step in, and you do it. It is yourself "pushed out."

As I brought out the first night, if this hand itches, or the back of it, and I say, "All right, you are itching; but this hand isn't itching, so it serves you right." Well, all right, if I let it itch and this other one can come to its assistance but I won't let it, then who is suffering? I am! I am suffering; so instead of suffering because I am stupid about it, I compel this hand to go right over and scratch it, for the whole vast world is myself "pushed out"; and if I cannot, at this moment, do it, then I call upon this to do it. But know a principle. This is a principle of which I speak tonight.

And, so, there are always two within a man, and they are in conflict. The rational mind is always in conflict with imagination.

That letter which you wrote me, which I got the other night and read with great, great interest, for all your things are perfectly wonderful and your interpretations are marvelous; but the quote that you gave of Paul Brunton I thought was perfectly stupid. Here is a man who tells us that the credulous mind is a weak mind. But if you aren't credulous, what on earth could you ever do in this world? I could not go to the moon if I could not be credulous and believe it. I wouldn't dare to cut a piece of cloth and believe I could put it into a dress if I wasn't credulous. So, what on earth does he mean? That's why I said earlier, 99 per cent of the stuff that finds its way into print isn't worth my eyesight. I can't read it.

Now, he has a name, and he has written all kinds of things and he speaks of an Oversoul. In quest of something outside of himself, he'll look forever, and he will never in eternity find it other than himself. But he has books, and they sell because it's highly publicized. Well, when you quoted that, I said, "My lord!" You quoted it at the very beginning of your letter, but I love you; so I went through your entire letter and loved all that you said about your personal experiences. But that quote at the beginning annoyed me; I would have closed the whole thing up if that was the preface. If that simply determined what followed, I would have closed the whole thing up, but I didn't in your case because I like you.

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 15 July 1970

A LADY: I am exposed to so many young people right now. How can I correct the way they dress without telling them right to their face? (This question was not very clear on the tape.)

NEVILLE: Well, first of all, I do not know what they have done to displease you. I know many of them dress unlike the way we dress, but I can't blame you. I mean, if that is their choice of dress, all well and good. I only have to go back a few centuried to find in the western world they all looked that way. If they go back and take the pictures of the western world three or four hundred years ago, they all had beards and long hair, and they never bathed -- never bathed! A little bit of perfume here and a little bit of perfume there, and that was the last of it. But they didn't clean themselves.

I can't say they are not moving back like a circle into that same state. I, for one, like a daily shower. When I was running a temperature of 104 and 105 last year with that silly flu that I got, I still took my shower every day. I took it unknown by my wife and other members of the family because they would have protested; but I didn't feel clean until I took my shower. Well, I am not going to say that I am the criterion of what others should do. Who am I to be the criterion? I would not allow any one to set himself up as the criterion for me; therefore, I would not set myself up as the criterion for another. I like to shave every day. I like to have my hair cut short. But why should I say you should do the same thing?

But when these kids come and they force strange things on you, -- well, then, be a lady and tell them of the difference between your thinking and their thinking.

I was waiting for the bus in L.A., and these two kids came up, 18 years of ago, thumbing their way and no car was stopping for them. They were going by like mad, but buses were running every 20 minutes. So, I at least thought of them for thirteen minutes anyway. Then one fellow said to me, "Could you loan me a dime?"

I said, "I do not know who you are. You have no collateral. I do not know where you live. And you want a loan! If you want a loan, you must prove that you are capable of paying it back. You don't want a loan; you are asking me to give you a dime. Why didn't you say that?"

He said, "Well, I've got to go back to school and study the English language."

I said, "You'd better do that. Now here is a quarter"; and I gave him a quarter. He said, "Man, man! you are a gentle man." And the other one, he said to me: "Man, man, man! you're a gentle man." That's all he could say. Everything was, "Man, man, man, man." I said, "You'd better go back to school if you ever went to school, and then come out so you can actually tell me what you want. You want a loan -- a loan of a dime, and without collateral!"

---oOo---

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE 16 July 1970

QUESTION: Neville, would you talk a little on the 40 days and 40 nights?

NEVILLE: Well, you see, in the Bible numbers have their symbolical meaning. They have multiple meanings. "Forty" is the 13th letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The letter is "MEM." Its symbol is the womb of a woman, that which gives birth.

So, here he goes into the period of creativity. Will he accept the test? He accepts the test, but he plays only Scripture in defiance of his own temptation. It's not a being outside of himself tempting him. The whole story unfolds within the mind of the individual. Will I believe what I have heard tonight? Then the test starts. Will I accept what I've heard tonight? and bring forth from it; or will I simply go back?

So, he said, "If you are the Son of God," -- do this, that, and the other. You should not test the Lord. If I believe it, will I accept the tests?

In New York City, I was on a midnight panel that went through the night, and a professor of philosophy from an eastern college said to me, "If what you say is true, that imagining creates reality, then turn this pencil -- " It was a yellow pencil. "Turn it into red." I said to him, on radio, -- and all his students were listening in because he told them he was going to get the better of me. I said, "Get behind me, Satan. You are a scoffer, and i'm told that the scoffers come in the last days who will deny and say, 'Where is he who is to come?' But ever since the world was made, things have gone on just as they did in the beginning of time."

He blushed and blushed and blushed. I said, "You want me to turn this -- I would not turn it into any other color than it is. If you want to turn it into any other color, go and paint it! That's simple enough. If you want the yellow to turn to red, go and paint it."

Don't take the challenge of any one in the world. It's all within you. The challenge comes from within you. Do you believe it, or don't you believe it? Don't let any one else challenge you. But they will, only when -- within you -- there is still that little question mark. But don't accept it.

If I have a cold, -- so I have a cold. And many will say, "Why should you have a cold?" I am in the world of Caesar, and the body decays, as all bodies here decay. So, I get a cold, as any one else here gets a cold. And I have demonstrated --

People are always demonstrating something. We came from New York City through Chicago on our way to San Francisco, years ago; and a lady ran ahead of us and knocked my little girl down, -- she was only three, -- knocked her down on her way to get a table in the dining room. I picked my little Vicki up and walked quietly forward and sat down at a table. There were lots of seats. And she was a Christian Science practitioner on her way to some convention in Chicago, and she had "demonstrated" a table. She had demonstrated a seat by almost killing my daughter. Well, I don't call that "demonstration." She was a lovely practitioner, and I learned from the conversation that she would go to the convention and tell them how she had demonstrated a seat in the diner. Lovely, isn't it?

Well, I don't go for that. Let them all pass by, -- there will be a seat there for me; and, if not now, I will wait until they get up. I don't call this "applying the principle."

She must live in constant confusion demonstrating. And if she gets a cold, she'll remain at home where no one will know, and swear by all the bibles in the world she never had one, because they didn't see it. If she has a headache, she will take a couple of aspirin. No one knows that, you see. No one will ever know she took two aspirin to simply ease the pain; and, so, when she really can't see, she will go to the oculist, and he will give her good glasses; and she will see with nice glasses. When she has a pain in her mouth and the dentist says, "You know, this has to come out," no one knows she is going to the dentist; but she will have it out, and get a good tooth put in that God gave the dentist the intelligence to make for her.

So, why try any of these stupid things? I "wear" this body. It is almost 66 now, and it's wearing out. It used to be very, very strong -- unusually strong; but when it reaches its peak, than it starts going, and it is moving towards complete disintegration.

Well, what am I trying to do? Compete with the young boys of 50? I have no desire to compete with these handsome young fellows in their 30's and 40's. I've had that!

Then came that day when the energy that went down into generation is turned around and moves up into regeneration, when the serpent within me turned up as a fiery being right back into my skull from which it came. What a joy now!

Just imagine to be able to say, with complete honesty: "If you unveiled the entire world of three and a half billion men and women and put them all before me, they would leave me cold and completely unmoved." I could not always say that. So, when the attitude is turned down into generation, you don't have to unveil it all, -- just one would be enough. But, then, suddenly it turns up, and it is completely turned around from generation into regeneration. Now, unveil the whole vast world before me, -- it would mean nothing to me. I remain completely unmoved, for the energies have been turned up, where before, they were turned down. They were all turned down -- that fiery being, and we simply went berserk, exercising that power in a thousand and one different ways.

All of a sudden came that bolt of lightning that split me in two, and there at the base, the blood of God! And I fused with it, and then I became it, and like a fiery serpent went right up into the interior of my own being; and, from then on, the whole vast thing that formerly disturbed me ceased to be. That's peace! -- the only kind of peace in the world.

---oOo---

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 17 JULY 1970

QUESTION BY A MAN IN THE AUDIENCE: What is the meaning of the statement: "Down with the bluebloods"?

NEVILLE: What does the statement, "Down with the blue-bloods" mean? "Blueblood" in Scripture is church protocol, external worship, ceremony; anything that is external is the "blueblood." Down with all such worship! No matter howtthey justify it or tell you that it was in order. I was commanded to clear from my own mind's eye all external worship. IIdon't care how beautiful it appears to be in pageantry, it is not in order. It does nothing for the soul. You go to church and a man prays audibly, and you can't get into the Silence. "Let us pray," in a very solemn, solemn voice, he says; and then repeats all these words. That's not what you want. You want to church to hear about God. And if you are going to pray, you pray for a friend's recovery or a friend's good fortune or your own recovery and your own good fortune; and you want something very tangible and right down here. And he's leading with all this pompous, pompous stuff, and is crossing himself and crossing this, and genuflecting that; and you see all the pageantry. He said, "Down with the bluebloods." Down with all ceremony, all external rites whatsoever. That's what I heard.

The word "blueblood" has nothing to do with the social order. If you read the Scripture, he never once tried to change the social structure. Not once will you find in any part of Scripture where there was any attempt on the part of the central figure of Scripture to change the social order. There were slaves in those days. There was no statement as to changes in structure. He only brought the message of Salvation, the message of redemption. And man has missed the thought and built all kinds of peculiar things round about it.

I know, when I was a child in the Episcopal Church, why, the pageantry! All the little boys coming round with their collars; all the little ruffs and the red tunics. Oh, undoubtedly they looked very pretty to the mothers who saw them. I recall vividly when some one told my Mother that her boys should be in the choir; so she was persuaded by this very serious and interfering neighbor who was always giving advice to my Mother, -- she had two children. She couldn't raise them well, but she thought she could tell my Mother how to raise her ten! So, my Mother said, "All right, you've got to go and try out for the choir."

Well, we didn't want the choir; we wanted to go and play football or cricket -- play all the games, go swimming, fishing; but we had to go and try out for the choir! Well, I was determined I was not going to have a voice; and my brothers, I shared my knowledge with them. I was the fourth one. There were four of us, and so we all agreed that we were going to pretend that we had never heard singing before. So, when he struck a note on the organ, he struck C. We struck everything in the world but a C. He said, "Don't you have any ear? Try again." We tried this one, that one, the other one, -- you never heard such caterwauling in your life! He said, "You go back and tell your Mother that I've tried my best, and you just don't have it. That's all there is to it."

Well, I thought, Now this is really fun! I am going to have a little fun before I go, too. Now, my eldest brother, Cecil, -- and so I said to Mr. Taggert, who was the organist; just as we were about to leave, I said to Mr. Taggert, "Oh, Mr. Taggert, my brother Cecil can whistle."

Well, he could have killed me! We all "broke up," and Cecil couldn't whistle unless he started laughing; so Mr. Taggert knew it was a joke, and dismissed us. But when we got out, he really could have killed me! I said, "He can whistle."

To see myself all dressed in this robe coming down on Sunday mornings, -- well, I wanted to get out and start whistling. So, we just beat that little neighbor at her own little game.

But I was told in no uncertain terms: "Down with the blue-bloods!" And it hasn't a thing to do with any socalled "blueblood" in the world. If you want to feel that you are a blueblood, feel it. There are those in every walk of life who feel that they are in the highest of the social stratus. It's perfectly all right. I wouldn't change it at all. Leave it alone. I personally have never felt inferior to any one I've ever met. I have never in my life felt inferior to any one. I admire them if they have money -- much more than I have. I have little, and they have much, but that doesn't mean that I am impressed. Also, there are those who come into the world, and they have all the lovely things in the world. I admire them, -- go to their homes and admire all the beauty that they can afford, and lovely pieces; but it doesn't make me feel inferior to them. I feel one with it all!

My maid comes and cleans for me once a week. I like to look upon Doris as a friend. She's a friend. I talk with her just as I would with a friend. She cleans for me and does all the lovely things that I wouldn't do for myself; so I treat her as a friend. I can't see that, because she works for me, she must be below me. On the other hand, I can't see, because some one has a billion dollars, that I should think him important.

As some one said, -- I think it was Lloyd George, -- he tried to put through the House of Commons a bill making some kind of a change in the land ownership of England; and he said to the entire House, -- he said, "You know, if you are all honest with yourselves, you all know that any Englishman can prove ownership to his land by tracing his ancestry back to the first one who stole it!"

Well, that is just about what you will find in all kinds of fabulous things, but I don't envy them. I'm all for it! If I have a dollar when I die, I want my wife, if she survives me, to have it. And if I had a million, I'd still want her to have it. If she goes before I do, I want my children to have it. If they inherit it, what's wrong with that? I see not a thing wrong in that, because it comes within the code of that wonderful law, where it says: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Wouldn't you like to receive a million dollars? Or, would you give it back? All right, I wouldn't give it back. I would take it. Well, the same thing is true of all inheritance laws. My father gave us all that he could; he gave the ten of us his entire estate. None of us gave it to the government, although they took much of it without asking.

---oOo---

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 20 JULY 1970

QUESTION BY A MAN IN THE AUDIENCE: Will you elaborate on the technique of arresting the action?

NEVILLE: Can I elaborate on the technique of arresting the motion within man? Sir, I can only tell you the first time that it happened in me. I came upon a scene that seemed to be about a hundred and fifty years ago in the New England states. I could tell from the dress of the people that it was about a hundred and fifty years prior to that moment in time that it happened to me.

It seemed to be a Sunday afternoon when they were dining, -- I would say about 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon. But I could tell from their dress that it was about a hundred and fifty years prior to that moment in time, which was about twenty-odd years ago, when it first happened.

I came into a restaurant, and there were four people seated at a table, two sons in their early 20's and their parents, the father and mother. One boy was bringing the food to his mouth to eat it, and the waitress came through a little door, and she was all dressed in the same kind of a dress she would have a hundred and fifty years ago -- very stiffly starched; her collar was starched, her sleeves were starched, and she was animated.

Through the huge, big bay window I could see leaves falling. It was the Fall of the year, and I could see the leaves coming down slowly. I could see a bird in motion, and I could see the wind blowing the grass. Here was an animated restaurant.

At that moment I knew intuitively that if I could arrest that activity that I felt within me that everything would stand still. And, strangely enough, I knew how to arrest it. Now, you want to know how to do it.

I can only say, at that moment when you come upon such a scene and you know, -- you will know how to do it. I simply stilled an activity in my own brain, as it were. Yet, I was in Spirit. Here my body was on the bed. I felt something in me stand still; yet my consciousness was alive and completely alert. I knew what I'm doing. But at that moment the boy bringing his food to his mouth couldn't bring it. The waitress walking, walked not. The bird flying, flew not. The grass waving, waved not. The leaves falling, fell not. Everything stood still. I examined them, and they were all as though they were made of clay. Then I released -- in me -- the activity, and thd bird continued to fly, the waitress continued her intentions to serve the food, and the boy eating the food brought it to his mouth, and everything moved on as it had intended.

That was my first experience of life-in-me. Prior to that moment, I did not understand that statement in Scripture that says, "As the Father has life in Himself, so He has granted the Son also to have life in himself."

Then I knew what it meant to have life in myself. The whole vast world, believe it or not, is the individual "pushed out"; and he has animated it, but he doesn't know how to stop it or change it. He can only change it without stopping it.

You can change it now by bringing into your mind's eye an individual in your world and changing him for the good. You can change it for the worse if you want to, but don't. Change him for the good, because "he" is yourself "pushed out," and then let him conceive in his world a change in motivation.

But the day will come that you can still the entire, vast world, and change it, motivationally; and it will be changed. But you do it all within you. You feel it in your head. Everything is felt in the head. It's a peculiar thing, but I can tell you how to stop it here; but the day will come, you will taste of the power of the Age to come, as told us in the Book of Hebrews. He has "tasted of the power of the age to come." (Hebrews 6:5, Revised Standard Version)

And when you are completely "born from above," -- because unless man is "born from above," he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven; and the Kingdom of Heaven is made up of those whose bodies are in complete control by the individual who wears it. And that body has life in itself. That is, it stops and starts anything in the world. It has no fear, because everything is itself "pushed out." How can it be hurt by its own being pushed out, and still be in control of its pushed-out self?

It is in complete control; but you will never completely harness this power unless you are first incorporated into the Body of Love. God, truly, is Love; because to use this power without love, you would wreck the universe. But no one would actually be given the power until he is first called by the Risen Lord and incorporated into the Body of Love. So, you will always be guided by Love.

---oOo---

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 22 July 1970

QUESTION BY A LADY: Neville, in the restoration you say everybody is the same. I have never heard you say there were births from the womb of woman in the restoration. [Question was not altogether audible on the tape.]

NEVILLE: The Bible teaches that if you are not resurrected in this section of time, then all the things that you now do in this section of time you will continue doing. That is stated so clearly in the Book of Luke when the wise men of the day, the Sadducees, ask the very simple question: "Whose wife will this woman be in the Resurrection?" (Luke 20:33) because she married seven brothers and they left no offspring. And the answer is quite clearly stated: that "the children of this age marry and are given in marriage; but those who are accounted worthy to obtain to That Age, they neither marry nor are they given in marriage, for they are sons of the Resurrection. Being sons of God, they die no more," (Luke 20:35-36) which would imply that all they do here they will do there unless resurrected.

So, if they die here, they find themselves restored to life there in that section of time into which they go. But they will age there too, as they age here. But they do not start there from the womb of woman; they start there from the grave. But you don't go to any grave; you are already in the grave when you are here. These bodies are our "graves."

THE LADY: Well, this being the lowest form -- (not audible)'

NEVILLE: This is the most important one. It's the limit of contraction. This is the complete limit of contraction, the limit of opacity. Here is contraction. Men die. And you and I watch them die. We see them die. We cremate the body. It's all dust. And, yet, that Being never "died," -- not to himself, not to herself. They are restored instantly; and many of them do not even know that they have departed this world, because to them they haven't died.

How can you think of a person who is very much alive -- you talk with him, he talks with you, -- and you tell him that he is dead? I don't tell them they are dead. I will tell them: "You 'died' at a certain point in time and I went to your funeral; and what you 'wore' when I first knew you is now buried or cremated," depending on what I know of it. They will deny it because they aren't dead, and they cannot associate what I am saying with anything that they are experiencing, because they never experienced death.

The only ones who ever experience "death" are those who watch them "die." I can watch a man "die," and bury him or cremate him. I experience his departure and call it "death," but he who went through that state -- he didn't die! When he is restored, he does not know a thing about having "died." So, no one ever really experiences "death," except those who watch the other one depart; and many of them don't even know they are gone. They are amazed at me when I say, "I went to your funeral." They think, Why, he's insane.

But, you know in Scripture: "The man is mad." "He has a spirit." "He has a demon." (See John 10:20) And there are areas in which all visionary men are accounted "mad" men, but this is not new to me. I've been all over that. When I first started, I came to a book store where they had my books displayed; and two ladies, looking at the picture in the window and my books -- a few of my books, -- one said to the other, "You know who he is?"

She said, "No."

"Well, he is the mad mystic of Thirty-Eighth Street. You must go and hear him. He's as mad as a hatter," she said. She didn't know I was standing right next to her. She said, "You should hear that man. He is mad, but he isn't violent." It's perfectly all right.

So, I have been called "mad," and having a demon from the time that I started in with this work, because it is mad if I deny the evidence of my senses and say I will not accept the dictates of my senses. I will not accept reason; it is in conflict with what I want. I will accept my senses if they are confirming what I want in this world; but if they don't confirm it, I ignore them and assume a state where I want to know all my senses do confirm. And I turn to the Knower, which is my imagination. So, a man who denies his senses, certainly he is a little bit "touched."

So, they said of him: "This man, we know his father, we know his mother" (See John 6:42); we know his brothers and we know his sisters, and he tells us he came from heaven, and he tells us God was his father, and that he and God the Father are one. Well, the man is insane, and he doesn't know it. Read it in the Book of John. It is clearly stated.

---oOo---

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECGURE, 23 July 1970

QUESTION BY A LADY (inaudible on my tape) concerning restoration to life in different time segments.

NEVILLE: You see, we think that death ends something and birth begins something, but time is bigger than the little, small spectrum we call "threescore and ten." It's the same world, just like this, and is this world.

The Year Three Thousand exists now, and the Year One Thousand did not pass away. It still exists now. I have gone into sections of time that the world thinks have ceased to be and others the world thinks do not yet exist. But read the Book of Ecclesiastes. "Is there a thing of which it is said, See, this is new? It has been already in ages past. But there is no remembrance of former things, nor shall there be any remembrance of things to come after among those who will come àater" (Ecclesiastes 1:10,11).

In other words, it has already come. The "Play" is over. The whole thing is finished and has been brought to a climax.

And, so, -- we came, and come, into human history in that strange, mysterious being we call "Jesus Christ." And in the end, there will only be Jesus, and you are He.

We think, now, this is 1970, and we are looking forward to the Year Two Thousand, and wouldn't it be wonderful if you lived in the Year Two Thousand, and celebrated the turn of the century? But it is now!

You may depart here, say, in the year 1990. I have no desire to reach any 1990. As far as I am concerned, it could come tonight. But I have no desire, honestly, to go far beyond this moment in time, -- none whatsoever.

I know, in my own case, I will not be restored to life. I am entering the New Age, clothed in that body with which I am very familiar, which is a perfect body, where -- in its presence -- nothing will remain imperfect, -- nothing. You are in need of nothing in that body; and everything is made perfect, because you are clothed in that body of the Risen Lord. But every one who has not had the experience will be restored, and need not find themselves, if they go tonight, in the year 1970 a day later. They could find themselves in the Year One Thousand, as the environment best suited for the work yet to be done in them, because it can be done better in that environment than it can in the year 1971.

The whole thing is the most glorious, wonderful play; and in the end every one is perfect. And because "there is only one body, one spirit, . . . one lord, . . . one God and Father of all" (Ephesians 4:4-6), we can't brag and beg to be placed one above the other.

And I tell you that your face will be like yours, but raised to the N^{th} degree of beauty. Imagine it, a character that your would never dream of possessing in this world! You will have the human face, as you have. You will have the human voice. You will have human hands. Don't ask beyond that. I couldn't describe the form. It is light, fire; it has nothing to resist it. It is, in itself, the life of everything round about you. You give life to it. Nothing remains dead in your presence. A petrified forest would burst into flower if you entered the forest. A barren desert would erupt into glorious bloom because of your presence. You are life.

But the body itself, -- well, you can't describe it. But it will have a human face, human voice, and human hands.

QUESTION ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 23 July 1970

QUESTION BY A LADY IN THE AUDIENCE: Will you please interpret the Scripture, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

NEVILLE: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matthew 27:46, and Mark 15:34) It appears only in the Books of Matthew and Mark; it doesn't appear in the other two Gospels. Well, it is in the 22d Psalm (Psalm 22:1). In other words, God is not pretending that He is you. If He knew that He is God and playing the part that is your part, then He could not be a Savior. He had to completely empty Himself of His entire wisdom and His power and everything to become you!

So, He can't pretend; He's not an actor playing the part. He is The Only Actor, but He is so much the part that He ceases to be an actor knowing that He is playing a part. He became you in the most literal form.

So, that's the cry. But Luke does not use the 22d Psalm. Luke uses the 31st Psalm, only the whole verse is not quoted. Luke says, "Into thy hands I commit my spirit. Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, faithful God" (Psalm 31:5, Revised Standard Version).

So, he cried out, knowing that he is already redeemed because he has had the experience of redemption, but the Crucifixion is the first act. It took place in the beginning. It doesn't come at the end of the drama, as we are told in the story. We are told in Scripture: "We have been united with Him in a death like His; therefore we shall be united with Him in a resurrection like His" (Romans 6:5, Revised Standard Version). In other words, see the change in tense: We have been united with Him in a Crucifixion like His; we shall be united with Him in a Resurrection like His.

So, the Crucifixion is over. The Resurrection is taking place. So, he warns Timothy of those who teach that the resurrection is over and past, that they are misleading the people and turning the people from the true faith. He says, Anathema to them for the teaching of the resurrection as already finished.

No; it is taking place in one after the other. But the Crucifixion is over, because that was the beginning of the drama, when God literally became Humanity, -- not just you individually, but Humanity. He is crucified on the Cross of Man; and individual man is redeemed. Because he was once crucified with The One, he is now redeemed in The One. One after the other, he is drawn back into "the one body, the one spirit, . . . the one lord, . . . the one God and Father of all" (Ephesians 4:4-6).

So, that cry is a wonderful cry, and it should not be removed from Scripture; but it is only in Matthew and Mark. Of the seven cries on the Cross, Matthew and Mark only considered one, and this is the one. John considered three, and Luke considered three; and Mark and Matthew considered the same words on the Cross.

We speak of the "seven last words," -- "words" being not a single word, but a sentence, a thought. They considered one thought, which is the prayer that God actually, literally became man to the point where He had to forget He was God, and suffered total amnesia, for if He remained aware that He is God, He couldn't play the part, -- a complete and total giving of Self.

As Blake said it so beautifully: "Unless I die, thou canst not live; but if I die, I shall arise again, and thou with me." (from "Jerusalem")

He will rise, and you will rise as Him. But He has to die just as a seed. Unless it fall into the ground and "die," it remains alone; but if it dies, it bears much fruit. So, He actually became you; and then He rises in you, and He cries out on the cross of you -- for you are the cross that He wears.

I must confess, there isn't a person in the world that could actually say to me honestly, until he has the resurrection, that he knows he is the Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, he is totally unaware of his true identity, and he is crying out to a god outside of himself. Therefore, he is actually saying, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" because he doesn't know He is God until the Resurrection. And when He breaks the bonds of the tomb, He knows Who He is. Until then, He too is saying, without the use of words, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Every mother who says good-bye to a little child at the gate of death wonders why God did not answer her prayer. You say goodbye to your mother, your father, your brother, your friend; and you wonder, Why God, why? --calling to another god. Therefore, that is the cry on the Cross, because this [referring to the physical body] is the Cross; and I will wear this Cross until the very end. And then, during the wearing of the Cross, I am resurrected from it.

And I tell the story. Some believe it; some disbelieve it, but I will continue to tell the story until He takes it off for the final time, and then I'm clothed in the Divine Body.

---oOo---

QUESTIONS ASKED FOLLOWING LECTURE, 24 JULY 1970

QUESTION BY A LADY: When you say "coming down," desending," "below," what do you mean?

NEVILLE: Well, these are just figures of speech. Certainly not from heaven, because heaven is within you, as we are told in the 17th Chapter of the Book of Luke: "The Kingdom of Heaven is within you" (Luke 17:21).

In Scripture, "above" and "within" are the same, and "below" and "without" are the same. If I point there (indicating), that's without; and that is, in Scripture, "below." He said: "I am from above," -- therefore, I am within you, -- "you are from below" (John 3:23); therefore, you are "without."

So, wherever I point in the world outside, that is below where He stands. He stands "within." God is within you. His name forever and forever is "I AM."

When I speak of "coming down," I mean descending in consciousness to lower and lower and lower levels of awareness to the level called, in Scripture, "death"; because God is infinite in power and can overcome even death. And to become man, the limit of contraction, God assumes the grave to prove the infinite power that is God, because there is no limit to His expansion. He set a limit to His contraction, to his opacity, but no limit to His expansion or translucency. So, when you reach the limit of contraction, then you start to expand.

If God could not expand beyond what He is, there would be eternal failure; but God is forever expanding, and in His own plan. He creates the plan, fulfills His own plan, and expands. That's the joy of creation. God is a Creator.

So, I do not mean "coming down" in the sense of coming from the stars, -- for all the stars, infinite as they are, and trillions of light years away, -- they are still "without"; therefore, they are "below." God is "within."

QUESTION BY A LADY (inaudible on the tape, but having to do with the "linen clothes.")"

NEVILLE: The "linen clothes" are the physical body in Scripture. He ran away and he was still naked. He had not yet been clothed with the Divine Body of the Lord Jesus Christ. They can take from you your body, and you will be naked as far as that world goes. You must be clothed. To be really clothed in the "wedding garment" in order to enter the Kingdom of Heaven, you must be clothed with the Body of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the end, there is only "one body, one spirit, . . . one Lord, . . . one God and Father of all" (Ephesians 4:4-6).

So, today many people suffer for the Word of God, and they will take from them their physical bodies, like many of our missionaries who have been martyred. They took from them the "linen clothes" that the mother wove for them, and left them, in a way, naked, because they are not yet clothed with the Body of Jesus Christ; but they will be. They will be.

QUESTION (inaudible on my tape, but referring to the angels, witnesses, et cetera, present at the birth of the Christ Child):

NEVILLE: This is all beautiful imagery. When I rose from the skull and came out from the "linen clothes," -- and when I came out, the three brothers appeared, and there were the angels; they came from afar. If you took it literally, they were five thousand miles from here.

If you took the story literally in the Bible, it would be almost impossible for the shepherds to have made the journey in the short interval between the appearance of the angel and the discovery of the child; so they came "in spirit," as told in the 2d chapter of the Book of Luke when Simeon "came in the Spirit to the temple" (Luke 2:27), for it all takes place in the Temple of God. You are the Temple of God, because all things exist in the human imagination. So, they came -- humanly -- "from afar"; but they are always in you anyway.

When the drama is ready to erupt within you, they will come; and the story will re-enact itself within you. So, do not give credit to this one or that one or the other; the whole story is within you.

---oOo---

QUESTION BY A LADY (inaudible on the tape) about Repentance:

NEVILLE: My Dear, you are invited in Scripture, -- the very first word put into the mouth of the Lord Jesus Christ in the earliest Gospel, which is the Book of Mark, -- In the canonical setup, Matthew comes first, but in the actual, chronological order, Mark is the earliest of the Gospels. So, the first word put into the mouth of Jesus in the Book of Mark is, "Repent." The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

"The time is fulfilled, the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Repent, and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:15).

Well, the word "repent" does not mean to feel remorseful. It hasn't a thing to do with regret. The word is "metanoia," which means, by literal translation, a radical, radical change of attitude; a radical change of mind, which tests the individual's ability to enter into the very opposite of what he sees with his senses.

Now, do it, for you are invited. The very first words of the Lord are to get the individual to use the talent which is in himself, which is his imagination; therefore, use your imagination to bring about a radical change of attitude towards effects -- towards the world in which you live. And to the degree that you are successful in changing this attitude of mind, the world will change to confirm it.

That is "repentance" as known by the mystics. It has not a thing to do with regret or remorse. He never demands penance of any one. The whole secret of Christ is forgiveness. That is repentance. He conquers by repentance. He conquers by forgiveness. That is the secret of Christianity.

You see some one and they are not well. You don't blame them. You don't bawl them out because of a former state which has resulted now in their illness. You simply represent them to yourself in your mind's eye as you would like them to be. Suppose that individual who is now a total stranger were your mother; you wouldn't criticize her, because you love your mother, and you would do for your mother what maybe you would not do for a stranger. Well, learn to do for the stranger what you would do for your mother.

If Mother asked anything of me, she would not ask anything that would not come within the Golden Rule, -- she wouldn't! Why, she couldn't conceive of asking of her son that she loved to do anything that would embarrass her, or in some way bring shame to the name. So, it would always come within the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Well, then, is it a stranger or your mother? Do it; and to the degree that you are self-persuaded of the reality of what you've done in your imagination, to that degree they are changed, and the environment in which they live will be changed to conform to the change in them. You do it, and you will bring it about by your imagination and faith.

Faith is the subjective appropriation of the objective hope. What do I want? What do I hope for, for my mother? Well, then, let me subjectively appropriate it; and that is practicing "repentance." He tells the whole vast world, "Repent"; but believe the story -- the Good News, which is called the Gospel. Believe the good news of salvation, for it has come to the world. "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Mark 1: 15).

So, the climax has been reached. You can forget what the world is talking about. The climax -- redemption -- is upon us. It has been done. God has completed the act of redemption, and therefore there is no possibility of failure for any one in the world, because He became all.

QUESTION BY A LADY (mostly inaudible on tape) -- I want very much to do whatever is necessary for my son to overcome his _____.

NEVILLE: Well, my Dear, causation is mental. People do not realize it. He teaches that causation is mental. Listen to His words; it is the Sermon on the Mount: "You have heard it said by men of old' -- He's telling you what came down through the ages -- "You have heard it said by men of old, You shall not commit adultery." You have heard that -- "But I say unto you," -- this is something entirely different now; He now speaks with authority, -- this is the Lord speaking: "But I say unto you, Any man who looks [concupiscently] lustfully upon a woman has already committed the act of adultery in his heart with her." (Matthew 5:27, 28, Revised Standard Version) He puts the whole thing on an entirely different level. It's mental.

I may not have the courage to go forward and perform the act that I long to do. I may have many reasons for not doing it: I may contemplate the consequences along with the act, and restrain the impulse; but He tells me restraining the impulse isn't good enough. I am told it isn't good enough if I restrain the impulse becauee I am a coward, or restrain the impulse because I am afraid of the consequences that would bring shame to my family or to myself. Well, then, that is still not good enough, if I look lustfully on another.

Therefore all men have committed sin. There isn't a man in this world who can tell me he is not guilty of that act; but we are told in the 11th chapter of Romans: "God has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy upon all" (Romans 11: 32, Revised Standard Version). God is merciful. He has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy; therefore, no one earns the Kingdom. It is Grace -- Grace -- Grace, and still more Grace! Our fitness for the Kingdom is the consequence, and not the condition, of this choice of ours.

So, I know, as a man, -- I've been married twice; I have two children (one 46, one 38) and I know as a man that I am not unique. I am guilty of that act. If a man stood before me and told me that he is not guilty of that, I wouldn't even argue with him. Why call him a liar? It's such an obvious fact that he is a liar -- stupid! And by "man," I mean generic man. I mean: "Male female made he them, and called their name Man" (Genesis 5:2), as told us in the 5th chapter of Genesis; so I mean generic man.

So, "He has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy upon all" (Romans 11:32, Revised Standard Version).

"For Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love

Is God, our Father dear,

And Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love

Is Man, his child and care."

-- Wm. Blake, from "The Divine Image"

QUESTION BY A LADY: One more thing: When you say this is your last night, I hope you are planning to return to this City.

NEVILLE: Well, my Dear, thank you. I say it is the last night for this year. But do you know? no one knows when the Father will call him. I feel, really, I have finished the work that my Father gave me to do. I have accomplished the story. He did it in me. I take no credit, because He gave me Himself. He who started a good work in me has brought it to completion [See Philippians 1:6, Revised Standard Version], and therefore He could call me now; the work has been completed in me.

Now, if I am needed to still tell it to others who are coming who must hear it before I depart from me, then I will be here until they come. I will not go one second before or one second later. But, as I said last night, it would make no difference to me if I went now.

I felt, when I had a little child, uneducated, that I had unfinished business, because she wanted college. Well, now, she has had her college training. She has gone to a lovely college, graduated, and has a lovely job, and she is well equipped for life. I feel that I have left my wife provided for in the world of Caesar. That was my one concern. So, I know today I have left her a sufficient investment in the world of Caesar to live graciously without having to go out and ask for alms. Well, now, that has comforted me, for that was my only concern. My son pulls his own weight. My daughter pulls her own weight. And when my wife eventually goes, -- I left it all to her; then I have left a condition upon my will that she cannot dispose of it, save to give it to my two children.

So, I feel satisfied that I am qualified to go now. I am not saying I want to. I am enjoying life; I'm enjoying every moment of time. But if tonight was my moment to go -- and I am not going to make a conscious effort to go; but if I slept tonight and did not wake here, I know that I will awake in the Body of the Lord Jesus Christ, for I have finished the work. I will not be restored to continue the journey. I will awake in the One Body, with the one Lord, with the one Spirit. That I know; therefore, what could concern me?

But to come back to your question, if it is in the sphere of my Father's wish that I be here to tell it once more to those who are not now hearing me, I will be here. For, He has used me under compulsion; and yet, He and I are one.

QUESTION BY A LADY (largely inaudible on the tape) about some people having more imagination than others.

NEVILLE: Well, first of all, "God is One." We may not exercise our imagination; but, may I tell you? when we think that one has more imagination than another, it could not be, because "God is One" (Deuteronomy 6:1) -- undivided. But one misuses imagination. Who knows if some one tonight in a dungeon feeling themselves wrongfully confined could be using that imagination to start a world conflict?

If you know the power of imagination, it could be some woman treading the wine press who starts the conflict in men's minds. If a man does not use his own imagination, it may be used for him by some one else. And if I confine my imagination to my senses and only what reason allows, -- well, I would never exercise it.

Some one quoted from a book the other night from some very prominent speaker, who also has written many books, and they are all popular books and very successful books; and he said, "The credulous mind is a weak mind that must be strengthened." Of all the nonsense in the world!

In almost every particular is the world about us different from what we think. Why, then, should we be thought incredulous? Life calls upon us to believe, not less, but more. The most incredulous story in the world is the Christian story. It's the most incredulous thing in the world, the story of Christ. And may I tell you from experience? it is the only really true story! All the others are "played," and that will be forever and forever. It is forever extant in the depths of the soul of man.

---oOo---

Neville Goddard

BE WHAT YOU WISH; BE WHAT YOU BELIEVE

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

July, 1951

A newspaperman related to me that our great scientist, Robert Millikan, once told him that he had set a goal for himself at an early age when he was still very poor and unproven in the great work he was to do in the future. He condensed his dream of greatness and security into a simple statement, which statement, implied that his dream of greatness and security was already realized. Then he repeated the statement over and over again to himself until the idea of greatness and security filled his mind and crowded all other ideas out of his consciousness. These may not have been the words of Dr. Millikan but they are those given to me and I quote, "I have a lavish, steady, dependable income, consistent with integrity and mutual benefit." As I have said repeatedly, everything depends upon our attitude towards ourselves. That which we will not affirm as true of ourselves cannot develop in our life. Dr. Millikan wrote his dream of greatness and security in the first person, present tense. He did not say, "I will be great; I will be secure," for that would have implied that he was not great and secure. Instead, he made his future dream a present fact. "I have," said he, "a lavish, steady, dependable income, consistent with integrity and mutual benefit."

The future dream must become a present fact in the mind of him who seeks to realize it. We must experience in imagination what we would experience in reality in the event we achieved our goal, for the soul imagining itself into a situation takes on the results of that imaginary act. If it does not imagine itself into a situation, it is ever free of the result.

It is the purpose of this teaching to lift us to a higher state of consciousness, to stir the highest in us to confidence and self-assertion, for that which stirs the highest in us is our teacher and healer. The very first word of correction or cure is always, "Arise." If we are to understand the reason for this constant command of the Bible to "arise," we must recognize that the universe understood internally is an infinite series of levels and man is what he is according to where he is in that series. As we are lifted up in consciousness, our world reshapes itself in harmony with the level to which we are lifted. He who rises from his prayer a better man, his prayer has been granted.

To change the present state we, like Dr. Millikan, must rise to a higher level of consciousness. This rise is accomplished by affirming that we are already that which we want to be; by assuming the feeling of the wish fulfilled. The drama of life is a psychological one which we bring to pass by our attitudes rather than by our acts. There is no escape from our present predicament except by a radical psychological transformation. Everything depends upon our attitude towards ourselves. That which we will not affirm as true of ourselves will not develop in our lives.

We hear much of the humble man, the meek man – but what is meant by a meek man? He is not poor and groveling, the proverbial doormat, as he is generally conceived to be. Men who make themselves as worms in their own sight have lost the vision of that life – into the likeness of which it is the true purpose of the spirit to transform this life. Men should take their measurements not from life as they see it but from men like Dr. Millkan, who, while poor and unproven, dared to assume, "I have a lavish, steady, dependable income, consistent with integrity and mutual benefit." Such men are the meek of the Gospels, the men who inherit the earth. Any concept of self less than the best robs us of the earth. The promise is, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." In the original text, the word translated as meek is the opposite of the words – resentful – angry. It has the meaning of becoming "tamed" as a wild animal is tamed. After the mind is tamed, it may be likened to a vine, of which it may be said, "Behold this vine. I found it a wild tree whose wanton strength had swollen into irregular twigs. But I pruned the plant, and it grew temperate in its vain expense of useless leaves, and knotted as you see into these clean, full clusters to repay the hand that wisely wounded it."

A meek man is a self-disciplined man. He is so disciplined he sees only the finest, he thinks only the best. He is the one who fulfills the suggestion, "Brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

We rise to a higher level of consciousness, not because we have curbed our passions, but because we have cultivated our virtues. In truth, a meek man is a man in complete control of his moods, and his moods are the highest, for he knows he must keep a high mood if he would walk with the highest.

It is my belief that all men can, like Dr. Millikan, change the course of their lives. I believe that Dr. Millikan's technique of making his desire a present fact to himself is of great importance to any seeker after the "truth." It is also his high purpose to be of "mutual benefit" that is inevitably the goal of us all. It is much easier to imagine the good of all than to be purely selfish in our imagining. By our imagination, by our affirmations, we can change our world, we can change our future. To the man of high purpose, to the disciplined man, this is a natural measure, so let us all become disciplined men. Next Sunday morning, July 15th, I am speaking as the guest of Dr. Bailes at 10:30 at the Fox-Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard, near La Cienega. My subject for next Sunday is "Changing Your Future." It is a subject near to the hearts of us all. I hope you will all come on Sunday to learn how to be the disciplined man, the meek man, who "changes his future" to the benefit of his fellow man. If you are observant, you will notice the swift echo or response to your every mood in this message and you will be able to key it to the circumstances of your daily life. When we are certain of the relationship of mood to circumstance in our lives, we welcome what befalls us. We know that all we meet is part of ourselves. In the creation of a new life we must begin at the beginning, with a change of mood. Every high mood of man is the opening of the door to a higher level for him. Let us mould our lives about a high mood or a community of high moods. Individuals, as well as communities, grow spiritually in proportion as they rise to a higher ideal. If their ideal is lowered, they sink to its depths; if their ideal is exalted, they are elevated to heights unimagined. We must keep the high mood if we would walk with the highest; the heights, also, were meant for habitation. All forms of the creative imagination imply elements of feeling. Feeling is the ferment without which no creation is possible. There is nothing wrong with our desire to transcend our present state. There would be no progress in this world were it not for man's dissatisfaction with himself. It is natural for us to seek a more beautiful personal life; it is right that we wish for greater understanding, greater health, greater security. It is stated in the sixteenth chapter of the Gospel of St. John, "Heretofore have ye asked for nothing in my name; ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full."

A spiritual revival is needed for mankind, but by spiritual revival I mean a true religious attitude, one in which each individual, himself, accepts the challenge of embodying a new and higher value of himself as Dr. Millikan did. A nation can exhibit no greater wisdom in the mass than it generates in its units. For this reason, I have always preached self-help, knowing that if we strive passionately after this kind of self-help, that is, to embody a new and higher concept of ourselves, then all other kinds of help will be at our service.

The ideal we serve and hope to achieve is ready for a new incarnation; but unless we offer it human parentage it is incapable of birth. We must affirm that we are already that which we hope to be and live as though we were, knowing like Dr. Millikan, that our assumption, though false to the outer world, if persisted in, will harden into fact.

The perfect man judges not after appearances; he judges righteously. He sees himself and others as he desires himself and them to be. He hears what he wants to hear. He sees and hears only the good. He knows the truth, and the truth sets him free and leads him to good. The truth shall set all mankind free. This is our spiritual revival. Character is largely the result of the direction and persistence of voluntary attention.

"Think truly, and thy thoughts shall the world's famine feed;

Speak truly, and each word of thine shall be a fruitful seed;

Live truly, and thy life shall be a great and noble creed."

BY IMAGINATION WE BECOME

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

How many times have we heard someone say, "Oh, it's only his imagination?" Only his imagination - man's imagination is the man himself. No man has too little imagination, but few men have disciplined their imagination. Imagination is itself indestructible. Therein lies the horror of its misuse. Daily, we pass some stranger on the street and observe him muttering to himself, carrying on an imaginary argument with one not present. He is arguing with vehemence, with fear or with hatred, not realizing that he is setting in motion, by his imagination, an unpleasant event which he will presently encounter.

The world, as imagination sees it, is the real world. Not facts, but figments of the imagination, shape our daily lives. It is the exact and literal minded who live in a fictitious world. Only imagination can restore the Eden from which experience has driven us out. Imagination is the sense by which we perceived the above, the power by which we resolve vision into being. Every stage of man's progress is made by the exercise of the imagination. It is only because men do not perfectly imagine and believe that their results are sometimes uncertain when they might always be perfectly certain. Determined imagination is the beginning of all successful operation. The imagination, alone, is the means of fulfilling the intention. The man who, at will, can call up whatever image he pleases is, by virtue of the power of his imagination, least of all subject to caprice. The solitary or captive can, by intensity of imagination and feeling, affect myriads so that he can act through many men and speak through many voices. "We should never be certain," wrote William Butler Yeats in his IDAS OF GOOD AND EVIL, "that it was not some woman treading in the wine-press who began that subtle change in men's minds, or that the passion did not begin in the mind of some shepherd boy, lighting up his eyes for a moment before it ran upon its way."

Let me tell you the story of a very dear friend of mine, at the time the costume designer of the Music Hall in New York. She told me, one day, of her difficulty in working with one of the producers who invariably criticized and rejected her best work unjustly; that he was often rude and seemed deliberately unfair to her. Upon hearing her story, I reminded her, as I am reminding you, that men can only echo to us that which we whisper to them in secret. I had no doubt but that she silently argued with the producer, not in the flesh, but in quiet moments to herself. She confessed that she did just that each morning as she walked to work. I asked her to change her attitude toward him, to assume that he was congratulating her on her fine designs and she, in turn, was thanking him for his praise and kindness. This young designer took my advice and as she walked to the theater, she imagined a perfect relationship of the producer praising her work and she, in turn, responding with gratitude for his appreciation. This she did morning after morning and in a very short while, she discovered for herself that her own attitude determined the scenery of her existence. The behavior of the producer completely reversed itself. He became the most pleasant professional employer she had encountered. His behavior merely echoed the changes that she had whispered within herself. What she did was by the power of imagination. Her fantasy led his; and she, herself, dictated to him the discourse they eventually had together at the time she was seemingly walking alone.

Let us set ourselves, here and now, a daily exercise of controlling and disciplining our imagination. What finer beginning than to imagine better than the best we know for a friend. There is no coal of character so dead that it will not glow and flame if but slightly turned. Don't blame; only resolve. Life, like music, can by a new setting turn all its discords into harmonies. Represent your friend to yourself as already expressing that which he desires to be. Let us know that with whatever attitude we approach another, a similar attitude approaches us.

How can we do this? Do what my friend did. To establish rapport, call your friend mentally. Focus your attention on him and mentally call his name just as you would to attract his attention were you to see him on the street. Imagine that he has answered, mentally hear his voice – imagine that he is telling you of the great good you have desired for him. You, in turn, tell him of your joy in witnessing his good fortune. Having mentally heard that which you wanted to hear, having thrilled to the news heard, go about your daily task. Your imagined conversation must awaken what it affirmed; the acceptance of the end wills the means. And the wisest reflection could not devise more effective means than those which are willed by the acceptance of the end.

However, your conversation with your friend must be in a manner which does not express the slightest doubt as to the truth of what you imagine that you hear and say. If you do not control your imagination, you will find that you are hearing and saying all that you formerly heard and said. We are creatures of habit; and habit, though not law, acts like the most compelling law in the world. With this knowledge of the power of imagination, be as the disciplined man and transform your world by imagining and feeling only what is lovely and of good report. The beautiful idea you awaken in yourself shall not fail to arouse its affinity in others. Do not wait four months for the harvest. Today is the day to practice the control and discipline of your imagination. Man is only limited by weakness of attention and poverty of imagination. The great secret is a controlled imagination and a well sustained attention, firmly and repeatedly focused on the object to be accomplished.

"Now is the acceptable time to give beauty for ashes, joy for mourning, praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord that He might be glorified."

Now is the time to control our imagination and attention. By control, I do not mean restraint by will power but rather cultivation through love and compassion. With so much of the world in discord we cannot possibly emphasize too strongly the power of imaginative love. Imaginative Love, that is my subject next Sunday morning when I shall speak for Dr. Bailes while he is on his holiday. The services will be held as always at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard, near La Cienega at 10:30. "As the world is, so is the individual," should be changed to, "As the individual is so is the world." And I hope to be able to bring to each of you present the true meaning of the words of Zechariah, "Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor and let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbor." What a wonderful challenge to you and to me. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." As a man imagines so is he. Hold fast to love in your imagination. By creating an ideal within your mental sphere you can approximate yourself to this "ideal image" till you become one and the same with it, thereby transforming yourself into it, or rather, absorbing its qualities into the very core of your being. Never, never, lose sight of the power that is within you. Imaginative love lifts the invisible into sight and gives us water in the desert. It builds for the soul its only fit abiding place. Beauty, love and all of good report are the garden, but imaginative love is the way into the garden.

Sow an imaginary conversation, you reap an act;

Sow an act, you reap a habit;

Sow a habit, you reap a character;

Sow a character, you reap your destiny.

By imagination, we are all reaping our destinies, whether they be good, bad, or indifferent. Imagination has full power of objective realization and every stage of man’s progress or regression is made by the exercise of imagination. I believe with William Blake, "What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be, even of torments, despair, and eternal death. By imagination and desire we become what we desire to be. Let us affirm to ourselves that we are what we imagine. If we persist in the assumption that we are what we wish to be, we will become transformed into that which we have imagined ourselves to be. We were born by a natural miracle of love and for a brief space of time our needs were all another’s care. In that simple truth lies the secret of life. Except by love, we cannot truly live at all. Our parents in their separate individualities have no power to transmit life. So, back we come to the basic truth that life is the offspring of love. Therefore, no love, no life. Thus, it is rational to say that, "God is Love."

Love is our birthright. Love is the fundamental necessity of our life. "Do not go seeking for that which you are. Those who go seeking for love only make manifest their own lovelessness and the loveless never find love. Only the loving find love and they never have to seek for it."

ANSWERED PRAYER

Radio Talk – Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

Have you ever had a prayer answered? What wouldn't men give just to feel certain that when they pray, something definite would happen. For this reason, I would like to take a little time to see why it is that some prayers are answered and some apparently fall on dry ground. "When ye pray, believe that ye receive, and ye shall receive." Believe that ye receive – is the condition imposed upon man. Unless we believe that we receive, our prayer will not be answered. A prayer – granted – implies that something is done in consequence of the prayer which otherwise would not have been done. Therefore, the one who prays is the spring of action – the directing mind – and the one who grants the prayer. Such responsibility man refuses to assume, for responsibility it seems, is mankind's invisible nightmare.

The whole natural world is built on law. Yet, between prayer and its answer we see no such relation. We feel that God may answer or ignore our prayer, that our prayer may hit the mark or may miss it. The mind is still unwilling to admit that God subjects Himself to His own laws. How many people believe that there is, between prayer and its answer, a relation of cause and effect?

Let us take a look at the means employed to heal the ten lepers as related in the seventeenth chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke. The thing that strikes us in this story is the method that was used to raise their faith to the needful intensity. We are told that the ten lepers appealed to Jesus to "have mercy" on them – that is – to heal them. Jesus ordered them to go and show themselves to the priests, and "as they went, they were cleansed." The Mosaic Law demanded that when a leper recovered from his disease he must show himself to the priest to obtain a certificate of restored health. Jesus imposed a test upon the lepers' faith and supplied a means by which their faith could be raised to its full potency. If the lepers refused to go – they had no faith – and, therefore, could not be healed. But, if they obeyed Him, the full realization of what their journey implied would break upon their minds as they went and this dynamic thought would heal them. So, we read, "As they went, they were cleansed."

You, no doubt, often have heard the words of that inspiring old hymn – "Oh, what peace we often forfeit; oh, what needless pain we bear, all because we do not carry everything to God in prayer." I, myself, came to this conviction through experience, being led to brood upon the nature of prayer. I believe in the practice and philosophy of what men call prayer, but not everything that receives that name is really prayer.

Prayer is the elevation of the mind to that which we seek. The very first word of correction is always "arise." Always lift the mind to that which we seek. This is easily done by assuming the feeling of the wish fulfilled. How would you feel if your prayer were answered? Well, assume that feeling until you experience in imagination what you would experience in reality if your prayer were answered. Prayer means getting into action mentally. It means holding the attention upon the idea of the wish fulfilled until it fills the mind and crowds all other ideas out of the consciousness. This statement that prayer means getting into action mentally and holding the attention upon the idea of the wish fulfilled until it fills the mind and crowds all other ideas out of the consciousness, does not mean that prayer is a mental effort – an act of will. On the contrary, prayer is to be contrasted with an act of will. Prayer is a surrender. It means abandoning oneself to the feeling of the wish fulfilled. If prayer brings no response – there is something wrong with the prayer and the fault lies generally in too much effort. Serious confusion arises insofar as men identify the state of prayer with an act of will, instead of contrasting it with an act of will. The sovereign rule is to make no effort, and if this is observed, you will intuitively fall into the right attitude.

Creativeness is not an act of will, but a deeper receptiveness – a keener susceptibility. The acceptance of the end – the acceptance of the answered prayer – finds the means for its realization. Feel yourself into the state of the answered prayer until the state fills the mind and crowds all other states out of your consciousness. What we must work for is not the development of the will, but the education of the imagination and the steadying of attention. Prayer succeeds by avoiding conflict. Prayer is, above all things, easy. Its greatest enemy is effort. The mighty surrenders itself fully only to that which is most gentle. The wealth of Heaven may not be seized by a strong will, but surrenders itself, a free gift, to the God-spent moment. Along the lines of least resistance travel spiritual as well as physical forces.

We must act on the assumption that we already possess that which we desire, for all that we desire is already present within us. It only waits to be claimed. That it must be claimed is a necessary condition by which we realize our desires. Our prayers are answered if we assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled and continue in that assumption. One of the loveliest examples of an answered prayer I witnessed in my own living room. A very charming lady from out of town came to see me concerning prayer. As she had no one with whom to leave her eight-year old son, she brought him with her the time of our interview. Seemingly, he was engrossed in playing with a toy truck, but at the end of the interview with his mother he said, "Mr. Neville, I know how to pray now. I know what I want – a collie puppy – and I can imagine I am hugging him every night on my bed." His mother explained to him and to me the impossibilities of his prayer, the cost of the puppy, their confined home, even his inability to care for the dog properly. The boy looked into his mother's eyes and simply said, "But, Mother, I know how to pray now." And he did. Two months later during a "Kindness to Animals Week" in his city, all the school children were required to write an essay on how they would love and care for a pet. You have guessed the answer. His essay, out of the five thousand submitted, won the prize, and that prize, presented by the mayor of the city to the lad – was a collie puppy. The boy truly assumed the feeling of his wish fulfilled, hugging and loving his puppy every night.

Prayer is an act of Imaginative Love which is to be the subject of my message next Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega. It is my desire, next Sunday, that I may explain to you, how you, like the young boy; can yield yourselves to the lovely images of your desires and persist in your prayer even though you, like the lad, are told that your desires are impossible.

The necessity of persistence in prayer is shown us in the Bible. "Which of you," asked Jesus, "shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him: Friend, lend me three loaves; for a friend of mine is come to me from a journey, and I have nothing to set before him; and he from within shall answer and say, 'Trouble me not; the door is now shut and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.' I say unto you, though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will arise and give as many as he needeth." Luke 2. The word translated as "importunity" means, literally, shameless impudence. We must persist until we succeed in imagining ourselves into the situation of the answered prayer. The secret of success is found in the word "perseverance." The soul imagining itself into the act, takes on the results of the act. Not imagining itself into the act, it is ever free from the result. Experience in imagination what you would experience in reality were you already what you want to be, and you will take on the result of that act. Do not experience in imagination what you want to experience in reality and you will ever be free of the result. "When ye pray, believe that ye receive, and ye shall receive." One must persist until he reaches his friend on a higher level of consciousness. He must persist until his feeling of the wish fulfilled has all the sensory vividness of reality.

Prayer is a controlled waking dream. If we are to pray successfully, we must steady our attention to observe the world as it would be seen by us were our prayer answered.

Steadying attention makes no call upon any special faculty, but it does demand control of imagination. We must extend our senses – observe our changed relationship to our world and trust this observation. The new world is not there to grasp, but to sense, to touch. The best way to observe it is to be intensely aware of it. In other words, we can, by listening as through we heard and by looking as though we saw, actually hear voices and see scenes from within ourselves that are otherwise not audible or visible. With our attention focused on the state desired, the outer world crumbles and then the world – like music – by a new setting, turns all its discords into harmonies. Life is not a struggle but a surrender. Our prayers are answered by the powers we invoke not by those we exert. So long as the eyes take notice, the soul is blind -- for the world that moves us is the one we imagine, not the world round about us. We must yield our whole being to the feeling of being the noble one we want to be. If anything is kept back, the prayer is vain. We often are deprived of our high goal by our effort to possess it. We are called upon to act on the assumption that we already are the man we would be. If we do this without effort – experiencing in imagination what we would experience in the flesh had we realized our goal, we shall find that we do, indeed, possess it. The healing touch is in our attitude. We need change nothing but our attitude towards it. Assume a virtue if you have it not, assume the feeling of your wish fulfilled. "Pray for my soul; more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

MEDITATION

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

Many people tell me they cannot meditate. This seems to me a bit like saying they cannot play the piano after one attempt. Meditation, as in every art or expression, requires constant practice for perfect results. A truly great pianist, for instance, would feel he could not play his best if he missed one day of practice. If he missed a week or a month of practice he would know that even his most uninitiated audience would recognize his defects. So it is with meditation. If we practice daily with joy in this daily habit, we perfect it as an art. I find that those who complain of the difficulty in meditation do not make it a daily practice, but rather, wait until something pressing appears in their world and then, through an act of will, try to fix their attention on the desired state. But they do not know that meditation is the education of the will, for when will and imagination are in conflict, imagination invariably wins.

The dictionaries define meditation as fixing one's attention upon; as planning in the mind; as devising and looking forward; engaging in continuous and contemplative thought. A lot of nonsense has been written about meditation. Most books on the subject get the reader nowhere, for they do not explain the process of meditation. All that meditation amounts to is a controlled imagination and a well sustained attention. Simply hold the attention on a certain idea until it fills the mind and crowds all other ideas out of consciousness. The power of attention shows itself the sure guarantee of an inner force. We must concentrate on the idea to be realized, without permitting any distraction. This is the great secret of action. Should the attention wander, bring it back to the idea you wish to realize and do so again and again, until the attention becomes immobilized and undergoes an effortless fixation upon the idea presented to it. The idea must hold the attention – must fascinate it – so to speak. All meditation ends at last with the thinker, and he finds he is what he, himself, has conceived. The undisciplined man's attention is the servant of his vision rather than its master. It is captured by the pressing rather than the important.

In the act of meditation, as in the act of adoration, silence is our highest praise. Let us keep our silent sanctuaries, for in them the eternal perspectives are preserved. Day by day, week by week, year by year, at times where none through love or lesser intentions were allowed to interfere, I set myself to attain mastery over my attention and imagination. I sought out ways to make more securely my own, those magical lights that dawned and faded within me. I wished to evoke them at will and to be the master of my vision.

I would strive to hold my attention on the activities of the day in unwavering concentration so that, not for one moment, would the concentration slacken. This is an exercise – a training for higher adventures of the soul. It is no light labor. The ploughman's labor, working in the fields is easier by far.

Empires do not send legions so swiftly to obstruct revolt as all that is alive in us hurries along the nerve highways of the body to frustrate our meditative mood. The beautiful face of one we love glows before us to enchant us from our task. Old enmities and fears beleaguer us. If we are tempted down these vistas, we find, after an hour of musing, that we have been lured away. We have deserted our task and forgotten that fixity of attention we set out to achieve. What man is there who has complete control of his imagination and attention. A controlled imagination and steadied attention, firmly and repeatedly focused on the idea to be realized, is the beginning of all magical operations. If he persists through weeks and months, sooner or later, through meditation, he creates in himself a center of power. He will enter a path all may travel but on which few do journey. It is a path within himself where the feet first falter in shadow and darkness, but which later is made brilliant by an inner light. There is no need for special gifts or genius. It is not bestowed on any individual but won by persistence and practice of meditation. If he persists, the dark caverns of his brain will grow luminous and he will set out day after day for the hour of meditation as if to keep an appointment with a lover. When it comes, he rises within himself as a diver, too long under water, rises to breathe the air and see the light. In this meditative mood he experiences in imagination what he would experience in reality had he realized his goal, that he may in time become transformed into the image of his imagined state.

The only test of religion worth making is whether it is trueborn; whether it springs from the deepest consciousness of the individual; whether it is the fruit of experience; or whether it is anything else whatever. This is my reason for speaking to you on my last Sunday in Los Angeles about The True Religious Attitude. What is your religious attitude? What is my religious attitude? I shall speak on this subject next Sunday morning at 10:30 as Dr. Bailes' guest. The service will be held at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega. I shall endeavor to show you that the methods of mental and spiritual knowledge are entirely different. For we know a thing mentally by looking at it from the outside, by comparing it with other things, by analyzing and defining it; whereas we can know a thing spiritually only by becoming it. We must be the thing itself and not merely talk about it or look at it. We must be in love if we are to know what love is. We must be God-like if we are to know what God is.

Meditation, like sleep, is an entrance into the subconscious. "When you pray, enter into your closet, and when you have shut your door, pray to your Father which is in secret and your Father which is in secret shall reward you openlhy." Meditation is an illusion of sleep which diminishes the impression of the outer world and renders the mind more receptive to suggestion from within. The mind in meditation is in a state of relaxation akin to the feeling attained just before dropping off to sleep. This state is beautifully described by the poet, Keats, in his ODE TO A NIGHTINGALE. It is said that as the poet sat in the garden and listened to the nightingale, he fell into a state which he described as "A drowsy numbness pains my senses as though of hemlock I had drunk." Then after singing his ode to the nightingale, Keats asked himself this question, "Was it a vision or a waking dream? Fled is the music; do I wake or sleep?" Those are the words of one who has seen something with such vividness or reality that he wonders whether the evidence of his physical eyes can now be believed.

Any kind of meditation in which we withdraw into ourselves without making too much effort to think is an outcropping of the subconscious. Think of the subconscious as a tide which ebbs and flows. In sleep, it is a flood tide, while at moments of full wakefulness, the tide is at its lowest ebb. Between these two extremes are any number of intermediary levels. When we are drowsy, dreamy, lulled in gentle reverie, the tide is high. The more wakeful and alert we become, the lower the tide sinks. The highest tide compatible with the conscious direction of our thoughts occurs just before we fall asleep and just after we wake. An easy way to create this passive state is to relax in a comfortable chair or on a bed. Close your eyes and imagine that you are sleepy, so sleepy, so very sleepy. Act precisely as though you were going to take a siesta. In so doing, you allow the subconscious tide to rise to sufficient height to make your particular assumption effective.

When you first attempt this, you may find that all sorts of counter-thoughts try to distract you, but if you persist, you will achieve a passive state. When this passive state is reached, think only on "things of good report" -- imagine that you are now expressing your highest ideal, not how you will express it, but simply feel HERE AND NOW that you are the noble one you desire to be. You are it now. Call your high ideal into being by imagining and feeling you are it now.

I think all happiness depends on the energy to assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled, to assume the mask of some other more perfect life. If we cannot imagine ourselves different from what we are and try to assume that second more desirable self, we cannot impose a discipline upon ourselves though we may accept discipline from others.

Meditation is an activity of the soul; it is an active virtue; and an active virtue, as distinguished from passive acceptance of a code is theatrical. It is dramatic; it is the wearing of a mask. As your goal is accepted, you become totally indifferent to possible failure, for acceptance of the end wills the means to the end. When you emerge from the moment of meditation it is as though you were shown the happy end of a play in which you are the principal actor. Having witnessed the end in your meditation, regardless of any anti-climatic state you encounter, you remain calm and secure in the knowledge that the end has been perfectly defined.

Creation is finished and what we call creativeness is really only a deeper receptiveness or keener susceptibility on our part, and this receptiveness is "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts." Through meditation, we awaken within ourselves a center of light, which will be to us a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night.

THE LAW OF ASSUMPTION

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

The great mystic, William Blake, wrote almost two hundred years ago, "What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be." Now, at first, this mystical gem seems a bit involved, or at best to be a play on words; but it is nothing of the kind. Listen to it carefully. "What seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be." That is certainly clear enough. It is a simple truth about the law of assumption, and a warning of the consequences of its misuse. The author of the Epistle to the Romans declared in the fourteenth chapter, "I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself; but to him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclearn."

We see by this that it is not superior insight but purblindness that reads into the greatness of men some littleness with which it chances to be familiar, for what seems to be, is, to those to whom it seems to be.

Experiments recently conducted at two of our leading universities revealed this great truth about the law of assumption. They stated in their releases to the newspapers, that after two thousand experiments they came to the conclusion that, ‘What you see when you look at something depends not so much on what is there as on the assumption you make when you look. What you believe to be the real physical world is actually only an assumptive world." In other words, you would not define your husband in the same way that you mother would. Yet, you are both defining the same person. Your particular relationship to a thing influences your feelings with respect to that thing and makes you see in it an element which is not there. If your feeling in the matter is a self-element; it can be cast out. If it is a permanent distinction in the state considered, it cannot be cast out. The thing to do is to try. If you can change your opinion of another, then what you now believe of him cannot be absolutely true, but relatively true.

Men believe in the reality of the external world because they do not know how to focus and condense their powers to penetrate its thin crust. Strangely enough, it is not difficult to penetrate this view of the senses. To remove the veil of the senses, we do not employ great effort; the objective world vanishes as we turn our attention from it. We have only to concentrate on the state desired to mentally see it; but to give reality to it so that it will become an objective fact, we must focus our attention upon the desired state until it has all the sensory vividness and feeling of reality. When, through concentrated attention, our desire appears to possess the distinctness and feeling of reality; when the form of thought is as vivid as the form of nature, we have given it the right to become a visible fact in our lives. Each man must find the means best suited to his nature to control his attention and concentrate it on the desired state. I find for myself the best state to be one of meditation, a relaxed state akin to sleep, but a state in which I am still consciously in control of my imagination and capable of fixing my attention on a mental object.

If it is difficult to control the direction of your attention while in this state akin to sleep, you may find gazing fixedly into an object very helpful. Do not look at its surface, but rather into and beyond any plain object such as a wall, a carpet or any object which possesses depth. Arrange it to return as little reflection as possible. Imagine, then, that in this depth you are seeing and hearing what you want to see and hear until your attention is exclusively occupied by the imagined state.

At the end of your meditation, when you awake from your controlled waking dream you feel as though you had returned from a great distance. The visible world which you had shut out returns to consciousness and, by its very presence, informs you that you have been self-deceived into believing that the object of your contemplation was real; but if you remain faithful to your vision this sustained mental attitude will give reality to your visions and they will become visible concrete facts in your world.

Define your highest ideal and concentrate your attention upon this ideal until you identify yourself with it. Assume the feeling of being it – the feeling that would be yours were you now embodying it in your world. This assumption, though now denied by your senses, "if persisted in" – will become a fact in your world. You will know when you have succeeded in fixing the desired state in consciousness simply by looking mentally at the people you know. This is a wonderful check on yourself as your mental conversations are more revealing than your physical conversations are. If, in your mental conversations with others, you talk with them as you formerly did, then you have not changed your concept of self, for all changes of concepts of self result in a changed relationship to the world. Remember what was said earlier, "What you see when you look at something depends not so much on what is there as on the assumption you make when you look." Therefore, the assumption of the wish fulfilled should make you see the world mentally as you would physically were your assumption a physical fact. The spiritual man speaks to the natural man through the language of desire. The key to progress in life and to the fulfillment of dreams lies in the ready obedience to the voice. Unhesitating obedience to its voice is an immediate assumption of the wish fulfilled. To desire a state is to have it. As Pascal said, "You would not have sought me had you not already found me." Man, by assuming the feeling of the wish fulfilled and then living and acting on this conviction changes his future in harmony with his assumption. To "change his future" is the inalienable right of freedom loving individuals. There would be no progress in the world were it not for the divine discontent in man which urges him on to higher and higher levels of consciousness. I have chosen this subject so close to the hearts of us all – "Changing Your Future" -- for my message next Sunday morning. I am to have the great joy of speaking for Dr. Bailes while he is vacationing. The service will be held at 10:30 at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega Boulevard.

Since the right to change our future is our birthright as sons of God, let us accept its challenge and learn just how to do it. Again today, speaking of changing your future, I wish to stress the importance of a real transformation of self – not merely a slight alteration of circumstances which, in a matter of moments, will permit us to slip back into the old dissatisfied man. In your meditation, allow others to see you as they would see you were this new concept of self a concrete fact. You always seem to others the embodiment of the ideal you inspire. Therefore, in meditation, when you contemplate others, you must be seen by them mentally as you would be seen by them physically were your conception of yourself an objective fact. That is, in meditation, you imagine that they see you expressing this nobler man you desire to be. If you assume that you are what you want to be, your desire is fulfilled and, in fulfillment, all longing "to be" is neutralized. This, also, is an excellent check on yourself as to whether or not you have actually succeeded in changing self. You cannot continue desiring what has been realized. Rather, you are in a mood to give thanks for a gift received. Your desire is not something you labor to fulfill, it is recognizing something you already possess. It is assuming the feeling of being that which you desire to be.

Believing and being are one. The conceiver and his conception are one. Therefore, that which you conceive yourself to be can never be so far off as even to be near, for nearness implies separation. "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not yet seen. If you assume that you are that finer, nobler one you wish to be, you will see others as they are related to your high assumption. All enlightened men wish for the good of others. If it is the good of another you seek, you must use the same controlled contemplation. In meditation, you must represent the other to yourself as already being or having the greatness you desire for him. As for yourself, your desire for another must be an intense one. It is through desire that you rise above your present sphere and the road from longing to fulfillment is shortened as you experience in imagination all that you would experience in the flesh were you or your friend the embodiment of the desire you have for yourself or him. Experience has taught me that this is the perfect way to achieve my great goals for others as well as for myself. However, my own failures would convict me were I to imply that I have completely mastered the control of my attention. I can, however, with the ancient teacher say: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before – I press towards the mark for the prize."

TRUTH

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

I wish to ask each one of you listening to me today a question – a question which must be close to the hearts of us all concerning truth. If a man known to you as a murderer broke into your home and asked the whereabouts of your mother, would you tell him where she was? Would you tell him the truth? Would you? I venture not – I hope not. In the most mystical of the Gospels – in the Gospel of St. John we read, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Therein lies a challenge to us all, "The truth shall make you free." If you told the truth concerning your mother, would you set her free? Again, in John we read, "Sanctify them by the truth." If you gave your mother up to a murderer, would you "sanctify her?" What, then, is the truth of which the Bible so constantly speaks? The truth of the Bible is always coupled with love. The truth of the Bible is that spiritual realization of conscious life in God towards which the human soul evolves through all eternity.

Truth is an ever-increasing illumination. No one who seeks sincerely for truth need fear the outcome for every raising erstwhile truth brings into view some larger truth which it had hidden. The true seeker after truth is not a smug, critical, holier than thou person. Rather, the true seeker after truth knows the words of Zechariah to be true. "Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor and let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbor." The seeker after truth does not judge from appearances – he sees the good, the truth in all he observes. He knows that a true judgment need not conform to the external reality to which it relates. Never are we so blind to the truth as when we see things as they seem to be. Only pictures that idealize really depict the truth. It is never superior insight but rather, purblindness that reads into the greatness of another some littleness with which it happens to be familiar.

We all know at least one petty gossip who not only imagines evil against his neighbor, but also insists upon spreading that evil far and wide. His cruel accusations are always accompanied by the statement, "It's a fact," or "I know it's the truth." How far from the truth he is. Even if it were the truth as he knows the truth, it is better not to voice it for "A truth told with bad intent beats all the lies you can invent." Such a man is not a seeker after the truth as revealed in the Bible. He seeks not truth so much as support for his own point of view. By his prejudices, he opens a door by which his enemies enter and make their own the secret places of his heart. Let us seek sincerely for the truth as Robert Browning expresses it:

'Truth is within ourselves; it take no rise

From outward things, whate'er you may believe.

There is an immortal center in us all

Where truth abides in fullness.

The truth that is within us is governed by imaginative love. Knowing this great truth, we can no longer imagine evil against any neighbor. We will imagine the best of our neighbor.

It is my belief that wherever man's attitude towards life is governed by imaginative love, there it is religious – there he worships – there he perceives the truth. I am going to speak on this subject next Sunday morning when my title will be, "Imaginative Love." At that time, I am to have the pleasure and the privilege of taking Dr. Frederick Bailes' service at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega. The service will be held as Dr. Bailes always conducts it at 10:30 Sunday morning.

It is an intuitive desire of all mankind to be a finer, nobler being, to do the loving thing. But we can do the loving thing only when all we imagine is full of love for our neighbor. Then we know the truth, the truth that sets all mankind free. I believe this is a message that will aid us all in the art of living a better and finer life. Infinite love in unthinkable origin was called God, the Father. Infinite love in creative expression was called God, the Son. Infinite love in universal interpenetration, in Infinite Immanence, and in Eternal procession, was called God, the Holy Ghost. We must learn to know ourselves as Infinite Love, as good rather than evil. This is not something that we have to become; it is, rather, for us to recognize something that we are already.

The original birthplace of imagination is in love. Love is its lifeblood. Insofar as imagination retains its own life's blood, its visions are images of truth. Then it mirrors the living identity of the thing it beholds. But if imagination should deny the very power that has brought it to birth then the direst sort of horror will begin. Instead of rendering back living images of the truth, imagination will fly to love's opposite – fear and its visions will then be perverted and contorted reflections cast upon a screen of frightful fantasy. Instead of being the supremely creative power, it will become the active agent of destruction. Wherever man's attitude to life is truly imaginative, there man and God are merged in creative unity. Remember that Love is always creative, causative in every sphere from the highest to the very lowest. There never has existed thought, word or deed that was not caused by love, or by its opposite – fear of some kind, even if it were only a desire of a not very worthy aim. Love and fear are the mainspring of our mental machinery. Everything is a thought before it becomes a thing. I suggest the pursuit of a high ideal to make a fact of being become a fact of consciousness and to do this by training the imagination to realize that the only atmosphere in which we truly live and move and have our being is Infinite Love. God is Love. Love never faileth. Infinite Creative Spirit is Love. The urge that caused Infinite unconditioned consciousness to condition Itself into millions of sensitive forms is Love.

Love regarded as an abstraction – apart from an object – is unthinkable. Love is not love if there is no beloved. Love only becomes thinkable in relation, in process in act. Let us recognize with Blake that, "He who will not live by love must be subdued by fear," and set ourselves the highest of ideals to love and to live by. But our highest ideals do not bless unless they come down and take on flesh. We must make results and accomplishments the crucial test of our imagination and our love, for incarnation is the only true realization. Our faithfulness must be to the sum of all the truth we know and it must be absolute. Otherwise, that truth lacks a vehicle and cannot be incarnated in us.

Our concept of ourselves determines the scenery of our lives. We are ever our own jailers. The prison doors that we thought closed are truly ajar – waiting for us to see the truth. "Man ever surrounds himself with the true image of himself," said Emerson. "Every spirit builds itself a house and beyond its house, a world, and beyond its world, a heaven. Know then the world exists for you, for you the phenomenon is perfect. What we are that only can we see. All that Adam had, all the Caesar could, you have and can do."

Adam called his house heaven and earth. Caesar called his house, Rome. You perhaps call yours a cobbler's trade, or a hundred acres of land, or a scholar's garret. Yet line for line, and point for point, your dominion is as great as theirs, though without such fine names. Build, therefore, your own world and as fast as you conform your life to the pure idea in your mind, that will unfold its great proportions.

The truth is our secret inward reality, the cause, the meaning, the relation of our lives to all things. Let the truth carry us heavenwards, expanding our conceptions, increasing our understanding until we know the "Truth" and are made "Free."

STONE, WATER OR WINE?

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

It has been my privilege and pleasure to address Dr. Frederick Bailes' Sunday audiences in the past few years. Today, I am to extend the privilege in speaking to you, his unseen audience of the radio. This will be a very practical series of talks for my subjects will be drawn largely from the Bible, the most spiritual of all books. And I am firmly convinced that whatever is most profoundly spiritual is, in reality, most directly practical. All mistakes made in Biblical interpretation come from referring statements of which the intention is spiritual and mystical, and implying principles or states to times, persons or places. In one sense, not one work of Scripture is true according to the letter. Yet, I say that every word is true; but the Scriptures are true only as He intended them that spoke them; they are true as God meant them, not as man will have them. A spiritual and symbolical interpretation alone yields truth, whilst a literal acceptation profits nothing. The Bible contains historical elements, but these are always used as picture language of great ideas.

The Gospel narrative is to be studied in order that we may know. It does not convey knowledge immediately. Getting to know is a gradual process – a progressive inner experience. God reveals Himself within us as we are able to receive Him. The deep meanings have always been recognized partially by a few, as will be found by consulting the writings of the seers of all past ages.

In assigning to the Bible its proper meaning, it is necessary to remember that as mystical Scriptures it deals primarily, not with material things or persons, but with spiritual significations. The Bible is addressed not to the outer sense or reason, but to the soul. Its object is not to give an historical account of physical life, but to exhibit the spiritual possibilities of humanity, at large, for religion is not in its nature historical and dependent upon actual sensible events, but consists in processes such as Faith and Redemption. These, being interior to all men, subsist irrespective of what any particular man has at any time done. The perennial value of the Bible is its symbolic value. There are great controversies as to what is and what is not historical in the Bible, but let us remember that if we could settle all the historical questions tomorrow, that would not give us religion, nor would it give the Bible a biding value. Everything depends upon our finding the symbolical value of the facts. A fact of past history has nothing in it for present day religion unless it stands forth as a symbol of a Reality behind itself.

The Bible is a revelation of Truth expressed in Divine symbolism. From the literal point of view, the wording may sometimes be confusing; it is the symbolism, alone, which is precious and worthy of our best efforts to elucidate. All Scripture was written from the inward mystery and not with a mystical sense put into it. The stories conceal an underlying meaning, and the task of scripture interpretation is to discover these psychological truths which are expressed in this symbolism. We, here, are not concerned with the surface meaning of the Scripture, whether it be reasonable or absurd, for in no case does it constitute the inner truth we are seeking. Throughout the centuries we have mistakenly taken personification for persons, allegory for history, the vehicle that conveyed the instruction for the instruction itself. and the gross first sense for the ultimate sense intended. In most of the little things of life, this confusion is of trivial consequence. But the error which arises when you carry the confusion into questions of greater moment, such as religion, assumes gigantic proportions. For centuries, men have sought eagerly for bits of evidence which might be related to the happenings described in the Bible. While most people believe that its characters lived, no proof of their lives on earth has ever been found and may never be found. This is unimportant for the ancient teachers were not writing history, but an allegorical picture lesson of certain basic principles, which they clothed in the garb of history. The form of the various stories of the Bible is as distinct from its substance as the form of a grain of wheat is distinct from the life germ within it. As the assimilative organs of the body discriminate between food that can be built into the physical system and food that must be cast off, so do the awakened intuitive faculties discover, beneath allegory and parable, the psychological life germ, and feeding on this, they cast off the fiction which conveyed it. The Bible is the largest selling book in this country. It is probably the least read and certainly the least understood. Throughout the Bible, the symbols of stone, water and wine are used. The stones of the Bible are its literal truths. The Ten Commandments, we are told, were written on stone. The water of the Bible is the psychological meaning hidden in these literal truths of stone. "I give you living waters," that is, the inner knowledge that can make these stories a living reality in your life. The wine you must make for yourself through the wise use of this living water or psychological truth. This is an absolute necessity to the truly religious man. This is what Sir Walter Scott meant when he said, "Man's greatest education is that which he gives to himself."

On Sunday morning, I shall speak on, "Are You Stone, Water or Wine?" I shall be taking Dr. Bailes' service at 10:30 at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega. When you hear this message, you may ask yourselves, "Are you stone, water or wine?" You may judge whether your understanding of the Bible is merely literal, psychological, or truly spiritual and, therefore, profoundly practical.

The Bible is, from beginning to end, all about transcending the violence which characterizes mankind's present level of being. It affirms the possibility of a development of another level of being surmounting violence. The point of view taken is that the goal of man is this inner development, which is the only real psychology. To take the Bible away from its central idea of rebirth, which means an inner evolution and implies the existence of a higher level, is to understand nothing of its real meaning. The Word of God, that is, the psychological teaching in the Bible, is to make a man different, first in thought and then in being, so that he becomes a new man or is born again.

Whenever an entirely new attitude enters into a person's life, psychological rebirth to some extent has occurred. Man wants to be better, not different. The Bible speaks, not of being better, but of another man, a man reborn. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God… Except a man be born of water and the spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again." (John 3.) The Ten Commandments were written on tablets of stone for those incapable of seeing any deeper meaning. Stone represents the most external and literal form of spiritual truth, and water refers to another way of understanding the same truth. Wine or spirit is the highest form of understanding it.

"Such as men themselves are, such will God appear to them to be," wrote John Smith, the Cambridge Platonist. "The God of the moralist is before all things a great judge and schoolmaster; the God of Science is impersonal and inflexible Vital Law; the God of the savage is the kind of chief he would be himself if he had the opportunity." No man's conduct will be higher than his conception of God, and his conception of God is determined by the kind of man he, himself, is. "For such as men themselves are, such will God appear to them to be," and what is true of man's concept of God is equally true of man's concept of God's Word, the Bible. It will be to him what he is to himself.

"God is God from the creation,

Truth alone is man's salvation;

But the God that now you worship

Soon shall be your God no more

For the soul in its unfolding

Evermore its thoughts remolding,

Learns more truly in its progress

How to love and to adore."

FEELING IS THE SECRET

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

Recently, I asked a very successful businessman his formula for success. He laughed and was a little embarrassed. Then he replied, "I guess it's just because I can't conceive of failure. It's nothing that I think about much. It's more a feeling that I have." His statement coincided completely with my own beliefs and experiments. We can think about something forever and never see it in our world, but once let us feel its reality, and we are bound to encounter it. The more intensely we feel, the sooner we will encounter it. We all regard feelings far too much as effects, and not sufficiently as causes of the events of the day. Feeling is not only the result of our conditions of life, it is also the creator of those conditions. We say we are happy because we are well, not realizing that the process will work equally well in the reverse direction. We are well because we are happy. We are all far too undisciplined in our feelings. To be joyful for another is to bless ourselves as well as him. To be angry with another is to punish ourselves for his fault. The distressed mind stays at home though the body travels to the ends of the earth, while the happy mind travels though the body remains at home.

Feeling is the secret of successful prayer, for in prayer, we feel ourselves into the situation of the answered prayer and, then, we live and act upon that conviction. Feeling after Him, as the Bible suggests, is a gradual unfolding of the soul's hidden capacities. Feeling yields in importance to no other. It is the ferment without which no creation is possible. All forms of creative imagination imply elements of feeling. All emotional dispositions whatever may influence the creative imagination. Feeling after Him has no finality. It is an acquisition, increasing in proportion to receptivity, which has not and never will have finality. An idea which is only an idea produces nothing and does nothing. It acts only if it is felt, if it is accompanied by effective feeling. Somewhere within the soul there is a mood which, if found, means wealth, health, happiness to us. The creative desire is innate in man. His whole happiness is involved in this impulse to create. Because men do not perfectly "feel," the results of their prayers are unsure, when they might be perfectly sure. We read in Proverbs, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine but a broken spirit drieth the bones." Orchestral hearts burn in the oil of the lamp of the king. The spirit sings unto the Lord a new song. All true prayer wears a glad countenance; the good are anointed with the oil of gladness above their fellows. Let us, then, watch our feelings, our reactions to the day's events. And let us guard our feelings even more zealously in the act of prayer, for prayer is the true creative state. Dignity indicates that man hears the greater music of life, and moves to the tempo of its deeper meaning. If we did nothing but imagine and feel the lovely, the world's reform would, at once, be accomplished. Many of the stories of the Bible deal exclusively with the power of imagination and feeling. "Feeling after Him" is the cry of the truth seeker. Only imagination and feeling can restore the Eden from which experience has driven us. Feeling and imagination are the senses by which we perceive the beyond. Where knowledge ends, they begin. Every noble feeling of man is the opening for him of some door to the divine world. Let us measure men, not by the height of their cities, but by the magnificence of their imaginations and feelings. Let us turn our thought up to Heaven and mix our imagination with the angels. The world that moves us is the one we imagine, not the world that surrounds us. In the imagination lie the unexplored continents, and man's great future adventure. This consciousness of non-finality in "feeling after God" has been the experience of all earnest God-ward feelers. They realize that their conception of the Infinite has constantly deepened and expanded with experience. Those who endeavor to think out the meaning of the experience and to coordinate it with the rest of our knowledge, are the philosophic mystics; those who try to develop the faculty in themselves, and to deepen the experience are the practical or experimental mystics. Some, and among them the greatest, have tried to do both. Religion begins in subjective experience. Religion is what a man does with his solitude, for in solitude we are compelled to subjective experience.

It is of the Religious Attitude that I shall speak next Sunday morning. This will be the last Sunday morning I shall take the service for Dr. Bailes this season. The service is held at 10:30 at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard, near La Cienega. A True Religious Attitude is man's salvation. God never changes; it is we who are changing; our spiritual eyes are ever getting keener; and this enlargement of truth will bring us an ever-increasing inner peace.

The best defense against the deceptive assault upon our mental and moral eyesight is the spiritual eye or the Eye of God. In other words, a spiritual ideal that cannot be changed by circumstance, a code of personal honor and integrity in ourselves and good will and love to others. "Not what thou art, nor what thou hast been, beholdeth God with his merciful eyes, but that thou wouldst be." Through the veins of the humblest man on earth runs the royal blood of being. Therefore, let us look at man through the eyes of imaginative love which is really seeing with the Eye of God. Under the influence of the Eye of God, the ideal rises up out of the actual as water is etherialized by the sun into the imagery cloudland. Things altogether distant are present to the spiritual eye. The Eye of God makes the future dream a present fact. Not four months to harvest – look again, If we persist in this seeing, one day we will arise with the distance in our eyes, and all the staying, stagnant nearby will suddenly be of no importance. We will brush it aside as we pass on to our far-seen objective. The man who really finds himself cannot do otherwise than let himself be guided by love. He is of too pure eyes to behold iniquity. Our ability to help others will be in proportion to our ability to control and help ourselves. The day a man achieves victory over himself, history will discover that to have been a victory over his enemy. The healing touch is in an attitude, and one day man will discover that one governs souls only with serenity. The mighty surrenders itself fully only to the most gentle.

Recognizing the power of feeling, let us pay strict attention to our moods and attitudes. Every stage of man's progress is made through the exercise of his imagination and feeling. By creating an "ideal" within our mental sphere we can feel ourselves into this "ideal image" till we become one and the same with it, absorbing its qualities into the very core of our being. The solitary or captive can, by the intensity of his imagination and feeling, effect myriads so that he can act through many men and speak through many voices. Extend your feelers, trust your touch, participate in all flights of your imaginations and be not afraid of your own sensitivities. The best way to feel another's good is to be more intensely aware of it. Be like my friend and have "more of a feeling" for the health, the wealth, the happiness you desire. Ideas do not bless unless they descend from Heaven and take flesh. Make results or accomplishments the crucial test of true imagination. As you observe these results, you will determine to fill your images with love and to walk in a high and noble mood for you will know with the poet:

'That which ye sow ye reap.

See yonder fields

The sesamum was sesamum, the corn

Was corn. The Silence and the Darkness knew

So is man's fate born."

AFFIRM THE REALITY OF OUR OWN GREATNESS

Radio Talk, Station KECA, Los Angeles

(July, 1951)

In the creation of a new way of life, we must begin at the beginning, with our own individual regeneration. The formation of organizations, political bodies, religious bodies, social bodies is not enough. The trouble we see goes deeper than we perceive. The essential revolution must happen within ourselves. Everything depends on our attitude towards ourself – that which we will not affirm within ourself can never develop in our world. This is the religion by which we live, for religion begins in subjective experience, like charity, it begins at home. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind" is the ancient formula and there is no other. Everything depends upon man's attitude toward himself. That which he cannot or will not claim as true of himself can never evolve in his world. Man is constantly looking about his world and asking, "What's to be done? What will happen?" when he should ask himself "Who am I? What is my concept of myself?" If we wish to see the world a finer, greater place, we must affirm the reality of a finer, greater being within ourselves. It is the ultimate purpose of my teaching to point the road to this consummation. I am trying to show you how the inner man must readjust himself – what must be the new premise of his life, in order that he may lose his soul on the level he now knows and find it again on the high level he seeks.

It is impossible for man to see other than the contents of his own consciousness, for nothing has existence for us save through the consciousness we have of it. The ideal man is always seeking a new incarnation but unless we, ourselves, offer him human parentage, he is incapable of birth. We are the means whereby the redemption of nature from the law of cruelty is to be effected. The great purpose of consciousness is to effect this redemption. If we decline the burden and point to natural law as giving us conclusive proof that redemption of the world by imaginative love is something that can never come about, we simply nullify the purpose of our lives through want of faith. We reject the means, the only means, whereby this process of redemption must be effected.

The only test of religion worth making is whether it is trueborn – whether it springs from the deepest conviction of the individual, whether it is the fruit of inner experience. No religion is worthy of a man unless it gives him a deep and abiding sense that all is well, quite irrespective of what happens to him personally. The methods of mental and of spiritual knowledge are entirely different, for we know a thing mentally by looking at it from the outside, by comparing it with other things by analyzing and defining it. Whitehead has defined religion as that which a man does with his solitude. I should like to add, I believe it is what a man is in his solitude. In our solitude we are driven to subjective experience. It is, then, that we should imagine ourselves to be the ideal man we desire to see embodied in the world. If, in our solitude, we experience in our imagination what we would experience in reality had we achieved our goal, we will in time, become transformed into the image of our ideal. "Be renewed in the spirit of your mind – put on the new man – speak every man truth with his neighbor." The process of making a "Fact of being a fact of consciousness" is by the "renewing of our mind." We are told to change our thinking. But we can't change our thought unless we change our ideas. Our thoughts are the natural outpouring of our ideas, and our innermost ideas are the man himself. The end of longing is always to be – not to do. Be still and know "I am that which I desire." Strive always after being. External reforms are useless if your heart is not reformed. Heaven is entered not by curbing our passions; but rather, by cultivating our virtues. An old idea is not fickly forgotten, it is crowded out by new ideas. It disappears when a wholly new and absorbing idea occupies our attention. Old habits of thinking and feeling – like dead oak leaves – hang on till they are pushed off by new ones. Creativeness is basically a deeper receptiveness, a keener susceptibility. The future dream must become a present fact in the mind of anyone who would alter his life. Every great out-picturing is preceded by a period of profound absorption. When that absorption is filled with our highest ideal, -- when we become that ideal – then we see it manifest in our world and we realize that the present does not recede into the past, but advances into the future. This is essentially how we change our future. A "now" which is "elsewhere" has for us no absolute meaning. We only recognize "now" when it is at the same time "here." When we feel ourselves into the desired state "here" and "now" we have truly changed our future. It is this "Changing Your Future" which I hope to explain to you fully next Sunday morning when I am speaking for Dr. Bailes at 10:30 at the Fox Wilshire Theater on Wilshire Boulevard near La Cienega. It is my purpose to stir you to a higher concept of yourself and to explain so clearly the method by which you can achieve this concept that each one of you will leave the service on Sunday morning a transformed being.

Discouraged people are sorely in need of the inspiration of great principles. We must get back to first principles if we are to speak with a voice that will kindle the imagination and rouse the spirit. Again, I must repeat, in the creation of a new way of life, we must begin at the very beginning with our own individual regeneration. Man's chief delusion is his conviction that he can do anything. Everyone thinks he can do – everyone wants to do and all ask, "What to do?" What to do? It is impossible to do anything. One must be. It is hard for us to accept the fact that "We, of ourselves, do nothing." It is especially difficult because it is the truth and the truth is always difficult for man to accept. But, actually, nobody can do anything. Everything happens – all that befalls man – all that is done by him – all that comes from him – all this happens, and it happens in exactly the same way that rain falls -- as a result of a change in the temperature in the higher regions of the atmosphere. This is a challenge to us all. What concept are we holding of ourselves in the higher regions of our soul?

Everything depends upon man's attitude towards himself. That which he will not affirm as true within himself can never develop in his world. A change of concept of self is the right adjustment – the new relationship between the surface and the depth of man. Deepening is, in principle, always possible, for the ultimate depth lives in everyone, and it is only a question of becoming conscious of it. Life demands of us the willingness to die and to be born again. This is not meant that we die in the flesh. We die in the spirit of the old man to become the new man, then we see the new man in the flesh. "Subjection to the will of God" is an old phrase for it and there is, I believe, no new one that is better. In that self-committal to the ideal we desire to express, all conflict is dispersed and we are transformed into the image of the ideal in whom we rest. We are told that the man without a wedding garment reaches the Kingdom by cleverly pretending. He does not believe internally what he practices externally. He appears good, kind, charitable. He uses the right words, but inwardly he believes nothing. Coming into the strong light of those far more conscious than himself, he ceases to deceive. A wedding garment signifies a desire for union. He has no desire to unite with what he teaches, even if what he teaches is the truth. Therefore, he has no wedding garment. When we are united with the truth, then we will put off the old nature and be renewed in the spirit of our mind.

Truth will strip the clever pretenders of their false aristocracy. Truth, in its turn, will be conquered and governed by the aristocracy of goodness, the only unconquerable thing in the world.

Neville 10-12-1969

RECONCILIATION

If I told you who you really are it would shock you, for in this world you can be frightened, limited, and filled with doubt; yet I tell you that you are God himself, the very one who created and sustains the universe. When you first hear this you will no doubt resist it and believe the one who makes this statement to be insane because the idea seems impossible. But I tell you: God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. Jesus Christ is in you as your plan of redemption. As he awakens, his message of reconciliation is entrusted to you to tell it to your brothers who are waiting, confused by reason of the dream into which they have placed themselves.

When this message of reconciliation happens in you, you have entered the state called Paul. Then you, too, will say: "From now on I regard no one from the human point of view. Even though I once regarded Christ from the human point of view I regard him thus no longer."

As Saul (sleeping Man) Christ is seen as a person, someone separate and on the outside. But as Paul, Man awakens to the knowledge that Christ is God's plan of salvation and from that moment on will not be seen as human.

God prepared the way for his banished sons to return to himself. Christ is that way. Why should you be disturbed when you hear that Christ is a plan which has a voice when you read of the serpent who spoke to Eve, the asp who conversed with Pharaoh, and Daniel's experience of the tree becoming man? Everything is personified in scripture. A plan is speaking, telling you: "I am the way, the truth and the light. No one comes to the Father except by me." This is scripture, which is something entirely different from anything a man might sit down and write.

In this world we are God's sons which he banished for a purpose. Christ is his plan of redemption which God prepared to reconcile his sons to himself. God sent us out into a world of death, of horror, and despair only after preparing a plan which would bring us back as God himself, for there is only God. "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one." There is only one ultimate body, one ultimate Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all. In the end all constitute that one body, one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all.

Paul was on his way to find those called "the people of the way," to bind and bring them to Jerusalem, when it happened in him and he was blinded by the truth. Then he defended himself to those who were blind, by saying: "You cannot prove anything against me, for our fathers taught us that God would raise the dead, and scripture has fulfilled itself in me." I tell you every being, no matter what he is doing, has done or is planning to do is God playing a part, for there is nothing but God in the world.

I know from experience that God is love. He is love which is indescribable. I know what it is like to love a child, my wife, my family, and friends. But I cannot describe the feeling that possessed me when I stood in the presence of infinite love and felt his embrace. At that moment of incorporation I knew myself to be love and although others cannot see it, I wear the body of love. I now share my experiences with you in the hope that you will believe me, and I will go out on the limb and tell you that there are some here who will not depart this world until you know the truth of what I say: that this pathway is a series of mystical experiences in which God reveals himself in action for the salvation of his sons. By this path you are brought back into God as God himself, and God is love. I told you I was incorporated into the body of love. This is true. Whether I am awake or asleep (judged by human standards) that is the body I wear.

Now, when you give something in the spirit you do not lose it, rather it increases in its potency. One night in vision I gave my immortal eyes to one, that she may see the truth of which I speak. Last week she shared this experience with me. She said, "I awoke in my dream hearing heavenly music coming from a room in the house where I lived with my father. I got out of bed, walked to the foyer and looked into an adjacent room where I saw a ball of brilliant light sitting on a stool playing the piano. Within that light was the skeleton of a child, and I said to myself: 'I must find someone to witness this, for without a witness Neville will never believe me.

Now, this lady was living with her father in her dream. Scripture tells us that when Jesus was accused of testifying of himself and therefore it was not true, he said: "Your law states that when two agree in testimony it is conclusive. My testimony is true for I am not alone. The one who sent me, who is my Father, he witnesses with me." This lady's earthly father is but a symbol of her heavenly Father, who is the cause of the phenomena of all life. Desiring to find a witness to her experience, she sees her father getting ready to go to work and questions him saying: "Do you hear what I am hearing?" and he answered: "Yes, I do." Then she grabbed him by the hand and led him into the room where he, too, saw the brilliant light framing a child's skeleton, playing the heavenly concerto.

Knowing she had her witness, she wanted to tell me; but when she arrived at my home her father had vanished and standing beside her was her friend Natalie, who knew nothing of her experience. Knowing that my wife was asleep upstairs she entered my living room to discover it was a garden of flowers. I was there, in a body of love so bright I seemed to her to be the prince of light as I walked among the flowers, gathering a bouquet of white flowers for the one l love, who was asleep upstairs. I looked at her as though I didn't see her, and then she knew that I already knew what she had come to tell me.

I have been enveloped into the body of love and knew the one to whom I gave my eyes would - before I depart this world - see the truth of what I say. The world is a shadow containing symbols. An earthly father is but a symbol of our heavenly Father. One who has experienced God's path of redemption is sent as a messenger of reconciliation. I have experienced this plan and knew that I will not depart this world until someone testifies to the truth of what I have said. I am now enveloped in love, clothed in the light she saw as a child's skeleton. All through the centuries the symbol of Christ has been the child. Clothed in love, and having experienced the pathway, I can truly say: "I am the way; I am the truth; I am the light." Here we see the way of redemption taking on the human form and speaking to man as a man, for the pathway takes man to awaken to and externalize it.

The way to the Father seems to be dead, but as you enter, the way is resurrected. Man is the Living way to the Father, and when Man reaches his destination he is God the Father. Then that individual is entrusted with the message of reconciliation. Those who are more interested in things of this world will deny the message. They are those who desire a diamond, like the one which recently sold for over a million dollars. Millions of those in the world are more interested in hearing about a piece of gay stone than the way I have traveled. But you who are here know the way, for I have told you how, when I entered the way I activated it, and there is only one way back from where we are to where we were.

We were aware of being God the Father before we came into the world. Individualized now, we will leave this world and return to the Father by traveling the way which was fixed before that the world was. Having prepared the way for our return, we fell asleep and now sleep the sleep of death. No diet or worldly position can take us back, for there is only one way and that is by a series of mystical experiences in which God reveals himself in action for our salvation. God brings his banished sons back to himself, making each son aware of being God the Father. This is the destiny of everyone in the world.

Now that one has borne witness to the truth of which I speak, I am satisfied. One lady saw me clothed in power and wisdom, and now I know one has seen me clothed in my perfect garment of love. I am forever in that body, as you too will be when you travel the way, for your destiny is to return to that one indescribable body of love.

In the 82nd Psalm we read the words God spoke to us, his banished sons: "I say, you are gods, Sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless you will die like men and fall as one man, O princes." Although you do not know it yet, you are a prince, destined to awaken as the King of all and the Lord of all, for in the end there is only one God containing all of his sons who know themselves to be the one Lord and Father of all.

I tell you: any spiritual gift, given, is not only retained, but expanded beyond what it was. If love is given, love increases. Even though I cannot conceive of a love greater than that which embraced me - as it seemed infinite - yet in some strange way as all of God's sons return, love increases, as does wisdom and power. Love is not really infinite; rather it is a forever expanding illumination.

When you think of Christ do not think of a man, but a plan of redemption. When you read: "I am the way; I am the truth; I am the light," do not picture a man making this claim 2,000 years ago, and worship him, for a prophet's vision is foreshortened, always seeing as present what is future. The present moment does not recede into the past, but advances into the future. If you believe what I have told you now, its experience is advancing into your future. Scripture, although read as having taken place 2,000 years ago, took place 2,000 years before that, as the plan was shown Abraham in 2,000 BC. That's 4,000 years ago. Scripture is forever fulfilling itself, for that which is happening now is continually happening, but when it will happen in you, I do not know.

Now, any spiritual gift is never given on this level. When I gave this lady the gift of my eyes, it certainly was not here. If I had the choice of who I would give them to, it would have been my wife or daughter; but from this level I was not in control when I gave my spiritual eyes to a lady I do not know socially. She has received the gift and now her eyes are inwardly open into the world of thought. I, like Blake, will not rest from my great task to open the eternal worlds; to open the immortal eyes of Man inward into the world of thought; into eternity ever expanding in the bosom of God, the Human Imagination. I gave my eyes to her and she will share them spiritually with others, for it was with her spiritual eyes that she saw me clothed in love.

When one wears the body of love he is incapable of doing anything save in love, and therefore everything in his presence is harmless, for perfect love casts out all fear. In this world we fear the wild beasts of the jungle, but when one is clothed in love nothing can harm him.

In her vision this lady saw the skeleton of a child clothed in love. Ezekiel tells of the day when all the dead bones will be lifted up and clothed by love, in love. She heard the harmony of the spheres come into being as a ball of light covering the skeleton of a child played the piano. That child is the plan of redemption, [of] which not one bone shall be broken. Without loss of identity, the body of love will be built on that little bone structure.

Even though I am now clothed in a body of flesh, she knew I was Neville. She also knew I was the prince of light and the embodiment of love. And her name, by the way, is Sharon. In the Songs of Solomon he speaks of "the rose of Sharon, my sister and yet my love." Then he mentions all of the flowers that are blossoming in the world of man. Symbolic of what is taking place in man, they are the fruit that love bears. So when Christ, God's plan of redemption, is complete in you, you will know yourself to be God who is infinite love.

When you read in the Book of John that God is love, don't think these are idle words; they are words based upon experience. God is love. Wisdom and power are attributes of God but God is love and when he incorporates you into his body, you - his banished son - have returned as the Father. Can you imagine the thrill when the curtain comes down upon this drama and all the sons have returned clothed as God the Father - who is nothing but love?

The harmony this lady heard in her vision, although beautiful, cannot be compared to the music of that heavenly chorus when they call your name and sing of your redemption. I heard it back in 1946 and its indescribable beauty remains with me today. Although we are one as the Father we are distinct as sons, and no one can take the place of another. I can't describe this in words - it must be experienced to be understood - but you are forever individualized, and yet together we all form the one Father.

Now, the witness of one is not acceptable, but if two agree in testimony, the evidence is conclusive. In the lady's vision she lived in a home with her father. He heard what she heard and saw what she saw, so he testified to the truth of what she witnessed. Wanting to tell the man who told her of the path to God, she found a friend. Here is a perfect fulfillment of scripture: "I call you friend and no longer call you slaves." And the living room she entered, it was not man-made, but God-made. It was a garden of flowers in a lovely greenery. I was watering my garden, giving it light and love, and she knew I was the prince of light as I gathered my blossoms to take them to the one I loved, who was asleep above.

Everyone must awaken, and as they do they will follow the same pathway I have shared with you. There is only one way. There aren't two ways to God. Today people teach numberless ways, but they are all false. There is only one way, which is made up of a definite series of mystical experiences. The way begins with the resurrection, followed by your birth from above. Five months later David reveals your Fatherhood, then the curtain of the temple (your body) is split and you ascend into heaven. And finally, the dove descends upon you, giving you his stamp of approval, telling you that you are perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect, for you are one with your Father. He is Holy and now you are Holy. Then you are assigned a purpose in life for your remaining years and that is to tell the message of salvation, that God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. When the way of redemption has been revealed to you, you are assigned the ministry of reconciliation, being ministers of the word by telling all the pathway from the outer world of sin and death to the inner world of God and love.

Don't despair. You are destined to awaken one day as God, who created and sustains the universe. And when all of His sons have returned, this outer world will come to its end. The universe will not take time to dissolve, it will simply vanish. Let our scientists speculate as to its age, it doesn't really matter. The world, including the sun and moon, came into being as one grand explosion. They all came together for a purpose, and the only little place that could house God's grand experiment (which is a stage) is this earth that we are on. All of God's sons are here and they will all return to the very being out of which they came, which is God the Father.

You are infinitely greater than you can conceive yourself to be. Tonight you may envy or dislike someone. That is because you cannot see behind the mask they wear; but if you could, you would see your brother, he who you loved before you came out from the Father. You are going to go back to that same body, only your capacity to love will be increased by reason of the experience of coming into this world of death.

I am so glad that I am returning with the knowledge that one has seen me clothed in the body of love, for I know that I am. Although the mortal eye cannot see it I feel this body all the time. I sleep in it and wake in it every day, then I put on this mortal body and allow my eyes to grow dim, knowing that the day will come when this mortal body will be taken off for the last time and then I will be clothed in a body of love which is protection beyond measure, for in it all fear is cast out and what you do not fear cannot hurt you.

Look upon Christ, not as a person (although it takes a man to express him). Look upon Christ as the path of salvation that the Father prepared before that the world was. Christ is a pathway leading from this outer world into the inner world, for the kingdom of heaven is within. You were sent out (or below) as they are one, just as above and within are one. When the Risen Christ was made to say: "I am from above," he was saying: "I am from within." It's back to the withinness that I go, back to that which has no circumference, but expands forever and ever. It is only without that is limited.

You are infinitely great and you are moving towards the discovery of this truth. In this lady's vision, she lived with her father who heard and saw what she did. Then, as she traveled the road towards my home, he vanished and a friend appeared to witness the garden. We came out of a garden and we return to a garden, but when we do we are fully conscious of being love.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 10-21-1969

REDEMPTION

We are told in Paul's letter to the Romans that this world is a world of sorrow. Then he gives us the reason and the glorious end it produces, saying: "I consider the sufferings of this present time not worth comparing to the glory that is to be revealed in us. The creation waits with eager longing for the revealing of the sons of God; for the creation was made subject unto futility - not of its own will, but by the will of him who subjected it in hope; for the creation will be set free from its bondage to decay and obtain the glorious liberty of the children of God."

Here we see that the redemption of the universe depends upon the revealing of ourselves, for, buried in this world, we are the sons of God but we do not know it. The world did not subject us; we subjected ourselves. No one took our lives; we laid them down ourselves. We have the power to lay our life down and the power to take it up again. Coming into this world for a purpose, we deliberately became what we are in the hope that one day we would rise and redeem the world by setting it free from its bondage to decay.

Your connection with the plan of redemption called Jesus Christ can be told in this manner. It is like a visible history which is compressed within a few years, and the eternal history of salvation, which continually unfolds throughout the ages. At a certain moment in time these two histories come together to unite into one person, who is the Son of God and the unveiling of your true identity. You and I departed the world of eternity and came here for a divine purpose. And it is here where our real humanity and the true divinity of Jesus Christ unite and become one person.

Think for a moment of Jesus Christ as divine history which will be experienced by you while you are in the world of human history. John tells of this event in the story of the raising of Lazarus. (Remember, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John are not historical characters, but books bearing their names. The authors of these books took events which are separated in time and wove them into one dramatic experience.) The 11th chapter of the Book of John begins by identifying Lazarus as the one who is loved by the Lord Jesus, but is dead. Jesus, having heard this news, delays his journey and when he arrives, Martha (Lazarus' sister) said: "If you had not left us, my brother would not have died." And when they took Jesus to the cave where Lazarus was buried and he gave the command to remove the stone, Martha said: "Lord, by this time he stinketh as he has been dead for four days."

Prior to this event Jesus knew himself to be the resurrection, and when he asked Martha if she believed, she answered in this manner: "Yes Lord, I believe that you are the Christ, the son of the Lord God who is coming into the world." Notice the tense given here: he who is coming into the world; therefore, where is he being addressed? If you and I were speaking face to face would you not be here with me? So is the conversation not taking place within, as self speaking to self? Are you not telling yourself that you are the Lord who is coming into the world?

Now, when the command was given to remove the stone, the statement is made that there will be an offensive odor. This is a very important sign, for when the stone was removed, he said, "Lazarus, come out." Then the one who was dead, bound hands and feet, with a napkin covering his head, came out. They unbound him and let him go.

You may think this is secular history, but I tell you it is not. John took events in divine history which were separated in time and wove them into this one grand experience. This I know to be true. John took the first event (which is resurrection) and the last event (which is the descent of the Holy Spirit in bodily form as a dove) and wove them into one grand complex picture; yet the events are separated in time by three and one-half years.

The resurrection of Christ in you and your birth from above are inseparable for "We are born again through the resurrection of Jesus Christ within us." John takes the first event as someone he is going to raise, yet refers to it as the last event; and unless you have had the experience or know someone who has, you cannot understand it. I have books on the Bible at home, yet no scholar has touched this truth, for truth is not logically proved. It proves itself through revelation.

In my own case, the last event was when the Holy Spirit descended upon me in bodily form as a dove and smothered me with love. A woman at my side observed the descent, and said: "They avoid man because man gives off such an offensive odor. But he loves you and to demonstrate his love for you he has penetrated the ring of offense."

Here we find the sign as an offensive odor. It was not just an odor, for an odor may be pleasant. The author was revealing the intensity of disgust felt regarding the world into which the sons of God had descended. Everything decays here - but everything! No matter how long a thing seems to live, whether it be animate or inanimate, in time it decays and vanishes. And the generative organs in the state of decay have a peculiar, offensive odor. On many occasions I have awakened knowing a friend or relative has died because I have smelled his odor, only to received confirmation during the day. The odor is associated with the decay of God's creative power upon which the world is built.

When the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove descended upon me, it was a woman - not a man - who told me of his love, saying: "They avoid man because man gives off such an offensive odor." The creation, waiting with eager longing for the revealing of the sons of God, avoids this odor. But at a moment in time, contact is made between the two histories: the human history of 6,000 years and the eternal history of salvation. They touch, and one new person is created, without loss of identity. You are aware of being touched and the being doing the touching. That being is Jesus Christ, the eternal, heavenly man.

Soon after that moment you will take off your garment of flesh and leave this world of death for the last time, for you will have come into your heavenly inheritance, which is the body of the Lord Jesus Christ. Creating anything at will, your every wish will become objectively real. That is the power you are inheriting, along with a body to fully appreciate it. Now, the creation waits for such contacts, for the creation has been subjected to futility - not by its own will, but by the will of him who subjected it in the hope of revealing God's sons, for such everyone is.

Now let me share a recent experience of a lady who received my eyes in vision about three years ago, at which time she was told that she was an incurrent eyewitness: one who gives passage to a current moving inward where reality is to be seen. In her recent vision she found herself with a group of people watching bolts of light move toward her. Then she began to feel a power so great she felt as though she could still the universe. Suddenly a man dressed in black stood before her and she recognized him as the embodiment of fear. But as she looked into his eyes her memory began to return, and she knew he came into being by usurping her power when she fell asleep. She also knew that now that she was waking and her memory was returning, he was on the verge of demise.

There is a rabbinical legend which states that man's doubts, his unbelief, and frailties are always dressed in black. So she saw the personification of a being called Satan; and as she watched him try to cause her fear, she heard herself say to herself: "I am Paul and I am Jesus Christ." And at that moment she felt as though she were a man, yet it did not seem strange to be so. This lady is a young mother of two expecting her third child, and is very much a woman: yet in her vision she was totally man. She knew she was Paul. Not a Paul, but the Paul; and she also knew that she was Jesus Christ, with all the power she formerly possessed, minus the portion memory had not yet revealed.

Now to continue her vision: Reaching out, she struck the man, and as he fell back on his elbows he looked at her with his piercing, fiery eyes and she knew he was trying to find some weakness where he could once again recapture the power he had taken from her when she fell asleep and forgot who she was; yet they both knew it was hopeless now. Then he spoke, saying: "You don't remember when you met me, do you?" and as she started to reply she remembered an ancient dream of a tree and a man standing beneath it. It was he who told her to eat of the tree, and as she did she entered the dream of life and forgetfulness. Then he, the power of the world, became real. Appearing to be others, he was her very self; and the power she was going to redeem was returning to her, for she knew: "I am Paul and I am Jesus Christ."

Now, who is Paul? His name was Saul, which means "to ask for." Saul was ruled by his personified hate until he touched the eternal story, and the union of the two transformed Saul into Paul - the redeemed man who knows he is man, yet also knows he is the Lord Jesus Christ. Everyone is destined to experience this awareness.

The authors of the gospel took the events in the divine history of the Lord Jesus Christ and - taking liberties as poets do - they took events widely separated in time and fused them into a complex picture, as though they happened at one moment in time. Our evangelists knew that something as great as this could not be spelled out so that a child in kindergarten could understand it. As Blake said: "That which can be told to the idiot's understanding isn't worth my care. The ancients discovered that which is not too explicit was best fitted for instruction." Our gospels recorded events which were revealed and can never be understood logically. There truth will only be known from experience.

I am telling you what I have experienced based upon divine history. You will experience it in the manner I have told you. The evangelists did not give you the chronological order. They wove the events they had experienced into a story, because truth embodied in a tale shall enter in at lowly doors. Man finds it difficult to accept bare truth. He finds a thought easier to accept if it is put in picture form, where he reads the story of a man being raised from the dead. Then he can say to himself: "Isn't that a mighty act!" But scripture is not speaking of resuscitation as our life guards revive those who are drowning at sea. The words used here are "four days," because at that time the body was kept for three days in the belief that the soul hovered over it in the chance that the body could be revived. So when Martha said: "He has been dead four days," she was telling him that there was no hope of resuscitation, as decay had set in and produced a stench.

I tell you: no man was placed in any little tomb here on earth. This is an adumbration, a foreshadowing in a not altogether conclusive or immediately evident way, of what you will one day experience. It is divine history which unfolds forever. It is not like human history, for it begins and ends, but this history is eternal. The moment you touch salvation history these things begin to unfold from within. Then you will know you are one with the body of the Lord Jesus Christ.

This union will produce one new man, and you will no longer bat your head against the world as Saul, but be Paul, one who knows he is Jesus Christ, the creator of it all. And you will discover that the things which are frowned upon here because of our moral codes are so natural there. It didn't seem strange to her that she was man in that world, yet she is so much a woman here.

Now, the Book of John has two endings. The true ending is found in the 20th chapter, while the 21st chapter is an epilogue. In the 20th chapter this statement is made: "Many other signs did Jesus do which are not written in this book. But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is Christ, the Son of God and that believing, you will have life in his name." There are a number of experiences you are going to have related to this eternal history that are not recorded, but everyone will experience the events written there. I have shared with you the series of visions I have had which fit into the given period of time; and I still have experiences related to divine history, because I can find their parallel in the Old Testament. My memory has returned, and I now know that the drama was experienced before we descended and lost our memory. But as our memory returns we have these experiences and can tell them; but we cannot share them with another, because they take place in a land unknown to mortal man.

This lady's experience is true. She is Paul and she is Jesus Christ; yet she is very much a woman here. This is not reincarnation. Paul is only the personification of everyone who has been transformed from Saul to Paul. Called "The Way," Saul was persecuting divine history, and when he heard the words: "Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me?" he questions: "Who are you, Lord?" and the answer came: "Jesus, whom you are persecuting."

Where did this conversation take place? In the mind! If, tonight you hear this story and refuse to accept it, you are persecuting the Lord by denial. But in the fullness of time the story of Jesus Christ will erupt within you and then you will know it was your very self you have been persecuting, for you will know from experience that you are the Lord Jesus Christ.

Who would have thought that simple little statement in the 11th chapter of John, "By this time he stinketh," could be so profound. Yet we are told that the one upon whom the spirit descends is he who is the chosen one. Here is the elect, unveiling one more Son of God, and in the end all of the revealed sons will form the Father.

There is no book comparable to the Bible, which is revealed truth and not truth which has been discovered by any logical process. Everyone will hear the words of Martha. It was she who stood on my left and said in a very commanding voice: "They avoid man because man gives off the most offensive odor." This is what the translators of the King James Version meant when they said: "he stinketh," because every man stinks, causing the world to give off an offensive odor to those who watch in eternity. They are eagerly waiting for the stir telling them that they may come down and redeem the one that is but an externalization of themselves. And the moment the eternal one is touched, virtue goes out and the one who touched is healed. Then that one begins to move from here to eternity.

I can tell you - as I have over the years - the chronological manner in which the visions came to me, but whether it is a chronologically true story or not is unimportant.

The poets who wrote the gospels told their experiences in poetic form. One day [Aldous] Huxley said to me: "There are three kinds of writings - journalism, literature, and scripture. Those who are considered to be literary giants can't write scripture." Huxley admitted he couldn't, for it is revealed truth and therefore something entirely different. The journalist writes beautifully and excitingly, but no journalist would ever be considered a mental giant in the use of words as to real literature. On the other hand, those who write great literature couldn't write scripture. And if you could understand scripture as it really is written, you would know it is inspired poetry, but our transcribers could not bring it into its poetic form. Everyone who reads scripture is moved by it, because it is speaking to the being in the depth of the soul; so don't treat it as literature because it is not.

I saw in today's paper that some ex-nun is teaching the Bible as literature at UCLA. You can do that if you want to, but that's not religion. Scripture certainly is not history, as there is no place on this earth where a man was buried for four days - having been proved dead - who rose from the grave. But I tell you: you have been buried for thousands of years. You don't know you are, but the watchers in eternity do, as they receive from you, multiplied by the billions of us here, a stench beyond the wildest dream of man. If you have ever visited the Chicago stockyards you know what a horrible odor is there. Well, multiply that smell by the population of the world and the stench will be beyond comprehension. But his love for you is so great he will, one day, penetrate this ring of offense. Then you will be Paul, a transformed being, joined to he who is Jesus Christ, and the two of you return together as one Lord.

When you read scripture don't discount the simplest thought expressed there, for you are going to experience it. You will know that Lazarus is not someone on the outside. The word means "God has helped." No man can redeem himself - only God can do it; therefore God has helped. There are numberless schools teaching self-realization and self-development, promising you self-realization by doing as they say. If you want to believe that you must pay others to teach you, you will lose your money for they cannot deliver the goods. Grace and truth come through Jesus Christ. Let no one fool you into believing that by doing certain things you will be saved. Rather, set your hope fully upon the grace that is coming to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ in you.

Don't reject this story. Firmly believe it and set your hope that without doing anything on the outside its revelation will come to you. And when it does and you share it with others not everyone will believe you. They may discount your experiences as wonderful dreams or hallucinations. Don't expect, just because a man is intelligent, that he will understand when you speak of these depths, because they with their PhD's can't understand your words and will proclaim proudly that they are agnostics. I recently read this statement: "The man who prunes himself on agnosticism is only confessing that he is an ignoramus. This is the Latin word for 'we do not know,' as is the Greek word 'agnostic.' So he who prunes himself on agnosticism is confessing, in Greek, that he is a Latin ignoramus." Tell that to someone who claims to be agnostic and chances are he will slap your face, but I tell you: the truth of which I speak is not acquired in universities. It doesn't make sense logically, yet it is the eternally true story. Redemption is the wedding between visible history and salvation history; and when they meet they create a new being in one person, who is Paul, who is Jesus Christ.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 11-03-1969

REVEALED TRUTH

When the Rev. Dr. Trusler criticized Blake, saying he needed someone to elucidate his ideas, Blake replied: "You ought to know that what is grand is necessarily obscure to the weak. You also ought to know that what can be made explicit to the idiot is not worth my care. The wisest of the Ancients considered what is not too explicit as fittest for instruction because it rouses the faculties to act. I name Moses, Solomon, Aesop, Homer, Plato." Then he asked this question: "Why is the Bible more entertaining and instructive than any book? Is it not because it is addressed to the imagination which is spiritual sensation and only but immediately to the understanding or reason?"

Tonight I will ask you a riddle based upon scripture and try to solve it for you. What is it that becomes its own grandson and vice versa? And how can the Divine Creator be my Father, yet my child? Now this riddle is not addressed to the reasonable and logical mind, but to the human imagination, as its answer must be revealed.

Let us turn to the Book of Isaiah. In the 7th chapter we are told: "The Lord himself will give you a sign. Behold a maiden will conceive and bring forth a son and call his name Immanuel, which means God is in us." (This is confirmed in the New Testament as: "The Kingdom of God is within.")

Now, in the 9th chapter of Isaiah, we read: "Unto us a child is born and his name shall be called the Everlasting Father." So what we, individualized, will bring forth as a sign, is a child whose name is Everlasting Father; therefore are we not bringing forth that which created us? Here we see the Everlasting Father and the child are one, for that is the child's name. He is the Everlasting Father, the self-existent, ever-created being who created and sustains the universe, and we are told that we will bring him forth as our child.

Now let us turn to the 11th chapter of Isaiah, where we read: "There shall come forth a shoot out of Jesse, a branch shall grow out of his roots and the branch will be the ruler of all."

The riddle's solution can be found in the names. "Jesse" means "I AM", which is the eternal, everlasting name of God. The shoot which comes out of Jesse is his son, David, and out of David comes a branch who is one with his grandfather. In the 20th chapter of the Book of Luke, the 43rd and 44th verses, this same riddle is asked but not answered: "How can the scribes say that the Christ is the son of David, when David, in the Spirit, calls him Lord?" Let me take these passages and put them together for you.

The son is Immanuel, meaning "God is in us." His Father is David, the beloved, and his grandfather is Jesse, who is I AM, the Everlasting Father. Here we find three separate generations, as it were, yet the son is one with the grandfather.

Now let us unriddle the riddle. David is called the beloved. He is the personification of all the generations of humanity, and their experiences. It is out of David that God begets himself, for the dream is nothing more than the reproduction of the Divine Imagination in the human imagination. There is not a thing in the world but God, who is reproducing himself in humanity. God (Divine Imagination) is wearing the masks of humanity in order to experience its horrors, so in that sense humanity is his son. And when the journey is over for the individualized God, his experiences fuse into a single youth, whom he recognizes as his son, David. Then out of David (humanity) comes which would be the grandson, who is one with the individual, now the grandfather. So the riddle is this: Who becomes his own grandson who becomes the grandfather? Divine imagination!

Speaking of David, God the Father said: I have found in David a man after my own heart who will do my will." So God the Father, having begotten himself on humanity, causes humanity to do his will, for man is completely under the control of this supreme being. And while on Man, God begets his grandson, for Man his son and the child, Immanuel, his grandson. So you see: the grandson and the grandfather are one, and you are that one. You are what you begot, and you are its begetter, for you come out as God the Father. Looking down on humanity personified as David who calls you Father, you realize that David brought forth you, his begetter; therefore you are the grandfather and the grandson. You, humanity, are that upon which the child is begotten. And when humanity gathers itself together into a single youth and personifies itself as David, he calls you Father, making you the grandfather, and Christ the grandson, one.

I do not say that this is easy for you to grasp, but I am telling you it is true. A fantastic miracle takes place. It is truly the riddle of riddles. Now, the question is asked: "why do the wise men say that Christ is the son of David, when David in the Spirit called him Lord?" Christ is the child, the sign that God is in us, just as the Lord promised, saying: "This shall be a sign. A maiden will bring forth a son and she shall call his name Immanuel which means 'God is in us.'" And when the Christ is born, he shall be known as the Everlasting Father. Therefore God, through humanity, begot his own grandchild. As human imagination, I am God's son, but when he raises me to His level, I beget His grandchild. And when my son stands before me, I see David, the being out of which the Christ came. Therefore, who am I? I am the grandfather, the I AM who is one with the grandson (the human imagination).

I know this is difficult for you to grasp, but I feel we have reached the point in time for you to hear it. Out of Jesse (I AM) God the Father's eternal name, will come a stem (David) humanity, and out of David will come a branch (Christ). Now, the question is: "What do you think of the Christ? How can the scribes say he is the son of David, when David, in the Spirit, calls him Lord?" I tell you: David is humanity - that upon which Imagination molds himself and brings himself out of, then raises the individual out of which he came, back to himself along with the knowledge that the grandfather and the grandson are one glorious imagination. Humanity however will remain, for that is what Imagination molds himself on, throughout eternity. And when Imagination, individualized, has had all of the experiences of man, they will be gathered together and fused into one single whole, and appear as the eternal youth, David. You must go through all of the experiences of humanity before God's son David will come forth to reveal you as his Father. It is he to whom the sign was given, for the child comes out of David; therefore the child is the grandson of God the Father and one with his grandfather, whom David reveals you to be.

I tell you: you are God Himself. The eternal Divine Imagination is reproducing itself in human imagination so that your I AM is one with the universal I AM. There can't be any other. All the horrors you have known or may still know will add up to the birth of that wonder child. "To us a child is born." It is to us, the human personality, that the child is born whose name is Everlasting Father. Then we experience His glorious son, David who made it possible. So Divine Imagination became humanity (human imagination) in order to beget himself. It takes all of the horrors of human history to produce that son who is the grandson of and one with the Eternal Father. The son, however, remains humanity, who condenses itself into a single youth called David.

I hope you will dwell upon my words. There are many things to be said and time is short, so I feel it is time to tell it. This is the riddle. The Eternal Being (who is God the Father) entered into the eternal structure of the world (which is humanity). Man as you know him is part of the eternal structure of the world, and on it God the Father is reproducing himself. And when his work is finished, he brings out his likeness as his grandson. Then the grandson claims that David calls him Lord and the Lord is David's father; therefore the grandson (the Christ) is the identical image of and one with his grandfather, the Eternal, Everlasting Father.

Dwell upon my message tonight. Sense it until its meaning is revealed to you by a wonderful mystical experience. Believe me, for you are the Eternal God the Father. The universal I AM and your I AM are one and the same I AM. God is forever bringing himself forth by molding himself upon that part of eternity called the human family. It's a very painful process to reproduce the Divine Imagination in the human imagination, but there is no better way to do it than in this manner.

The three passages in the Book of Isaiah and the 20th chapter of the book of Luke propound the identical riddle which, put in our language, would be: How can that which begot you become your child, and in so doing, raise you to your begetter, who is God the Father? And how can you then look back on humanity and see all of its experiences fuse into a single being who stands before you and calls you Father?

Dwell upon my words, for you will find them most stimulating and, far from not being practical, they are the most practical words you have ever heard. The Bible is far more exciting than anything you heard or read today, for not a thing said by any person could compare to the words you have heard tonight. All of the plots and plan of men concerning bringing this world to an end are not part of the divine plan. Divine Imagination's plan is to reproduce Himself in the human imagination, for God is only begetting Himself. Divine and human imagination are not two, but one imagination, which differs only in the degree of intensity. The purpose of it all is that you will be able to wish anything into realization. I have come that you may have life and have it more abundantly. No longer will you be a slave to the world or afraid of anything, for you will know that you are one with its creator. In that awareness, you will ask and receive instantaneous return. All this will be yours when the complete revelation of what I have told you this night is fulfilled.

When you read scripture you will not find this spelled out as I have told you, but having heard my story over and over again you can follow my argument. The riddle is: What is it that becomes his own grandson and vice versa; the grandson becomes his own grandfather? If this is so, then where does David the father of the grandson fit in? Ask yourself and it will be revealed to you, for you will bring forth the wonder child whose name is the Everlasting Father. You will awake a few months later to discover that, instead of being God's son, you are David's Father. So instead of coming out of humanity as humanity's son (which you did), you come out as God, the Everlasting Father.

It takes humanity and all its horrors for God the Real Father to experience in order to produce his likeness which is Himself. Humanity remains, but this time not a multitude of faces, but only one face. All of the faces are put together and fused into in the one body of your son (who is God's son) David, who calls you my Lord. How then can you be David's son when David, in the Spirit calls you my Lord?

Do you follow me? I hope so. It is a profound truth and I think nothing deeper will come to you, for this is the story of scripture. Blake was perfectly right when he said: "Why is the Bible more entertaining and more instructive than any book? Is it not because it is addressed to the imagination which is spiritual sensation and only immediately to the understanding or reason? Therefore, what can be made explicit to the idiot is not worth my care. The wisest of the Ancients considered what was not too explicit to be fittest for instruction because it rouses the faculties to act." Here we have a riddle and must respond to its challenge.

How can a grandson become his own grandfather? You say that the Christ is the son of David, but tell me: how then can David, in the Spirit, call him my Lord? If he is David's son and David's Father is my Lord, and David in the Spirit calls him Lord, is he not his own grandfather?

Dwell upon this and maybe, because it has been given to you this night, something may explode within you to lead you to its understanding. But the full understanding will come when scripture unfolds within you like a wonderful unfolding flower.

You will find these three generations constantly throughout scripture. The Book of Matthew begins the New Testament with the three generations: "The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, son of David, son of Abraham." Here is Abraham, the father of the multitudes. Then David, the beloved human being who brought forth the image of God called Christ the Lord. And God and his image are one, so we go back now to the grandfather being one with the grandson.

Tonight may seem to be profoundly spiritual, yet I must repeat what I have said time and time again. Whatever is most profoundly spiritual will prove, in time, to be the most directly practical. Instead of wrestling with your problems, dwell upon these revealed truths, for as you do, your problems will solve themselves. Rather than going to bed worrying about how you are going to meet a pressing commitment, go to bed dwelling upon what I have told you and the commitment will be met. Your Father knows what you have need of. Seek first the kingdom of heaven and all these things will be added unto you.

When you sit down to work out one problem, you simply involve yourself with another and still another. But if you will dwell upon revealed truth, all the things you need will be taken care of. As you dwell upon revealed truth, try to solve these wonderful riddles. You may not unravel them, but think about what I have told you, because I am telling you what I know from experience. I did not arrive at these conclusions by logic. I am not a philosopher. I am simply one in whom the Word unfolded. And when it unfolds in you, you too will tell it from experience.

You who heard me this night, dwell upon the thought that you are giving birth to Christ. That he will be your son because he comes out of you. And that this wonderful child is one with your Father who would have to be his grandfather. If he comes out of you and he is one with his grandfather (which is your Father) you will awaken to the realization that you are the Everlasting Father. Then you will look down upon yourself, called Man, and see it personified as David, who calls you the Everlasting Father, my Lord.

You cannot awaken as the Everlasting Father, however, until you bring forth Immanuel (which is the wonderful child) as the child is the everlasting sign that you have brought forth God, born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God - for God is begetting himself. This is literally true. The child that comes forth from you is the Everlasting Father. The minute you bring forth Immanuel, God in you comes forth revealing you as the God who wrought it. Then humanity, out of which the sign came, stands before you as a single being whose name is David, and David calls you - not grandfather, but Father.

Think of humanity as the soul of man, the bride of the Lord whose maker is her husband. The Lord so fell in love with humanity (his bride) that he left all and has cleaved to his wife until they became one flesh. So humanity is Mary, destined to bring forth the Christ child. And the child and the Holy Spirit are one, and the child and his grandfather are one. When you bring forth the son, God has finished his work in you and his cleavage on you is complete. Then you aren't two any more, but one. This is Divine Imagining reproducing itself upon humanity, which in the end comes out as God, the Everlasting Father.

Now let us go into the silence.

4-L
S1

REVELATION OF PURPOSE

19 April 1971

Today we read: "I say, You are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless, you will die like men." [Psalm 82:1] Does this not imply that you are not men? If you are men when addressed, then the sentence, "You will die like men," is without meaning. You are told, "You are sons of God, ... but you will die like men."

Now we turn to Paul's letter as he wrote it to the Philippians: "Christ Jesus who, though he was in the form of God, did not count it necessary," -- or, count it something to be grasped, -- "but emptied himself and took upon himself the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of men; and being in human form, he became obedient unto death, even death on the cross. Therefore, God has highly exalted him and bestowed on him a name that is above all names, that at the name of Jesus Christ every knee should bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God."

Now, Jesus Christ only claimed he was the Son of God. You were addressed in the beginning as, "sons of God." Here is, now, our purpose to reason for emptying ourselves and becoming slaves. The human form is the "cross"; it is the "slave." And we will bear this cross for an allotted span. Oh, we will cry out, because we had to completely empty ourselves of the Being that we really are, for the Being that we really are is one with God! We were in the form of God. Yet, we emptied ourselves and took upon ourselves the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of mem; and being in the form of man, humbled ourselves and became obedient unto death -- even death on a cross.

Now, we are the Being spoken of in Scripture. This story in the depths of your own consciousness is still extant. It is taking place, without reference to duration, to repetition, or to its position in time. It will slowly unfold itself in each person in this world. As it unfolds itself, the individual knows he is the one who descended into this world and took upon himself the form of a slave -- that is, this human form.

"No one can ascend into heaven but he who descended, the Son of Man. And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up."

This [indicating the physical body] is not your real form. You took this for a purpose, for this is the form of "death." You descended into this world, that you may taste and experience death. When you read in Scripture, "Should not the Christ suffer these things and then enter into his glory?" -- now, you and I have the association with the word "suffer" as grief, pain. Look it up in your Biblical Concordance, and you will see that it means "to experience a sensation or feeling."

There are many words translated "suffer." One is "to let it be so" when he comes before John, and yet he allows it to be so for tradition's sake and he becomes baptized. "Let it be so" is called, "Suffer it to be so now." But when it comes to the statement, "Should not the Christ suffer these things, and then enter into his glory?" that word is translated "to experience a sensation," -- to experience death.

4-L
S1

The Immortal You could not know what death is like -- it could never know the pains of this world until it became one with it. To become one with it, it has to empty itself of its divine form, which was one with God, and take upon itself the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of man.

So, he "wears" it as you would wear a mask. This [indicating the physical body] is a mask. Your real form, -- if I told you, I can only use words, but how on earth could I tell you the glory of your form?

When I heard the chorus sing out -- this wonderful chorus, "Neville is risen!" I can only tell you it was a spiral motion -- and this is 1946 -- and I am a luminous body. I needed no sun, no moon, no stars; I was light unto myself. And as I walked, -- or, I would say, --glided by, everything was made perfect because I was perfect. Everything that I passed by, though at the moment it seemed imperfect, it was instantly transformed into perfection. The blind ceased to be blind, the deaf ceased to be deaf, the lame ceased to be lame; and every one was made perfect in that moment as I passed by. That was the form.

Eleven years ago, on the 8th of April, when I was lifted up as my body -- the "cross" that I wore through the centuries, -- at that moment in time it was split in two from top to bottom. And here I saw -- How on earth can you describe this to any person and make sense of it? Here, my body is completely split in two, and I am looking now at a pool of golden, liquid, pulsing light; and I know it is my Self. As I know it, I -- the observer -- fuse with it. It is my Self, my own Redeemer and Creator; and yet, it is my Self, like a self-redemption, a Self-created Being. And at that moment, like a fiery serpent I ascended into Heaven.

You tell a man that he is a "fiery serpent," -- it scares him. He wants to be a man of flesh and blood. He wants exactly what he is, made a little bit better -- a little bit stronger, a little bit of everything more than he is now, but he doesn't want a radical change of the being that he is.

Well, I tell you, the face is human, the voice is human, the hands are human; but do not ask any one to tell you what the body is. You will not see it. I can only describe the motion that I made when I ascended; and when I entered into this state, it reverberated, as we are told in Scripture: "He takes it by storm." The whole thing was one tremendous reverberation, as you enter.. That is in store for every one.

The descent is into generation, and the ascent is into regeneration. The descent is into death and decay, and the ascent is into everlasting life, but enhanced by reason of the experiences of the descent. You were "before that the world was," and you were in the form of God!

As Paul said, "He has made known unto us the mystery of His will according to His purpose which He set forth in Christ as a plan for the fullness of time."

It is a plan. This is not some emergency thinking. "Before that the world was," you were. You are the "gods" spoken of; and because you are gods and addressed as "gods," when you have this experience, you taste of death.

4-L
S1

Now, this is contemporary. When you read Scripture, do not think for one moment you are reading of something that took place two thousand years ago. You are reading it now; and they said to him as he began to speak -- now, he has come only to fulfill Scripture. What Scripture is he fulfilling now in this 10th chapter of John? Go to the 21st chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy, and read these words: "If a man has a son who is stubborn and rebellious and will not obey the voice of his father or the voice of his mother, they will bring him, and shall bring him before the elders of the city and say to the elders: 'This is our son. He is stubborn and rebellious, and will not obey our words. He is a glutton and a drunkard.' Then the men of the city shall stone him to death with stones."

Do you recognize the character in the Gospel? Read it in the 11th chapter of Matthew: "And so they called the Son of Man a drunkard and a glutton, a friend of sinners, of publicans and harlots and tax collectors. Here is one who said to his mother, What have I to do with thee? And then they confronted him in the temple and said, Why did you do this to us? Your father and I have been searching for you for three days. And he answered, I must be about my Father's business."

Here, "No earthly parents do I confess. I am doing my Father's business. They could not understand him. He was then about twelve years of age."

They couldn't understand the complete denial of physical ancestry; for he knew now -- for memory began to return -- who he really is. He came down to experience death. He bore the cross for the allotted time. Then came that moment in time when the cross was split from top to bottom, and the Spirit trapped was set free, and the long-lost rank restored, and the fall forgiven.

And now, "Who are my parents? Who are my brothers? Who are my sisters? Those who do the will of Him who sent me," -- sent me into this world of decay and death that I may experience decay and death. I could not experience it from above. I had to come right down into it and assume and be born man. And this is the "cross" that I wear.

So the Body that really you gave up, I can't begin to tell you the joy that is in store for you when you once more take it up. It's a body of light, a body of power, a body that is all wisdom. You don't have to raise one finger to make eyes appear in empty sockets. You don't take them to a hospital and put little eyes from some "eye bank" into the sockets. You don't have any little "banks" for livers or hands and for the missing members. As you walk by, everything is done because you are perfect. You need nothing that mortal man thinks you must need. Nothing can remain imperfect in your presence as you walk by clothed in this Garment -- the Garment you gave up. You emptied yourself, and then took upon yourself the form of a slave, being born in the likeness of men.

So, if I tell you, as I will, "I say, You are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless you will die like men," -- if you are men when I address you, that is a stupid remark! If you are not men when you are addressed, -- and you are addressed in the Divine Council, then who are you? I told you, you are sons of God. What, then, was my form? You emptied yourself of it; you gave it up.

4-L
S1

I can only bring back a little shadow of remembrance to you by telling you from my own experience what is in store for you.

When I use the word "serpent," it is distasteful to the average person in the world; and yet, we are told, "Those who surround the throne of God, the Seraphim, the fiery serpents," -- God's wisest, wisest creation was the Seraphim. And when Isaiah said, "Send me, O Lord, and they came with a coal and put it on his lips, they spoke," -- it was the human voice. He described them as having hands, human faces, -- of course, he did put wings on them. I will tell you from my own experience, you don't need wings. You are omnipresent in such a Body. Wherever you would be, there you are. You need no power to take you there; you are power. You are Omnipotence. You are Omniscience. You are Omnipresent; so you do not need anything to take you any place. That's the Being that you are! But you completely emptied yourself of it for this Divine purpose; and many a time, while wearing these garments -- this "cross," we cry out. It seems so heavy, and all the horrors of the world, and we do cry out asking to be relieved of it.

But you are going to carry the cross for the allotted time. And when the time is fulfilled, then it is going to be split right down from top to bottom; and at the base you are going to see, -- and how on earth can I tell you? Molten gold will take any form. You have a form. You are the observer; and the minute you look at it, you -- the form -- observing the golden, molten state, -- you fuse with it, and then it takes your form. And you go up into Heaven like a fiery serpent. That's the Being that you are!

Let no one scare you, let no one frighten you -- that you've got to do this, that and the other. It's already done! This whole thing is already completed. You are here as members of a Body: one Body sharing in a purposed end. So, when you go back, you are that one Body. You and I actually form the one Body that is God! So, we, the sons of God, came down; and when we rise we are God the Father.

That is the only way we could experience the wholeness -- is by shattering ourselves, becoming fragmented; and then going through the entire journey, and in the end returning, and returning into Unity. And that Unity is God the Father.

So, when we are told, "Stone him to death," -- well, the "stones" are only the literal facts of life. "They took up stones to stone him." We are told at the end, "not one bone of his body was broken." What body? The Bible. That's his external body.

Men have tried through the centuries to change it, and you will find these many editions and they are necessary because overly zealous scribes will add and take from, and add their own little stupid concepts on their theories, what they ought to be. And you will find them among the wisest of men still trying to change the "body"; but in the end, "not one bone is broken," as you are told in Exodus, in Numbers, and in the Psalms: "Not a bone is broken." When they came to him, not a bone was broken.

That means that you cannot change. He did not come to change, to abolish the law and the prophets; he came only to fulfill. So, he fulfills everything in the world. And you are the One spoken of. You are the Lord Jesus Christ!

4-L
S1

Until you actually know it from experience, you dwell upon it. Just dwell upon it. Go to sleep in the consciousness of being Him; and you will know beyond all doubt, in the not-distant future, really Who-You-Are. You will know the truth of the things that I am talking about. Every one will. That is why I am here. That is why I have been "sent."

I have been "called" and "sent" in the same way that Paul said he was called and sent, in the same way the central figure said, "I have been sent, and when you see me," -- if you can really see me, -- "you have seen Him who sent me." You will know the One who "sent" me when you see me, because all will be alike. And yet, no loss of identity, may I tell you? It's not an absorption, losing your identity. No; and yet, the same form, the same, glorious, radiant form that is all-powerful and all-wise. So, that is the Being that you really are.

What does it matter what "Oscars" you got today or tomorrow, or what power in the world of Caesar you seem to exercise? It means nothing, compared to the Being that you really are. Put all your mind and all your soul upon this one hope that it will unfold in the not-distant future within you, for that's the only purpose for it all.

And when this purpose is really revealed to you, -- and I am trying my best to reveal it, -- then everything falls right into place. It gives meaning to the entire picture of life. Everything has meaning then.

If, perchance, you are passing through a trying time, -- I am going to ask a friend of mine, -- she is here tonight, -- to tell another friend, a mutual friend, this statement from Blake:

"There are states in which all visionary men are accounted mad men." [from "The Laocoon"] Then he adds this to that thought: "Read Luke, the 2d chapter, the 1st verse." If you read the 2d chapter, the 1st verse, you will wonder how on earth can he relate that to what he has just said? that "All visionary men are accounted mad men." But if you read the whole chapter, you will see what he is really telling you, that it is on your doorstep. It is the birth of the child. The second chapter of Luke, the first verse, and that is: "The order went out from Augustus Caeaar that all," -- the whole vast world, -- "must be enrolled," -- enrolled, it implies, for taxes. They must now be enrolled, for the order has come.

And read the whole chapter, and you will see where this, now, -- Joseph, because he was of the line of David, he took his wife Mary up to Bethlehem, the city of David; and then while she was there, her time arrived for the delivery of her son. And then the Son is born!

It is preceded by, as Blake said, a form of madness, for he said: "All visionary men are accounted," -- in certain states they are accounted mad men." And then he asks you to read that verse. Blake was not the kind of person who would spell everything out In fact, he didn't spell anything out. He said to his critic, the great Trussler -- The Reverend Dr. Trussler: "You say I need some one to interpret my word. You ought to know that that which can be made clear to the idiot isn't worth my time. And the ancients understood this, and they said, What was too clear could not rouse the faculties to act." [from "Letter No. 5, to Dr. Trussler]

4-L
S1

If you leave it without trying to clarify it, then you will simply stimulate the man to think and rouse his faculties to act. So, he doesn't spell it out; but you read the chapter and you will see what Blake is implying, that a form of madness precedes the birth of the child.

I know, in my own case, -- it goes back quite a few years before 1959 -- I would say, four or five years, that if I shared with others what I was feeling within me at the time, it would be a form of madness. I was talking to an audience of twenty-six hundred on Sunday mornings and turning away over fifteen hundred at the Fox-Wilshire. I took that platform, and here I could feel within me, just as a woman would feel, the struggle of a child within her; but I felt it in my head -- this pulsing, pulsing, vibrant state. Sit down for a moment, and the whole thing is just like a mad, mad state, and I was talking to intelligent people -- I think they were -- who came to hear me, and I was addressing twenty-six hundred and was turning away fifteen hundred; and I took another theater that sat another seven hundred and fifty, and that overflowed; and, yet, here I am like a woman -- a pregnant woman -- almost at the end of her time. That is what Blake is talking about.

I am going to ask my friend to tell her to read that second chapter; and all the symptoms that she is going through now are glorious. They are perfectly wonderful, and I would not raise one finger to stop them or to divert them. First of all, I couldn't. It is upon her. And, so, I tell every one here: until this "birth" takes place, you can't return; but it will take place.

As we are told: "No man can enter the New Age called the Kingdom of God unless he is born from above." And when he is "born from above," it will be followed in this manner: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so will the Son of Man be lifted up." That comes later. The first act; then 139 days later comes the discovery of the Fatherhood of God; and 123 days later, making it 262, comes the ascent into Heaven like a fiery serpent. And then 998 days later, making it one thousand two hundred and sixty (1,260), comes the descent of the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove. And then the whole thing is over!

And you are now still here. You have borne the fardel (BURDEN) the allotted span, but you are going to be here to tell it; and you will tell it to the very end, and that end will come like this. But you have to tell it to encourage those who are on the verge of it, because every one has to wear the cross for the allotted span. And then at the end, that spine is split in two from top to bottom, revealing -- and how on earth could any one tell it more beautifully than Blake told it at the end of his "Jerusalem" -- almost at the end. And here he is, looking at it, and he says, "Oh, my Divine Redeemer and Creator!" He said:

> "I behold the visions of my deadly sleep of six thousand years
> Circling* around thy skirts like a serpent of precious stones and gold.
> I know it is my Self, O my Divine Creator and Redeemer."

He didn't spell it out. I have tried tonight to spell it out for you; but you see, and you know, it doesn't make sense. It's a form of madness. How can you look at molten gold that is pulsing and alive,

---

* Blake uses the word "dazling."

4-L
S1

and know it is your Self? You look into a mirror, and you will say, "I know that's my reflection -- that's myself." But to look at this that has no form; it is a golden, molten, liquid light; and yet, you know more surely that it is you than you know when you look into a mirror!

And as you know it, you fuse with it. You are now the mold that it takes; and you know exactly what mold you must have been, because the minute you take it, up like a fiery serpent you go into Heaven, and it reverberates like thunder.

So, that is the Being that you are. So, when you read the 82d Psalm, which is the most difficult of all Psalms, -- so claim our scholars, -- how on earth can we interpret it? We can only guess at it.

"But God has taken His place in the Divine Council, in the midst of the gods He holds judgment," -- and now He speaks: "I say you are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless, you will die like men."

So, when one comes into the world and claims what he does, they will take up "stones" and tell him who his father is on earth. "They took up stones to stone him, and he said to them, For what do you stone me? For what good works? And they said to him, For no good works, but for your blasphemy; for you, being a man, make yourself God."

Then he said to them, "Is it not written in your law that I say, You are gods?" Now, he is quoting something two thousand years before; and he is quoting it as though it is taking place now: "I say to you," -- that's what he is telling them, -- "that you are gods, for it is written in your law that you are gods. And Scripture cannot be broken. If, then, he called you gods because you heard the Word of God, do you say that he whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world blasphemes because he said, I am the Son of God?"

"Now, he is telling them that they are the sons of God, but they won't believe it. They claim they are the sons of Abraham, born after the flesh. He is telling them they are sons of God, but they will not know it until they experience that which he has. So, he has suffered these things; and to "suffer" is to "experience the sensations; to know them from actual experience."

So, they took up stones. They say, We know your father and your mother and your brothers and your sisters, and we know all about you; and you make these extravagant claims.

So, that is the Being that you really are. And I cannot tell any one in the world the glory that is in store for them when they are lifted up, and they actually find themselves clothed in that Body, but more beautiful than ever, that they emptied themselves of in order to come down here.

You didn't begin in any swamp! You didn't begin in any little thing called a tadpole. These sre "garments" [indicating the physical body] that you annexed; you penetrated these bodies and annexed the brains of them. But you are the sons of God who did it. And to do it, you can't pretend you are doing it; you had to completely empty yourself of your glory to take this form of the "cross." And you can't pretend, but you will play it the allotted time. After you have played it to the fullness of time, then you will hear the call.

Now, you here -- a lady called me this week. She said, "I went home last Monday night, and I was thrilled with what you said, but I am disturbed."

I was talking of the betrayer; and here it is Judas, and I was speaking highly of Judas. Well, no one can betray a man without knowing the man's secrets, for "no man knows the secret of God but the Spirit of God." So, if he betrays God, he has to know God! He couldn't betray what he doesn't know.

Then she quotes Mark. Now, again, we find scribes adding to. The same quote that you find in Luke does not quote what Mark does. Mark is basic, granted; but our scribes, in transcribing, they have to build their own little philosophy of life. Luke only claims the story of the betrayal; but the word translated "woe," -- if you look it up in your Concordance, it means: "who, which, what, that." In other words, "Who is that?" The same "that" they are asking about Judas. "What will happen to that man? What is that to thee? Follow thou me." He knew the secret; and till the very end, they did not know the secret. They thought they knew it, but they did not know the secret.

When you read the stories of Scripture, -- and we are told that Joseph was the father; but he disappears when the boy reaches the age of twelve and denies the parents. Well, who is Joseph? Read the genealogy in Matthew. It begins: "This is the book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David." Now read the genealogy. Joseph is the father of Jesus, but in the genealogy, his father, -- that is, Joseph's father is Jacob; yet in the dream -- when the angel appears to Joseph in a dream, he said, "Joseph, son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which was conceived by her is of the Holy Spirit." But he addresses him as "Joseph, son of David"; and the book begins: "The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, son of David."

But Joseph, in Scripture, is the Dreamer. He is the beginning of the forgiveness of sin. For he said to his brothers in the end of the great plot, which is Genesis, -- at the very end, the 50th chapter: "You make evil against me, but God meant it for good," and he forgave them. That's the beginning of the forgiveness of sin. And he was called the Dreamer. When the Dreamer awakes, he is the Lord Jesus Christ. So, he becomes his own father!

And what was Joseph called in Numbers? Moses changed his name from Joseph -- it's called "Hosea," but "Josea" means "Joseph"; he changed his name from Hosea to Joshua, and "Joshua" means "Jesus"; and Jesus is the Lord God Jehovah. Can't you see the mystery unfolding?

So, here, "Do not be afraid, Joseph, son of David, to take unto you Mary, your wife." So, he addresses him as the son of David; but the book begins: "Jesus Christ, the son of David." But Joseph is the Dreamer, and this comes to him in a dream. He is the dreamer. So, he begins the dream in the 37th chapter of Genesis; and he begins the dream that all the things will come and bow to him, the sun and the moon, and the stars; and then he told his father. And he father said "What! Your mother and I will bow before you?" And the brothers could not believe for one moment that eleven stars -- meaning the eleven of them -- would bow before him; and they plotted to sell him into slavery. So, they sold him into slavery, as you were "sold into slavery." You emptied yourself and became a slave. And the Dreamer-in-you is Joseph.

4-L
S1

But you are told: "I will raise up out of your body," -- To whom is he speaking? He is speaking to David, -- "When your days are fulfilled and you lie down with your fathers, I will raise up your son after you, who shall come forth from your body." When he comes forth from your body and your name is David, then he is your son. "I, the lord, will be his father, and he shall be my son."

So, Joseph is the dreamer in man; but when he wakes, he is the Lord Jesus Christ. Do you see the mystery?

So, who is that? Not "woe." You and I have certain associations with words. We have the word "suffer"; we think of grief, we think of pain; and all it means is simply "to experience a sensation."

"For joy and woe are woven fine,
A garment* for the soul divine."
-- Blake, from "Auguries of Innocence"

Not all joy, not all woe; they are "woven fine" in this world when we eat of the Tree of Good and Evil. And when we come to the end, and then the Spirit that was trapped willingly is set free by the splitting of the body from top to bottom and it ascends like the fiery serpent, it is set free; and the long-lost rank, which is the Son of God, is restored, -- but now ennobled. He is the Father. He awakes as his father, having gone through the horrors, "bearing this fardel for the allotted time."

---oOo---

* Neville substitutes the word "garment" for "clothing" in Blake's lines.

SALVATION HISTORY -- NOT SECULAR

7 May 1971

When we open the Bible, we are looking, not at secular history, but salvation history. Man, not knowing that, has misinterpreted most of the great truths of Scripture. They are all mysteries, and these mysteries are not matters to be kept secret; they are simply mysterious in character. We will take quite a few tonight and try to piece them together for you, and then tell you my personal experience that will lead you to your own conclusion. You may deny it, but they will leave you to come to your own conclusion.

They asked him, "What is the first and greatest commandment?"

And he said, "This is the first commandment: 'Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one.' And you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your strength. The second is this: You shall love your neighbor as yourself. There is no other commandment greater than these."

They asked him now concerning adultery and marriage and divorce. Then he goes back into the Book of Genesis, the Second Chapter, concerning man and woman; and he takes the story and says, "Man leaves father and mother and cleaves to his wife, and they become one." It is stated, "and they become one." The two become one. This is God's arithmetic: One plus one equals one. On this level it equals two, but whom is he speaking of? He has just stated the First Commandment: There is only God. There is nothing but God.

We are told in Isaiah: "Your Maker is your Husband. The Lord of Hosts is His name." If "the Lord of Hosts" is His name and it's your Maker, and He is your "Husband," well then, he cleaves to you until you become one.

Now we are told: "What God has joined, let not man put asunder." Well, man makes every effort in the world to separate man from God. We speak of God as "another." We are not conscious of the fact that we are one; and every priest, rabbi and other ministers in the world teach of another; therefore, there is no One.

He is telling us that God, our Maker, is our "Husband." Well, if our "Husband" leaves everything and cleaves to us and we become one, He said, "What God has joined together, let not man put asunder." It hasn't a thing to do with the earthly relationship between male and female. Your true Maker is God, and God is Your "Husband." You will become one! This, I tell you from experience.

The 87th Psalm -- there are only seven verses:

A Psalm of the Sons of Korah. A Song.

87 [2] On the holy mount stands the city he founded;
the LORD loves the gates of Zion more than all the dwelling places of Jacob.
[3] Glorious things are spoken of you,
O city of God. — Selah

4 Among those who know me I mention Rahab and Babylon;
behold, Philistia and Tyre, with Ethiopia—
"This one was born there," they say.
5 And of Zion it shall be said,
"This one and that one were born in her";
for the Most High himself will establish her.
6 The LORD records as he registers the peoples,
"This one was born there." Selah

7 Singers and dancers alike say,
"All my springs are in you."

It will give you such a wonderful, clear picture of it. Let us take it, now, in this form: "And David slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the City of David." Now we are told that David took the "stronghold of Zion," and renamed it the "City of David." We are told the City of David is now called the "City of God." And we are told in this 87th Psalm that "the Lord loves Zion more than all the dwelling places of Jacob." [Psalm 87:2] "Zion," "Bethlehem," "City of God," "City of David," "Jerusalem" are synonymous terms. He loves them all more -- this one city -- than all the dwelling places of Jacob.

We are told that Jacob got his name by first contending with his brother, and then they called him the "Supplanter." He contended with his father-in-law, and he won out. With every one with whom he fought, He won out. And finally he contended with God, as you read it in the 32d Chapter of Genesis; and when at the end he did not give in, the Lord changed his name to "Israel" -- from the outer man to the inner man. "Israel" simply means "the man who rules as God." In other words, God rules. God commands.

Jacob, now, is a completely transformed person; so he prefers the gates of Zion to all the dwelling places of Jacob, the successful materialist -- the successful outer man, with all the great accomplishments of man, but what man has accomplished! He prefers the gates of Zion to all the dwelling places of Jacob.

Now, where is he buried? Well, he is buried in the City of David. It was once called Zion. We are told that he took Zion by going up the watershaft. He went up the watershaft; it seemed impregnable. And he conquered Zion and renamed it the City of David. That is where he is buried. And the City of David is one with Bethlehem, and these two are one with Jerusalem, and the three are the City of God; so here, it is one. Where is Chfist Jesus buried? Buried in Jerusalem. Buried on Golgotha. That's where David is buried.

But David said, "You would not leave my soul in hell, and you have promised you would not let my soul see destruction." You find that in the 16th Psalm. Here, buried in the skull of man,is David. Everything said of David in the Old Testament is said of Jesus Christ in the New.

The 89th Psalm uses the words "of David," -- "my chosen one," "my servant," "the first-born," "Thy Anointed." All these are terms used for Jesus Christ in the New Testament. In the very last book, Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the first-born from the dead, the ruler of all the kings of earth, -- every statement there is said of David.

"I will make him a witness to all the peoples," as we are told in the 55th Chapter of Isaiah: "I will make David the witness of all the people." We are told, he is the first-born.

Well, here we see in the Old Testament, which is simply an adumbration -- a complete foreshadowing of what's going to happen in man. When it actually comes to fulfillment in man, they don't call him "David" any more; they speak of him then as "Jesus, the Christ." So, here he is called the "Chosen One."

"If he is the Christ of God, his chosen one, let him save himself." That you read in the 23d Chapter of Luke when he hangs upon the cross, and the wise men say, "He saved others. Let him save himself. If he is the Christ of God, his Chosen One, then let him save himself." He is called "His Chosen One." He is called "the first-born from the dead."

Now, let us see what the 87th Psalm tells us. There are only seven verses. He tells us of this fantastic mountain that has been established by God. Then he tells us that God "records as he registers the peoples"; and he says, "this one" and "that one" was "born in her" -- meaning Zion, meaning the place where David was buried. And he goes through, calling the people to be awakened, -- all buried in that one state.

When I stood in the presence of the Risen Lord, after having seen my Angelic Being check off my name, look at me and the book and then simply check the name -- the registered name, -- it's there in the book. This is the time now. Then standing in His presence and answering His questions as He expected it: that Love is the greatest thing in the world, He embraced me. "And the two became one." "He who is united to the Lord becomes one spirit with Him." From that moment on, we are not two.

I had gone a-whoring. I had gone into harlotry, believing in powers outside of God -- believing in this, that and the other. And then in that moment the two became one. And if today some one is afraid of me, as some people say they are, it's only because they are afraid they may believe what I teach. They do not wish to give up a god outside of themselves. They are playing the part of the harlot, though they are virgin. If they have never known man, and if a man has never known a woman -- has never known any sexual act, but believes in a god external to himself, he or she is playing the part of the harlot.

You can be tonight married and be running around all over the world -- either male or female; but if you believe in the one God, -- "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one," -- it would have nothing to do with your sexual activities outside of your socalled "earthly" agreement. It hasn't a thing to do with it. So, let no man put you asunder from that which you have been joined to. You have been joined to God if you are faithful to that one God. What is His name? I AM. There is no other God.

"I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob as God Almighty." That means destructive violence. And you do first appear that way. And it is destructive violence; it comes in the earthquake, the volcano, the storm -- everything. It seems that you are only sheer violence. "I have not appeared to them by my name, the Lord." He appears first by that name to Moses; but he did not appear to Moses as "Father," as Love. That comes in the end. When the two become one, you are united to Love, -- Infinite Love; and not one person in the world can ever divorce you from that union.

This is God's arithmetic: one plus one equals one. So, in the end, there is only one. There is only God!

Liken this whole thing to an infinite brain, and God the Dreamer; and we the "brain cells" in the mind of the Dreamer. And He awakens us, one by one, and then we unite, and we become the Dreamer. Every one becomes then that One Dreamer that is God, for there is only God. "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one." And let no one change this from you and make you see Him as something other than your Self.

When He calls David, it is because He first awakens. He promised David He would not leave his soul in "hell," -- He would not let his soul see destruction. And suddenly it's within you, in your own skull! And the explosion takes place, and here is David.

So, you have kept your promise: "I made an everlasting covenant with David, my steadfast love for him." And so, He kept His promise and he lifted up David -- David, the Son. And when He lifts him up, it is because He first called you and united you with Himself, and you are one with God, -- there is no two now. The two become one. Now David will rise, because he is your "son," because he is God's Son. So, David rises because you have been united with the Lord, and no man can put you two asunder, because you are not two any more. You are one.

So, this is the story of Scripture: one Being; and all this is scattered, though all part of the "brain" of God. And one set after the other awakens. As it awakens, we become one with the Dreamer; and then because He is a father, the son must appear. And the Son calls you "Father." Then you know Who-You-Are.

So, when asked to name the first and greatest commandment, he names that from the 6th Chapter of Deuteronomy. He's only fulfilling what He foretold. "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one." Now, love the Lord with all your heart, with all your soul, with all your mind, and with all your might. And now a second I give you: Love your neighbor as yourself.

He takes six hundred and thirteen (613) commandments, two hundred and forty-eight (248) positive and three hundred and sixty-five (365) negative, and reduces them to two positive, -- only two commandments! And the two are really one, for if you love your neighbor as your Self, you are admitting that you are one. For he, if not yet awakened, he will awake; and he is going to be the father of your "son." And if he is the father of your son, then he has to be you! So in the end, there is only God -- nothing but God!

So, the sufferings are simply because of our departure from God. We put our faith in our stocks and bonds, our social position, our everything but being the One whose name we really bear. His name is "I AM." And before I say "I am Neville," I have said, "I am." "I am"; then I say, "Neville."

You say, "What nationality?"

I say, "First I am an American."

You say, "Well, what race?"

Well, I am taught to believe I am a Caucasian; so "I am" first; then "Caucasion."

And the One who said, "I am THAT," He said "I am" first. There is the same name.

And in the end, he is not going to have any one other than David for a son. And I'll tell you, regardless of the pigment of his skin, David is blonde. I don't care what father -- how black he is today, how olive-skinned he is today -- when he actually becomes one with God, his "son" is going to be the blonde, blue-eyed, lovely, ruddy being described in the Book of Samuel.

"Is it not said of him, 'I have chosen one from the house. Go and see him. And then march before him the sons!?"

"Are these all your sons?"

And he said, "We have one left, the youngest."

"We will not sit until you fetch him."

So, they go and bring him because he was, now, feeding the sheep -- feeding the flock. So, they bring him in; and the voice of God said to Samuel, "This is he. Rise and anoint him."

He is called the "Anointed of the Lord." And his father's name -- basically -- is "I AM"; that is what it means. The Son of Jesse, -- "Jesse" is "I AM," and that is the name of God.

First, he is the "Chosen one"; now he is the "Anointed of the Lord." All this is prophetic. And suddenly it comes. So, what I say of Jesus Christ -- everything is said of David; therefore what is said of Jesus Christ is nothing more than a "Christ-ological" reinterpretation of the story of David. It is all true, but it becomes alive in the one; and then you don't call yourself "Christ." You don't call yourself anything, but you do call David, "David."

You are still John, but you know Who-You-Are because if God is the father of David, and you have no doubt in your mind as to your relationship, then you are God. And you do not use the word "Christ." You do not use the word "Jesus." Simply, you are God, and David is your "son"; and that's the story.

But man has been divorced from this knowledge; and every priest in the world still keeps man asunder by teaching what they teach. The day will come, they will not be able to put you asunder from the One with Whom you are joined and have become one. The two become one. "Let, therefore, no man put asunder what God has joined together." And He joins you to Himself; and because He is the father of David, you have to be the father of David.

But unless you actually believe that God is your own wonderful human imagination, and all things exist in your imagination, and all things exist in God, you are still worshiping a god outside yourself; and you have been severed from your "mate," for your Maker is your Husband; "the Lord of Hosts is His name."

So, any one in this world who sees something other than God as "Husband" -- not only Husband, but one with Him -- whether you be male or female, -- and you can turn to another source for your supply -- another source for your power, then you do not know the Being that you really are! But the day will come, you will be called, and "the Lord registers" -- records --- "the people as He registers them. He will say, 'this one,' and 'that one' were 'born in her.'"

Now, they give it the feminine: "born in her"; so Zion becomes the "mother," for a man is buried, which is really a tomb. The tomb becomes the womb, and out of that womb you are going to be "born." So, Zion, which is Bethlehem, contains it all; and every one is going to come out of Bethlehem. He is born in Bethlehem. Who is born? God is! So, where David is buried, the Father is buried. So, "God Himself enters Death's door with those who enter, and He lays down in the grave with those who enter," and then when you awake after having this dream -- the visions of Eternity, you will see the "garment that the female wove for you" -- this garment [indicating the physical body]. You come out of it completely, and you are "born"; and you are one with God. And the symbol of your union with God is the little child. And the confirmation that you are God comes as David. He is the Son of God, and He is your son. There is no disturbance whatsoever as to this conviction. Beyond any conviction you have in this world, no man could disturb this. You are the father of David, and he is the Son of God.

So, what is said of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, it was first said of David. "He said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee."

So, here the whole thing unfolds in man, and it will unfold in every one, or one "brain cell" will be missing; and it can't be missing. It's an infinite Brain that we actually penetrated by the Infinite Being that was Love. But he first appeared as destructive violence.

Every one seems to think that God is vile: He allows this to happen, that to happen, the other to happen. He always appears first to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as destructive violence, called "El Shaddai." "El Shaddai" simply means "God Almighty"; and you only see Him in the light of power -- sheer power. So, whenever He appears in man, -- maybe that man's first appearance to those who love him and who follow him, will be as sheer power, but in time, they will see him as Infinite Love -- Infinite Love.

So tonight, take the passages that I have quoted; read them. Read them carefully, and see how they all fall into place like a great puzzle. The whole Old Testament is simply a foreshadowing; it is a prophecy, a blueprint. And then when it is fulfilled in man in the New Testament, he who was called "David, the Messiah" is now called "Jesus Christ." He was called the Son of God; Jesus Christ is called the Son of God. He was called the "first-born"; Jesus Christ is called the "first-born." He is called the King of Kings; Jesus Christ is called the King of Kings. And you will find it all parallels; but here is one foreshadowing, and here is one realizing.

So, in the New Testament, the Old is fulfilled; and we call that one, which was formerly called "David, the son of Jesse," -- we call him now "Jesus Christ, the Son of God." The word "Jesse" means "God." It means "I AM," and God simply means "I AM."

So the whole thing unfolds within a man; and may I tell you? it's all out of the skull of man. The skulls we have here in this world are only shadows of that Immortal Skull that you occupy. But because there can only be one, you will not be less than any being that preceded you in the awakening, because whoever preceded you is one with God; and God is one, and His name is One. Therefore, you cannot be less or more than God; and so when you are joined together, one plus one equals one. In this world it equals two; and that's the division. That's the conflict. But in God's arithmetic, one plus one equals one.

And so whenever you are standing in the presence of Infinite Love, you will answer correctly. You are divinely prompted. You don't have to hesitate for one second. You will say it; and as you say it, you are embraced; and as you are embraced, you are fused; and as you are fused, you are united to the Lord. And "He who is united to the Lord becomes one spirit with Him." So, "one body, one spirit, one lord, one God and Father of all."

So, here is an infinite brotherhood that together form God the Father. And as a father, there must be a son; and the son is David. And David is the symbol of humanity. So, everything comes out, and that Perfect Being stands before you, and here he is -- David!

A friend of mine -- she isn't here tonight; she wrote me a very sweet letter this past week. She said, "I had either a dream or a vision. It was very vivid. I saw a woman who had twelve daughters. In the vision, or dream, I knew the names of each. Eleven of them were born maimed: a foot missing, an arm missing, -- something missing; but one was born perfect, and she was a virgin who gave birth to a son. Her name was Glory. But all the time I was thinking of Mary," -- for she was raised a Catholic and raised in the tradition; she was thinking of Mary, but her name was Glory -- which is God Himself, as we told you last Monday: "I will make my glory to pass before you; and when I pass by," -- therefore "my Glory" and "I" are synonymous. So, her name was Glory, and she was perfect.

"And every one wanted to know who was the father of her son. And all the townspeople tried." She said, "I knew it, and she -- Glory, she knew it. But we wouldn't tell, because they didn't ask us. And then some one said, 'David is the father of the child.' Then some one came forward and struck him on the head and knocked him down; and others came with knives, and he simply cried out because of the blow, and the two knives that they pierced into him."

And then she awoke, and she wondered, "What on earth could this be? because I can't conceive in my rational mind that I would ever want to kill David."

Well, all dreams are egocentric -- all dreams. You are the dreamer, and the dreamer is God. It's telling you a story. It's a glorious story that was revealed to her. Here, "twelve" means either governmental order on earth or in heaven, but it's "order." Here is the one now, and the one's name is Glory, and she brings forth a son; and no one knows the Father. The search of all in this world is for the Father, -- to find the identity of the Father. And they would kill the son -- the only one who could reveal the Father. For no one in this world will ever reveal you as Father, -- my words cannot convey the conviction that is necessary to reveal it. It takes David himself to reveal it.

I could tell you from now to the ends of time that you are the father of David; but until the actual experience is experienced by you, you cannot have that surety. So here, the destruction that is still the old habit crying out to destroy. That's why I said earlier, "Why do people fear me?" She feared me recently greatly, and thought me evil, because they are afraid they may believe me.

So, in the dream that followed this only a few days ago the crowd, called the "townspeople," struck him over the head and knocked him cold, and then he cried out because of the pain. And when he cried out because of the harshness of the knives that went into him, she wondered, "Why should I" -- The rational mind? No; the rational mind would not want to destroy David. But she's not dealing with the rational mind. She is dealing with something deep within her that has been actually planted in her from childhood. It's a difficult thing to overcome prefabricated misconceptions of the great mystery of Christ. But I tell you, he is David; and you are the father of David, and therefore you are God.

So, who is the father? God is the Father. But whom do they kill? They kill the son. The Father is invisible. They do not kill the Father. They always kill the Son. So they attempt to rub out the son, and that is told us in the great prophecy -- or the parable, I should say -- when they killed all the servants that came, one after the other; then he sent his son. And they took the son and said, "He is the heir. If we kill him, then we have the estate"; so they kill the son. And what then did he ask when the father -- the king himself comes, what would he do to these servants, because they can't kill the father. The Father is invisible, made known only by the Son.

So, they didn't kill him. The attempt to kill him was made, but they did not kill him. But it has a lovely stride in the right direction, as far as this lady is concerned, because only a few weeks ago she was turned completely against the speaker because of something -- a disturbance which must come to all of us in the household; and I became, in her eyes, an evil person -- an evil spirit, an anti-Christ. Well, yes; I am completely anti-Christ as the world accepts Christ. I have been sent to betray the true Christ. And I'll tell you who he is. I've told you who he is.

So, everything I have said about David -- read it in the New Testament -- it is said of Jesus Christ. What did he say? "I have come only to fulfill Scripture." So what being am I fulfilling?

Well, was it said of David that he was the "first-born"? Now it's said of me, but it must be David that I am fulfilling. Was it said of him, "He is my Chosen One"? That is said of me. I am the "Chosen One."

Was it said of him that "he is the Anointed of the Lord"? Well, my first words in Luke, after the temptation: he goes into the synagogue as was the custom on the Sabbath, and they passed him a book; and when he opened to the page called the 61st of Isaiah, he began to read it: "And the spirit of the Lord God is upon me. He has anointed me." To "anoint"? They anointed David; and as they anointed David, what did they say? Read it in the 16th Chapter of First Samuel:

"And so the spirit of the Lord came mightily upon David from that moment forward." He is quoting the 61st Chapter of Isaiah; but it is David who precedes the 61st Chapter of Isaiah, and they came under the orders of the Lord, and they came to David; and then Samuel turned to the father, Jesse. "Are these your only sons?"

He said, "No; there is the youngest, but the youngest is tending the sheep."

"Bring him in."

Then the Lord spoke, "This is he. Rise and anoint him." And then Samuel took the oil and anointed David in the presence of his brothers, and "the spirit of the Lord came mightily upon David from that moment forward." So, in the New Testament in the Book of Luke, as he actually began the ministry, as you are told, -- he came out of the wilderness where he ignored all temptation and he would serve only God. Then he took the book and opened it up and he said, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me." So, he has anointed me. That is how he begins his ministry -- actually quoting the words said of David in the 16th Chapter of Samuel -- First Samuel.

And you take every claim made of him -- the King of Kings, they said it of David. He was the Shepherd; they said it of David: "He is my shepherd." And now the whole thing is fulfilled; and the only one that stands before you, and he is not called Jesus Christ, I tell you. You are the Lord Christ Jesus, who is God-Awake-in-you; but because he is Father, there is a son, and the son remains David. So David calls you "Father." And you know you are his father, and you know he is your "son." There is no uncertainty whatsoever between you and your son. This relationship is forever.

So, He wakens cell after cell after cell. It's only Himself. God is waking, and there's nothing but God. So in the end, we are all God! But it takes all of us, completely awake, to be God the Father.

Now you dwell upon these passages and try to put them together, and take what I've told you concerning my own experience standing before the Risen Lord -- Infinite Love. And here we become one. We were two. I stood before Him. I was one, and He was one. Then I answered Him correctly: "Love." When he said, "What is the greatest thing in the world?" I said, "Love." And Love embraced me, and we fused. We ceased to be two; we are one.

And now, when he sends me into the world, "he who sees me sees Him who sent me," if you see Me. Then you see Him. But if they do not see Him, they will put you out of the synagogues. In those days they were called synagogues; today they are called churches -- places of worship. They will put you out, excommunicate you. In fact, they will "kill" you and think they are doing God a service, because "they know neither my Father nor me."

If they only knew my Father, they would know me, for He Who "sent" me has never left me. And if you see me, you will see my Father. But you can't see my Father through this garment of flesh and blood. Therefore, you can't see me, because we are one.

[Following the Silence]: Now, are there any questions, please?

QUESTION BY A LADY: You say you can tell us what we have to experience. What do you recommend as the easiest way to experience -- the technique, or the way we enter this experience?

NEVILLE: That question was asked in this manner in Scripture: "Lord, what must we do to be doing the work of God?"

He said, "Believe in him whom he has sent."

It may not seem rational; it may not seem anything that you could use for Caesar's world, but "believe in him whom He has sent." He does teach a very simple law how to cushion the blows -- the inevitable blows -- of Caesar's world, which I will try to explain on Monday.* I can't go on forever along one line; so on Monday I will take up that aspect of it, but it is secondary to this. This is the important thing. For if by that law you gain the world -- change everything, as I said tonight; but they used words of Scripture, which -- unless you understand Scripture, you would not see it, where He liked the gates:

> "And the Lord loved the gates of Zion > more than all the dwelling placed of Jacob."
> [Psalm 87:2]

"Jacob" signifies this whole vast world and all the comforts that you could, by the use of law, as he did, -- he used the law wisely. He deceived his father-in-law by using the wonderful technique of putting popular things -- these things, like poplar trees before the female animals at the time of breeding. And naturally, when the bulls came through to sire the cows, they were looking at these stripes. And he made a deal with his father-in-law that the offspring that had stripes or spots all belonged to him, and those that were not -- and the father knew that that's an easy thing to win, for the simple reason he had all the brown cows -- all of one color. And Jacob put different stripes on the foals and spots on the foal; and as they came up to be sired, that impression of that moment of intensity, they would reproduce in themselves what they are looking at. So, man always becomes what he beholds, especially at the moment of creation.

So here was the creative act; and Jacob outsmarted his father-in-law, Laban, and got all the cattle. So when they brought forth, not brown cattle as they should, they brought forth spotted and striped cattle. So, he used the technique of mine to outsmart all of them: his brother Esau, his father-in-law, those in battle; and then at the end, the Lord changed his name from Jacob to "Israel," the man who rules as God."

But he liked the gates of Zion, where all are buried, including his one son David. Now bear in mind the words: "And David slept with his fathers," -- it's plural: "David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David." That is in Second Kings, the 10th verse: "He slept with his fathers," -- the will of the fathers, but only one son.

---

* See "Who God Really Is" (also titled "Step into the Picture," 10 May 1971

And we, the Father -- we are individually the father of that one son, because there is only one God. It takes all the "fathers" to make the Father!

---oOo---

Neville 02-12-1968

SALVATION HISTORY

It is God's purpose to give himself to you as though there were no other! And when He does, it will not be you and God, but you as God! Although it seems impossible for the God who created the universe and all within it, to give himself to one who is born in time and will die in time, it is true.

Ask a devoted Christian who knows his Bible if he believes in Jesus Christ and thinks of him as the Lord; he will answer, Yes. Ask him if he believes that Jesus was referring to the creator of the universe, when he said: "I and my Father are one, and when you see me you have seen the Father," and again he will agree.

Do you believe that scripture is the word of God which is true and its truth cannot be broken? That Jesus said no one could enter the kingdom of heaven unless he was born from above, and he is in heaven now? Then Jesus had to have been born from above, would he not?

Did he not say that he encountered David in the Spirit, at which time David called him "Lord"? And did not David say: "I will tell the decree of the Lord, he said to me, 'Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee.' "? If David called him "Lord" in the New Testament, and the Lord called David "son" in the Old Testament, are they not father and son?

Although year after year man has sacrificed the blood of an ox or lamb without changing his consciousness, Christ's supreme sacrifice (as told us in the 10th chapter of Hebrews) is by splitting the curtain of his own body from top to bottom, and taking his own blood into the Holy of holies. And did not the Holy Spirit, who he knew to be himself, descend upon him in the form of a dove and remain there?

Do you agree that a man's history is made up of all of the events he has experienced? And if Jesus Christ has experienced everything I have mentioned, do they not constitute his history? And you agree he is the Lord? Then I say: only when salvation history invades time, will man really know the meaning of life, in time!

As you walk in time, human history is yours; as you are born and die, restored to life you die, only to be restored and die again. Human history goes on forever, until salvation history invades time and becomes the individual's autobiography. And if the history of the Lord Jesus Christ becomes your history, are you not the Lord?

In human history all things begin and end in time. Things appear, they wax, wane, and disappear, to pass through nature to eternity - until the history of salvation invades time and redeems the individual, allowing him to experience salvation history as his own.

Salvation history, belonging only to eternity, takes God's creative power up from eternal death (called time) to enter the kingdom of heaven and everlasting life. That's how God - having become Man - raises the individual to the level of being God.

Now, I did not ask these questions to test your knowledge of scripture, but to find another witness. That which is recorded in scripture is an external witness of my internal experience. Therefore, who am I other than the Lord Jesus Christ? This is my destiny, as it is yours.

Although limited while I walk the earth, when this limitation is taken off I - who have found God to be my very self - will join that one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all. Having experienced the only history of salvation, I know I am He! Although this experience is uniquely mine, it is not exclusive. Everyone will have this invasion and experience the history of salvation, for that is how God gives himself to man, that man may become God.

A man's autobiography is his own personal history. When the autobiography of Jesus Christ was experienced as recorded in scripture, was it believed then? No, because the individual was known by those who heard his story. They knew him to be the carpenter's son. They knew his brothers and sisters, and could not understand how he could claim to have come down from heaven. To claim God as his father, yet be one with him.

But I tell you: God invades time in order to fulfill his own prophecy, for the Old Testament prophesies all that man must experience in order to be redeemed. The New Testament then tells how the story of redemption takes place.

How can an infinite being give himself to finite Man? (By Man I mean generic Man, male/female.) By fulfilling the history of salvation spelled out in the New Testament as the story of the life of Jesus Christ. It is recorded that his birth was from above. That he encountered the one whom the Lord declared to be his son, thereby establishing his Fatherhood.

A son must have been fathered, or he could not be; and if you are a father, you must have a son. God the Father prophesied in the Second Psalm that David was his son. As that son, you experience the major events in the life of one called Jesus Christ, making the history of salvation your autobiography. Only then do you know that you and God the Father are one. Believe me, and salvation history will be yours.

John tells us that those who heard salvation's history and would not accept it, departed never to walk with him again. (John 6) Why? Because there were still things for them to experience in the world of time, sadness, and death.

Every loving relationship will one day dissolve and vanish as one goes through the gate called death. The British Empire ruled for over three hundred years. Now only England is left, and it only the size of New York City. We are living in the day of the complete dissolution of the British Empire, seeing it dissolve right before our eyes Their literature and art will last, yet even that will have its day and vanish.

Although this enormous power called America believes it cannot die, it will; for this is a world of death. Individuals, families, countries, and traditions, will die in time; and the only solution is God's plan of salvation - which is in eternity.

Eternity is qualitative, not quantitative. It does not describe duration, but creation. In this world all things come to an end. In our country right now there are individuals who have an excess of two billion dollars and are trying to increase it. Their billions cannot buy happiness; and in the not distant future they will depart and leave their money behind to be wasted by those who did not earn it.

This is a world of time, where all things begin and end. Although death appears to be, there is none. Those who remain, experience their death; but to themselves they do not die. Instead, they are restored to life in a young body with nothing missing. There they will get older and eventually die, to be instantly restored - again unaccountably new - in a terrestrial world like this one, to go on and on and on. That's restoration; but the birth from above is something entirely different. That occurs when infinite God gives himself to the individual. He does it by inserting his story of salvation into time, possessing the individual, then unfolding himself from within, fulfilling salvation history.

The Bible is an incredible story of how God became man that man could become God. The history of God contains eternity, which has neither beginning nor end; therefore, salvation history is forever taking place. God's will must be being done absolutely and continuously, because it is eternal.

When the history of salvation invades you, individually, you will awaken from a long, long sleep to find yourself being born from above. The symbol of your birth as that of a little child wrapped in swaddling clothes will be there, as well as the witnesses. Even then it seems incredible, as you hold the child in your arms - just as scripture states a child was placed in the arms of one called Mary. And if the child is a symbol of the savior, who is the Lord God Jehovah; are you not your own savior?

Coming down to earth, God invades the world of time and lifts you out of time into eternity. Then you will return for a little while, where your glory is hidden by the garment you wear. You will tell your experiences to those who will listen, until that moment in time when you depart never to return again.

No one should gloat about this, as everyone will rise as the same being. There is only God, redeeming Himself into the one body, one Spirit, one Lord, one God and Father of all; and you will know that you are He!

This glorious, spiritual story doesn't make sense to man, so he believes it in a physical way. And when it is told from experience, few will listen; and even those who do will not understand. Don't expect them to. Just tell it, and leave the thought as a seed for them to dwell upon and maybe begin to hunger and thirst for understanding.

You see, God has already put eternity into the heart of every man. And when the time is fulfilled, He adds a thirst that only eternity can satisfy. So when you tell God's word, and there is no interest, it is because the hunger has not come upon them. But the day will come when God will send a hunger - not for bread or a thirst for water, but for experiencing the word of God; and not a thing can satisfy that hunger but an experience of God.

In order for such an experience to happen, God must invade time and possess you. Then you fulfill salvation's story, as everything said in scripture is experienced by you. Having come into the world - and fulfilling scripture - you will interpret Moses, the law, the prophets, and the Psalms, as things concerning yourself; for you will discover that the events recorded as happening to Jesus Christ, have happened in you.

Remember, not every word of scripture is significant. Like a letter you write, not every word has significance; but there is meaning, a purpose to your written word. When salvation history invades you, the meaning of scripture will be known from experience. Using the law of Moses and the prophets and the psalms, you will interpret in all the scriptures the things concerning yourself, knowing you are the Jesus Christ of which scripture refers.

The Bible ends on the 20th verse of the 22nd chapter of Revelation with these words: "Come, Lord Jesus." The last verse: "The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you," is only a benediction.

With the words: "Come, Lord Jesus," you are inviting Him to come, possess you, and unfold the history of salvation within you, so that you will no longer identify yourself with the body of flesh you wear, but become the very being you are seeking! And when that happens, although you will continue to walk the earth with all the weaknesses and limitations of the flesh, you will know who you really are.

Take my message to heart and dwell upon this - the only salvation! Every day, tens of thousands will die either violently or naturally, to discover that they have not died to themselves. Their body will be physical and their world terrestrial. There they will love and marry as they did here, for it is the same age, and therefore the same world as before!

When Jesus was asked: "Did not Moses say that if a man married and had no offspring and died, his brother should take her to wife and raise up a family for his brother? If he did this, whose wife would she be in the resurrection?" And Jesus answered: "You do not know the scripture. In this age man marries and is given in marriage. But those who are accounted worthy to attain to the age of the resurrection neither marry or are given in marriage; for - being one with God - they can die no more." In the resurrection, the son of God is one with God; for the Father and the son are one!

After your resurrection from this state of death, you no longer marry, or die, but until then you will continue to fall in love, marry, get old, and depart. They have cemeteries there too, making money or people who own them by burying things that do not die.

If you and I had gotten in on the ground floor of Forest Lawn, we would be millionaires by now. All those people do, is play upon the gullibility of people; because no one who dies ever goes there. You might just as well take off the clothes you are now wearing, take them to Forest Lawn and bury them in a box. It's the same thing, because you wear your garment of flesh and blood just as you do a suit of clothes. But in this age a box must be purchased to put the garment in so that people can make a quick dollar.

Yet the being who wore the garment is the creator of the world, and instantly created a new one to continue life as before. Now, wouldn't it be horrible if life like that went on forever? Well, God in his infinite mercy invades time and redeems man in the one body of the Lord Jesus Christ!

Claim you are as free as the wind! Live nobly in your imagination. Dwell upon all the lovely things in life for yourself and others, as there is no other. Without loss of identity, you are going to know you are the one God who created and sustains the world.

You will know you did not begin when you came here, but have been traveling for unnumbered centuries. You have done violent, horrible things; yet God in his infinite mercy has re-moved their memory so that you could live with yourself. And in the end, when God invades you with the eternal history of salvation, all of your past will be forgiven. It will be wiped out as though it never was. And you will be redeemed with no memory of the horrors you knew in this world of time.

All things begin and end in time, but there is no beginning or ending in eternity. It just is! The history of Salvation was not composed by God. It was always so. It was His plan to be inserted into time and redeem humanity!

Now let us go into the silence.

15/S1

SECRET OF IMAGINATION *

21 June 1971

I thought that this last week should be both practical and idealistic. So we will start on the practical side. He said: "Think not that I am come to abolish the law and the prophets. I have come, not to abolish the law and the prophets, but to fulfill them." [Matthew 5:17]

Now, the One speaking is now present within you. When He awakes, you will hear these words. You will find them to be your words. That One is your own wonderful human imagination. That One is God!

Imagination is the basis of all that is. What is now proved to be true, as far as we are concerned, was once only imagined. Think of something in the world that is now to you "real" that wasn't first imagined. So, the secret of imagining is the secret of God. And so:

> "The secret of imagining is the greatest of all problems, to the solution of which every one should aspire, because supreme power, supreme wisdom, supreme delight lie in the far-off solution of this mystery."
>
> [Douglas Fawcett, author of "Zermatt Dialogues" and "Oberland Dialogues"]

I can acquaint you with it and then leave you to your choice and its risk, because everything in the world is created by this power. He said:

> "I kill and I make alive;
> I wound and I heal;
> and there is none that can deliver out of my hand." [Deuteronomy 32:39]
>
> "I create the light and make the darkness;
> I create woe and I make weal." [Isaiah 45:7]
>
> "I, even I, am He, > and there is none that can deliver out of my hand."
> [Deuteronomy 32:39]

That's your own wonderful human imagination. Well, there are secrets to this power, and you and I might experiment. We try to discover the secret. As we discover the secret of imagining, we are discovering the secret of God. So, God and imagination -- the human imagination -- are synonymous terms. They are interchangeable.

So, when we read that "If we know that He hears us in whatever we ask, we know that we have obtained that which we requested of Him." [I John 5:15] If we know that He hears us in whatever we ask -- no restraint. Now, you may sit down and commune with what you think to be "another" then yourself; but because there are billions of us in the world, and there is but one God in this fabulous universe, you might wonder if He hears you. But you have no doubt in your mind if you identify God with your own wonderful human imagination that He hears you!

* Imagination — the Basis of All that Is (Title inside, Invited Man)

Can you believe that your own wonderful human imagination is God? So, when you sit down, as told us in the Fourth Psalm:

"Commune with your own hearts upon your beds, and be silent."
[Psalm 4:4]

He hears you if you commune with Self, because you believe that communion with Self was communion witn God. Can you, now, assume that you are the one that you would like to be? Can you assume that one that you love is as you would like her -- or would like him -- to be? Can you really believe that you are answered?

I do not expect tonight that after a certain conception the child will be born tomorrow.

"The vision has its own appointed hour, it ripens, it will flower;
if it be long, then wait,
for it is sure, and it will not be late."
[Habakkuk 2:3, Moffatt's translation]

A little child takes nine months, a lamb five months, a chicken 21 days, the elephant -- so they tell me -- a year or more; a horse, a year anyway. So every conception has its own appointed hour; it ripens, it will flower. If it seems to you long, then wait. It is sure; it will not be late relative to its own nature. So, can I now commune and expect that my communion with Self is communion with God? Can I dare to assume that I am exactly what I want to be? Can I dare to assume that I am where I want to be, even though at the moment my reason denies it, my senses deny it? Will it work? Well, it costs you nothing. Try it! It doesn't cost one penny to try it.

As you are told: "Come, buy wine, buy milk, without money, without price" [Isaiah 55:1], -- and take it. It doesn't cost you one penny to dare to assume that you are where you would like to be, though at the moment reason denies that you are.

Now, I am telling you what I know from experience. When I didn't have a nickel and desired a trip that would cost me well in excess of one thousand dollars, I dared to assume that I was where I would like to be; and I viewed the world from that assumption. Instead of thinking of it, I thought from it. Then I thought of where physically I was, and I saw that place in my imagination two thousand miles to the northwest of me. And I slept in that assumption. And then in a way that I did not consciously devise, -- I had no way of knowing how it would ever work; but in a way I did not know, it unfolded; and that assumption hardened into fact.

On the strength of that, I tried it again and again; and when it worked, I began to teach it. I began to tell others that their imagination is the cause of the phenomena of life. This was long before I realized the Promise as we call it in Scripture. This was only the Law.

So, we are told:

"Blessed is the man who . . . . . .
delights in the Law of the Lord. . . . .
In all that he does he prospers." [Psalm 1:1-3]

He didn't say if it was good for you; he left that entirely up to you to make the decision. You could choose something that may be horrible in time. You choose it without contemplating consequences. But he tells you your imaginal act is a fact.

Now, as He awakens within you, He reinterprets the Law. He can't change the Law. He interprets the Law. Instead of abiding by the external traditions of our fathers, He tells us what the Law really is when He awakes within us.

"You have heard it said of old, 'You shall not commit adultery'; but I say to you, Any one who looks lustfully upon a woman has already committed the act in his heart with her." [Matthew 5:27,28]

He tells us that the restraint of that impulse is not enough. The act was committed at the moment of the imaginal act. I may contemplate the consequences and be afraid -- my reputation would be at stake if they catch me. But at that very moment of the imaginal act, that was the fact. That's how he interprets the Law.

Well now, no one can stop you from imagining. No one can stop you from imagining that you are secure; but you may say I have no one in this world to whom I could turn who would leave me a penny, and I have no money. I am beyond the age where they would employ me. And you could give yourself a thousand reasons why it could not be. He is not asking for any reasons. Can you imagine? Well, who can stop you from imagining? That's all that concerns the Awakened Man within you.

Can I dare imagine that I am what I want to be? Well, I can. I've done it unnumbered times. I've done it successfully for many that I love dearly and many that I do not know. I have failed often, too; but the failure is in me, it is not in the Law.

Imagination plus faith is the stuff out of which we make the world. We are told all things were made in this manner. "He calls a thing that is not seen as though it were seen, and the unseen becomes seen." [Romans 4:17] And when I come to Him, I must believe that He exists, and that He rewards those who believe in Him. I must have faith in the imaginal act.

If tonight I can stand here and simply quietly imagine a state and really believe that I am in communion with God when I did that and that my imaginal act is God's act, -- it's not something other than God, -- and go unconcerned as to the result, the results will follow me. For that imaginal act was causal at the moment that I did it. The effect when it appears, -- I may try to trace the effect to some physical cause and give all credit to a physical cause. I tell you: Every physical effect has an imaginal cause, and not a physical cause. A physical cause only seems; it is a delusion of our fading memory.* We do not remember when we imagined it.

---

* A paraphrase from "Milton" by Wm. Blake:

> "Every natural effect has a spiritual Cause, and not
> A natural, for a natural cause only seems; it is a Delusion
> . . . . . of the perishing vegetable memory."

In this audience tonight, -- and he may not even remember when he did it, -- is my dentist. I went to him in great need of a lot of work, but I have had dentistry all over this country and in London and Barbados, but it all was horrible. I was always on the move. I was with the theater. Getting in town for a week, what could they do when I needed such work? They patched me up. So, I met him. He gave me a complete job because I was here -- living here then.

When one day a tooth gave way which was an anchor tooth, he said to me quite innocently, whether he remembers it or not, "When I saw your mouth and did this, I said to myself, 'This tooth will last thirteen years.'"

It was thirteen years. Had he only said 25, but he didn't think I would live that long! So, thirteen years -- out came that anchor tooth, and therefore a complete restructure of my entire mouth. He set it in motion. Whether he remembers or not, he said, "This is going to last thirteen years." He didn't tell me; he didn't have to tell me. That was his imaginal act. I was only the victim of his creative power.

Now, I am telling you: Don't take anything lightly. You are creating morning, noon and night. Your imaginal acts are God's acts, because your imagination is God! And there is no other God.

"God [actually] became as we are," -- became man, -- "that man may become God." [Blake, from "There Is No Natural Religion"] And He has set up within Himself -- in man -- a series of events which He will now unfold within man, which the one in whom He unfolds will know He-Is-God. He calls it "giving glory unto man."

> "I will not give my glory to another," he said.
> "I have tried you in the furnace of affliction.
> For my own sake I do it, for my own sake, > for how should my name be profaned?
> My glory I will not give to another." [Isaiah 48:11]

God's glory is God, as told us in the 33d Chapter of the Book of Exodus. "I will make my glory to pass before you." [Exodus 33:19] And "I will cover you until I have passed by, . . . [Exodus 33:22] So, "my glory" is equated with the "I" of God, for His name is I AM. He cannot give His Glory, which is Himself, to another. So, in becoming man, He puts man in the furnaces. But then read the story carefully: "He took upon Himself all of my infirmities and bore my diseases." Who else suffers?

I will say, "But I suffer." Well, that's God. "But I am feeling it; He isn't." That is no "he"; His name is I AM. So, I feel the pain, I feel the infirmity. I feel the diseases. That's God! So, the fool says in his heart:

> "There is no God, nor Son of God
> That Thou, O Human Imagination, ... art all
> A delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou arisest upon
> My weary eyes, even in this dungeon, and this iron mill . . .
> Thou also sufferest with me, although I behold Thee not."
> [Wm. Blake from "Jerusalem"]

I do not behold imagination as I behold an object in space. I am the Reality that is named "Imagination"; but I cannot actually see it as an object in space. I see the results of my imagining, but not the Being imagining it, for God is invisible.

Then the Voice replied, "Fear not! I am with you always."

Can I ever get away from imagining? If I fall asleep now and I start dreaming, what is dreaming but imagining? When I awake, He is still with me, and I am still imagining. " . . . . . I am with you always."

" . . . . . I am with you always,
Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from death
Thy Brother who sleeps in Albion." [Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

This comes, now, to the Promise that He made to all of us. His Promise is to give Himself to us, as though there were no "others" in the world, -- just you, because in giving Himself to you, there is no "other." The whole vast world is "yourself pushed out." Everything in the world is "yourself pushed out," and you manipulate it by your imaginal acts -- everything in the world.

Now, the first act begins with the Reaurrection. It's not outside of you, in spite of what you've been taught. The day will come, you will rise within yourself. And that's the only God that was ever resurrected, Who will ever be resurrected. It's not another; it's you. And when you rise, there is no one on the outside. It's all you. And you are rising in the only tomb in the world where God was ever buried, and that's your own skull. God is buried in the human skull, and that's where He rises. And when He rises, as foretold by His own words in Scripture, he is "born." Resurrection begins the act. That same night, you come out of the tomb, which is your skull, and you are "born from above," -- not from the womb of woman where the "garment" was born; you are "born from above," -- born of God. "Born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." [John 1:13] In other words, you are Self-begotten!

God begets Himself. As told us in the Epistle to the Hebrews: He is"bringing many sons to glory" [Hebrews 2:10], but the sons are numbered. Every one born of woman is that "son of God," as told us in the 32d Chapter of Deuteronomy: "He has set bounds to the peoples of earth according to the number of the sons of God." [Deuteronomy 32:8]

But you will say, "But look, there are three billions in the world." So, what's that? "I will make them more numberous than the stars, more numerous than the sands of the beach" [Hebrews 11:12]. Well, count them. You can't count the stars. We estimate them to be trillions and trillions. These are the "sons of God," -- bringing each that He chooses. He didn't bring all together. He brought a certain number, and that certain number he calls the "second son." The "second son" is represented by this fabulous number. The first son is still waiting to come out. He complains because the second son went berserk -- went amuck and used his power unwifely. Then he came to his senses and returned to his Father, and the Father embraced him and gave him the authority of Himself. He gave him the ring, the robe, the fatted calf -- everything for the one who went out and came back to the Father. For His gift is the gift of Himself to you who came out. "I chose you in me before the foundation of the world." [See Ephesians 1:4] That's what we are told.

Let the first son complain. He will complain and complain: "I served you and you gave me nothing," -- not even a kid. He said, "My son, all that I have is yours." But the most fabulous gift in the world, or possession in the world, is without meaning unless there is a knowledge of it and a readiness to use it.

Going out as we did, we become aware of our possession; then we can use it. Unless we went out into the world and misused it as we have done, we could not become aware of this power that is our own creative power -- our imagination.

I saw it so clearly one night. Here I am in this fabulous field of sunflowers -- huge, lovely sunflowers. Each sunflower was a face -- the human face, but they were all anchored in the earth. And I walked up and down among the sunflowers. They moved like an orchestra moves; they all moved in unison. If one smiled, they all smiled. If one didn't smile, no one smiled. They simply followed like an orchestra. If one bent over, they all bent over. And every one did what the whole did. They automatically did it. And I felt, though I was alone -- I could walk up and down; they were anchored, -- they couldn't do it. I felt that I was freer, limited as I was, than all of them put together, beautiful as they were -- these sunflowers were human faces, but they had not gone out.

I was once a part of that infinite garden -- not aware of what I possessed; and my Father chose me in Him "before the foundation of the world," and I went out, to go through "hell" in this world, that I may become aware that "All Thine are mine." To become aware that all that is God's belonged to me, I had to go through the furnaces of affliction. And having gone through the furnaces, then He awakes within me; and He tells me how I will know He has awakened in me.

He set up in the beginning the result of the experiences of humanity, and that result is a "son." And the son is called "David." And when I find him, I will know he is my son, and I will know the 89th Psalm: "I have found David. He has cried unto me, Thou art my Father, my God, and the Rock of my Salvation." Well, I've found him, and he cried these words to me, and I knew exactly who he was; and I knew then Who-I-Am. Until then I did not know I was one with God! He is God's Son -- God's only Son. Now he's my son!

I tell you, you are going to find him, and he will be your son; and because he is my son, you and I are one. How can he be your son, and I know he's my son, and you and I not be one father? So, we are told, "There is only one body, one spirit, one lord, one God and Father of all." So, in the end, there will not be Greek and Jew, bond and free, male and female; but only -- all one in God. And you will be that God! So, this is the Promise that He made.

Now when I read the Bible, I take all the related parts of the Promise and put them all together, for all these things put together will find their fulfillment in you. All His Promises find their "Yes" in Him, as you read it in Second Corinthians: "All the promises of God find their Yes" -- their fulfillment -- "in Him" [II Corinthians 1:20, R.S.V.]. So there are 39 books; together they form one Book; but the context, which means the meaning of it, you will find scattered over the 39. He pulls from this, from that, from the other, written over the centuries, and pulls it into one pattern, for Christ is the Pattern Man. That pattern is buried in man. It's the only Christ in the world. When the pattern unfolds in man, it unfolds in man as the man in whom it unfolds.And then he knows Who-He-Is. And he has no doubt in his mind as to who he is. He is the Lord spoken of in Scripture. And that Lord is God the Father. And the whole thing unfolds within him. But he does not abolish the law that he gave; he explains the law as a psychological law and not a physical law.

But if I long after some one, at that very moment the act was committed. I state it boldly. I state it boldly, as my dentist stated it boldly. It was committed. So, I went blindly on enjoying everything that he did. It was perfect. And suddenly comes a little bleeding thing which no one could stop. Out comes the tooth. He set it in motion the day he satd to himself, -- not to me: "It will last thirteen years." I checked it; it was thirteen years.

So Blake said in his wonderful "Jerusalem": "Oh, what have I said? What have I done, Oh, all-powerful human words?" For the word of man is the word of God! "And the word shall not return unto me void, but it must accomplish that which I purpose and prosper in the thing for which I sent it." [Isaiah 55:11]

But man forgets his word. Then it comes up and he looks for physical causes for it. Now he'll start searching. Do you know what? Well, "Your system is run down." You have fever? Did you have so-and-so? And you ask a thousand questions of the one: Did you have so-and-so? You said, No, no, no. No one thinks of that moment when the word went out. Well, the word goes forward, and it cannot return unto us void. It must accomplish that which we purposed and prosper in the thing for which I sent it.

I can see my father now back in 1919. There were ten of us: nine boys and a girl. He was a ship chandler. He had a grocery story, a liquor store and a meat store -- a regular little grocery, and he supplied ships; and the ships were bringing the boys back from the first World War, and they would tell him all kinds of stories.

At dinner he would say to my mother, "We will have another war in twenty years. In twenty years there will be another war. It is Germany; but this time, it's going to be Germany and Japan." He didn't mention Italy, but it will be Germany and Japan. "We will then have America as our ally. France will be our ally."

Mother would say, "Joseph, we have nine sons. In twenty years they all will be eligible to go to war." We were all kids in 1919. I was 14 years old.

In 1939, on the 1st day of September war broke -- exactly twenty years. What did my father know of any prophecy concerning this? He was only repeating what he had heard from the captains and the stewards and the chief officers as he did business with them. But they were his words! And he said it with conviction, because he believed these men knew what they were talking about.

And our headlines -- day after day they are setting the picture in motion for tomorrow's confusion. The men are paid enormous salaries to write "scare" headlines. All right, so he writes a scare headline, thinking: It only sells the papers; it isn't going to hurt any one. But we are going to fulfill them. We fulfill all of our words because God and man are one.

> "Man is all imagination; and God is man, > and exists in us, and we in Him."
> [Blake, from "Annotations to > Berkeley"]

> "The eternal body of man is the imagination, > and that is God Himself." [Blake, from "The Laocoon"]

And God's Word is man's word, and it cannot return unto him void. It just can't if he speaks it with conviction. So, imagination plus faith -- these are the very stuff out of which we fashion our world.

So, can I tonight be alone and commune with my Self and be confident that He heard me? I know that I heard myself. Well, that Self is God!

"If we know that He hears us in whatever we ask, we know we have obtained," --- not are going to, -- "we have obtained that which we request of Him." Read it in John's Epistle -- the First Epistle, the 5th Chapter, the 15th verse. We have obtained it! Well, it must take a little interval. It may come tonight, depending on what seed you planted. One seed will grow overnight; other seeds will take a little longer. But each has "its own appointed hour."

There is not a thing wrong in your noble dreams in this world. You want to be wealthy? What is wrong with it? You want to be anything, -- what's wrong with it? Everything is possible.

A friend of mine called me last week. He is now appointed the head purchasing agent for the City of Culver. By law he is not qualified; he does not have the educational background. The law demands you must have a college degree. He doesn't have anything outside of high school. They rearranged it to appoint him the head purchasing agent of Culver City. Why? He came here, he and his brother -- I buried the brother a fe years ago; he got this job, not dreaming for one moment he could ever transcend it. I said, "Don't for one moment entertain that thought. The job is yours if you want it. Don't push the other one out. He can go higher. You want to be the Purchasing Agent of the whole City of Culver? You are the Purchasing Agent. Sleep in it just as though it were true, and you hurt no one."

Last week they rearranged the law and he was appointed Purchasing Agent, to take effect in July. Now everything was rearranged. Everything will be rearranged for you.

A friend of mine told me here that you aren't allowed to speak at any state university unless you have a college degree. Well, he confessed that he did not have one, but he was invited by a Professor at U.C.L.A. to take his class -- I think there were three or four classes -- in the use of imagination in advertising; so here he went in without the degree, and he was given all the freedom that the Professor enjoyed. He gave either three or four lectures, instead of the Professor who went off for those three or four lectures. So, they suspended the rules. They can suspend every rule.

They are not supposed to do this, not supposed to do that. Ignore it! Ignore everything. My friend used to say to me, "You can't smoke in here. Look: 'No smoking.'" And he was a very wonderful lad. He said, "They didn't say it positively." And so he would go right through the gate to the airplane, and I would say, "Mort, you cannot smoke in here. You are not supposed to smoke."

"It didn't say 'positively.'" And here's Mort going right through with his cigarette. No one stopped him. I'm not saying you should do it. He didn't do it to brag. He simply believed in himself. He wouldn't hurt any one.

Now, you don't have to hurt any one. I tell you, your own wonderful human imagination is immortal! That's the Man in you that cannot die. I meet them -- those who are called "dead," and I tell you, they aren't dead. Nothing dies. Everything is restored. Everything is restored. But the day will come, you will go beyond restoration, and you will resurrect. And who is resurrecting? God. And God-in-you awakens, and you are God, because God is the Father of David. That is the way you know you are God.

> "I will tell of the decree of the Lord.
> He has said unto me, Thou art my son, > today I have begotten thee." [Psalm 2:7]

These are the words of David, what is going to happen to you. Then you'll know you are God! You have no other way of knowing that you are God unless God's only son calls you "Father," for "No one knows who the Son is except the Father, and no one knows who the Father is, except the Son, and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal Him." [Luke 10:22]

So, "No one has seen God; but the only Son, who is in His bosom, has made Him known" [John 1:18]. He comes out of you, and calls you "Father"! And then you know Who-You-Are.

And I am telling you, every one of you -- because you and I "were chosen in Him before the foundation of the world" [Ephesians 1:4] -- chosen for the purpose of receiving the gift of God which is His Glory, for He gives me Himself. And in giving me Himself, if He is a father, He gives me His Son. You can't give me yourself in part; give it to me in totality. So, if you are a father, then where is your son? Your son must be my son; and He gives me His Son.

So, "He so loved us He gave His only-begotten Son" [John 3:16]. To whom? To you. To me. To every child born of woman. So, every one of us will become fully aware that we are God. And yet, I will know you as Jim; I will know you as Jan, but I will also know that you are God. I will know you as Sol, and know you are God. I will know you as Bill, and know you are God. I will know every one of you, and the unnumbered billions that are not known to me here, in that day I'll know them all, and still know them all as God, for there's nothing but God!

When the curtain comes down on the final act, we are all God! We are then the Glory of God. So, we will finish the work. He said, "I have finished the work Thou gavest me to do. Now, glorify Thou me with Thine own Self, with the glory that I had with Thee before that the world was." [John 17:4,5] It's returning now. Memory returns, and every man becomes God.

But now, do not fail to apply the Law. "Blessed is the man who . . . delights in the Law of the Lord. . . . . In all that he does he prospers." [Psalm 1:1,2,3] You name it, and you can be it. You just name it; and if you dare to assume that you are it and view the world from that assumption instead of thinking of it, you will crystallize it. You will actually manifest it in this world.

That definition of imagination -- I'll go along with it to a certain point -- up to a point that things present are sense perceived and called "real"; things absent are called "imagination." But man being all imagination, man must be wherever he is in imagination. So, I need not be anchored to where my senses dictate. I can stand here and assume that I am elsewhere; and then if I assume that I am elsewhere, let me anchor myself there and view the world from it. If I view the world from it, I should see this place as I would see it if I were physically there. I can't see it surrounding me or under me, for then I did not move in imagination. Therefore, if I move in imagination, then I must think of where I was physically and see it elsewhere. I can't see it where I am in imagination and be moved, for all motion -- well, I can tell myself that I have moved by a frame of reference. If I have moved relative to this room, let me look and see, Where am I now? I must have moved, for motion can be detected only by a change of position relative to another object. Where is the object?

I assume that I am now -- and I name it. If I am elsewhere, let me think of this room. Well, I can't see it as I now see it. If I see it as I now see it, then I didn't move. I can only move if I see it differently.

Well now, if I move and now I am standing in my home, sitting in my chair in the living room, let me think of this club. I must see it away down on Catalina, and feel myself at home on Carol Street, and then think of the club, and it can't be here. It must be way down on Catalina. Then I've moved. For man being all imagination, he must be wherever he is in imagination. If I practice this, it becomes easier and easier.

I just read a story of a very dear friend of mine who used to come to me -- not to my meetings, but I would say once a month she came home for a personal appointment in New York City. She was killed last week in a car driven by her husband. And I can now see this perfectly lovely, gracious lady. She had a home in Oyster Bay, Long Island; and she had her apartment in New York City. Her name is possibly one of the most prominent names in America. The name is Roosevelt. She was of the Teddy Roosevelt branch. Her name was Grace. Her husband was Archibald.

35/S1 Teddy was Governor of New York; he was Vice President of our Country; he was President of our Country -- a very powerful, wonderful leader. He did not leave, as so many presidents leave, a fortune. He didn't go in there to make a fortune. He went in there to lead the country. And he said, "I don't oonsider public opinion. I perform what I think is best for our country. I feed them what they ought to know. I feed them what I think is best for our country."

But he didn't go in there to make a personal fortune, and he came out without a personal fortune. So she -- in spite of her name -- did not have a personal fortune. She had a home in Oyster Bay, Long Island, and a lovely apartment -- beautifully furnished from things that her father-in-law had given her. If she did not rent her New York apartment for the summer, she could not open her home in Long Island. She could not afford it. Being a lovely home in a very wonderful, fashionable area of New York City, she always got a wonderful price paid in advance for the three or four months. Then came the end of a season where they aren't looking for any homes, and she came to see me.

She said, "Neville, I am desperate. Unless I rent the place in New York City, we can't open our home in Long Island."

I said, "All right. It's rented, and you are living in Long Island."

"Oh but," she said, "Neville, I can't do that."

I said, "Tonight you sleep in your home in Long Island."

"But," she said, "I can't do that. How could I go and sleep there?"

I said, "You don't do it physically. Tonight you sleep physically in New York City in your apartment; but in your imagination, which is the only reality, you sleep in your home in Long Island, and then you think of your place in New York. The reason why you see it across the East River is because you are physically sleeping in Long Island. And the reason you are sleeping there is because you rented it. Put them all together; that's why you are there."

She said to me, "If it rents, I'll call you."

I said, "There's no 'if' about it. The only 'if' is if you do it. Then you'll call me."

I took her to the elevator. She went downstairs, went back to her place. The next day at 9:00 in the morning Mrs. Roosevelt is on the 'phone. She said, "Neville, this is Grace Roosevelt."

I said, "How are you, Mrs. Roosevelt?"

She said, "I am calling you from Long Island where I slept last night physically. When I went home, no one came at all over the period that you rent places. But as I got home, soon after I got home, an agent called and asked if I could show the apartment. A single man came in. He liked the place. Money meant nothing to him. He wanted immediate possession, 'but I mean immediate. I mean now!'"

"Well," she said, "I can't get out now. I have to call my husband at the office."

"I don't care what you do. I want immediate possession. And here is my check in advance. You can call the bank to see if the check is good."

She got out that day! She called her husband to meet her, and off they went to their home in Long Island.

Well, she was just killed last week, at the age of 73, I think it was. He was driving; he wasn't injured, and the friend in the car was injured, but Grace was killed instantly. But at least, she learned the Law. She didn't come to the meetings very often because she said in her capacity, she was a pillar of the Episcopal Church in New York City -- also in Long Island; it would not be advisable to be seen in my meeting place. That would be "slumming." But she always came to my home with any problem.

One she had with her son. He came back from Egypt where he was in the State Department, and he came with a huge, big beard, and she said, "Neville, I am embarrassed." It was long before people wore beards; today it would be the thing to do, but he came back long before the young fellows wore beards. It was a huge, big beard. She said, "Neville, I am so embarrassed, I just don't want to walk down Fifth Avenue with him. I would make him walk ahead or walk behind me. I don't want to be seen with him. What must I do? because he gets annoyed and will do nothing that his father or I suggest."

I said, "How would you feel if you kissed him and he had no beard? You would kiss your son, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well then, put your hand on his face and he doesn't have any beard, and then kiss him and feel that smooth skin that is your son's face when he has no beard."

"All right, I will do that."

She didn't tell me. I opened the morning paper one Monday morning. There was a big fashionable social wedding, and here was Mrs. Roosevelt and her husband, and here is her son and here is the bride coming down the steps of the Episcopal Church, and he has no beard! So the next time she came to see me, I reminded her; I said, "You know, you came here the last time about the beard, and the beard is off."

She said, "Do you know why?"

I said, "Yes, I know why, but you tell me why."

"Well, the girl that he married refused to go through with it unless he shaved." She saw the physical fact.

I said, "No, that wasn't it. You promised me that you would kiss him and feel his smooth skin; and if you would feel the smooth skin, it would come off."

She said, "I did do it, but the girl demanded it."

So, she goes back to a physical causation, and it wasn't so at all. There is no natural effect with a natural cause. Every natural effect has an imaginal cause, and the natural only seems. So she still is going to insist that the girl wanted the beard off, and that's why he took it off. Well now, she knows better. She's now in a world just like this. At least she learned the lesson of the Law. She didn't learn the Promise, because when I spoke to her, I did not have the Promise. I had not realized it.

You know the Promise because it only happened to me twelve years ago this coming month. So, those who knew me before have not heard from me the Promise. Those who have known me since, they know the Promise.

So, I ask you tonight to please take it seriously. Watch your every imaginal act. And I will say to every one, Don't take anything lightly. Don't voice an opinion that may be embarrassing or hurtful to yourself or to another, even though reason dictates it. Because reason could dictate that this is the fact, for "I've seen so many similar cases that this is going to be so-and-so." Your words are the words of God.

"Oh, what have I said? What have I done, Ch, all-powerful human words?" [Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

---oOo---

Neville Goddard 1956

SEEDTIME AND HARVEST

As you have been told, this morning's subject is Seedtime and Harvest.

Although it bears the same title as my latest book, it is not to be found in that book, for that book is an attempt to interpret some of the more difficult passages of the Bible. I have given you in the nine chapters a mystical view, and also a certain approach how you yourself may approach the interpretation of the Bible, for, as you know, it is not a book of history. And so, when I became aware of deeper meanings in the passages than those normally assigned to them, I began to see them or to apprehend them mystically, and so I have given you a mystical interpretation of many of the darker passages.

For instance, when Solomon made himself a chariot of the wood of Lebanon, he made himself - no one made it for him. That's what you must do - that's what I must do - that's what everyone must do - and in that chapter, I showed you the wood is not wood as you know wood. It means the wood of Lebanon is the incorruptible mind. But you make it for yourself, and we showed you the sides, what they were made of and what the meanings really are.

Then we took that very strange passage, the instruction to the Disciples to take off their shoes or provide no shoes when they travel, and we showed you the word "shoe" is not just the thing I wear on my foot; it is the symbol of the spirit of 'let me do it for you'. For the shoe takes upon itself not only the dirt and the muck that would normally fall upon the wearer's foot, but it protects the wearer from any contact with the outer world, and so anyone who offers to do for us what we should do, and could do far better ourselves, is offering himself as our shoe, and if I would awaken spiritually I must do it for myself.

I must take my own mind and control it - take my wonderful imagination and actually control it and set it to noble purposes and not have some intermediary come between myself and God. For the God of this world is an internal God. He is that inevitable force that expresses in outward facts the latent tendencies of the soul, and so, if I would discover that God I cannot have you do my work for me. I cannot have you eat my spiritual food and expect to grow spiritually. So that is really the attempt of the nine chapters in the book "Seedtime and Harvest".

But this morning's subject - I want to approach it differently. This statement is taken from the Book of Genesis, the 8th chapter of Genesis - it is a promise made to man that "while the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, hot and cold, summer and winter, day and night shall not cease." We are told that man was placed in a garden - the garden was completed - every tree was bearing fruit - everything in the world was finished - and he was placed in the garden to dress it and to keep it. He doesn't plant it, he doesn't do a thing but dress it and keep it. He is not called upon to make trees or to grow new trees - everything is finished!

As we are told in John - "I have sent you to reap that whereon you bestowed no labor"- for Creation is finished. Every conceivable human drama, every little plot, every little plan in the drama of life is already worked out, as mere possibilities while we are not in them, but they are overpoweringly real when we are in them. So man can get in touch with that particular state of his choice, for my imagination can put me in touch inwardly with the state desired so I and in it. If I am in it I will realize it in my world. The states in which we find ourselves are the seed time. The harvest is simply the encountering of events and circumstances of life.

But man's memory is so short he forgets the seedtime, but all ends run true to origins, so if the origin, say is misfortune the end will be misfortune. But when you reap misfortune, you wonder "Why should it happen to me? When have I set a thing like this in motion? Haven't I given to the poor? Haven't I attended service? Haven't I prayed daily, and why should these things happen?" But you see my God never forgets because He always gives the end in harmony with the origin, and you and I are selectors: we don't make; we are not creators; - creation is finished, the whole vast world of creation, as told us in Ecclesiastes "I am the beginning and the end. There is nothing to come that has not been and is." So look upon creation as finished - and you and I are only selectors of that which is. By selectors I mean that you and I have the privilege (we may not exercise it) but it is our privilege to select that aspect of reality to which we will respond, and in responding to it, we bring it into existence for ourselves. Not knowing that we are so privileged, we simply go through the world reflecting the circumstances of life, not realizing we have the power to create or to out-picture the circumstance of life.

So now let us now analyze what I personally mean by seedtime. If everything is finished and completed, then why the promise there shall be seedtime and harvest as long as the earth remains ? Now seedtime, to those who are here this morning, as we should really know, we are not taking it literally, our seedtime is that moment in time when you and I react to anything in this world. It may be to an object, it may be to an individual, it may be to a bit of news that we have overheard, but the moment of reaction, that emotional response, is our attitude. Our attitudes are the seedtimes of life, and although we may not remember the seedtime or the moment of response, nature never forgets, and when it suddenly appears in our world, that suddenness is only the emergence of a hidden continuity. It was continuous from the moment of reaction until it appeared in the world.

Its appearance in the world is harvest so you and I may harvest anything we desire but we must first have a seedtime. It must be preceded by a moment of response or an attitude. How often you say, "I approached it in the wrong attitude" or "He is in the wrong attitude" or "You must change your attitude if you would get on in this life". I have said it - you have said it - maybe we have said it to each other - but we know the importance of right attitude. We know this much: that I can change my attitude if circumstances change - that's automatic. We know that if something happens suddenly in my world of which up to that moment I was not aware, I, becoming aware of a change of circumstance would automatically produce in myself a change of attitude. We all do that, morning, noon and night, but that's not important, that is a reflect of life. Ninety-nine percent of the world reflect life.

Now, can I consciously, can I voluntarily, can I deliberately produce in myself a change of attitude, one of my own discretion, one that I myself single out, and not one that is determined by or in any way is dependent on a stimulus of a change in the object itself. Must you change before I will change my attitude towards you? We know that if you do change I will change my attitude towards you, but must I go through life simply reflecting these changes in the objects, and can I not deliberately determine the change prior to the change in the object?

For if I can, I am moving towards complete control of my fate and becoming the master of my fate if I can assume an active, positive attitude and not depend upon changes in the object for changes in myself. If I can do it, I really am, if not a complete master, I am becoming more in control of the circumstances of life, but ninety-nine percent of the world waits for things to happen on the outside and then they reflect; that's no accomplishment at all. If we would awaken and become real selectors of the beauty of this garden that God gave us so that we can single out that particular aspect to which we will respond, then we will do it by deliberately changing our attitude towards life itself.

There is a little fable given us to show us how it is done. If you will study the fable carefully, you will see the importance of imagination. The fable is the fable of the fox and the grapes. You all know it. When he failed to obtain the grapes then he persuaded himself that the grapes were sour, and by imagining the grapes to be sour he evoked in himself a change of attitude. He no longer felt about the grapes as he formerly felt. Now that's a little fable on a negative tone or a tragic tone. You and I take the same story but now we put it on a positive tone. We contemplate our ambitious dream, our noble concept of life. It may seem we haven't the talents to realize it - instead of saying what the fox did, that the thing is beyond us and therefore it is sour anyway, we can take the same technique and wonder what it would be like had we realized it. What would the feeling be like were we - (and we name it) - if I can contemplate what the feeling would be like were I the man that I want to be, were you the person that you want to be, and rejoice in that state as though it were true, I am producing in myself that emotional response necessary for seedtime.

I may not see an immediate harvest, maybe the thing that I am now giving expression to in the form of seedtime is an oak, it is not a little mushroom that would grow overnight. Maybe my dream would take a little longer interval of time between the actual planting and the reaping, but if I know that all these things are consistent, - "See yonder fields! The sesamum was sesamum, the corn was corn. The Silence and the Darkness knew! So is a man's fate born" - so, if that moment of response is the actual planting of the seed, and if it was corn, it must be corn when it appears in harvest time, then I can select the nature of the things I want to encounter in my world. I can take not just Neville as a man, I can take the request first of my circle, my intimate circle, as a family man - my wife's desires for her child, for her husband, for herself - the child's desire for itself - and move beyond my little circle as a family man into the circle of friendships, move beyond that into my acquaintances, move beyond that into total strangers, impersonal states, but if I know the law holds good, no matter when I operate it, if I do it unconsciously or consciously, you get results regardless, and the results are in harmony with the planting, with the actual seedtime.

Now what is now our seedtime today. There are maybe two thousand odd here, we have two thousand odd different requests, multiplied by a large number because we have requests for others but you can take, today, as you sit here and you can actually contemplate what it would be like - suppose it were true. Suppose I could turn now to a friend and rejoice with him because of his good fortune and actually carry on a mental conversation with him from the premise that he or she has already realized the dream. Now as I do it in my imagination I am setting up within myself a certain changed attitude in regard to that individual. I am producing within myself a certain positive, deliberate, emotional response, and that very moment that I do it, is seedtime. I will encounter that individual tomorrow or next week or next month and he will bear witness of that thing I plant now.

He may be totally unaware that I planted it in this garden. I am not seeking his praise, I am not seeking credit - I am seeking results. If I see the man become the embodiment of the success I know that he desires and I desire for him, that's praise enough, that's payment enough. What more payment would anyone desire other than the results, for everything is a gift. Why should I be given more! My Father gave me the garden - the whole thing is in complete and full bloom and gave me choice - the greatest gift of all, complete freedom of choice of the nature of the fruit I will reap in my world; but I cannot just barge into the garden and start picking fruit - there must be a seedtime, but I must always bear in mind I will reap that whereon I bestowed no labor. I don't labor to make it so, I simply plant it, for in that moment of response is contained all the plans, all the energy necessary to unfold that plan into a perfect wonderful objective fact which I will then harvest by becoming aware of it as an external reality, but I don't labor to make it so; I simply must know it is so.

So that is our privilege, that is our choice. If you believe it, aren't you amazed at the kind of things that you planted, at the kind of seedtime that in our ignorance, in our sleep, we allowed to actually scatter in our world? You see some will say, "But why does God allow it?" You cannot conceive of an infinite God that is not infinite in every respect. If I was incapable, actually incapable of assuming, say, an unlovely state, I could not be my Father's son because my Father is infinite, and if He were actually incapable of assuming any state then He would not be God. Everything is within me - but everything. You cannot conceive of something that I don't contain - the most horrible thing in the world were it not so I could not be infinite, and, therefore, not the son of my infinite Father. So God is infinite and gave us everything, but He gave us freedom of choice that we may become selective, discriminative and bring out everything that is beautiful out of that garden. If I took the piano, the eighty-eight notes of the piano, if I could extract from that piano keyboard every discord, I would not have a piano keyboard. If I could strike a discord and because it frightens me or it disturbs me, the thing grates upon my nerves; if I could now extract the notes that produce the discord and then keep on extracting the notes that produce the discord, I would remove the eighty-eight notes - there would be no notes left on which I could play tomorrow's harmony. But let me leave the notes and learn the art of playing the piano so I can from the same eighty-eight notes bring out all the harmonies of the world.

The same thing is true of man. Instead of looking at someone and accepting as final the evidence of the senses; there is someone who brought out into his own world, say disease: he is trying to analyze it from the outside - when did I contract the bug, when did I come in close contact with someone who had the bug and they are taking me into the laboratory with my blood and try to find it there. You will never find it there, in spite of all the wisdom of man. You will find it only in the consciousness of the individual, who, at a moment now long forgotten, planted the thing he is now harvesting - and you are not going to find it in any external analysis at all because things seen were never made of things that do appear. You are warned time and time again in all the books of the Bible, but especially in that 11th chapter of the Book of Hebrews, that "things seen were not made of things that do appear" but no man believes it.

He insists on finding it in things seen, so he extracts my blood, he extracts a little piece of my skin, and he starts to make an analysis of that, and he will tell me yes, he has found it. It's in my blood. I am not denying he has found it in my blood, but why is it in my blood ? It is in my blood or in my body, or in my world because at some point in time, I, exercising the right as a free child of God, singled out some unlovely state relative to another. It need not be to myself; it could be to another, wherein I rejoiced in the hurt of another; where my emotional response to the news I heard was "good" so, I set it in motion, but when it happened in my world, I did not think it was so good but it was my harvest - and all these things are the harvest of things you and I have planted; for all things run true to form. Don't be surprised at the suddenness in our world - someone is ill - it is only sudden because we have forgotten, and man's memory is very, very short.

You know that lovely little poem of George Meredith:

Forgetful is green earth;
The Gods alone Remember everlastingly; they strike Remorselessly, and ever like for like.
By their, great memories The Gods are known.

If man could only remember these moments of seedtime, he would never be surprised when the harvest appears in his world. But because he has no memory as to that moment in time when he dropped that seed, which is simply his emotional response to something he contemplated, something he overheard, something he observed, at that moment the thing was done; he didn't have to labor to bring it to harvest - he simply encountered it as something already full grown, so he reaps now that on which he bestowed no labor, outside of choice. He selected it by his attitude, by his reaction.

Now, am I responsible for others in my world? I certainly am! When I take my little mind, my little imagination and think because it's mine - my Father gave it to me, that I can simply misuse it, it isn't going to hurt another. I tell you you do have to use more control for the simple reason I am rooted in you and you are rooted in everyone and all of us are rooted in God. There is no separate individual detached being in my Father's Kingdom. We are one. I am completely responsible for the use or misuse of my imagination.

Do you recall seeing on TV, a dramatized version of the sinking of the Titanic? Do you recall it? Have you read the book. "A Night to Remember"? Well the book itself is by Walter Lord: but 14 years before the actual harvest or that frightful event of the sinking of the Titanic a man in England wrote a book. He conceived this fabulous Atlantic liner and there he built her just like the Titanic, (only the Titanic was not built for 14 years) but he, in his imagination, conceived the liner of 800-ft. She was triple screw, she carried 3000 passengers, she carried few lifeboats because she was unsinkable; she could make 24 knots; and then one night he filled her to the brim with rich and complacent people, and on a cold winter night he sunk her on an iceberg in the Atlantic. 14 years later the White Star Line builds a ship. She is 800 ft., she is a triple screw, she can make 24 knots, she can carry 3000 passengers, she has not enough lifeboats for passengers but she, too, is labeled unsinkable. She is filled to capacity with the rich, if not complacent, but the rich, because her passenger list was worth in that day, when the dollar was one hundred cents, two hundred and fifty million dollars was the worth of the passenger list. Today it would be a billion dollars. All the wealth of Europe and the wealth of this country was sailing on that maiden voyage out of Southampton. Five nights at sea in this wonderful glorious ship and she went down on a cold April night on an iceberg.

Now that man wrote a book either to get something off his chest because he disliked the rich and the complacent, or he thought it might sell or he thought this is the means of bringing him a dollar as a writer. But, whatever was the motive behind his book which, by the way, he called "Futility" to show the utter futility of accumulated wealth, but the identical ship was built 14 years later and carried the same kind of a passenger list and went down in the same manner as the fictional ship. Is there any fiction? There is no fiction! Tomorrow's world is today's fiction. Today's world was yesteryear's fiction - the dreams of men of yesteryear. Wouldn't it be wonderful if I could talk with someone across space and just use a wire? And I couldn't see that one: it would be a mile away beyond the range of my voice - then maybe five miles and maybe a thousand miles - fantastic dreams - then they came true. When they came true, suppose I could do it without the means of a wire. And it came true; suppose now I could do it not just in an audio sense but in a video sense. Suppose I could be seen? And that came true, but when they were conceived, they were all fictional, all unreal.

There is nothing unreal, because God is infinite, and God has finished creation. You cannot conceive of something that your Father has not only done and conceived of it, it is worked out in detail, in all its ramifications. You and I are only becoming aware of increasing portions of that which already is. We are not making a thing - we are discovering God's wonderful world. But now in this church - at least here it should be done, for this is a church of the mind: this is Science of Mind, where there is a science to planting and you do it in a certain scientific manner. You just don't walk the street and reflect; read the papers and reflect - you go out a more positive person than people who gather in similar areas, for the simple reason they go just to hear a service and to be told how bad the world is.

You're not coming here to be told how bad the world is, for if you believe it is bad, there is something you must do about it because you have planted the world. You have your seedtime. So here people gather to be told how to operate this wonderful gift that the Father gave them. There is this wonderful mind and imagination. So you are told to go out and be choosey in your selection; single out that aspect of reality to which you want to respond, success, health, dignity, nobility, something wonderful that you contribute to the good of the world. As you walk by you are contributing to society, you contribute to the community in which you live, not necessarily by giving dollars but you contribute by your wonderful seedtime. If, in your community, you see the need of maybe a church, you see the need of some wonderful school, you don't wait until people get together, you actually, in your mind's eye, contemplate the joy that is yours because of the wonderful school here for the children, a wonderful church here to lift man spiritually, and you wonder what it would be like were it true; - you feel the thrill of witnessing it within. That is seedtime. Then in a way that you do not know and you need not labor to produce, you will encounter that school and that church and these lovely things in your community.

So you plant the seed and let others, who think that they are bringing it into being, let them think so. You go about this world planting the good - that is why you are here. We are gathered here on Sunday mornings to discover more and more about this wonderful gift that God gave us, that we may single out all the lovely things in the world and bring them to birth in our world;

This morning you take not only yourself - start with self - then turn to a friend in your mind's eye, and congratulate him on his good fortune - congratulate him on his expansion in his world, and actually feel the thrill of such contact - at that moment of response that was a changed attitude in regard to that friend- at that moment you planted. Now, in a way you do not know and you need not know, that seed is going to go through its normal natural hidden passage and appear as a reality in your world. Then you will know the power latent within you and you will stop reflecting life and you become one what I call a true creator in the sense that-I mean creator - that you are creating by selecting wise, wise, lovely things in this world and giving them expression in this world of ours.

So that's what I mean by seedtime and harvest; the importance of the right attitude: and you can do it, you need not wait for circumstances to change, you need not wait for the stimulus of a change in the object to produce in yourself the change of attitude. In your office, does the boss act in a rude way towards you? Well then what would it be like if he now saw in me the lady, the helpful person that I really am, or want to be. Suppose he saw in me someone he could praise for my work and raise me in the salary world, give me an increase in salary because of my added effort; suppose he could see that in me, well, contemplate the boss seeing that in you as though he saw it and rewarded you with an increase.

That moment is the moment of planting. It may not come tonight, it may not even come this week in the paycheck, but it will come. You simply keep on planting the lovely things; but if every day when you leave the office you say, "What a skinflint", and you go home and you discuss him with your mother or your husband or someone else, and they sympathize because they really believe you, for they are playing the same reflective, negative approach to life; but if as you ride home or walk home, you walk in the attitude that he had done it - he had increased your income, he had praised your work, and day after day, in spite of other things to the contrary, you persist in it, do you know he will do it? You will produce in him the change of heart because you first produced it in yourself, and he will see in you qualities that he cannot now see, and then your whole vast world begins to blossom - you do it in every sense of the word. You know someone who is lonely - one who really should be happily married in this world. What would it be like if you were told, not by the individual necessarily, but by a third party of the good news concerning John, concerning Mary or someone else. Someone desirous of a lovely home and a gracious home. What would it be like ? Don't be envious. Try to rejoice. Feel the joy that is theirs, and that moment is seedtime for them. They will harvest it - and that is our opportunity to go through the world planting and planting wisely.

Unfortunately, too many of us in church movements - I don't think you will find it in this church - but too many of us in church movements have a very serious attitude towards life. And, of course, the basic attitude is the attitude towards life, not necessarily the individual attitude towards an object or towards an individual, but the attitude itself that the individual adopts through life, towards life, and they have a very serious one. Well, Orage very wisely and very humorously said the serious attitude is this, - they really believe that God has an enormous struggle against helpless odds, and he said that produces in the individual the emotion of "helping poor Father". They go to help poor Father who has created the world and gave it to his children.

Now he brought up another interesting point of the scientific attitude towards life. Having discovered the little molecule or the little atom and the wonderful construction, that is, theoretically - having discovered this wonderful orderly construction of the bricks that make up the world, their attitude is one of orderly insignificance because they believe the world is gradually burning itself out, so no matter how orderly it is, if they really believe the sun will eventually go out and the earth will consume all its resources, what other attitude could they adopt than all dressed up with nowhere to go, because if eventually it is all going to be in nothing anyway, no matter how orderly it is today, it could only be orderly insignificance, but I tell you, as one who has seen beyond the veil, there is no such thing as coming to an end. Life is forever and forever and forever - and forever you are moving up this everlasting pilgrimage revealing the infinite glories of your Father.

So go out wisely today - go out determined to become more selective, more discreet in your choice of ideas you will entertain and single out the idea that would bless an individual and produce in yourself the emotional response that you have witnessed that state in his world, and know at that moment of response, you planted for that individual, and he is rooted in you, there is no such thing as he will not be found in your world for he is rooted in you. Everyone is rooted in you - therefore you will not lose them. It is planted relative to that being and that being is going to harvest it, and you will know the harvest when it appears in his world. You simply plant and let the harvest take care of itself.

Now my time is up.

NEVILLE GODDARD

Seedtime and Harvest

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

Contents

Chapter 1: The End of a Golden String 4

Chapter 2: The Four Mighty Ones 8

Chapter 3: The Gift of Faith 27

Chapter 4: The Scale of Being 40

Chapter 5: The Game of Life 54

Chapter 6: Times, Time, & A Half..... 66

Chapter 7: Be Ye Wise As Serpents 74

Chapter 1: The End of a Golden String

“I give you the end of a golden string; Only wind it into a ball, It will lead you in at Heaven's gate, Built in Jerusalem's wall.” William Blake.

In the following essays I have tried to indicate certain ways of approach to the understanding of the Bible and the realization of your dreams.

"That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." Hebrews 6:12.

Many who enjoy the old familiar verses of Scripture are discouraged when they themselves try to read the Bible as they would any other book because, quite excusably, they do not understand that the Bible is written in the language of symbolism. Not knowing that all of its characters are personifications of the laws and functions of mind; that the Bible is psychology rather than history, they puzzle their brains over it for awhile and then give up. It is all too mystifying. To understand the significance of its imagery, the reader of the Bible must be imaginatively awake.

According to the Scriptures, we sleep with Adam and wake with Christ. That is, we sleep collectively and wake individually.

"And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept." Genesis 2:21.

If Adam, or generic man, is in a deep sleep, then his experiences as recorded in the Scriptures must be a dream. Only he who is awake can tell his dream, and only he would understand the symbolism of dreams can interpret the dream.

"And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?" Luke 24:32.

The Bible is a revelation of the laws and functions of Mind expressed in the language of that twilight realm into which we go when we sleep. Because the symbolical language of this twilight realm is much the same for all men, the recent explorers of this realm - human imagination - call it the "collective unconscious."

The purpose of this book, however, is not to give you a complete definition of Biblical symbols or exhaustive interpretations of its stories. All I hope to have done is to have indicated the way in which you are most likely to succeed in realizing your desires. "What things soever ye desire" can be obtained only through the conscious, voluntary exercise of imagination in direct obedience to the laws of Mind. Somewhere within this realm of imagination there is a mood, a feeling of the wish fulfilled which, if appropriated, means success to you. This realm, this Eden - your imagination - is vaster than you know and repays exploration. "I Give you the end of a golden string;" You must wind it into a ball.

Chapter 2: The Four Mighty Ones

"And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads." Genesis 2:10.

"And every one had four faces." Ezekiel 10:14.

"I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." Daniel 3:25.

"Four Mighty Ones are in every man." Blake.

The "Four Mighty Ones" constitute the self hood of man, or God in man. There are "Four Mighty Ones" in every man, but these "Four Mighty Ones" are not four separate beings, separated one from the other as are the fingers of his hand. The "Four Mighty Ones" are four different aspects of his mind, and differ from one another in function and character without being four separate selves inhabiting one man's body.

The "Four Mighty Ones" may be equated with the four Hebrew characters: (characters here) which form the four lettered mystery name of the Creative Power from and combining within itself the past, present and future forms of the verb "to be." The Tetragrammaton is revered as the symbol of the Creative Power in man - I AM - the creative four functions in man reaching forth to realize in actual material phenomena qualities latent in Itself.

We can best understand the "Four Mighty Ones" by comparing them to the four most important characters in the production of a play.

"All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players; They have their exits and their entrances; And one man in his time plays many parts " As You Like It Act II, Scene VII.

The producer, the author, the director and the actor are the four most important characters in the production of a play. In the drama of life, the producer's function is to suggest the theme of a play. This he does in the form of a wish, such as, "I wish I were successful"; "I wish I could take a trip"; "I wish I were married:, and so on. But to appear on the world's stage, these general themes must somehow be specified and worked out in detail. It is not enough to say,

"I wish I were successful" that is too vague. Successful at what? However, the first "Mighty One" only suggests a theme.

The dramatization of the theme is left to the originality of the second "Might One", the author. In dramatizing the theme, the author writes only the last scene of the play - but this scene he writes in detail. The scene must dramatize the wish fulfilled. He mentally constructs as life-like a scene as possible of what he would experience had he realized his wish. When the scene is clearly visualized, the author's work is done.

The third "Mighty One" in the production of life's play is the director. The director's tasks are to see that the actor remains faithful to the script and to rehearse him over and over again until he is natural in the part. This function may be likened to a controlled and consciously directed attention - an attention focused exclusively on the action which implies that the wish is already realized.

"The form of the Fourth is like the Son of God" - human imagination, the actor. This fourth "Mighty One" performs within himself, in imagination, the pre-determined action which implies the fulfillment of the wish. This function does not visualize or observe the action. This function actually enacts the drama, and does it over and over again until it takes on the tones of reality. Without the dramatized vision of fulfilled desire, the theme remains a mere theme and sleeps forever in the vast chambers of unborn themes. Nor without the co-operant attention, obedient to the dramatized vision of fulfilled desire, will the vision perceived attain objective reality.

The "Four Mighty Ones" are the four quarters of the human soul. The first is Jehovah's King, who suggests the theme; the second is Jehovah's servant, who faithfully works out the theme in a dramatic vision; the third is Jehovah's man, who was attentive and obedient to the vision of fulfilled desire, who brings the wandering imagination back to the script "seventy times seven". The "Form of the Fourth" is Jehovah himself, who enacts the dramatized theme on the stage of the mind.

"Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: " Philippians 2:5,6.

The drama of life is a joint effort of the four quarters of the human soul.

"All that you behold, tho' it appears without, it is within, in your imagination, of which this world of mortality is but a shadow." Blake.

All that we behold is a visual construction contrived to express a theme - a theme which has been dramatized, rehearsed and performed elsewhere. What we are witnessing on the stage of the world is an optical construction devised to express the themes which have been dramatized, rehearsed and performed in the imagination of men.

The "Four Mighty Ones" constitute the Self hood of man, or God in man: and all that man beholds, tho' it appears without, are but shadows cast upon the screen of space - optical constructions contrived by Self hood to inform him in regard to the themes which he has conceived, dramatized, rehearsed and performed within himself.

"The creature was made subject unto vanity" that he may become conscious of Self hood and its functions, for with consciousness of Self hood and its functions, he can act to a purpose; he can have a consciously self-determined history. Without consciousness, he acts unconsciously, and cries to an objective God to save him from his own creation.

"O Lord, how long shall I cry, and Thou wilt not hear! Even cry out unto Thee of violence, and Thou wilt not save!"

Habakkuk 1:2.

When man discovers that life is a play which he, himself, is consciously or unconsciously writing, he will cease from the blind, self-torture of executing judgment upon others. Instead, he will rewrite the play to conform to his ideal, for he will realize that all changes in the play must come from the cooperation of the "Four Mighty Ones" within himself. They alone can alter the script and produce the change.

All the men and women in his world are merely players and are as helpless to change his play as are the players on the screen of the theatre to change the picture. The desired change must be conceived, dramatized, rehearsed and performed in the theatre of his mind. When the fourth function, the imagination, has completed its task of rehearsing the revised version of the play until it is natural, then the curtain will rise upon this so seemingly solid world and the "Mighty Four" will cast a shadow of the real play upon the screen of space. Men and women will automatically play their parts to bring about the fulfillment of the dramatized theme. The players, by reason of their various parts in the world's drama, become relevant to the individual's dramatized theme and, because relevant, are drawn into his drama. They will play their parts, faithfully believing all the while that it was they themselves who initiated the parts they play. This they do because:

"Thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, I in them, and thou in me."…John 17:21, 23.

I am involved in mankind. We are one. We are all playing the four parts of producer, author, director and actor in the drama of life. Some of us are doing it consciously, others unconsciously. It is necessary that we do it consciously. Only in this way can we be certain of a perfect ending to our play. Then we shall understand why we must become conscious of the four functions of the one God within ourselves that may have the companionship of God as His Sons.

"Man should not stay a man: His aim should higher be. For God will only gods Accept as company." Angelus Silesius.

In January of 1946, I took my wife and little daughter to Barbados in the British West Indies for a holiday. Not knowing there were any difficulties in getting a return passage, I had not booked ours before leaving New York. Upon our arrival in Barbados I discovered that there were only two ships serving the islands, one from Boston and one from New York. I was told there was no available space on either ship before September. As I had commitments in New York for the first week in May, I put my name on the long waiting list for the April sailing.

A few days later, the ship from New York was anchored in the harbor. I observed it very carefully, and decided that this was the ship we should take. I returned to my hotel and determined on an inner action that would be mine were we actually sailing on that ship. I settled down in an easy chair in my bedroom, to lose myself in this imaginative action.

In Barbados, we take a motor launch or row boat out into the deep harbor when we embark on a large steamer. I knew I must catch the feeling that we were sailing on that ship. I chose the inner action of stepping from the tender and climbing up the gangplank of the steamer. The first time I tried, my attention wandered after I had reached the top of the gangplank. I brought myself back down, and tried again and again. I do not recall how many times I carried out this action in my imagination until I reached the deck and looked back at the port with the feeling of sweet sadness at departing. I was happy to be returning to my home in New York, but nostalgic in saying goodbye to the lovely island and our family and friends. I do recall that in one of my many attempts at walking up the gangplank in the feeling that I was sailing, I fell asleep. After I awoke, I went about the usual social activities of the day and evening.

The following morning, I received a call from the steamship company requesting me to come down to their office and pick up our tickets for the April sailing. I was curious to know why Barbados had been chosen to receive the cancellation and why I, at the end of the long waiting list, was to have the reservation, but all that the agent could tell me was that a cable had been received that morning from New York, offering passage for three. I was not the first the agent had called, But for reasons she could not explain, those she had called said that now they found it inconvenient to sail in April.

We sailed on April 20th and arrived in New York on the morning of May the first.

In the production of my play - the sailing on a boat that would bring me to New York by the first of May - I played the four most important characters in my drama. As the producer, I decided to sail on a specific ship at a certain time. Playing the part of the author, I wrote the script - I visualized the inner action which conformed to the outer action I would take if my desire were realized. As the director, I rehearsed myself, the actor, in that imagined action of climbing the gangplank until that action felt completely natural.

This being done, events and people moved swiftly to conform, in the outer world, to the play I had constructed and enacted in my imagination.

"I saw the mystic vision flow And live in men and woods and streams. Until I could no longer know The stream of life from my own dreams." George William Russell (AE).

I told this story to an audience of mine in San Francisco, and a lady in the audience told me how she had unconsciously used the same technique, when she was a young girl.

The incident occurred on Christmas Eve. She was feeling very sad and tired and sorry for herself. Her father, whom she adored, had died suddenly. Not only did she feel this loss at the Christmas season, but necessity had forced her to give up her planned college years and go to work. This rainy Christmas Eve she was riding home on a San Diego street car. The car was filled with gay chatter of happy young people home for the holidays. To hide her tears from those round about her, she stood on the open part at the front of the car and turned her face into the skies to mingle her tears with the rain. With her eyes closed, and holding the rail of the car firmly, this is what she said to herself: "This is not the salt of the tears that I taste, but the salt of the sea in the wind. This is not San Diego, this is the South Pacific and I am sailing into the Bay of Samoa". And looking up, in her imagination, she constructed what she imagined to be the Southern Cross. She lost herself in this contemplation so that all faded round about her. Suddenly she was at the end of the line, and home.

Two weeks later, she received word from a lawyer in Chicago that he was holding three thousand dollars in American bonds for her. Several years before, an aunt of hers had gone to Europe, with instructions that these bonds be turned over to her niece if she did not return to the United States. The lawyer had just received word of the aunt's death, and was now carrying out her instructions.

A month later, this girl sailed for the islands in the South Pacific. It was night when she entered the Bay of Samoa. Looking down, she could see the white foam like a "bone in the lady's mouth" as the ship ploughed through the waves, and brought the salt of the sea in the wind. An officer on duty said to her: "There is the Southern Cross", and looking up, she saw the Southern Cross as she had imagined it.

In the intervening years, she had many opportunities to use her imagination constructively, but as she had done this unconsciously, she did not realize there was a Law behind it all. Now that she understands, she, too, is consciously playing her four major roles in the daily drama of her life, producing plays for the good of others as well as herself.

"Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat; now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout."…John 19:23.

Chapter 3: The Gift of Faith

"And the Lord had respect unto Abel and in his offerings; But unto Cain and to his offering he had no respect."…Genesis 4:4, 5.

If we search the Scriptures, we will become aware of a far deeper meaning in the above quotation than that which a literal reading would give us. The Lord is non-other than your own consciousness "say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you Exodus 3:14." "I AM" is the self-definition of the Lord.

Cain and Abel, as the grandchildren of the Lord, can be only personifications of two distinct functions of your own consciousness. The author is really concerned to show the "Two Contrary States of the Human Soul," and he has used two brothers to show these states. The two brothers represent two distinct outlooks on the world possessed by everyone. One is the limited perception of the senses, and the other is an imaginative view of the world. Cain - the first view - is a passive surrender to appearances and an acceptance of life on the basis of the world without: a view which inevitably leads to unsatisfied longing or a contentment with disillusion. Abel - the second view - is a vision of fulfilled desire, lifting man above the evidence of the senses to that state of relief where he no longer pines with desire. Ignorance of the second view is a soul on fire. Knowledge of the second view is the wing whereby it flies to the Heaven of fulfilled desire.

"Come, eat my bread and drink of the wind that I have mingled, forsake the foolish and live." Proverbs 9:56.

In the epistle to the Hebrews, the writer tells us that Abel's offering was faith and, states the author, "Without faith it is impossible to please Him." Hebrews 11:6."

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Hebrews 11:1, 3.

Cain offers the evidence of the senses which consciousness, the Lord, rejects, because acceptance of this gift as a mold of the future would mean the fixation and perpetuation of the present state forever. The sick would be sick, the poor would be poor, the thief would be a thief, the murderer a murderer, and so on, without hope of redemption.

The Lord, or consciousness, has no respect for such passive use of imagination - which is the gift of Cain. He delights in the gift of Abel, the active, voluntary, loving exercise of the imagination on behalf of man for himself and others.

"Let the weak man say, I am strong. Joel 3:10.

Let man disregard appearances and declare himself to be the man he wants to be. Let him imagine beauty where his senses reveal ashes, joy where they testify to mourning, riches where they bear witness to poverty. Only by such active, voluntary use of imagination can man be lifted up and Eden restored.

The ideal is always waiting to be incarnated, but unless we ourselves offer the ideal to the Lord, our consciousness, by assuming that we are already that which we seek to embody, it is incapable of birth. The Lord needs his daily lamb of faith to mold the world in harmony with our dreams.

"By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." Hebrews 11:4.

Faith sacrifices the apparent fact for the unapparent truth. Faith holds fast to the fundamental truth that through the medium of an assumption, invisible states become visible facts.

"For what is faith unless it is to believe what you do not see?" St. Augustine.

Just recently, I had the opportunity to observe the wonderful results of one who had the faith to believe what she did not see.

A young woman asked me to meet her sister and her three-year old nephew. He was a fine, healthy lad with clear blue eyes and an exceptionally fine unblemished skin. Then, she told me her story.

At birth, the boy was perfect in every way save for a large, ugly birthmark covering one side of his face. Their doctor advised them that nothing could be done for this type of scar. Visits to many specialists only confirmed his statement. Hearing the verdict, the aunt set herself the task of proving her faith - that an assumption, though denied by the evidence of the senses, if persisted in, will harden into fact.

Every time she thought of the baby, which was often, she saw, in her imagination, an eight-month-old baby with a perfect face - without any trace of a scar. This was not easy, but she knew that in this case, that was the gift of Abel which pleased God. She persisted in her faith - she believed what was not there to be seen. The result was that she visited her sister on the child's eight-month birthday and found him to have a perfect, unblemished skin with no trace of a birthmark ever having been present. "Luck! Coincidence! Shouts Cain. No. Abel knows that these are names given by those who have no faith, to the works of faith.

"We walk by faith, not by sight." II Corinthians 5:7.

When reason and the facts of life oppose the idea you desire to realize and you accept the evidence of your senses and the dictates of reason as the truth, you have brought the Lord - your consciousness - the gift of Cain. It is obvious that such offerings do not please Him.

Life on earth is a training ground for image making. If you use only the molds which your senses dictate, there will be no change in your life. You are here to live the more abundant life, so you must use the invisible molds of imagination and make results and accomplishments the crucial test of your power to create. Only as you assume the feeling of the wish fulfilled and continue therein are you offering the gift that pleases.

"When Abel's gift is my attire Then I'll realize my desire."

The Prophet Malachi complains that man has robbed God:

"But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." Malachi 3:8.

Facts based upon reason and the evidence of the senses which oppose the idea seeking expression, rob you of the belief in the reality of the invisible state. But "faith is the evidence of things not seen", and through it "God calleth those things which be not as though they were Romans 4:17." Call the thing not seen; assume the feeling of your wish fulfilled.

". . .that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, sayeth the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Malachi 3:10

This is the story of a couple living in Sacramento, California, who refused to accept the evidence of their senses, who refused to be robbed, in spite of a seeming loss. The wife had given her husband a very valuable wristwatch. The gift doubled its value because of the sentiment he attached to it. They had a little ritual with the watch. Every night as he removed the watch he gave it to her and she put it away in a special box in the bureau. Every morning she took the watch and gave it to him to put on.

One morning the watch was missing. They both remembered playing their usual parts the night before, therefore the watch was not lost or misplaced, but stolen. Then and there, they determined not to accept the fact that it was really gone. They said to each other, "This is an opportunity to practice what we believe." They decided that, in their imagination, they would enact their customary ritual as though the watch were actually there. In his imagination, every night the husband took off the watch and gave it to his wife, while in her imagination she accepted the watch and carefully put it away. Every morning she removed the watch from its box and gave it to her husband and he, in turn, put it on.

This they did faithfully for two weeks.

After their fourteen-day vigil, a man went into the one and only jewelry store in Sacramento where the watch would be recognized. As he offered a gem for appraisal, the owner of the store noticed the wristwatch he was wearing. Under the pretext of needing a closer examination of the stone, he went into an inner office and called the police. After the police arrested the man, they found in his apartment over ten thousand dollars' worth of stolen jewelry. In walking "by faith, not by sight", this couple attained their desire - the watch - and also aided many others in regaining what had seemed to be lost forever.

"If one advances confidently in the direction of his dream, and endeavors to live the life which he has imagined, he will meet with a success unexpected in common hours." - Thoreau.

Chapter 4: The Scale of Being

"And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it" Genesis 28:12, 13.

In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep fell upon Jacob, his inner eye was opened and he beheld the world as a series of ascending and descending levels of awareness. It was a revelation of the deepest insight into the mysteries of the world. Jacob saw a vertical scale of ascending and descending values, or states of consciousness. This gave meaning to everything in the outer world, for without such a scale of values there would be no meaning to life.

At every moment of time, man stands upon the eternal scale of meaning. There is no object or event that has ever taken place or is taking place now that is without significance. The significance of an object or event for the individual is a direct index to the level of his consciousness.

You are holding this book, for example. On one level of consciousness, it is an object in space. On a higher level, it is a series of letters on paper, arranged according to certain rules. On a still higher level, it is an expression of meaning.

Looking outwardly, you see the book first, but actually, the meaning comes first. It occupies a higher grade of significance than the letter arrangement on paper or the book as an object in space. Meaning determined the arrangement of letters; the arrangement of letters only expresses the meaning. The meaning is invisible and above the level of the visible arrangement of letters. If there had been on meaning to be expressed, no book would have been written and published.

"And, behold, the Lord stood above it."

The Lord and meaning are one - the Creator, the cause of the phenomena of life.

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." John 1:1 In the beginning was the intention - the meaning - and the intention was with the intender, and the intention was the intender. The objects and events in time and space occupy a lower level of significance than the level of meaning which produced them. All things were made by meaning, and without meaning was not anything made that was made. The fact that everything seen can be regarded as the effect, on a lower level of significance, of an unseen higher order of significance is a very important one to grasp.

Our usual mode of procedure is to attempt to explain the higher levels of significance - why things happen - in terms of the lower - what and how things happen. For example, let us take an actual accident and try to explain it.

Most of us live on the level of what happened - the accident was an event in space - one automobile struck another and practically demolished it. Some of us live on the higher level of "how" the accident happened - it was a rainy night, the roads were slippery and the second car skidded into the first. On rare occasions, a few of us reach the highest or causal level of "why" such an accident occurs. Then we become aware of the invisible, the state of consciousness which produced the visible event.

In this case, the ruined car was driven by a widow, who, though she felt she could not afford to, greatly desired to change her environment. Having heard that, by the proper use of her imagination, she could do and be all she wished to be, this widow had been imagining herself actually living in the city of her desire.

At the same time, she was living in a consciousness of loss, both personal and financial. Therefore, she brought upon herself an event which was seemingly another loss, but the sum of money the insurance company paid her allowed her to make the desired change in her life.

When we see the "why" behind the seeming accident, the state of consciousness that produced the accident, we are led to the conclusion that there is no accident. Everything in life has its invisible meaning.

The man who learns of an accident, the man who knows "how" it happened, and the man who knows "why" it happened are on three different levels of awareness in regard to that accident. On the ascending scale, each higher level carries us a step in advance towards the truth of the accident.

We should strive constantly to lift ourselves to the higher level of meaning, the meaning that is always invisible and above the physical event. But remember, the meaning or cause of the phenomena of life can be found only within the consciousness of man.

Man is so engrossed in the visible side of the drama of life - the side of "what" has happened, and "how" it happened - that he rarely rises to the invisible side of "why" it happened. He refuses to accept the Prophet's warning that:

"Things which are seen were not made of things that do appear." Hebrews 11:3.

His descriptions of "what" has happened and "how" it happened are true in terms of his corresponding level of thought, but when he asks "why" it happened, all physical explanations break down and he is forced to seek the "why", or meaning of it, on the invisible and higher level. The mechanical analysis of events deals only with external relationships of things. Such a course will never reach the level which holds the secret of why the events happen. Man must recognize that the lower and visible sides flow from the invisible and higher level of meaning.

Intuition is needed to lift us up to the level of meaning - to the level of why things happen. Let us follow the advice of the Hebrew prophet of old and "lift up our eyes unto the hills" within ourselves and observe what is taking place there. See what ideas we have accepted as true, what states we have consented to, what dreams, what desires - and, above all, what intentions. It is from these hills that all things come to reveal our stature - our height - on the vertical scale of meaning. If we lift our eyes to "the Thee in Me who works behind the Veil", we will see the meaning of the phenomena of life.

Events appear on the screen of space to express the different levels of consciousness of man. A change in the level of his consciousness automatically results in a change of the phenomena of his life. To attempt to change conditions before he changes the level of consciousness from whence they came, is to struggle in vain. Man redeems the world as he ascends the vertical scale of meaning.

We saw, in the analogy of the book, that as consciousness was lifted up to the level where man could see meaning expressed in the arrangement of its letters, it also included the knowledge that the letters were arranged according to certain rules, and that such arrangements, when printed on paper and bound together, formed a book. What is true of the book is true of every event in the world.

"They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isaiah 11:9.

Nothing is to be discarded; all is to be redeemed. Our lives, ascending the vertical scale of meaning towards an ever increasing awareness - an awareness of things of higher significance - are the process whereby this redemption is brought to pass. As man arranges letters into words, and words into sentences to express meaning, in like manner, life arranges circumstances, conditions and events to express the unseen meanings or attitudes of men. Nothing is without significance. But man, not knowing the higher level of inner meaning, looks out upon a moving panorama of events and sees no meaning to life. There is always a level of meaning determining events and their essential relationship to our lives.

Here is a story that will enable us to seize the good in things seeming evil; to withhold judgment, and to act aright amid unsolved problems.

Just a few years ago, our country was shocked by a seeming injustice in our midst. The story was told on radio and television, as well as in the newspapers. You may recall the incident. The body of a young American soldier killed in Korea was returned to his home for burial. Just before the service, his wife was asked a routine question: Was her husband a Caucasian? When she replied that he was an Indian, burial was refused. This refusal was in accordance with the laws of that community, but it aroused the entire nation. We felt incensed that anyone who had been killed in the service of his country should be denied burial anywhere in his country. The story reached the attention of the President of the United States, and he offered burial with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery. After the service, the wife told reporters that her husband had always dreamed of dying a hero and having a hero's burial service with full military honors.

When, we in America, had to explain why progressive, intelligent people like ourselves, not only enacted but supported such laws in our great land of the free and the brave, we were hard put for an explanation. We, as observers, had seen only "what" happened, and "how" it happened. We failed to see "why" it happened.

That burial had to be refused if that lad was to realize his dream. We tried to explain the drama in terms of the lower level of "how" it happened, which explanation could not satisfy the one who had asked "why" it happened.

The true answer, viewed from the level of higher meaning, would be such a reversal of our common habits of thinking that it would be instantly rejected. The truth is that future states are causative of present facts - the Indian boy dreaming of a hero's death, with full military honors, was like Lady Macbeth transported "beyond this ignorant present", and could "feel now the future in the instant."

". . . and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Hebrews 11:4.

Chapter 5: The Game of Life

"I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching." Shakespeare.

With this confession off my mind, I will now teach you how to play the game of life. Life is a game, and like all games, it has its aims and its rules.

In the little games that men concoct, such as cricket, tennis, baseball, football, and so on, the rules may be changed from time to time. After the changes are agreed upon, man must learn the new rules and play the game within the framework of the accepted rules.

However, in the game of life, the rules cannot be changed or broken. Only within the framework of its universal and everlastingly fixed rules can the game of life be played.

The game of life is played on the playing field of the mind. In playing a game, the first thing we ask is: "What is its aim and purpose?" and the second, "What are the rules governing the game?" In the game of life, our chief aim is towards increasing awareness - an awareness of things of greater significance; and our second aim is towards achieving our goals, realizing our desires.

As to our desires, the rules reach only so far as to indicate the way in which we should go to realize them, but the desires themselves must be the individual's own concern. The rules governing the game of life are simple, but it takes a lifetime of practice to use them wisely. Here is one of the rules:

"As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Proverbs 23:7.

Thinking is usually believed to be a function entirely untrammeled and free, without any rules to constrain it. But that is not true. Thinking moves by its own processes in a bounded territory, with definite paths and patterns.

"Thinking follows the tracks laid down in one's own inner conversations."

All of us can realize our objectives by the wise use of mind and speech. Most of us are totally unaware of the mental activity which goes on within us. But to play the game of life successfully, we must become aware of our every mental activity, for this activity, in the form of inner conversations, is the cause of the outer phenomena of our life.

". . . every idle word that man shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shall be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matthew 12:36, 37.

The law of the Word cannot be broken.

". . .A bone of him shall not be broken." John 19:36.

The law of the Word never overlooks an inner word nor makes the smallest allowance for our ignorance of its power. It fashions life about us as we, by our inner conversations, fashion life within ourselves. This is done to reveal to us our position on the playing field of life. There is no opponent in the game of life; there is only the goal.

Not long ago, I was discussing this with a successful and philanthropic businessman. He told me a thought-provoking story about himself.

He said, "You know, Neville, I first learned about goals in life when I was fourteen, and it was on the playing field at school. I was good at track and had a fine day, but there was one more race to run and I had stiff competition in one other boy. I was determined to beat him. I beat him, it is true, but, while I was keeping my eye on him, a third boy, who was considered no competition at all, won the race."

"That experience taught me a lesson I have used throughout my life. When people ask me about my success, I must say, that I believe it is because I have never made 'making money' my goal: 'My goal is the wise, productive use of money'."

This man's inner conversations are based on the premise that he already has money, his constant inner question: the proper use of it. The inner conversations of the man struggling to 'get' money only prove his lack of money. In his ignorance of the power of the word, he is building barriers in the way of the attainment of his goal; he has his eye on the competition rather than on the goal itself.

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,

But in ourselves, that we are underlings." Julius Caesar: Act I, Scene II.

As "the worlds were framed by the Word of God", so we as "imitators of God as dear children" create the conditions and circumstances of our lives by our all-powerful human inner words. Without practice, the most profound knowledge of the game would produce no desired results. "To him that knoweth to do good" - that is, knoweth the rules - and doeth it not, to him it is sin". In other words, he will miss his mark and fail to realize his goal.

In the parable of the Talents, the Master's condemnation of the servant who neglected to use his gift is clear and unmistakable, and having discovered one of the rules of the game of life, we risk failure by ignoring it. The talent not used, like the limb not exercised, slumbers and finally atrophies. We must be "doers of the Word, and not hearers only". Since thinking follows the tracks laid down in one's own inner conversations, not only can we see where we are going on the playing field of life by observing our inner conversations, but also, we can determine where we will go by controlling and directing our inner talking.

What would you think and say and do were you already the one you want to be? Begin to think and say and do this inwardly. You are told that "there is a rod in heaven that revealeth secrets," and you must always remember that heaven is within you; and to make it crystal clear who God is, where He is, and what His secrets are, Daniel continues, "Thy dream, and the visions of thy head are these". They reveal the tracks to which you are tied and point the direction in which you are going.

This is what one woman did to turn the tracks to which she had been unhappily tied in the direction in which she wanted to go. For two years, she had kept herself estranged from the three people she loved most. She had had a quarrel with her daughter-in-law, who ordered her from her home. For those two years, she had not seen or heard from her son, her daughter-in-law, or her grandson, though she had sent her grandson numerous gifts in the meantime. Every time she thought of her family, which was daily, she carried on a mental conversation with her daughter-in-law, blaming her for the quarrel and accusing her of being selfish.

Upon hearing a lecture of mine one night - it was this very lecture on the game of life and how to play it - she suddenly realized she was the cause of the prolonged silence and that she, and she alone, must do something about it. Recognizing that her goal was to have the former loving relationship, she set herself the task of completely changing her inner talking.

That very night, in her imagination, she constructed two loving, tender letters written to her, one from her daughter-in-law and the other from her grandson. In her imagination, she read them over and over again until she fell asleep in the joyful mood of having received the letters. She repeated this imaginary act each night for eight nights. On the morning of the ninth day, she received one envelope containing two letters, one from her daughter-in-law, one from her grandson. They were loving, tender letters inviting her to visit them, almost replicas of those she had constructed mentally. By using her imagination consciously and lovingly, she had turned the tracks to which she was tied, in the direction she wanted to go, towards a happy family reunion.

A change of attitude is a change of position on the playing field of life. The game of life is not being played out there in what is called space and time; the real moves in the game of life take place within, on the playing field of the mind.

"Losing thy soul, thy soul Again to find;

Rendering toward that goal Thy separate mind." Laurence Housman.

Chapter 6: Times, Time, & A Half

"And one said to the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these wonders? And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and swear by him that liveth forever that it shall be for a time, times, and an half." Daniel 12:6, 7.

At one of my lectures given in Los Angeles on the subject of the hidden meaning behind the stories of the Bible, someone asked me to interpret the above quotation from the Book of Daniel. After I confessed I did not know the meaning of that particular passage, a lady in the audience said to herself, "If the mind behaves according to the assumption with which it starts, then I will find the true answer to that question and tell it to Neville." And this is what she told me.

"Last night the question was asked: 'What is the meaning of "time, times, and an half" as recorded in Daniel 12:7?' Before going to sleep last night I said to myself, 'Now there is a simple answer to this question, so I will assume that I know it and while I am sleeping my greater self will find the answer and reveal it to my lesser self in dream or vision.'"

"Around five A.M. I awakened. It was too early to rise, so remaining in bed I quickly fell into that half dreamy state between waking and sleeping, and while in that state a picture came into my mind of an old lady.

She was sitting in a rocking chair and rocking back and forth, back and forth. Then a voice which sounded like your voice said to me: 'Do it over and over and over again until it takes on the tones of reality.'"

"I jumped out of bed and re-read the Twelfth Chapter of Daniel, and this is the intuitive answer I received. Taking the sixth and seventh verses, for they constituted last night's question, I felt that if the garments with which Biblical characters are clothed correspond to their level of consciousness, as you teach, then linen must represent a very high level of consciousness indeed, for the 'man clothed in linen' was standing 'upon the waters of the river' and if, as you teach, water symbolizes a high level of psychological truth, then the individual who could walk upon it must truly represent an exalted state of consciousness. I therefore felt that what he had to say must indeed be very significant. Now the question asked of him was 'How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?' And his answer was, 'A time, times, and an half.' Remembering my vision of the old lady rocking back and forth, and your voice telling me to 'do it over and over and over again until it takes on the tones of reality', and remembering that this vision and your instruction came to me in response to my assumption that I knew the answer, I intuitively felt that the question asked the 'man clothed in linen' meant how long shall it be until the wonderful dreams that I am dreaming become a reality. And his answer is, 'Do it over and over and over again until it takes on the tones of reality'.

'A time' means to perform the imaginary action which implies the fulfillment of the wish; 'Times' mean to repeat the imaginary action over and over again, and 'an half' means the moment of falling asleep while performing the imaginary action, for such a moment usually arrives before the pre-determined action is completed and, therefore, can be said to be a half, or part, of a time."

To get such inner understanding of the Scriptures by the simple assumption that she did know the answer, was a wonderful experience for this woman. However, to know the true meaning of "time, times, and a half" she must apply her understanding in her daily life. We are never at a loss in an opportunity to test this understanding, either for ourselves or for another.

A number of years ago, a widow living in the same apartment house as we, came to see me about her cat. The cat was her constant companion and dear to her heart. He was, however, eight years old, very ill and in great pain. He had not eaten for days and would not move from under her bed. Two veterinarians had seen the cat and advised the woman that the cat could not be cured, and that he should be put to sleep immediately. I suggested that that night, before retiring, she create in her imagination some action that would indicate the cat was its former healthy self. I advised her to do it over and over again until it took on the tones of reality.

This, she promised to do. However, either from lack of faith in my advice or from lack of faith in her own ability to carry out the imaginary action, she asked her niece to spend the night with her. This request was made so that if the cat were not well by morning, the niece could take it to the veterinarian's and she, the owner, would not have to face such a dreaded task herself. That night, she settled herself in an easy chair and began to imagine the cat was romping beside her, scratching at the furniture and doing many things she would not normally have allowed. Each time she found that her mind had wandered from its pre-determined task to see a normal, healthy, frisky cat, she brought her attention back to the room and started her imaginary action over again. This she did over and over again until, finally, in a feeling of relief, she dropped off to sleep, still seated in her chair.

At about four o'clock in the morning, she was awakened by the cry of her cat. He was standing by her chair. After attracting her attention, he led her to the kitchen where he begged for food. She fixed him a little warm milk which he quickly drank, and cried for more.

That cat lived comfortably for five more years, when, without pain or illness, he died naturally in his sleep.

"How long shall it be to the end of these wonders? A time, times, and an half. In a dream in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; Then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instructions." Job 33:15, 16.

Chapter 7: Be Ye Wise As Serpents

". . .be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Matthew 10:16.

The serpent's ability to form its skin by ossifying a portion of itself, and its skill in shedding each skin as it outgrew it, caused man to regard this reptile as a symbol of the power of endless growth and self-reproduction. Man is told, therefore, to be "wise as the serpent" and learn how to shed his skin - his environment - which is his solidified self; man must learn how to "loose him and let him go" . . . how to "put off the old man" . . .how to die to the old and yet know, like the serpent, that he "shall not surely die".

Man has not learned as yet that all that is outside his physical body is also a part of himself, that his world and all the conditions of his life are but the outpicturing of his state of consciousness. When he knows this truth, he will stop the futile struggle of self-contention and, like the serpent, let the old go and grow a new environment.

"Man is immortal; therefore, he must die endlessly. For life is a creative idea; it can only find itself in changing forms." Tagore.

In ancient times, serpents were also associated with the guardianship of treasure or wealth. The injunction to be "wise as serpents" is the advice to man to awaken the power of his subtilized body - his imagination - that he, like the serpent, may grow and outgrow, die and yet not die, for from such deaths and resurrections alone, shedding the old and putting on the new, shall come fulfillment of his dreams and the finding of his treaures. As "the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made" Genesis 3:1 - even so, imagination is more subtle than any creature of the heavens which the Lord God had created. Imagination is the creature that:

". . .was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for it? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we have patience wait for it." Romans 8:20, 24, 25.

Although the outer, or "natural", man of the senses is interlocked with his environment, the inner, or spiritual, man of imagination is not thus interlocked. If the interlocking were complete, the charge to be "wise as serpents" would be in vain. Were we completely interlocked with our environment, we could not withdraw our attention from the evidence of the senses and feel ourselves into the situation of our fulfilled desire, in hope that that unseen state would solidify as our new environment. But:

"There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." I Corinthians 15:44.

The spiritual body of imagination is not interlocked with man's environment. The spiritual body can withdraw from the outer man of sense and environment and imagine itself to be what it wants to be. And if it remains faithful to the vision, imagination will build for man a new environment in which to live. This is what is meant by the statement:

". . .I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:2, 3.

The place that is prepared for you need not be a place in space. It can be health, wealth, companionship, anything that you desire in this world. Now, how is the place prepared?

You must first construct as life-like a representation as possible of what you would see and hear and do if you were physically present and physically moving about in that "place." Then, with your physical body immobilized, you must imagine that you are actually in that "place" and are seeing and hearing and doing all that you would see and hear and do if you were there physically. This you must do over and over again until it takes on the tones of reality. When it feels natural, the "place" has been prepared as the new environment for your outer or physical self. Now you may open your physical eyes and return to your former state. The "place" is prepared, and where you have been in imagination, there you shall be in the body also.

How this imagined state is realized physically is not the concern of you, the natural or outer man. The spiritual body, on its return from the imagined state to its former physical state, created an invisible bridge of incident to link the two states. Although the curious feeling that you were actually there and that the state was real is gone, as soon as you open your eyes upon the old familiar environment, nevertheless, you are haunted with the sense of a double identity - with the knowledge that "there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." When you, the natural man, have had this experience you will go automatically across the bridge of events which leads to the physical realization of your invisibly prepared place.

This concept - that man is dual and that the inner man of imagination can dwell in future states and return to the present moment with a bridge of events to link the two - clashes violently with the widely accepted view about the human personality and the cause and nature of phenomena. Such a concept demands a revolution in current ideas about the human personality, and about space, time and matter. The concept that man, consciously or unconsciously, determines the conditions of life by imagining himself into these mental states, leads to the conclusion that this supposedly solid world is a construction of Mind - a concept which, at first, common sense rejects. However, we should remember that most of the concepts which common sense at first rejected, man was afterward forced to accept. These never-ending reversals of judgment which experience has forced upon man led Professor Whitehead to write: "Heaven knows what seeming nonsense may not tomorrow be demonstrated truth."

The creative power in man sleeps and needs to be awakened. "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead." Ephesians 5:14.

Wake from the sleep that tells you the outer world is the cause of the conditions of your life. Rise from the dead past and create a new environment.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" I Corinthians 3:16.

The Spirit of God in you is your imagination, but it sleeps and needs to be awakened, in order to lift you off the bar of the senses where you have so long lain stranded.

The boundless possibilities open to you as you become "wise as serpents" is beyond measure. You will select the ideal conditions you want to experience and the ideal environment you want to live in. Experiencing these states in imagination until they have sensory vividness, you will externalize them as surely as the serpent now externalizes its skin.

After you have outgrown them, then, you will cast them off as easily as "the snake throws her enamell'd skin". The more abundant life - the whole purpose of Creation - cannot be saved through death and resurrection.

God desired form, so He became man: and it is not enough for us to recognize His spirit at work in creation, we must see His work in form and say that it is good, even though we outgrow the form, forever and ever.

"He leads Through widening chambers of delight to where Throbs rapture near an end that aye recedes, Because His touch is Infinite and lends A yonder to all ends."

"And, I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." John 12:32.

If I be lifted up from the evidence of the senses to the state of consciousness I desire to realize and remain in that state until it feels natural. I will form that state around me and all men will see it. But how to persuade man this is true - that imaginative life is the only living; that assuming the feeling of the wish fulfilled is the way to the more abundant life and not the compensation of the escapist - that is the problem. To see as "though widening chambers of delight" what living in the realms of imagination means, to appreciate and enjoy the world, one must live imaginatively; one must dream and occupy his dream, then grow and outgrow the dream, forever and ever. The unimaginative man, who will not lose his life on one level that he may find it on a higher level, is nothing but a Lot's wife - a pillar of self-satisfied salt. On the other hand, those who refuse form as being unspiritual and who reject incarnation as separate from God are ignorant of the great mystery: "Great is the mystery, God was manifest in the flesh."

Your life expresses one thing, and one thing only, your state of consciousness. Everything is dependent upon that. As you, through the medium of imagination, assume a state of consciousness, that state begins to clothe itself in form, It solidifies around you as the serpent's skin ossifies around it. But you must be faithful to the state. You must not go from state to state, but, rather, wait patiently in the one invisible state until it takes on form and becomes an objective fact. Patience is necessary, but patience will be easy after your first success in shedding the old and growing the new, for we are able to wait according as we have been rewarded by understanding in the past. Understanding is the secret of patience. What natural joy and spontaneous delight lie in seeing the world - not with, but as Blake says - through the eye! Imagine that you are seeing what you want to see and remain faithful to your vision. Your imagination will make for itself a corresponding form in which to live.

All things are made by imagination's power. Nothing begins except in the imagination of man. "From within out" is the law of the universe. "As within, so without." Man turns outward in his search for truth, but the essential thing is to look within.

"Truth is within ourselves; it takes no rise From outward things, what e'er you may believe. There is an inmost center in us all, Where truth abides in fullness .. . and to know, Rather consist in opening out a way Whence the imprisoned splendor may escape, Than in effecting entry for a light Supposed to be without." Browning: "Paracelsus"

I think you will be interested in an instance of how a young woman shed the skin of resentment and put on a far different kind of skin. The parents of this woman had separated when she was six years old and she had lived with her mother. She rarely saw her father. But once a year he sent her a five dollar check for Christmas. Following her marriage, he did increase the Christmas gift to ten dollars.

After one of my lectures, she was dwelling on my statement that man's suspicion of another is only a measure of his own deceitfulness, and she recognized that she had been harboring a resentment towards her father for years. That night she resolved to let go her resentment and put a fond reaction in its place. In her imagination, she felt she was embracing her father in the warmest way. She did it over and over again until she caught the spirit of her imaginary act, and then she fell asleep in a very contented mood.

The following day she happened to pass through the fur department of one of our large stores in California. For some time, she had been toying with the idea of having a new fur scarf, but felt she could not afford it. This time her eye was caught by a stone marten scarf, and she picked it up and tired it on. After feeling it and seeing herself in it, reluctantly she took off the scarf and returned it to the salesman, telling herself she really could not afford it. As she was leaving the department, she stopped and thought, "Neville tells we can have whatever we desire if we will only capture the feeling of already having it." In her imagination, she put the scarf back on, felt the reality of it, and went about her shopping, all the while enjoying the imagined wearing of it.

This young woman never associated these two imaginary acts. In fact, she had almost forgotten what she had done until, a few weeks later, on Mother's Day, the doorbell rang unexpectedly.

There was her father. As she embraced him, she remembered her first imaginary action. As she opened the package he had brought her - the first gift in these many years - she remembered her second imaginary action, for the box contained a beautiful stone marten scarf.

"Ye are gods; and all of you are children of the most High." Psalms 82:6.

". . .be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Matthew 10:16.

I hope you have enjoyed reading Seedtime & Harvest by Neville Goddard.

Click for More Free Books by Neville Goddard.

For More Free PDF Books on the Law of Attraction and Metaphysics Visit the Law of Attraction Haven.

Neville 03-31-1967

SEEING CHRIST THROUGH THE EYES OF PAUL

Tonight's subject is very, very practical, yet profoundly spiritual, for we are going to search for the cause of the phenomena of life called in scripture, "the Father". So come with me and let me show you Jesus Christ, the father of life, through the eyes of Paul. Now, there is no mention of Paul in any contemporary work of the first century, nor is there any historical record of a man named Paul. He is mentioned in the last part of the Book of Acts and in his thirteen letters - but who is he? Paul, like Moses, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Jesus Christ is a state of consciousness.

The Bible speaks of a fundamental state of consciousness from which other states derive. That fundamental state is the Father, the creative power in you. This world is made up of God and the extension of himself called "you". Say "I am" and you have said God's name.

Now let us look at Jesus Christ through the eyes of the state of Paul. Schooled in the traditions of his father, Paul knew Hebrew backwards. He knew the law of Moses and protected these traditions with his life, opposing anyone who was in conflict with his belief.

Then he saw the spirit behind the letter. Just as you - believing what you were taught by your mother and father and Sunday school teacher - when you enter the state called Paul you will understand the meaning behind the allegory; and - like Paul - you will be just as ardent in promoting it as you were in defending your belief in a physical Jesus Christ.

Paul makes the statement: "I am not ashamed of the gospel, for it is the power of God for the salvation of everyone who has faith. That power is Christ." And it is Paul who confesses: "Even though I once regarded Christ from a human point of view, I regard him thus no longer." Having learned from the traditions of his earthly father that he was to "Make no graven image unto me" Paul believed that Jesus Christ was an individual like himself. But when he realized who Jesus Christ really was, he defined him in his letter to the Corinthians as the power of God and the wisdom of God saying: "I preach only Jesus Christ crucified and raised from the dead."

Paul teaches that the power of God and the wisdom of God is crucified and buried in Man, and from that state of death will he rise. Now seeing Christ as his human imagination Paul confesses: "I once regarded Christ from a human point of view; I regard him thus no longer." Who is this creative power who was once regarded as human? In the 10th chapter of Matthew it is made to say: "Everyone who acknowledges me before men, I will acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven; but whoever denies me before men, I will also deny before my Father who is in heaven. Think not that I have come to bring peace on earth; I have not come to bring peace, but a sword. To set a man against his father, a daughter against her mother, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. Anyone who loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me."

Claiming that he came into the world not to abolish the law of Moses but to fulfill it (and the 5th commandment is "Honor your father and mother") how can he ask us to love him more than our father and mother? When I was a child I heard these stories in my Sunday school class, and I knew that if I had to love Jesus more than my mother and father I was not worthy of him. To ask me to love some invisible power more than I loved my sweet, kind, loving mother and the giant of a man who was my father was to ask the impossible of me. So what is being said here?

Father and mother are the obvious physical causes of the birth of a child in this world. Whether it is human, bird, or animal, we all have fathers and mothers. They are the physical cause of the phenomena of life, as you are now an objective fact. Then comes an invisible cause saying you must love it more than visible causation. No one is setting you against your father or mother, daughter or daughter-in-law - how could they!

Man sets up physical causation, saying you must join the "right" club, live in the "right" neighborhood, know the "right" people. That your place of birth or the color of your skin is the cause of your experiences. Now you are told that the cause is invisible and you must love this cause more than any earthly thing. You are urged to fall in love with it! To make it yourself and have no other god besides it! And may I tell you: when you do you will love your father and mother, daughter, and son more than ever before, as you will no longer see them as physical causation.

You will know that nothing physical is the cause of the phenomena of life. You will see them as aspects of your invisible body that has awakened. There is no character in scripture that has a physical history. They are there to depict divine history. Paul was trained in the Jewish faith and knew Judaism backwards. He said: "I am a son of Abraham of the tribe of Benjamin." And when he was told: "Your great learning is turning you mad," he replied: "I am not mad. I am speaking the sober truth." Paul is telling you of the resurrection of a creative power of which you have been totally unaware.

This creative power is buried in everyone, and that power is God himself. There is no intermediary between you and God. Jesus Christ is the creative power of your own wonderful human imagination!

That is Jesus Christ and there is no other! God the Father is buried in you as your I am, and your human I amness is Jesus Christ. This is the being Paul speaks of when he says: "Test yourself; Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless, of course, you fail to meet the test."

Now let me share a letter from a friend. She said: "I am a freelance designer. I never seek work, but as I sit at home and imagine I am working, they call. In the past six months I have received very few orders from a company that kept me very busy in the past, so I called them to discover that they had employed a full-time art director and would no longer require my services. After hanging up the phone I revised this conversation. I heard them tell me they had lots of work for me, and I felt the thrill in their words. One week later they called, asking me to design a 26-page book of institutional advertising, plus four ads for Harper's Bazaar.

This was more then they had given me in the past at any one time. Now I am busier, happier, and making more money than ever before, and my technique is simple. Sitting in my chair I quietly listen for the phone to ring, answer it in my imagination and hear the orders I desire to create - and they come."

Now, who is Jesus Christ? Scripture tells you he is the creative power of God and the wisdom of God, and by him all things are made, and without him is not anything made that is made. Tell me, how are you using God's creative power? How are you using Christ? By thinking someone doesn't like you? That's Christ in action! It is he who is causing the other not to like you. And when that seeming other slaps you in the face or spits on you, you may wonder why - but it's because you did it. There is no power but Christ!

No one can do anything to you unless you first do it to yourself by the use of Christ, God's creative power, whose name is I am. Paul gave us the foundation from which everything is built and claimed that no other foundation can anyone lay other than Christ, the creative power of God. Then he warns us that there will be those who will come, claiming to have apostolic descent. They will dress themselves in jewels and robes and make you think they are in some holy state, but they are foolish.

There is only one foundation, and that is your own wonderful human imagination, and there is no other. Now, let me tell you of another lady who is here tonight. She said: "Ten days ago I heard from my mother that she believed she was afflicted with the same problem she had experienced a year ago. When I received the letter I sat right down and wrote her saying: 'The God in me is speaking to the God in you, telling me that you do not have this affliction and that you are perfect.' I wrote so convincingly that when she received the letter she believed me, and when the tests were made they came out negative. I have never been able to use the word `imagination' to my family, so I use the word `God' and they understand."

May I now quote the 10th chapter of Mathew to her? "He who dares not acknowledge me before men, I will not acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven. He who denies me, I will deny to my Father who is in heaven. For I have come not to bring peace, but a sword to set a man against his Father, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law, for the enemies of a man are those of his own household. He who loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me."

I will urge her, tonight, to tell her family the truth. Even though they fly into space, tell them who Jesus Christ really is. Don't beat around the bush and leave them sound asleep. This is the conflict. When truth comes into the world, it is in conflict with everything that was formerly believed. The Father is always the new against the old, the Son against the Father. Even though you once considered Christ as human, when he is quickened in you, you will regard him thus no longer and speak out. You will be bold and tell everyone that their human imagination is the only creative power in the world. That God is imagination. He is the Father of all life. Imagining is his son, his creative power, and that is Jesus Christ.

Now, what must you do, to be doing the work of God? Believe in him whom he has sent. And whom did he send? I am! If the evidence comes as it did to these two ladies, what does it matter what the world thinks? Denying the evidence that there was no work, my friend revised the phone conversation. She heard them tell her they liked her work and would have many jobs for her in the future. She believes in him who he has sent, for she now believes in herself!

Our President is a man with a great deal of authority and power, wealth and fame, but if he does not know who he really is, when he departs this period of time he will find himself in a world just like this one. May I tell you: there is no other world until you escape this world of death. This I know from experience. I have sat in a chair with my eyes shut and stepped into a world of people just as solid and real as we are right now - yet I know I am in an entirely different world. When you die you are only dying to this time and space, for you simply step into another time and space to continue your dream.

This you will continue to do as long as you remain as sound asleep as you are now. Possessing the same identity, you will not occupy the same position. You may be in the state of great wealth when you make your exit from this world, to find yourself in the state of one who shines shoes, if that is necessary to awaken you to who Jesus Christ really is. Perhaps while shining shoes you begin to imagine you have so many customers you must hire others to work for you, and as your business grows, you begin to understand how it happened and realize who Jesus Christ really is.

One has to find Christ as his human imagination, and the only God as his I am, operating through his creative power, before he can leave this world. So it is, as you consciously use your imaginative power, you begin to awaken and experience scripture by being born from above and discovering God's creative power, called David, to be your son. And when you have fulfilled scripture you will vanish from this world, leaving behind all that you have experienced.

So, you either believe in your own wonderful human imagination or you do not, for that is Christ. An event took place 2,000 years ago, but it didn't take place once, never to take place again. His birth is taking place in the lives of everyone who hears and believes. So what must you do? Believe in him whom he has sent. I did not come into the world to make you think I am a holy man, but to tell you that I have awakened from the dream of life. I have finished the race. I have fought the good fight, and I have kept the faith. It doesn't really matter when I drop this garment, for this world is over for me. I will tell you of my experiences while I am here, in the hope that you will believe - not in Neville, but in your own wonderful human imagination whom you sent!

Your true name is I am, and your creative power is called Jesus Christ. Because all things are made by your imagination, test yourself and see. Put your powerful imagination to the test. When my friend revised her telephone conversation, she used her powerful imagination to create an even better job for the person who had been hired as the art director. Confirmation came when she received the order for the magazine advertisement, therefore no one was hurt. Knowing exactly what she wanted, she simply assumed she had it, and no one was hurt. Always use your imagination lovingly for yourself and others, for everyone in the world is yourself anyway, as there is nothing but self!

You are predestined to experience everything spoken of in scripture concerning Jesus Christ and then you will know who you really are, but before it happens you can see him if you look through the eyes of Paul. Having been crucified with the creative power of God, Paul was not ashamed of the gospel, for he knew it was the power of salvation if all who heard believed! Now, I know faith is not the easiest thing in the world to develop, but may I appeal to you to not turn back like the rebels under Moses and search for other gods. Do not look for any physical causation, for causation is invisible.

The world is all imagination, as you imagine you are Jesus Christ. Do you believe in your imaginal act? On this level the made reveals the mistakes of the maker. Learn from your mistakes. In a moment of anxiety perhaps you made that which you do not want. Learn from that which you made, where you made your mistake. Don't deny your harvest. Reap it, then plow and plant again, this time in the moment of joy and thanksgiving.

Learn to believe in your own wonderful human imagination. There is nothing in the world but God and his creative power. God needs no intermediary between you and himself because he is buried in you. Learn to trust this creative power in you and then God will reveal himself to you through his son and your drama will be over.

Your father and mother are the visible cause of life, while Jesus Christ is its invisible cause. Fall in love with Christ and learn to trust him with all your might. Believe in this invisible causation in you, for without him was not anything made that was made. God, the only God, is your own wonderful human awareness. Jesus Christ is your power to create that which you are aware of! Having found God and his creative power, believe in him, for everyone who believes will be sent as I am sent. This is truly a very practical night, yet at the same time profoundly spiritual. Every word that I have said is true. Imagination will never fail you if you believe. Be like the lady who changed the telephone conversation to hear what she wanted to hear, even though it was completely opposite.

It is said that Jesus was opposed by Satan. Do you know who is Satan is? The word means "opponent; opposite". The world, reflecting the opposite of what you want to see, is your opponent, your Satan or the devil. That's all the word means. 'Turn this stone into bread if you think you are the creative power of the universe. Fall off this mountain if you think you are the creative power of the world, for did he not say he would give his angels power to lift you up if you dashed your foot against a stone?" Then, turning from the doubting mind, Satan vanished. Everyone has a Satan. Allow reason to tell you something cannot be done and Satan dwells in that doubting thought. The moment you accept Christ as the reality and creative power of the world, Satan is present, and to that degree Satan is taking advantage of salvation.

Having imagined what you want in the world, if doubt appears in thought or personified by another, say to yourself: "Get thee behind me Satan (get out of my sight) - I will have nothing to do with you."

My friend said that after she heard the good news from her mother, she went into the kitchen, and as she was making herself a cup of coffee she heard my voice say: "That's the spirit" and almost dropped the coffee. That's exactly what Paul in me speaks to her, for I am all over now. I am no longer confined to the platform, but I am speaking every night to everyone who has heard and believed. Awake, I am now one with the Risen Christ, wearing the body of God.

There is only one body. Everyone who awakes is incorporated into that universal body to know you are it. And while your physical body sleeps, you will be all over the world. Your voice will be heard and you will be seen. That is the being you become after you have awakened from the dream of life. Tonight I urge you all to use the word imagination, for I have come to set this new idea against the old. Although people may rebel, when you get the results you want, it doesn't matter how they object. The term to be used now is your own wonderful human imagination!

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 03-29-1968

SEEK THE KINGDOM

That which is most profoundly spiritual is in reality most directly practical. We are told: "Do not be anxious, saying, 'What shall we eat?' or 'What shall we drink?' or 'What shall we wear?' for your heavenly Father knows that you need them all. But seek first his kingdom and his righteousness and all of these things shall be yours as well." Here is a priority. Your heavenly Father knows you have to eat, drink, and clothe yourself, and they will all be yours if you will but put first things first; and the first thing is to seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, for God is in his kingdom and when you find the kingdom you find God.

While reading a book you may be aware of the phone ringing or someone entering the room. Although your attention is on the book, it does not exclude these events, which are marginal. So if, when you hear the story of the kingdom and how to enter it, your attention remains there, your heavenly Father will care for all of your marginal needs as you modify your concepts concerning God's plan of salvation.

My parents (along with multiple millions of others) believed their children must be baptized in order to be saved, and they took me before the baptismal, where I was baptized in the name of Christ before I was aware of it. They, like hundreds of millions, have lived and died never changing that concept. But scripture read correctly tells us to "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." That Abraham believed and his belief was accounted unto him for righteousness, so now you see what righteousness is. Righteousness in not a belief among beliefs, but the belief. You must find out what the belief is really is. I know from experience that the belief is that I will be born from above and receive God's gift of himself through his Son calling me "Father". Having heard this from me, are you convinced to the point where you can, in the immediate present, modify your concept of Jesus? To the degree your belief in God has been modified will you find corresponding changes in your outer world, for you are always living in and thinking from a body of beliefs. You can believe you are healthy, wealthy, successful, or a failure, and to the degree you accept this belief will you express the state. But fundamentally, what is your concept of God, for only as you seek his kingdom will you discover that God and his kingdom are one.

From this platform I teach that I and my Father are one. Being one, my Father can never be so far off as even to be near, for nearness implies separation. What is there in you that can't even be near? Imagination! You cannot separate yourself from imagination. You can't claim: "I am" and point to it as something on the outside. It is impossible to separate yourself from the sense of being, so in the sense of I AMness, you are imagining. If this sense of oneness is your Father, do you really believe in him? If so, to what extent does your confession in words conform to your deep, deep conviction?

Matthew makes this statement: "Everyone who acknowledges me before men, I will acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven. But whoever denies me before men, I also deny before my Father who is in heaven.

Think not I came to bring peace on earth. I have not come to bring peace, but a sword. To set a man against his father, a daughter against her mother, a daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law, for a man's foes are those of his own household."

In this statement, Matthew is not speaking of any physical conflict, but the conflict of the spirit. He is telling you that your foes are spiritual, all within your own household. Not the house other individuals share with you, but your spiritual house called the kingdom of heaven.

Now, as this new concept presents itself like a sunburst, will you accept it? Being new, it is now in conflict with what you formerly believed. This is new wine which is not yet fermented, and if accepted cannot be put into the old skins (the old beliefs), for if you place unfermented wine in an old skin it will burst. There must be a new belief to think from. Will you accept the fact that your own wonderful human imagination is He whom the world calls God? Will you accept this idea and allow it to ferment? Acknowledge your true self and live in that belief? Or will you say: "It's easier to live with my wife (or husband) if I don't confess it. I tried, but it upsets the household, so we continue to go to the same church and do the same things we have always done in the outer world."

You must be willing to acknowledge me (your own wonderful human imagination) before men, for if you are ashamed of me, the Father who sees only the heart will deny you. But when you make any modification in your basic belief, it will take precedence over your beliefs of the past. If you say: "I am rich" and your concept of God remains as before, you are speaking from the surface of your being; but when you change the core and speak from your new concept of God, your world changes.

If you believe what I have confessed openly to you, do not be ashamed to acknowledge it openly before men. Although you may not at the present time have the experiences to support your claim, do not be ashamed of the good news that you have heard from me.

Not everyone sought Christ. Some found him and brought others. In the Book of John we are told that Andrew found his imagination to be Jesus and told his brother Peter. Philip found him and brought his friend Nathaniel. Peter and Nathaniel were not seekers, but were introduced to the truth. And who did they find? The one of whom Moses and the law and the prophets spoke, Jesus of Nazareth. Where is he? Come and you will see that the drama is supernatural. Having heard the truth from one who has experienced it, do you reject my words or do you accept them? If you accept my words and toy with this idea to the degree that you become enamored, you will modify your former belief concerning Christ Jesus. Tonight one billion believe in a little personal being who walked the earth 2,000 years ago, because they do not understand the concept that is the vision of Jesus Christ.

Now listen to these words of Blake: "No individual should appropriate to himself or to his emanation any universal characteristics of David or Eve; of the Woman or the Lord," and he is right. Any appropriation of universality by an individual is a denial of the unity of all in the divine manner. To think that I (Neville) and I alone will have this experience, that it is mine and will not be shared by others, is denying the universal brotherhood of all. David is not just my Son, he is our Son. For any individual to appropriate this universal characteristic of David to himself is wrong. If he dares to think he differs by that unique experience, he will be broken on the rocks of experience, for David is unique to everyone.

Blake then goes on to say: "A Vegetated Christ and a Virgin Eve are the Hermaphroditic Blasphemy." To take this divine being and turn it into some corporeal form with a vegetated body is hermaphroditic blasphemy. This body called Neville is Christ's emanation. It is not a direct descendant of David, for he does not belong to this world, but to God's eternal plan, which is to give himself to you; and the one and only way you will know this to be true is when David calls you "Father". And since God's plan is to give himself to everyone, no individual should ever appropriate these universal characteristics of David to himself alone. He must share it with his universal brother.

When Blake used the word "hermaphroditic" he meant "contradiction." If Blake read a book, which stated a certain principle, but contradicted itself in the reading, to Blake the book was hermaphroditic. To him all orthodox religion was hermaphroditic, because they contradict the principle they teach. Saying God is merciful, they kill in the name of God - so where is the mercy? So Blake is speaking of a contradiction of principle. In the beginning you were Spirit, but now you are turning and worshiping a man of flesh? That's hermaphroditic blasphemy. But even though you once believed Christ was a man after the flesh, once you have experienced the kingdom you will see him thus no longer. Paul was taught that Christ was a being outside of him who walked the earth, when suddenly it pleased God to reveal his Son in him. "Then," said Paul: "I conferred not with flesh and blood." From that moment on he publicly proclaimed the good news which he had received in the spirit.

Here is a story of a man who learned to turn to no one on the outside for help, for all help came from within him. As a very young boy he was one of a very poor family of five who lived in Russia. At the age of eight he was running errands to earn money to help feed the family. Having never had a square meal, a new shirt, slacks, or shoes, he knew the horror associated with a minority group, as his family were Jews.

This lad had a job taking large amounts of money to a bank to be exchanged into small denominations. One day he noticed that the teller's copper coins resembled the silver ones, and as he returned the money to his employer he began to play a little game with himself. Assuming the teller had given him silver instead of copper, he dreamed of the wealth that would be his, had the mistake been made. The very next day the teller made the mistake. Giving him silver instead of copper, the young lad pocketed the money, went to another bank and changed it into the right denomination then, returning to work he gave his employers the money they expected. Having been taught what was right and wrong, the boy wrestled all through the night with his conscience, but in the morning he took the money, bought a new pair of shoes, a new shirt and pants. Then he went to a restaurant and ate to his heart's content. No, he never returned the money, but he learned a great lesson from this experience.

The world, upon hearing this story, would say he was wrong; but when we came out from the Father we ate of the tree of good and evil, and there isn't one person in this world who has not violated that code. He may not have the courage to violate the moral code openly, but the drama of life is psychological. The child was hungry. Having entered the world of experience, he learned how to use the creative power of his own wonderful human imagination. In the interval he has given back to society ten thousand times more than the small amount taken, not to compensate, but because of the lesson learned. After the First World War Russia collapsed and, penniless, he came to Paris to work as a street cleaner. Then he remembered what he had done so many years ago, and from that point on he rose and today is a multi-millionaire in a legitimate business, applying this simple principle that an assumption, though false, if persistent in will harden into fact.

Now, a letter came this week in which the gentleman wrote: "In my dream I had an enemy and we were slated for a duel in which one of us would be killed. All of the townspeople gathered around to watch, and I was favored to win. Pinning my enemy to the ground, I began to strike him, but could not do it. You see, by nature I am a pacifist and I don't want to hurt anyone. So I drew my sword and placed it into his body, making sure it entered only three inches. Then a man came forward and realizing what I had done he shook his head, and the grumbling crowd walked away as I awoke."

Let me tell him tonight: your dream was an adumbration, a foreshadowing of the day when your belief in Christ as your own wonderful human imagination will be one hundred per cent. On that day you will cut yourself in two with one wonderful blow and release the imprisoned splendor there. God's creative power is within us all with his head down into generation. One day you will find that power, fuse with it, and up you will go into heaven as the imprisoned splendor you will know yourself to be.

If anyone ever asks you what you think of Christ, tell them that he is your own wonderful human imagination; that he became you, with all of your weaknesses and limitations, that you may be God the Father. May I tell you: when you really believe this your outer world will change to conform to the inner changes that radiate from you. Your world is forever mirroring and reflecting all of your beliefs, so any modification of a belief will cause a change in your outer world. So instead of working on little things like wealth, health, and fame, work on the major concepts of Christ by learning to know him through exercising your own wonderful human imagination.

Ask any man on the street if he is a Christian and he will say: "Yes", but his definition of a Christian may be entirely different than yours. My sister Daphne is a pillar of her church. She considers herself a Christian and I believe I am also, but we have entirely different concepts of Christ as a plan of redemption. If, tonight I asked the Pope or the Archbishop of Canterbury if they were Christians, I am quite sure they would say yes, but their definition of Christ and mine would be miles apart.

I tell you: Christ is the vision of redemption. Free the vision! Don't vegetate it! Don't put it in a corporeal body and make it some little thing that dies. Christ is in you, yet he belongs to an entirely different world. While you walk this world in these garments that decay, Christ unfolds and lifts you into the world of eternity.

Believe me. Dwell upon my words, for as you do the visions will unfold; and as far as your outer world is concerned you will never have to question what you shall eat or drink or wear, for you will have no need to be concerned about the marginal things of life. Start now to center your focus on Christ and don't be concerned about the fringe. Seek the kingdom of heaven by turning your thoughts inward, and wonderful things will appear to come out of the nowhere. In my own case I never thought of or contributed to any money my parents made, yet when my father made up his will, all ten children shared equally. So while I was about my Father's business, completely absorbed in the kingdom of heaven and not concerned with dollars and cents, money grew in a foreign field. I had no knowledge or concern for its growth. Trusting my brothers implicitly, I have never once entertained the thought that anyone would ever take advantage of me, and no one has.

So I tell you, go about your Father's business, dwelling upon his kingdom, and all things will take care of themselves. But don't be ashamed to acknowledge him before men. Be like Paul who spoke up, saying: "I am not ashamed of the gospel." When the vision becomes your experience it will not matter to you what the world thinks. You will know with such certainty that you are the Father of God's only begotten Son, that no one can shake you. A good Christian might question you, saying: "You - the Father of Christ?" and you will say: "No, I'm the Father of Christ's Son, David. In the Spirit I spoke these words to David: 'Thou art my Son, today I have begotten thee,' the same words, which were spoken to David by the Lord."

Now, Christ Jesus is the Lord. He did not come after David, but before him. God the Father gave himself to us; therefore everything comes after the Father. I now know that I also am God the Father, for he gave me himself and there is no way he could prove it other than through his Son David calling me "Father". Prior to that I thought I was Neville Goddard, born in Barbados as a member of a very large family. Physically that is who I am, but in the spirit I know I am not, for God gave himself to me; and to prove it his Son, as described in the Book of Samuel, called me "Father". This same Son will call everyone "Father" and then we will all be brothers. In spite of all the conflicts, horrible as they are, in the end we will discover everything was just a play - a play which was essential for God to give his gift to Man, and that gift is God Himself.

Now let us go into the silence.

X14
S1

SELF-ABANDONMENT

1 June 1970

Week after week, as I take this platform, I know what I want to say. It is merely finding out how to say it so that it is intelligible, for we are dealing with a mystery. It's not something you can spell out and say, "Now this is it." It's a peculiar -- the most fantastic mystery in the world. To me, to experience Scripture -- to experience God's plan of salvation -- is my interpretation of the whole purpose of life. That is what I firmly believe. I firmly believe that the roots of our being are rooted in God, and God unfolds Himself creatively in us.

When I make that statement, I put myself on the side of that which is being transformed -- say, a man. For metamorphosis is the theme of the Bible. That is the complete transformation of man into God. When I make a statement as I have just made it, it seems that this is man -- you and I are the man -- being transformed by a means other than ourselves, and I don't mean that at all. But man is so conditioned to believe he is a little worm that you approach it from that angle. You and I are the God transforming man into "our image" -- into "our likeness."

But then, if I said that to a large crowd, the curtain would come down and they wouldn't hear one word I had to say beyond that. But you and I took the plunge. We were the "sons of God," together making God, for the word "God" is a plural word. The word is "Elohim."

"In the beginning God." That word is Elohim; it is plural. And "God said, Let us make man in our image." The same word is Elohim. It's a compound unity; one made up of others.

We are told in Deuteronomy that "He has set bonds to the peoples according to the number of the sons of God." No child can be born unless God occupies that little temple. These are the "gods" that came down. You and I are the gods that came down. We are transforming these identities -- these men and women with which we are identified -- into "our likeness," rather than being transformed by something other than ourselves. We are the "gods" that came down; and when we awake, we are the "gods" spoken of in the very beginning. "In the beginning God" -- Elohim, plural, the gods -- "created the heavens and the earth," like creating a theater for the display of its might and its creative powers. And then the God said, "Let us make man in our image"; so we came down and clothed ourselves in these garments.

We aren't pretending. We completely abandon ourselves to these garments. The secret is self-abandonment. Never would you have made anything had you not loved it, -- never! We so loved it; and so, having loved it, we commit ourselves to the object of our love and actually become it. Self-commission is the secret.

Now we are told, "Be imitators of God as beloved children," in this world we have forgotten Who-We-Are. Now comes the revelation: "Be imitators of God as beloved children." Just as Christ loved us and gave himself for us, -- now imitate that!

But on this level, I feel myself Neville. But I know from experience, I am The One that became Neville, to transform this identity into my own Being, the Being that was, that has no beginning; and there was a plan that I set forth within myself when I buried myself in this being called "Neville." This is true of every one in the world.

Now listen to this carefully. It is the first chapter of Ephesians. I am just quoting four verses; you'll find them within the first ten verses; so I have omitted just a few because they are not necessary for what I want to get over.

"God chose us in Him before the foundation of the world . . . He destined us in love to be His sons through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of His will," "He destined us in love . . . . through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of His will, . . . which He set forth in Christ as a plan for the fullness of time." [Ephesians 1:4,5,9 10]

You listen to it carefully. Go home and you read it, in the first chapter within the first -- I think it is the 4th, 5th, 9th and 10th verses of Ephesians.

"God chose us in Him before the foundation of the world."

So, we see that the salvation of man is not an afterthought of the Creator. It is prior to this historical process. Long before this was animated and became history -- human history, this decision was made. So, our fitness is the consequence, not the condition, of His choice.

So here, as Neville, I -- the true Being -- chose "Neville." I am going to "play" Neville. You chose the being that you've chosen and we came down into this and animated it -- this historical process We are the "gods" who made the decision. We are identifying ourselves with these garments; we are transforming these into ourselves.

Now that is something that the world shuns against. They abhor it, because they do not realize that man -- the man -- can do nothing to save himself. There is not a thing that man as a man can do. It is the God who is buried within man who does it. As we are told in the Letter to the Philippians: "He" -- meaning God -- "who started the good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ." The "day of Jesus Christ" is the unveiling of this plan in you, for Jesus Christ is in you. "Christ in you is the hope of glory." Were he not in you, then you would be a dead, dead body forever and forever; but the "gods" came down, and it takes all the "gods," called "the sons of God," to form God. The One became fragmented into the many. One fell containing all. He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world. Do you get it? Before there was a world, we were. We are the "gods." We are in the One Being that is known in Scripture as God; and we came down for one purpose: to expand our own creativity, and we do it by actually burying ourselves in humanity.

Now, Crucifixion is either a demonstration of the most horrible failure in the world or the greatest success in the world. It has been proven that the seed that fell, which is called the Word of God -- and the Word of God is God, and that is God Himself!

"In the beginning was the Word. The Word was with God, and the Word was God."

The "Word" was the "seed" that fell into humanity. That is called the Crucifixion. Well, it rose, and it continues to rise, because all the "sons" will rise. None will fail. If one failed, you would have to leave every one behind and go in search of the one, because the one that is missing completes the One -- the "one body, the one spirit, the one Lord, the one God and Father of all."

So night after night as I take the platform, I know exactly what I want to say, and my problem is how to say it so as to be intelligible, to be understood by those who hear me. For man has been conditioned to believe that he is a silly little thing in the world who has sinned; and having sinned, now he must make all kinds of penance to redeem himself. Man cannot redeem himself. It is God who comes down; and by His crucifixion, which is the burial in man, God now demonstrates His creative power, that He can "die" and rise again. So, He "dies" in man.

"I am crucified with Christ," said Paul. "Nevertheless I live, yet not I but Christ who lives in me. And the life I now live in the flesh I live by reason of the faith that I have in the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me."

So that Son of God is in you. You say, "I am," -- that's He. That is the Son of God. But you so loved the object to whom you gave yourself that you sbandon yourself completely and empty yourself of your Divinity, and just buried yourself in the object of your love; and you are going to transform it into your Self, who is God.

Then when you transform it, you are the same God, only you have expanded beyond that moment in Eternity when you ventured into this experiment, becoming your own creation.

So in the world of Caesar, "be imitators of God as beloved children." Just as Christ loved us, and gave himself to us, -- now imitate that! So, are you in love with money? There's nothing wrong with it. Are you in love with fame? There's nothing wrong with it. Are you in love with physical health? Nothing wrong with that. But, be in love with it. If you are in love with it, you must do the same thing that God did in the beginning, and you are that God of whom I speak who so loved the object that is you when you see it reflected that He abandoned Himself. No restraint. A complete abandonment of Self to the object of its love. For if there is no object of the love -- no beloved, what is love? There must be a beloved to demonstrate love, and so you have an object -- your emanation, which is nothing more than your "wife," -- not your physical wife, -- the body is your emanation. That's your wife "till the sleep of death is over."

And you so loved it, you are going to transform it into the most beautiful, perfect thing in the world, which is just like you, who is perfect.

So, "He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and blameless before Him." That's what we are told. So, He chose me. Well, who is "He"? I am He; but to become me, He has to forget that I am He, and He thinks He is Neville. He has to. He chose me "in Him before the foundation of the world"; but now, I am The One who forgot and became Neville.

When I awake, I know I was "before the foundation of the world." But now I bring Neville with me, and now I have one more aspect of my protean being. I have another being I'll redeem. I fell in love with it and brought it back; and now I am the protean being, that I can see others, and let the others see me as Neville. So, they see me as Neville. But do they really see me? They see me as Neville when they see me clothed in Power, clothed in Wisdom, or maybe clothe in Love: and they will see me because I so loved that that I gave my Self to it, and raised it to the level of my own Being prior to coming down into it and burying my Self within it.

So, when I try night after night to tell it, I hesitate because I wonder if this is as clear as I can make it. I know what I want to say, but how to say it so that it is understood, that it is intelligible? Because you have got to go through all the preconceived misconceptions that man has concerning Scripture. And so I say, to experience Scripture, to experience God's plan of salvation, is really the whole purpose of life.

But while we are here, we can be anything we want to be; and the Being within us, who is our true Being, allows it and will go the part with us and play everything. But I am speaking to the God-in-you, the God in Scripture, whose name is Elohim, or Jehovah, or the Lord Jesus Christ. That's the same Being who is buried in you. He is actually buried in you! And that Being will rise.

"Teach me, O Lord. Teach me, O Holy Spirit, the testimony of Jesus that I may actually comprehend wondrous things out of the Divine Law. Teach me, O Holy Spirit."

Well, tell the story of the God who became man that man may become God. And then we are told the story in a very simple way, for:

"Truth embodied in a tale
Will enter in at lowly doors."
[Tennyson]

So you tell it as the simplest tale imaginable. Right from the beginning you tell the story.

"Truth embodied in a tale
Shall enter in at lowly doors."

So, Mother would take me on her knee and tell me the story of Jesus. He had no father; but he did one day claim he was the Father. Well, she didn't understand that, and neither did I. He had no father, but he claimed he was the Father! "I and my Father are one."

Then she told me that he had a miraculous birth. It was not like any birth in the world -- something different; and then she told me that he said that unless we are born in a similar manner -- for he said, "I am from above," that he was "born from above"; and "unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven." Then he also said that the most perfect man born of woman was John the Baptist, and yet the least in the Kingdom is greater than John the Baptist; therefore John the Baptist cannot be in the Kingdom of Heaven if the least is greater than he! No matter how little it becomes, the least is greater, and he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Mother did not understand that, any more than I did when she told me.

Then she told me that David "in the spirit" called him "my Lord." She didn't understand that, and neither did I. And then she told me that he identified himself as the Son of Man, and then likened the Son of Man to a fiery serpent; and that unless the Son of Man is lifted up in the same manner in which the fiery serpent was lifted up, he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

Then she told me that when he was baptized, a dove descended upon him and remained upon him, and the outer man knew. That outer man was called John, and he knew because it was revealed to him the one on whom the dove descended and remained was the Son of God -- the one that came down from Heaven, for "No man can ascend into heaven except the one who came down from Heaven, the Son of Man."

All this was a mystery, but a lovely story that excited the child mind; and so you carried it with you. This is something that is all within you. And then comes this shocking suddenness. When you least expected it, it all happened in you.

We go back to Ephesians. "He set it forth as a plan in Christ for the fullness of time." He set it forth in Christ. In Christ? Yes; and Christ is in you! God Himself descended into man, and He set forth His plan of redemption in Christ. So, in Christ, -- it is in man. It has, now, to unfold in man. So, it unfolded in me, and I realized that "I am He" who came down, for no one can go up unless he first came down. Well, having gone up in the fiery-serpent manner, then I must have been the one who descended.

But when I went up, I went up without the loss of the identity of Neville; so I came down and redeemed a being called Neville.

You come down and so identify yourself with the being that you believe yourself to be that when you go up you take that which you have redeemed with you. You present it to your brothers, for they are all waiting for the presentation of your act of faith. For faith is complete self-commission.

I cannot commit myself to that which I do not love. So God is Love. So, I loved it, and then agreed with all of us to commit myself to that; and then I committed myself to it, and lost all consciousness of the Being that I really am in my self-commission to the object of my love.

And then I went through "hell," as we all do. But as Paul said, "I consider the sufferings of this present time not worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed in us." What glory? The only glory is the glory of God; so the cry of one who has accomplished the job is this, in the 17th of John: "I have accomplished the work Thou gavest me to do. Now glorify Thou myself. Glorify Thou me with Thine own Self." Glorify me with your own Self. "Return unto me the glory that was mine, the glory that I had with Thee before that the world was."

So, bring it in now -- the glory that I gave up in my self-commission to the object of my love. Now let it return. So, I brought back, individualized, a garment I can wear in Eternity. It was "dead"; and I, like the seed that fell into the ground and died, revealing the great secret, the mystery of life through death, -- so, I "died." I died when I became this [indicating the physical body], and then suffered all the hell of the world.

And then the pattern which I contained unfolded within me. So, He has made manifest unto me the mystery of His will according to His purpose which He set forth in Christ as a plan for the fullness of time. So, He set it forth in Christ as the plan. Well, that plan is Jesus Christ buried in man. It's a pattern, -- so, the Pattern Man.

How to tell the world that Jesus Christ is the Pattern of salvation buried in man? when man has been taught to believe that Jesus Christ is a little man who walked two thousand years ago, and then disappeared, having told the story, to return again into this world physically that physical eyes would see him as coming from without; that's what the world has been told. But that is the > "Truth . . . embodied in a tale,

> That it may enter in at lowly doors," for if you were told it as I've told it tonight, the world couldn't take it. They would be shocked beyond measure to hear what you have heard tonight. They would not accept it. They believe in some little external savior that came two thousand years ago, and who promised to return; and the great teachers of today -- "great" in the sense of numbers, but not in understanding -- are looking for him to come from without.

He can't come from without, because He is buried within us. He can only come when He awakens within us. That pattern is the pattern in a seed. But this is God's Seed, the Word of God, buried in man. It unfolds within man; and when it unfolds within man, everything said of Jesus Christ -- the individual in whom it unfolds experiences it in the first-person, singular, present-tense experience. Then he knows Who-God-Is!

He always was God, who emptied Himself and took upon Himself the form of man; "and being found in the form of man, he became obedient unto death, even death upon the Cross" of man, and was made in that state a slave. But in the end, he fulfills his purpose, and then he is given a name that is above all names; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus is Lord to the glory of all.

Well, who is that Jesus? He is in you. So, when you actually fulfill and accomplish the job that you took upon yourself, you bear the name of Jesus. There is only one Lord. We all return, scattered as we are, -- we return as the one Lord, the one God, the one Father of all; "one body, one spirit," -- not many; and yet without loss of identity.

If I could take you with me into the actual experience, coming through two mornings ago -- Here I am. On the surface of my being

I know exactly what I am doing, and I am Spirit! And here is this whole vast world, and the world is "dead," -- just dead. But I cannot move it unless I come down into it.

I come down into it. But now with the memory of having been "born from above," having come down into it, I can change it. Prior to being "born from above," you lose all consciousness of the Being that you are that came from above, and you come back night after night in the "garment," and you are simply one more of the crowd, -- lost. But now, after the "birth from above," -- after you begin to grow in stature in the favor of the gods who preceded you in the same, similar "birth," -- memory, now, remains, for you come back in the morning from your union with the brothers. And you come back and you see it for what it is. It's all "dead."

But now you do not lose the consciousness, as you did prior to the "birth from above." So you come down. You can change it if you so desire. But why change it?

Listen to these words that came from Blake when Blake departed this world. But Blake was "born from above" long before he departed this world. So, in a book called "Looking at Modern Paintings," there is a chapter on Max Beckman, considered a great modern artist of modern paintings. He said he met Blake in this super-terrestrial world, and there was this giant of a man, like a supernatural being, and he waved greetings to him, and he said to me:

"Fall back. Have confidence in objects. Do not let yourself be intimidated by the horror of the world. Everything is ordered and correct, and must fulfill its destiny in order to attain perfection. Follow this path, and you will attain from your own ego an ever-deeper perception of the eternal beauties of creation. You will also attain an ever-increasing release from all that which now seems to you so sad and terrible."

The whole thing is ordered. The whole thing leads towards the perfection that you determined to bring about when you emptied yourself of God and actually became the being that you are today. And you will awake from it all, and you will return to the glory that was yours "before that the world was," -- only magnified beyond what it was by reason of your venture into this world of "death."

This was the limit of contraction -- the limit of opacity, and you took it upon yourself. Now there is no limit to the expansion -- to the translucence that you bring back. So, we all are returning to the Being that we were "before that the world was." So when we read: "He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world," we were the "gods." We were the "sons of God" that collectively make God.

So, that wonderful confession of the Hebrew faith is the greatest confession in the world:

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One."

Jehovah -- which is simply "I AM" -- translated the Lord -- "Yehodanoy" -- the Lord; and here our God, -- that's plural, "Elohim." We are the "gods"; but together we are "Adanoy" -- one. So, it takes the One made up of many to fall -- the One God that is the confession, the Shema of Israel:

"Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one."

Never forget it. No little man -- little picture -- do you stand before and worship. All this is "dead"; and men make idols of men. So he has money, or he is a tyrant, like a Lenin; so they make a little icon of Lenin, and thousands every day walk past this stupid little thing that is kept on display. And I read Buckley's statement today that was datelined "Leningrad." It used to be St. Petersburg. It was Peter's Square, the same square. Now it is Leningrad, and here is this little mummified thing; and a friend of his walking by the little mummified thing had his hand in his pocket, and the guard in the most impressive manner said, "Take your hand out of your pocket. You are passing through holy ground. Here is the word made flesh, and he dwelt among us."

And the way he treated it was perfectly marvelous, the way he treated this most stupid concept of worshipping this little thing that they had to pick up a few years ago and rebuild, because time takes its toll and it was disintegrating. And this is their little icon that they worship.*

I tell you, the only God in the world is you! There is no other god! One day you will know it. One day He will unfold within you. Read the story carefully, for when He unfolds within you, everything said of Him in Scripture you are going to experience in the first-person, singular, present-tense experience. And His only Son, which is only the personification of all the experiences that you have ever had as man -- so take all the experiences of man and all that man could ever experience, and fuse it into a single whole and personify that whole, and it comes out as David -- the David of Scripture, the great Psalmist. That's David. He stands before you, and he calls you, "my Lord." He calls you, "my Father." That is the only Son of God, which is a personification of the sum total of all the experiences of humanity. So when you, playing the part that you are playing, have gone through all the gamut that man is capable of experiencing, -- in the end, you awake, and then the sum total of the experiences is fused and personified and stands before you; and he is that glorious, beautiful lad David, and he calls you, "my Father," "my Lord." And the drama is over as far as you are concerned.

Then you join the brothers that you knew before the world was, and you contemplate the world of death. You become one of those who, in great Eternity contemplate death; and you too will say, "What seems to be is to those to whom it seems to be, and is productive of the most dreadful consequences to those to whom it seems to be, even of torments, despair and eternal death. But Divine Mercy steps beyond and redeems you in the one body, the Lord Jesus," [from "Jerusalem"] -- who is Jehovah.

"There is only one body, one spirit, one lord, one God and Father of all." So all are redeemed eventually, but the man -- as a man -- can't redeem himself. It's God-in-man that is doing the work. "He who began the good work in you will bring it to completion at the unveiling in you of God" -- as you.

---

* See L.A. Times article at end of this transcript, Page 11.

X14
S1

So my problem, night after night, is to find words to tell it. I know what I want to say, but the problem is how to say it, how to say it that it is understood, that it is intelligible, because you must alsays bear in mind that you are facing an audience that may not be prepared for the shock, for it is a shock to the human mind to tell them Who-They-Are. They would rather depend on something external to themselves and pray to it; so they go to church and light a candle, and they bow before some little man-made cross or a man-made star, and they do all these things on the outside; and no one has confidence in himself; and the Self of man is God. That wonderful human imagination of yours -- that is the Eternal God.

So, tonight I say, our roots are in God; and God Himself unfolds Himself within us. I could have said, Our roots are in divine imagining, and Divine Imagining unfolds Itself within us. But it doesn't matter. I personally like the word "God," but I do not put Him on the outside as something to worship. The world will accept that better if I said "God" than if I said "Divine Imagining." So, I did not say it in the beginning of the lecture; I now present it to you. But when you imagine, that's God creating. And "all things are possible to God." So begin to imagine. That's God -- God-in-action. But believe in the reality of the imaginal act. So you imagine yourself to be what reason denies and your senses deny; but imagine it.

God had to completely abandon Himself to the form of man to believe Himself man. Do you know what that is? The Being that you really are? For I tell you, when you come back after the "birth from above," and find yourself Spirit, -- I mean Spirit, but more real than anything in the whole vast world all put together, but you are Spirit, and you are more real than any object in space or all the objects in space.

But to come down prior to the "birth" is to forget yourself as Spirit. God is Spirit. And you do it after this "birth" without loss of identity. That's the lovely part about it; when you come back into the world and pick up the "garment" that is asleep on the bed, amd quite normally bathe it and shave it and feed it and do all the normal things with it; but you know it to be a "garment." And you know you've extracted from it a certain identity, which identity you take back as Spirit, for the body is going to be put into the furnace and be discarded. That will be simply reduced to the ash that it is, but you have extracted from it a certain identity; and you take back into the Brotherhood your accomplishment. You came down and "died" as a man, and now you go back, bringing back the identity of the man that you "wore" through the ages. You take it back! And you are all greeted in joy because you accomplished that which you intended.

So, the Will of God will not turn back until He has executed and accomplished the intents of His mind. In the latter days you understand it perfectly, -- only in the latter days.

So, "the sufferings of the present age cannot be compared with the glory that is to be revealed in us, for those whom He foreknew," -- and He foreknew all of the "sons" -- we are the "sons." Regardless of your sex, we are the "sons," for in the Resurrection we are above the organization of sex. We are neither male nor female. We are God! "And those whom He foreknew, He also predestined; and those whom He predestined, He also called; and those whom He called, He also justified and those whom He justified, He also glorified." So, no matter what you have done as man, you will receive justification -- in other words divine acquittal -- complete acquittal, no matter what you have done. If you have played the part of a Hitler or a Stalin, or any other monster, you will be acquitted. On this level you want them all to suffer; but your brothers, knowing the part you played, they don't want you to suffer. They want you to awaken from the dream of being a Hitler, the dream of being a Stalin, or any other horrible character in the world.

And so, when you come before Him, having been called, that is justification. "Justification" in Scripture is nothing more than divine acquittal. And after justification comes glorification, which is God's gift of Himself to you. You are then God the Father! And all the "sons" together form God the Father!

---oOo---

Los Angeles Times

★ MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1970 Part II—7

Two Tombs in Russia: a Saddening Contrast

BY WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

LENINGRAD—Everybody knows that Russia is a land of paradoxes, but few have imagined how little pains the Communists take to conceal them.

On the road to Zagorsk, the spiritual home of old Russia, you pass a splendid monument, a graceful, gently-arched titanium bow tapering, 75 feet high, into a missile, the first to orbit the earth: a fine commemoration of an extraordinary scientific achievement that required extraordinary resources.

A few miles further down the same road you note that a central hydrant delivers the water to the neighboring villagers. There is no running water 15 miles from the capital of the country that orbited the first earth satellite.

★

At Zagorsk you visit the monastery of St. Sergius, the patron saint of Russia. Here is one of the three surviving seminaries in the Soviet Union. For a while they were all shut down and then, after the war, eight were permitted to reopen. Krushchev, in pursuit of moderation, cut them down to three.

But the abbot does not talk about such matters. They recently buried the Patriarch Aleksiy, at age 92. Many thought him a fellow traveler for consenting to the long list of humiliations imposed on his church by the Soviet government. But he presumably knew that protests would not avail him, and reflected that martyrdom is inefficient in Russia. He lies in a little catacomb underneath one of the old sacred buildings, with a few wilted flowers on his grave.

The grave I saw the day before was something else. So heavy is the continuing demand to see the tomb of Lenin that the crowd stretches for two to three hours on a typical day. Honor guards keep the line moving at a rate that permits over 2,000 people to slip by every hour.

In front of us were schoolgirls, tiptoeing down the stairway, their right hands frozen in salute. You could almost hear their excited heartbeat. The guards hushed those who had not already been arrested by the mystery and the silence.

My companion had his right hand in his pocket, and the guard brusquely told him to take it out—one does not slouch toward Bethlehem.

All over Russia, the banners proclaiming Lenin's 100th birthday have gone apocalyptic in tone. "Lenin lived. Lenin lives. Lenin will live." (In the beginning was the Word . . .) Or "The Holy Lenin entered [it] on this earth in 1870. (The Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us . . .)

We were now just a few steps away from the turn to the right which brings you in view of Lenin, who died 46 years ago, but is preserved for the pilgrims who file so reverently by his remains, exposed in a glass coffin. Up you climb, a half dozen steps, then over past Lenin's feet, so that you stare directly down at his face.

(How chancy it all is. When the Tsar was overthrown, Lenin was in Zurich, rubbing oil on his balding pate, wondering whether modern, nonideological science would bring back his hair. Lenin was out of luck. None of the sciences he invoked ever did anything for him.)

In Leningrad, beautiful Leningrad, the Soviet government has transformed a cathedral into a permanent museum of "religion and atheism." It is a child's garden of anti-religious graphic art, done under Lenin's rubric, "We seek the emancipation of the working people from the superstitions of religion."

★

Pity the poor Russians. Imagine, St. Lenin as a substitute for St. Paul. We went by an exhibit of torture instruments—"These," our guide told us matter-of-factly, "were used by the religious people during the Inquisition." "Are they," I asked, "a part of the Lubianka collection?" At first she smiled. But quickly she thought better of it.

"That is not a funny joke," she said. She is a very sweet and scholarly lady, and I did not wish her to be hostage in surrogate ideological warfare, so I said that I agreed with her, that no jokes about torture are funny. She said, spotting a cop-out, "No, I don't mean that jokes about torture aren't funny, I mean jokes about what you said aren't funny."

I retreated, as travelers to the Soviet Union should. Sadly, believing as I do that all, all is lost to any society that dishonors the King of Kings. But that is a personal prejudice, which in Russia only St. Sergius and a few other subversives cherish, hoping as they do for a turn of events, in which connection God would prove most useful.

16P
S2

SELF IN SELF AND RISEN

14 May 1971

The earliest Christian creeds were drama, and not metaphysics or abstract doctrines. It was the descent of God into a world of death -- eternal death, and then the rising of God into the world of Eternal Life. That was the earliest Christian creed; but man turned around and made rituals and ceremonies and self-purifications, and all these; and they call it Christianity. But they are all in vain -- all of them. There is a way back, and only one way back. It is all described for us in Scripture.

Your life is the life of Job. Every child born of woman -- his story is the story of Job, innocent -- forgiveness of all offense. As we are told, in the end of the story of Job, after he had lost all his family -- he lost his seven sons and his three daughters, -- they were killed. Then he lost his health; he was filled with boils. Then he lost his friends; all his friends left him. He lost his wealth; he was a very, very wealthy man. And then he lost his honor. And in the very end, God restored twice as much to Job. Whatever he had, God doubled it.

And then his brothers and his sisters and those who had known him before came to comfort him, and they ate bread in his house with him, for all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him. Everything that happened to Job was done by the Lord; and the word translated the "Lord," "Jehovah," -- "Jod He Vau He" -- translated in its true sense is "I AM." That is the Lord God Jehovah that brought it all upon Job.

Now, the word "Job" means: "Where is my father?" That is the question that every child born of woman is asking. Where is the Cause of the phenomena of my life? Why do things happen as they happen? There must be a cause; and the cause is the "Father." So, "Where is my Father?"

In the very end, Job could say: "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees thee." In the very end, he found the Father.

I'll tell you, from my own experience, when you find the Father, you find your Self. Is not the "I" of waking and the Dreamer one? When you wake in the morning, do you not say, "I had a dream last night"? And you do not think the dreamer of the dream differs from the "I" of waking, do you? So, the "I" of waking and the Dreamer are one.

Now, when I was a boy, -- I would say, maybe eight years old, -- this thing lasted until I reached the age of puberty. It would come to me once a month, and I could tell the day that it was going to happen. I knew from the mood that possessed me, and I could not shake it. It used to scare me near unto death. But I knew from the minute I closed my eyes at night in sleep, this is going to happen. I became the ocean and the wave. The conscious, waking self was the wave, and the Deep of my Being was the ocean. And the Deep of my Being would take me, the wave, and toss me into the air; and that scared me -- frightened me beyond measure. It would catch me on its back, or its bosom, -- call it what you will; and all through the night this thing happened, once a month.

Read the 42d Psalm: "Deep calls to deep. At the sound of thy cataracts, all thy waves and thy billows have gone over me." Well, that happened to me every month for a period of about three or four years, and then it stopped. I did not know then at my tender years what it implied -- what it was trying to get over to me.

But, here, the Promise was: the two shall be one. Eventually the two -- the ocean and the wave -- will merge; they are one. This thing you see speaking to you, like the being that reflects you when you look into the mirror, -- you are the "sent," sent into the world of death; and you are the "Sender," and the Sender is the Lord God Jehovah.

You are "sent" into this world to experience death, for you are immortal. You cannot die. I tell you, do not fear this waking death, for we see it all around us. I tell you, you cannot die! I know that from experience, when night after night I encounter those the world calls "dead," and they are not dead at all. The "Satan" of Scripture is simply the body of doubt that seems, but is not.

Now, I will share with you an experience of mine of last Sunday morning, to show you this thing really is a "play." This whole thing is a play! And the Dreamer is really playing all the parts, and that Dreamer is one. And you will say, "Could he be love?" He is Infinite Love. He never changes His Love for you. He sleeps the sleep of "death" till the man that he loves is revealed as Himself, who is God. And yet, in that interval, He scares you to death to get you to actually wake and know there is only one Father, and you are the Father -- the Cause of the phenomena of life. I will show you how He does it.

Last Sunday morning, I would say at about 1:30, I awoke. I thought I would bring my wife home from the hospital that day, but this was not "in the cards." I brought her home on Tuesday, but I awoke and made all things ready to bring her home. And then, I thought, "It is too early to get up. She isn't here. There is nothing I can do for her."

So, I began to meditate, and I said to myself: "Oh, let us have something wonderful tonight, a revelation -- a real revelation -- something to share with those who come, something to tell them, -- not to encourage them falsely, but to tell them the truth. Give me something deep, something big, tonight." And then I fell asleep.

I awoke at 6:15, and this was that which preceded the waking, the experience -- the most horrible drama you have ever heard of! Intrigue, deceit, betrayal, -- you name it, it was all part of that drama. As told us in the 41st Psalm: "Even my bosom friend whom I trusted, who ate my bread, has lifted up his heel against me."

Well, the net began to draw in. At first, I didn't realize that I was the object of this net being closed in. Men came seeking my help, and I gave them help. They asked me to shelter them, that they were simply not guilty of what they were accused of doing. Well, I believed them, and I sheltered them -- hid them in my home; and this whole thing was a plot by the "government." These people that I trusted and believed their story, they were part of the plot to get me to shelter them -- to get me to give them hospitality, to show that I could be intimidated by my love of them or friendship for them. Only in the very end of the experience, I suddenly began inwardly to laugh, for I realized it was a play; that not one thing could have been different. It could not have been different; the whole thing was a play.

And standing there in my own home, realizing it was a play, and the play came to an end and all these characters -- then came a scroll before my face, in bold, large script, and this is what it said: "The end of the play is Self in Self and Risen." That's the end of the play: when the one that is "sent" is brought back to the "Sender" and Self-in-Self -- the two become one, and risen. And then the curtain came down. That was the play.

I tell you, this is a "play"; and you are "sent" into this world where everything dies. It appears, it waxes, it wanes, and it vanishes. Today's generation, called the "new generation," -- they have no concept that they, too, will reach the age of threescore and ten. It never occurred to me when I was ten that anything over twenty was young. I never knew my mother as a young woman, and yet my mother was my mother when she was in her twenties; and yet as she grew older and I grew older, I always knew an elderly lady for my mother. Here she was, the mother of ten of us, and I never knew her as a young, beautiful woman. I had pictures of her; but to me, she was always an elderly lady. And yet, when I was old enough to know better, in the eyes of possibly every man that she met, they saw her a beautiful, attractive lady, but I was not given that way at the age that I was, young and growing, and she grew naturally; and so she became an old lady. I never knew her as an attractive young woman that my father knew. So, youth will never know from day to day -- anything over twenty -- if you are ten, it's old. But you tell a young man who sees anything over forty as old that he is old in the eyes of a 10-year-old, he is stunned. He can't believe that anything can look upon him and see that he is old. Yet anything twenty to the eyes of ten is an old man, especially if he comes now with a beard on him and long hair. He looks old, and very old, to a young little girl of eight or nine; yet to himself, he is the new generation, and twenty!

I say, it's a "play," -- the most glorious and horrible play in the world. These are signs that I will share with you now. When you are coming to the end of the play, before the "birth from above," -- before you are raised from the dead within your own skull, -- for that is the grave in which God is buried; before these happen, there will be signs. God is a protean being. When I say "God," I mean your own wonderful human imagination -- that's God. That's the Lord Jehovah. That is a protean being. By "protean," I mean one capable of assuming any form, any face, any shape that suits its purpose, to test you -- to test you if you are faithful to the faith. What faith? Faith in God! And they will test you. You will find this experience, as a friend of mine recently had this one, and thought herself "beside herself." She wondered if she was going insane. She is blessed that it could happen to her.

Don't ask that your eyes be opened before the time. You will pity the day that you asked for it. should it happen that your eyes are opened -- I mean, your in-current eyes, -- eyes that are open into the world of thought -- into Eternity that is ever expanding in the bosom of God, your own wonderful human imagination, which is that Inner Being that you are -- the Immortal You.

So, when you are coming to the end, vou will have this experience: You trust Neville? You believe him? You believe when he tells you that your own wonderful human imagination is Christ Jesus? Do you believe that Christ Jesus is buried within you in your own skull, and that He must awaken in you as you and rise in you as you? You don't see another; you only see yourself; and that Self is Christ Jesus; so what is said of him, you are going to experience, in the first person singular, present-tense experience.

David in the spirit called him, "My lord," and David in the spirit will call you "my lord, my Father, my God, my Rock." He will, just as you are told in Scripture he called Jesus Christ, that he called God, "my father." You are going to have the experience; but this is what will precede it.

You say you believe Neville, and he tells you that your imagination is God, and by your imagination all things are made, and without it is not a thing made that is made? You say, Yes, to that; I believe him. And so, you love him for bringing that message and setting you free. But do you really believe him? Or, are these traditions of the past still a part of your thinking? "I wonder if he's wrong? I wonder if he is deceiving us or maybe deceiving himself?"

Well, now, you'll be put to the test; not by Neville. I have told you what I have experienced. I know it's true. You will be put to the test by the depths of your own Being, for He is a protean Being. He can wear my face. He will wear my face, and mock your beliefs and tell you there is no god! Coming from my face, he could mock my voice, too. I say, He is a protean Being. He can assume anything, any form, and play the part necessary to put you, the "sent," to the extreme test.

When He mocks your belief in God and in the Son of God, when He mocks your belief that imagination creates reality, and laughs at your stupidity and tells you the whole thing is a delusion, you awake from such an experience in a sweat. You do not know what to believe now; but you fought it during the time, even though He wore the face of the man you trust, and He was so perfect as that man, that you could not for a moment bring yourself to believe he wasn't Neville! Yet, on waking, you know you did keep the faith, you defied Him, and you'd rather die than not believe what now you believe. You won the battle. It wasn't easy. It only took a night, but may I tell you? that night seemed like Eternity.

You'll have it! But don't despair; you will come out of it, for the Depth of your own Being is doing it. So, the Depth of your own Being will put you to the test. He is the Dreamer-in-you, the very One that put Job -- the story of Job, where he went through hell, and came out in the end, and he was completely innocent of everything charged against him. And then in the end, he saw God.

16P
S2

To see God, you must be God; and when you see God, it's because His Son calls you, "God." You will never know that you are God until His Son stands before you, and you know without doubt you are looking into the face of your own son, and that son is David. And David calls you, "Father." And you have no uncertainty whatsoever as to this relationship between your son and yourself. Well, until that day comes, you only hear of God.

So, as I opened the lecture by telling you the earliest Christian creeds were drama, the earliest book in the New Testament is Galatians, and the 3d chapter opens in this manner: "And Paul said, O foolish Galatians, who has bewitched you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified? Let me ask you only this: Did you receive the Spirit by works of the Law or by hearing with faith? Are you so foolish, having begun in the spirit, are you now ending in the flesh?"

Are you going to see Jesus Christ as a man of flesh, when you knew him to be, in the beginning, Spirit? It was in Spirit that David called him, "Father"; it is in the Spirit that you will be called, "Father." No "David" running around this room or this world could ever convince you by calling you "Father" that you are Father! It has to be done in Spirit. And that David is the only David; although undoubtedly in this world of ours there are hundreds of thousands of little boys named David, not one of them would fit the bill. It is the David, the David of the Old Testament; and he is exactly as described in Samuel. And when you meet him, he doesn't have to tell you that he is David. You know exactly who he is, and he knows who you are; and this relationship is forever. That is the end of the drama. And in that end, Deep calls to Deep, and the two become one; and the "I" that is awake is one with the Dreamer.

But, then, the Dreamer awakes! Then we understand the words in the 44th Psalm; "Rouse Thyself. Why sleepest Thou, O Lord? Do not cast us off forever. Awake!" Well, then, the Lord awakes; the Dreamer awakes. And the Dreamer-in-You is God! By then, the two become one.

So, in my vision of Sunday morning, Self in Self and Risen is the end of the play, -- when these two are drawn together and they are one.

Now you think of God. You can't help it. You are thinking of Him. You are not yet drawn together. So, the world addresses God as, "Thou." At the end when they are drawn together, you can't address the Unity as, "Thou"; it's "I AM." Until the two become one, you always think of God. You think of Jesus Christ. You think of the Lord. Any time the names, "God," "Jehovah," "Jesus Christ," "Lord" in any way whatsoever convey the sense of an existent "some one" outside of Self, that is a false god. But you can't blame man for that, for the drama is not over in the life of the individual who still sees God as "another." When the drama comes to its end, there is no "other." The two are one. And then you rise. You rise into the world of Eternity.

This is all revelation. It's not anything you can sit down and rationalize. Revealed Truth cannot be logically proven. You can't do it! If man insists on tearing it apart to his reason, -- well, let him insist; he will do it forever and never find Him. It will come in its own good time, after you've gone through the "furnaces." And no one will escape the "furnaces." You cannot bring Him out of the world of "death" unless He goes through these "furnaces of affliction"; then He comes out. When He comes out, He is the hero. He is the victor. He went into a battle with "death," and then overcame it; and then He returns to the Being that He was "before that the world was." He gave up all that is His to enter this world of "death." He isn't pretending that He is man. He actually became man, that man may become God.

16P
S2

So, your rituals, if you still have them, all your ceremonies, all your self-purifications, -- people go off to mountain tops to meditate; they change their diet and become strict vegetarians; they become the great moralists, -- all the great moralisms of the world, -- are all in vain. But in the end, you will forgive every being in the world for all of his foolishness, and for all of the seeming horrors that he committed or that he passed through, for everything was on the shoulder of the Dreamer. And the Dreamer is God!

So, in the end, Job was forgiven all and blessed by multiplying his greatness, because all that happened to Job -- he did not earn it. He should not have had it if you take judgment into consideration. He was completely exonerated, for the whole thing was brought upon him. All the evil that befell him came upon him by the Lord!

And then the story simply closes in the 42d chapter as though the Lord had done nothing. He so loved him that he put him through the paces, because you cannot extract gold without fire. He brought him out pure gold, pure Being, one with Himself; then they fuse, they meld, and they become one. No longer are they two, but one.

So, you are returning to the Being that is your Source, -- that is, the Father; and when you return to the Father, you are the Father. And because the Father could not be a father without a son, the Son has to appear and call you, "Father." And he appears as David -- the David of Biblical fame. And there you see Who-You-Are, for you never could look into a mirror and see yourself as God the Father. You can only look into the face of David and know that you are God the Father.

There's no other way of knowing it, as told us in Scripture: "No one knows who the Son is except the Father, and no one knows who the Father is except the Son, and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal Him," for "No one has ever seen God, but the Son who is in the bosom of the Father, he has made Him known."

So, that Son is David. He is hidden there until you go through everything and return to your Source, which is God the Father. What a strange dream, that you who came out of man, -- rising up out of man, and therefore seemingly the son of man if you come out of man, -- turn around and become man's Father!

And if God is the Father of Humanity, and you are the father of the symbol of Humanity -- David, then you are God! For David is the symbol of Humanity. All the generations of men, all of their experiences, fused into one grand whole and personified, is David. So, you had to pass through all the things that men must pass through. You have done it if you arrive at the point of being God the Father.

So, you name it -- the horrors of the world, you did it! Name all the noble things of the world, -- you did that. You have experienced everything; you cannot escape one. And in the end, you come out as God the Father.

So, "SELF IN SELF AND RISEN" is the end of the "play." But should you not have it now while you are functioning here, let me assure you, "death" does not end this little drama. You do not die, dead though the body seems, it turns to dust; put it in the oven, cremate it, -- it is all dust, a little handful of dust. But you do not die! You are instantly restored in a body just like this, only young if you are old, and the same age if you are young, -- in a world terrestrial, just like this, to be confronted with the unfinished dream; and there you will dream it to the very end. No one will escape it.

We must dream the Dream of Life; as our forefathers did, so must we. And it will be said of you, as the poet said it of one that he saw rise from the grave, -- he might have described his own experience and put it in the third person. This is Shelley:

> "He hath awakened from the dream of life --
> 'Tis we, who lost in stormy visions, keep
> With phantoms an unprofitable strife." [from "Adonis"]

All these are phantoms -- yourself "pushed out"; and all will play their parts. If they deceive you, they will deceive you. Betray you? They'll betray you! They will seemingly be friend and then betray, because you could not be betrayed unless first he was a friend.

You share your secret with a friend. The slave would not know it. And no one, not knowing your secret, could ever betray you. How could they betray a secret that they do not know? So, in the end, when you stand the test, He no longer calls you, "Slave," for you have been a slave to the Dreamer. You did everything that He dreamed -- but everything. But in the end, now He changes the relationship.

"No longer do I call you slave, for a slave knows not what his master is doing. I call you, Friends, for I have told you all that I have heard from my Father."

Here is the Awakened One speaking now as Father, and He tells you that your father and his father are one Father. "So, go and tell my brothers I am ascending unto my Father and your Father, unto my God and your God."

Now He speaks in the estate of the Father and calls you, Friend. And those that He can single out and call, Friend, -- they are leaving the estate of the slave where the dream is coming to an end in their case. In his case, it came to an end; but he has now to leave the world and send the Spirit of Truth -- which is Himself -- into the hearts of those who are about to leave it, that all these things will rapidly unfold in them.

16P
S2

So, every one is going to have this identical experience. I don't care what you are doing today. I am speaking of experiences. You could be born in Russia, born in America, born in any part of the world, in China; but you will have similar experiences of deceit, betrayal, -- all these things; being imprisoned, the judge, and the victim; you played all the parts. Not one did you escape. And in the end, I can't tell you the mood that possessed me when the net began to pull in, and there was no escape up to the very end. I could see it drawing, and then it was all revealed why the "government" had plotted this entire thing. Yes, the government of Caesar. This is the world into which God descends -- the world of "death," the world of Caesar.

And all this thing was drawn upon me, and drawn closer and closer; and all along they really wanted to intimidate me, not them. They weren't seeking them at all. And then I began to awake; and in waking, I knew it was a play.

It's like the actor when the final curtain is coming down; and so it is over. And then comes the scroll -- this beautiful script -- powerful, very large letters, a very simple way to read it. "The end of the play is Self in Self and Risen." And then I awoke! It was 6:15.

That story is every man's story. So, I tell you, Fear not this waking "death." You cannot die. And what the world is afraid of, called "Satan," -- Satan is only the body of doubt -- a thing that is not. It all vanishes. "Get behind me, you Doubter."

So, when she was confronted with a man wearing my face, and not a thing could actually persuade her at the moment it was not Neville standung before her, it was her own Deep speaking, challenging himself: Do you really believe it? And I had to deny -- play the part of the denier, the one that she trusted, the friend she trusted; and then to tell her the whole thing is false, and mock her, telling her:

"There is no God, or Son of God . . . That Thou, O Human Imagination, O Divine Body of the Lord Jesus are all A delusion; . . . " -- not speaking to the silly, stupid one who wore my face, for that was a mask to deceive her. How powerful he is, how magical he is. And then she had to say from within herself: "I know Thee, O Lord," -- from her own Deep, -- "when Thou arisest upon my weary eyes, even in this dungeon and this iron mill . . . . For Thou also sufferest with me, though I behold Thee not." She can't see Him yet, -- "but I still believe in You."

" . . And the Divine Voice answers: Fear not. I am with you always. Only believe in Me, that I have power to raise from the dead Thy brother who sleeps in" -- Humanity. [Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

For all these are "brothers," the sons who came down into the world. We are all the sons of God; and together, collectively, we form one Being, and that one Being is God the Father! So, each is returning, without loss of identity, to share the Oneness of God as God Himself. And having had the experience through "death," the summation of all the experiences of Humanity is personified as a living, breathing being, and his name is called "David."

16P
S2

So, I tell you, it's a play. If you keep that in mind, you will forgive it as you would forgive an actor. "God only acts, and is, in existing beings or men." [Blake, from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell" -- 'A Memorable Fancy']

I received a letter today from a friend of mine. She hasn't been here in the longest while. She has recently gone through quite a tragedy. Her husband was killed in an automobile acciddnt. She has three grown children, She came over the years, and she firmly believed me; but with all the tragedy and all the things that preceded this, and the loss of money and the loss of this and the loss of the other, one begins to question.

So she said: "I finally had this experience of you. I haven't had a dream of you in the longest while, but finally last night I had this experience. You were an old actor, and you had baggy clothes, and you were teaching my kids. You seemed a very friendly sort of a person, but you were an old actor, and not very well put together. You were simply wearing old, baggy clothes. And suddenly, in the twinkling of an eye, you were completely transformed, and you are the Crucified Christ!

"And there you are with the Crown of Thorns upon your head and the blood trickling down your body. And it's the Neville that I knew; but in the twinkle of an eye, from the baggy actor teaching my kids, you are now the Crucified Christ, wearing the Crown of Thorns, and the blood trickling down your body. And then I woke."

She said, "I felt so elated, for as Paul said, 'No man can be an apostle" -- an "apostle" means one who is "sent," -- "unless he has a vision of the Lord.'"

Now, she had a vision, not of the Risen Lord, the crucified Lord. You must have a vision of the Risen Lord, because it's the Risen Lord that sends you into the world, not the crucified Lord. For we are all the "crucified" Lord, as Paul teaches: "I have been crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, Christ lives in me; and the life I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me."

That's the "crucified" Lord. Then said he, "If I have been united with him in a death like his," -- which is the Crucifixion, -- "I shall be united with him in a Resurrection like his." See the difference in tenses? We "have been crucified with him in a death like his." Every one is crucified on these garments of flesh. This [indicating the physical body] is the Cross, where Christ is crucified. Because we have been crucified with him in a "death" like his, we shall be united with him in a Resurrection like his.

So, it is a difference in tenses: one is over, and one is future. Those who will see me in the capacity of the Risen Lord are seeing that One of whom Paul spoke when he was challenged because he never met Jesus in the flesh; and he said he would not recognize any one in the flesh. He said, "As I once regarded Christ from a human point of view, I regard him thus no longer." He refused to recognize any physical Christ, for Christ is Spirit, for God is Spirit, and they are one!

16P
S2

Then he goes on to say the kind of a Christ that he will recognize, and he is the Risen Lord, for he saw the Risen Lord; and when they challenged his right to call himself an Apostle, he laid down the indispensable prerequisite for apostleship, and that is: he said, "Am I not free? Am I not an Apostle? Have I not seen the Lord Jesus?" To have seen the Risen Lord is the indispensable qualification for apostleship. So, she will have to see me in that state, not in the state where she saw me this past few days.

I am glad she saw it, that her faith may be restored that I am teaching the Christian faith. And I am speaking from experience. I am not theorizing. I am not leading any one into some little -ism. I have no desire whatsoever to start an -ism; you are only going to make it all the more difficult to extricate yourself. They make some little school or some little -ism. For what? And then they complicate it with all kinds of things you should not do. "Thou shalt not," "Thou shalt not." No; we leave that completely alone. Those who want it, let them have it.

I am telling you the only way back to the Source. But it has already been prepared. Don't try to find another way. This is the only way. He said, "I am the way." It's a series of supernatural events, beginning with the Resurrection within your own skull, -- it begins there. Then comes your "birth"; the very moment that you rise within yourself you come out as one "born from above," and all the symbolism of Scripture surrounds you, the babe and everything, the witnesses. And then comes the discovery of the Fatherhood of God, which is yourself, and the Brotherhood of Man, which symbolizes your Son, for he is Humanity. And then comes the Ascent, like a fiery serpent, into the Highest of Highs within you. Then comes the Seal of Approval, which is called the Descent of the Dove upon man -- upon you, and he will smother you with love. It's only the symbol of the Holy Spirit. Now you are clothed with the Holy Spirit, and He is Infinite Power and Wisdom and Truth. But that's yours to exercise when you take off the "cross," this garment of flesh, for the last time, which will soon come after these events unfold within you.

---oOo---

Neville 06-10-1968

SHARING IN CREATIVITY

There is no greater thrill than sharing in divine creative activity! This activity, however, cannot be earned, for it is given by grace. When someone proclaimed: "I am of Paul and I am of Apollo," Paul asked, "Who is Paul and who is Apollo? I have planted and Apollo has watered, but God gives the growth." An idea is a seed which can be planted in the mind; but having no life in itself, the thought will remain dormant unless God gives it birth.

Speaking of a remnant, Paul said: "When Elijah petitioned God against Israel because they had killed his prophets and destroyed his altars, and I alone am left, what did God say? He said: 'I have seven thousand men who have not bent their knee to Baal.'" Then Paul added this thought: "So, too, at this time there is a chosen remnant, chosen by grace; and if it is by grace, then it is not based on works - otherwise, grace would no longer be grace." (Romans 11) The remnant is chosen by grace, yet no one knows the secret of God's selective love, and therefore cannot boast if he is elected. I, like Paul, say that at this time also a remnant has been chosen.

Now, although Paul speaks of seven thousand men, these are not people, but the number seven - which means spiritual perfection, a perfection which cannot be earned. Fitness for the kingdom is the consequence, not the condition, of God's grace. The moment an individual is called, embraced, and has union with the Holy Spirit, he is spiritually perfect. Prior to that moment in time he is not fit, therefore he is chosen by grace.

The entire epistle to the Romans rests upon Paul's argument for the paramount importance of faith in God's plan of salvation. To Paul, Christian teaching was teaching Christ as a great mystery. He defines Christ as God's power and wisdom wrapped in a pattern which unfolds within an individual. And the faith of which Paul speaks is faith in the pattern he calls Christ. The churches have distorted Paul's faith in Christ, making it a person; yet Paul asked: "What came you out to see, a man that can be tossed by the wind? How can men call upon him in whom they do not believe? And how can they believe in him of whom they have never heard? And how can they hear unless there is a preacher? And how can men preach unless they are sent? As it is written, 'How beautiful are the feet of those who preach good news.'" Using Isaiah as his marvelous argument, Paul asks: "Lord, who has believed what he has heard from us?" Then he concludes: "Therefore, faith comes from hearing, and hearing comes by teaching Christ."

Paul is speaking of his faith in the vision of the end, when he told Timothy: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race. I have kept the faith." No matter what happened to Paul, whether he was in prison or shipwrecked, he held aloft the mighty works of God, which must come to the individual at the end of this age of death. Your departure from the age of death and entrance into the age of life occurs when the power of God and the wisdom of God is born in you individually. This act fits you to function consciously in an entirely different age - a world which is unknown to anyone here, as nothing here relates to what is seen there. Although perceived, that age is unknown until your garment of death is removed for the last time.

Now, those who are sent are conscious of being sent. They are aware of that moment of union with God, as well as every event which takes place thereafter. Paul tells us that only the sent can be the preacher. But as we are told in the gospels: although some bring forth a hundred-fold, others sixty-fold and still others thirty-fold, all are qualified to enter the kingdom of heaven, and exercise their creative power of different levels.

Although many here have not brought through the full consciousness of birth, one lady has had all of the experiences but the dove. I will now tell her story. In her vision she was on a ship moving down the coastline of California, when she asked someone to let her know when she would pass Point Conception. A man at her side said: "We passed that thirty miles back, don't you remember?" Feeling a little foolish, she admitted she had forgotten - but I say to her: this was thirty years, not miles. Your conception happened thirty years ago, and therefore your birth from above is imminent. A short time later she awoke, hearing a voice say: "Father, father." Feeling fatherly love, she answered: "Yes, my son." This vision was not an adumbration, but her very Being, telling her in symbolic form what has already happened, for this vision was followed by another.

The next day a beautiful infant appeared before her. This was followed by a handsome youth. As the vision continued, she found herself in a house with a man who was both a thief and a murderer. Running toward the kitchen, a terrified female companion blocked her entrance. Turning, she found an alcove with an unusually small window. Sticking her head through it, she had to squeeze her body through, when suddenly everything gave way as though made of paper. At that moment the man appeared with a jackknife in his right hand and a butcher knife in his left. Approaching him from the rear, she grabbed both of his hands and, slamming the jackknife shut, she cut his right hand and somehow wounded the left.

Then her female companion entered with an enormous saw which she held above her head with both hands and asked: "Shall I saw him in half?" Screaming, "No," my friend moved between the two and - with her back to the lad - she said: "I love him." With that, she took the man in her arms and embraced him. As she looked into his face she saw, not a criminal, but a friend who had died many years ago, yet one she had always respected because of his integrity, his courage, and most of all for his individualism.

In his poem, "The Hound of Heaven", Blake tells of being chased all through the nights and days, down through the arches of the years, all through the labyrinthine ways of his mind; and in the midst of tears, he hid from him. But at the very end he discovered he was the one he had been seeking. That seeming other - his tormentor - was in truth his lover, who is God the Father.

In her glorious vision, the companion severed her when she faced her tormentor. At that moment she experienced the splitting of the curtain of the temple from top to bottom. She did not see the act, for she turned her back on the lifted sword. She doesn't remember the blow any more than she remembers the conception or the birth, but the whole thing is over for her. It was brought back to her in beautiful imagery. Her Father knows why he kept the experiences away from the surface mind, but it is my hope that she will remember the descent of the dove.

Another lady wrote telling of her vision, in which she was holding an elongated box, much like a shoe box. Knowing she is in the box she is observing, she hears her own voice speak from the box, saying: "I am Joseph and cannot get out until I am Jesus." This is perfect imagery. In the Book of Genesis we read: "In the beginning God," and the book ends with these words: "In a coffin in Egypt." The word translated coffin means an elongated, movable place of worship covered with skin. Joseph is in this elongated box, dreaming this dream called life. Now, the Bible ends with the words, Come Lord Jesus. And we are told: I am the beginning and the end. God began to make this world alive by burying himself in man. Your body is the coffin in which Joseph is buried, dreaming your life into being, and he cannot get out until he becomes Jesus. Only then can he break the shell and resurrect himself to reveal you, individually, as the Lord God Jehovah. My friend has already had the conscious union with the Holy Spirit. She is destined to experience all of the events consciously.

Another lady wrote saying she found herself in a huge domed room, which she knew to be her skull. Awake and aware as she had never been before, she was aware of the immensity of space as she awoke. Finding herself awake in God's tomb, she has resurrected. This event is followed by the birth from above. Although she did not bring forward her exit from her skull, she has been born from above. In her letter, she said: "After this experience the world seemed to change. The people began to take on the appearance of mechanized dolls and the world a huge doll house." She saw correctly, for the world outside is truly filled with mechanized dolls. Every event in the world contains the capacity for symbolic significance. Everything there is dead, simply bearing witness to the imaginal acts of men.

Let me put it this way: This past week the nation mourned the passing of what - on the surface - was a fine, cultured, well-educated young man, with seemingly everything to live for. As far as we know, he was a member of a devoted family, a senator with multiple millions at his beck and call. He was first publicly recognized as a lawyer when his brother appointed him to be the United States Attorney General, therefore, he personified law. Desiring to become the president, he personified government.

Although the people had only a day or two to arrange his funeral to be shown on television, millions of people set themselves to the task. If you watched their production, you saw two hundred priests, cardinals, and archbishops on the inside of the church. The choral groups sang and the music played, as everything was performed on cue. Now, when a Broadway show goes into rehearsal, it may take weeks or even months to open; yet this event was done live, without any retakes. What average person could depart this world and find such a gathering of archbishops and cardinals, the president, and government representatives? Therefore, he is the personification of that greatest of all institutions of an orthodox nature.

Let us turn to the last chapter of the Book of Revelation, where we find these words: "Those who will not believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, let there be a curse upon him." This is followed by the word “anathema” and translated, “Come Lord Jesus”. The word, however, means a curse, solemnly pronounced by ecclesiastical authority and accompanied by excommunication.

When you turn your back on all organizations, laws, customs, and institutions which would interfere with the direct access to your Father, you will look dispassionately upon a scene such as that which recently took place, and see it as proclaiming your freedom. Having witnessed the passing of that which personified and embodied the institutions of law, government, and orthodox religions from your mind, you will realize that every belief which would interfere with your direct access to the Father has passed away, and you are free to be born from above. You cannot hold any false beliefs and expect birth from above, for your belief will be your intermediary between yourself and the source. You must give up all and stand alone, just you and God the Father. Only then are you born from above. This is followed by God's son revealing himself to you by calling you Father. And like the lady who felt an intense fatherly feeling for her son, you will answer automatically: "Yes, my son."

As I said, I cannot conceive of any greater satisfaction than sharing in the divine creative activity in the depth of one's soul. I was called and sent in 1929. Thirty years later I experienced the birth from above. It has been 39 years since my conscious incorporation into God's body, thereby becoming one body and one spirit with the Risen Lord. The night of my birth I knew the mission that was mine. I am telling you now, not to boast, for I did not commission myself. I did not volunteer, but was drafted. I was called, incorporated into the body of love and sent, fulfilling scripture; for how can men hear unless there is a preacher, and how can men preach unless they are sent?

The pulpits of the world do not preach Christ, but the issues of the day, discussing what can be done to change this moral illness. That's not Christ! Tell the true story over and over again until those who hear it respond deeper and deeper. Tell it continuously, for there is no other story to tell. What does it matter what happens in a doll house filled with mechanical dolls? Are you going to be confused about this doll's departure and that one’s arrival? The world is an externalized play, bearing witness to an inner activity of the soul. If you see experiences as horrors and become emotionally involved in them, they tie you to them. But if you can see that which is external to yourself, but reflecting your thoughts, you will change their flow, thereby departing from thoughts which would bind and curse you.

You are told: 'They will put you out of the synagogue. They will murder you and think they are serving God. They will do this because they know neither the Father nor me." If they knew the real Father, they would know me, for we are inseparable. One day you will know who you really are. You will know you are God the Father, because you will look into the face of God's only begotten son, David; and knowing he is your son, you will experience a love greater than you have ever known before. And when he calls you father, you will know for a certainty that you are God!

This vision is God's gift of grace, which is God's unearned and unmerited gift of himself. In spite of the fact that you may feel you are unworthy of receiving so marvelous a gift, God so loves you he gives you his only begotten son to reveal your true identity and fulfill God's purpose to himself. Your response to what you hear concerning the true Christ is the measure of your real faith, which deepens as the story is heard over and over again. Then you have but one consuming goal: to set your hope fully upon the grace that is coming to you at the unveiling of Christ from within you.

Asking the simple question: "What think ye of the Christ?" he continues by asking: "Whose son is he?" When they answered: "The son of David," he asks this most important question: "Why then did David in the spirit call him Lord? If David, in the spirit calls him 'Lord,' how can he be David's son" Only when David calls you Father, will you know you are the Lord Jesus Christ.

We are told that in the beginning God placed himself in a coffin in Egypt. This world is Egypt. It is dead, but God's hope is fulfilled at the journey's end when all the promises in the Old Testament are fulfilled in the New, in you! The Old Testament ends upon this note: "A son is his father's honor. If then I am a father, where is my honor?" The New Testament opens with the genealogy of the coming of that son!

I came down from heaven not to do my own will, but the will of him who sent me. Of all that He has given me I shall not lose one. I do not consciously draw those to me. I have to let them come. The Father in me who sent me draws them. Having been sent, everyone who is drawn, must come as part of the great remnant. That's how God builds his living temple. It is made up of the redeemed - all woven into the one living body, the one Spirit, the one Lord, the one God and Father of all.

God's temple is not made with human hands, like a cathedral here. It is not dead, but a living body. How one being who is now magnified to fill the earth can contain every being within himself and still remain one man, is a great mystery and a true one. You will fuse into it, without loss of identity. And those who are sent will do so with the consciousness of what has happened, and grow more and more aware of what has happened from then on.

Everyone who comes into God's temple brings his measure of divine creative power and wisdom, which he received through being reborn from above. Therefore, as we all share in creativity, we add to the wisdom of God, to the power of God, and to God's luminosity; for everyone brings light, brings power, and brings wisdom, causing the body to grow in wisdom, grow in creative power, and grow in light.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 06-24-1968

SIGNS FROM ABOVE

The evangelists of scripture, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, are anonymous names of men who wrote salvation history. They introduced characters who never walked this earth, but whose names are significant.

In the Book of John, we find the story of Nicodemus. Now, Nicodemus is not mentioned in any other part of the Bible, or in any historical records of the time; so we see Nicodemus was not introduced for some historical purpose. The word means “conqueror of the people; all victorious”.

Nicodemus was a Pharisee, a very learned member of the Sanhedrin - which was the supreme council of Jews in New Testament times, having religious, civil, and criminal jurisdiction. In this case, Nicodemus desires to interpret scripture and pass judgment on his findings. Tradition has it that Nicodemus was the third richest man of his day; so we see he was not only learned, but very, very rich. Observing all the rules of the rabbinical order, Nicodemus sought Jesus at night, as he did not want to be seen in the company of one who - according to scripture - had no education by standards known to man. Coming to Jesus by night, and recognizing him as a teacher, Nicodemus said: "Rabbi, we know that you are a teacher who has come from God, for no one can do these signs unless God is with him."

Jesus then answered in the form of a dialogue, saying: "Truly, truly I say to you, unless you are born from above you cannot enter the kingdom of God." Nicodemus then said, "How can a man who is old, enter his mother’s womb for a second time and be born? To this Jesus replied, "You, a teacher of Israel, and you do not understand? I tell you, unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh, is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit; and flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom." So we see that an entirely different birth must take place. That birth comes from above. The word is "anothen" and means "from the beginning; the top." This same word, anothen, is used for the seamless robe John speaks of as having been woven from the top.

And when Pilate said: "Do you not know that I have the power to crucify you and the power to set you free?" Jesus replied: "You have no power over me were it not given to you from above." Here the word anothen is translated "above." Through the Gospel of John the word anothen is brought into play, as he distinguishes that which is spirit from that which is flesh.

When reading the 3rd chapter of John, start with the 1st verse, and go through to the 21st. Jump to the 31st, and continue to the 36th. Then go back to the 22nd, and on to the 30th. Do this and you will find a flow in the dialogue that is completely broken as it is now recorded. It is as though the pages were dislocated before publication. The words belonging to Jesus flow from verse 10 through 21, then continue at verse 31 through

36. As it is now written, words have been put into the mouth of John the Baptist that do not belong there.

Nicodemus was introduced when the evangelist was seeking a greater understanding of the meaning of Jesus, God's image which must be implanted in the individual. There is an interval between the implanting of God's Word and its eruption. And when that eruption takes place, everything recorded of Jesus unfolds in a first-person, present tense experience, making that individual the son of God by nature, to be used as an agent to implant the idea that men may become sons of God by grace. That which is implanted, contains within itself the entire plan of redemption, which takes a period of thirty years to erupt into the individual's birth from above.

Let us now turn to the Book of Luke, where it is recorded that: "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore, the child to be born will be called holy, the Son of God." And Paul tells us that the power of the Most High is Christ Jesus. Anyone who is twice born can be used as an agent for the creative power of the Most High. There may be no awareness of it on the surface level, but a supernatural impregnation must take place; and it takes 30 years for the child - the symbol of spiritual birth - to occur.

You entered this world of sin and death for the impregnation and ultimate departure from it. While you are here, you may own all of the treasures, have its people worship and adore you - if that is your desire. But when you leave it, you will simply assume a new body in a terrestrial world like this one, to continue your same journey of slavery. This you will do over and over again, until your supernatural impregnation and your spiritual birth. Then you will depart this world and enter an entirely different one; for after the implantation, a metamorphosis takes place within you. Just like a caterpillar who clings to a leaf and cannot move beyond it, that which comes out of you when you are born from above, is greater than the painted butterfly. In that new body, you move into an entirely different world.

Now, in the 3rd chapter of John, the words put into the mouth of John the Baptist in the 22nd verse, are really a dialogue between Jehovah and Nicodemus, the victorious one. Experiencing that which he could not find in a book, Nicodemus was seeking a fuller understanding of the meaning of the word “Jehovah” or “Jesus,” which can only come through revelation.

Now, if Nicodemus was a part of secular history, he would be mentioned elsewhere; but the Bible is not written about physical history, but about the supernatural history of salvation. There was no little boy called Jesus who was born of a woman called Mary. As you walk the earth and answer to your physical name, you conceive of the spirit and are supernaturally born.

Nicodemus personifies the Catholics, Protestants, and Jews, of today - those who keep alive any belief in an outside God. Believing that because of his social, educational, or financial background he should not be seen with certain people, Nicodemus sought one who could remove his blindness, because he was so eager to understand. His statement: "Rabbi, we perceive that you have been sent from God, for no one can do these signs unless God is with him," is followed by these words which are seemingly not related to any sign: "Unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the kingdom of God.” Then Jesus uses this phrase: "As the wind blows where it will and you hear the sound of it but cannot tell whence it comes or whither it goes, so it is with everyone who is born of the spirit." This is true, for the vision comes so suddenly, just like the wind, as it is a spiritual experience. And if you conceived the word 30 years ago, your birth from above could come tonight.

Now let us turn to the other side of this principle, which is the law of identical harvest. We are told that whatever we desire, when we believe we already have received it, we will. This promise is based upon the premise that imagining creates reality. There is nothing you cannot become or have as an objective fact, if you believe you already have it. No restriction or condition has been placed upon the power of belief. If you will deny the evidence of your senses, suspend your reason, and persuade yourself that you are now the person you want to be, you will become it! Ask yourself how your friends would see you if you now embodied the idea you desire. Your true friends would rejoice, would they not? Then, if this statement in the Book of Mark is true, all you have to do is persist in believing your assumption is true, and it will harden into fact.

I do not care what the world will tell you, imagination creates its reality. All of these precepts must be accepted literally, for they are literally true. What person truly believes that he was born to be what he is today? He may have been born into a family of great wealth, and - being surrounded by it - he takes wealth for granted; but that is an assumption. He may even believe he is entitled to it; but if you checked into his family tree, you would discover that his father or grandfather had a vision which became his reality. And if he who was born into wealth does not know the principle that supports it, he can lose the money and never regain it again. But you who know that everything is based upon an assumption realize that no one can take anything from you that you really want!

Take everything I have, but leave me with the knowledge of how I received it in the first place and I will reproduce it again by the seed of contemplative thought. This is stated so clearly in the 11th chapter of the Book of Mark: "Whatever you desire, believe you have received it and you will." These words are put into the mouth of one called Christ Jesus, who said, "I am the truth." If Jesus Christ only speaks the truth, will you believe him? Live by his words! Accept on faith that which you do not understand, and apply that which you do. How would you feel if your desire were true? Catch the feeling and sustain it. Persist in your assumption and in a way that no one knows, it will become true for you! If you were given enough money to take care of all of your expenses this month, but did not know this principle, you would remain in need and have to be given to again. No individual or country is rich enough to give forever. Those who receive must be told how to become a giver.

I urge you to assume that you are important. That you are wanted. That you are contributing to the world; for as you do, you move to a higher level of yourself. The politician urges you to vote for him, claiming that if you do he will take care of you. He knows he is lying, but the average person, conditioned as he is, accepts these words and perpetuates the state. There is no prison strong enough to keep you behind bars when you know this principle.

In San Francisco, about ten years ago, I was teaching an audience of approximately one thousand, when a lady stood up and said: "My brother is in the army. I do not know what he did, but I do know that he has been court-marshaled and sentenced to six months of hard labor. Neville, if I believe you, can I not set my brother free?" I said: "Yes, but only to the degree that you are self-persuaded that he is free." One week later this same lady stood up and told this story. "Believing you last week, when I returned home to my second floor apartment, I sat in my living room and imagined I heard the doorbell. Then I ran down the stairs, opened the front door and threw my arms around my brother. I rehearsed that scene over and over again until I could hear the doorbell ring, feel the banister in my right hand and my feet moving down the stairs. The doorknob became solidly real in my hand and I could see, touch, and feel my brother's presence before I stopped imagining. "Last Wednesday evening, as I was dwelling upon my brother's return, the doorbell rang and I instantly knew it was he. I ran down the stairs, opened the door and there was my brother. He told me that the army had reviewed his case and changed their judgment, setting him free with an honorable discharge." This was a sign of the power of Christ operating in her. She believed the word and loved her brother deeply. Desiring her love to be free as the wind, she released it and in a way she could not rationally analyze, he whom she loved was set free.

You may think that was not right, but who is to say what is right and what is wrong? There are only two things that displease God. One is eating of the tree of knowledge of good and evil by judging what is right and what is wrong, and the other is the lack of faith in yourself! If you do not believe that you are spirit, all imagination, you remain where you are and miss your goal in life. You must believe that you became the physical you, with all of your weaknesses and limitations. That you emptied yourself and took on the form of a slave, thereby becoming a slave to your passions and ambitions. But before you did this, you were one with God. Then you emptied yourself of your god-like qualities, and assumed the weakness of the flesh by becoming human.

Say to yourself and yourself alone, "If I do not believe that I am God I will die in my sins by missing my goals in life, so I must start believing now! And, because all things are possible to God, they are possible to me. I will begin by believing I am the person I want to be. I will believe my friends are what I would like them to be, and no longer eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil."

Try to think of every person as one who is destined to be a son of God by grace, one who is destined to have union with a son of God by nature. When one is born from above he is a son of God by nature. Night after night he then enters the spirit world where he plays the part of the stallion, planting the seed of God in all that are called by his Father. Thirty years later, that seed which carries in itself the pattern of redemption, erupts within the individual, and he is redeemed. First, by waking in the tomb of his own being, finding the symbol of his individual birth, and then discovering the Fatherhood of God. This is followed by his spiritual body being split from top to bottom and the dove descending and sealing the Word with the words, "You are my beloved son in whom I am well pleased."

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville 04-15-1968

SONS OF THE MOST HIGH

President Hoover, a man who began his life here on earth in the state of poverty, yet rose to the highest office in our land made this statement at a convention in San Francisco: "Human history, with its forms of governments, its revolutions, its wars, and in fact the rise and fall of nations, could be written in terms of the rise and fall of ideas implanted in the mind of men."

We are told in the 8th chapter of Nehemiah that Ezra read from the Book, from the law of God with interpretation, so that the people understood the reading. It is my hope that I can interpret the words of President Hoover and the meaning behind the words from the Epistle of John so that you may understand their meaning. The words are these: "I am from above; you are from below. You are of this world; I am not of this world. Now I say to you, unless you believe that I am he you will die in your sins."

To sin means to miss the mark, so what he is saying is that unless you believe you already are what you want to be, you will never be it. Would you like to be secure? Then say to yourself and yourself alone: "Unless I believe I am secure I will die in my sins. I will continue to believe I am insecure; thereby missing my goal in life." Unless you can believe "I am secure," even though there is not one thing to support it, you will die in your sin and never feel secure, for the name of God is I AM and besides I AM there is no other. Imagination (I Am) is from above. Imagination is not of this world and nothing is impossible to imagine! That is the story of scripture.

In the beginning, Imagination (God) said to us: "You are my creative power and we are one. You are sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless, you will die like men and fall as one man, O princes. This, you will do because you cannot believe you are all imagination." Then he set up a pattern that we could believe in, and the pattern is this: God the Father has one Son, whose name is David. Find David and you will know God to be yourself!

Now, I did not know that I am the Father of David, and you did not know that you were the Father of David, or that we were one; so we descended and became the son of Man to fulfill scripture, for "No one can ascend into heaven but he who descended from heaven, the son of Man who is in heaven."

Descending to prove a prophecy, you are truly sons of God and you and I are one. Having no feeling that we were one or that we were the Father of David, we had to descend in consciousness into this world in order to discover and believe: I am he who is God the Father of David. So I descend and then I ascend in the same manner that Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness. As the Son of God I descended to become the Son of Man, to ascend as God himself. And so it is in this wonderful world of ours; as ideas implant themselves in the mind of men do our nations rise and fall.

We descended in consciousness and we have gone through all of the fires of hell. But one by one we will rise to discover we really are God, the Father of his only begotten Son. How can I ever convince you of this while speaking on this level where there is such division, yet I tell you we truly are one. We fell into division for one purpose and that is to rise into unity, into the oneness that is God.

Everyone will know that consciousness; but while we are here we can prove President Hoover's statement, that the rise and fall of ideas will determine the environment in which the individual lives. So I say to you: name what you want to be and become so conscious of being it, you believe "I am he," for if you are not consciously saying: "I am he," you are missing your mark. Unless you feel you are the man (or woman) that you want to be and persist in that assumption, you are not going to reach your goal. Your assumption may be for earthly things, but I urge you to persist in the assumption that you are God until your very breath proclaims: "I am he!" The world may tell you that you are crazy, but I am telling you from experience that you've got to feel you are God in order to know who God is!

God's story begins in the Old Testament and comes to its fruition in the New. The story is told of Jacob, who comes into a place at night, and using a stone for a pillow he falls asleep and dreams of a stairway leading up to heaven, with the gods [sic] ascending and descending as God stands above. Then he awakens and says: "Behold, this is the place of God and I did not know it."

Tonight when you go to bed, you lay your head upon a pillow and God (Imagination) rests upon your skull, for that is the stone, the place of God where he dreams of the staircase leading up to heaven - the same God who said: "I am the Lord, the God of your father Abraham, Isaac and Jacob." The story continues as Jacob, now awake, takes the stone (awareness now individualized) and anointing it, he builds the temple of the Lord. That temple you are.

God, the Father of all life is in you! Being all imagination, your true name is I AM, and besides you there is no other God. So I tell you: unless you believe "I am he," you will die in your sins in the sense that you will continue missing the mark. You must assume that you are now the man (the woman) you want to be and persist in that assumption, for there is no other way for you to be it, as there is only God in this world.

The story recorded in the Old Testament lays the foundation of which the New Testament is its fulfillment, but "Even to this day when Moses is read a veil is over their minds and they cannot understand it." When the mind is veiled, one cannot understand that the God spoken of by the prophets is imagination; but I tell you: at night when you go to bed God is dreaming, and when you awake in the morning he is still dreaming your world into being. But one day you will awaken in your skull (the stone that God anointed). You will fall upon it and say: "Behold, this is the place of God and I did not know it."

Tonight when you put your head on that rock may you dream that you are now contributing to the good of the world and awakening everyone you touch. That you are fulfilling the eternal story as told us in the Old Testament.

The New Testament records the fulfillment of the Old, but those who call themselves Christians do not understand it. The other day I turned on TV to the Billy Graham show. They had all these lovely boys and girls who sang beautifully and I enjoyed the music very much - then I heard all this nonsense concerning the resurrection. I tell you: in the volume of the book it is written of you. Everything said in scripture is all about you, for you are the being called God, but unless you claim it you cannot attain it. How can you when you are the only power? You must walk conscious of being imagination, or die in your sins and never attain that awareness. No physical man made the statement: "Unless you believe that I am he you will die in your sins." The one speaking is he who said these words: "I am from above. You are from below. You are of this world, I am not of this world."

When Jesus Christ was publicly portrayed as crucified (remember, this play did not take place on earth save as a parable), he came before Pilate, who said: "Do you not know that I have the power to set you free or the power to crucify you?" And Jesus answered: "You have no power unless it has been given you from above."

Your I AMness is from above. Having come to do the Father's will, I who am now aware of being you, will drink the cup of experience to the very end. But no one has any power over me save I, by my assumption, give it away. I do it by assuming I am less than another, thereby forcing him to play the part of one superior to me. Everyone reflects my assumptions and plays their part relative to that which I have assumed, for there is nothing but Imagination, and I am he. Assuming I am afraid, I live in a world of fear, for there is no other. Being protean, I am playing every part in my dream of life, be it for my good or for my ill.

When you dream tonight of numberless people and awaken in the morning to find them gone, where did they go? Are they not all in you, created by and acted by you? Then are you not protean? You, all Imagination, are God the dreamer, imagining the many parts you are playing. This very moment is a part of your dream, and those around you are there, playing their parts because you are imagining them. You are playing the part of your husband, your wife, your children, your friends, and your enemies. They are all you, for there is nothing but God.

So I tell you: human history (no matter what it is), its revolutions, its wars, and the rise and fall of nations, can be written in terms of the rise and fall of ideas implanted in the mind of men. President Hoover was born in poverty, but as his ideas rose, so did he. Working his way through Stanford, he rose to the level of the highest office in our land. And President Roosevelt, who followed him, used many of his ideas to restore order and prosperity to a depressed land. As a nation we were incapable of standing on our own feet, so we found a president who couldn't stand on his. Roosevelt had inherited wealth. Hoover earned his and what a difference that is! Everyone wants to have a lot of money to come out of the nowhere, but when you earn it you feel pride in the accomplishment. Perhaps you write a book or a play, use your artistic skills, or your income comes from manual labor. When you earn wealth by your own efforts there is pride. But there is no sense of accomplishment when you receive your wealth through inheritance, hitting the jackpot, or holding the winning lottery ticket. President Hoover earned his position. He realized and shared with us what he had learned from experience: that the ideas you implant in your mind determine the world in which you live.

I ask you to believe me, for "Unless you believe that I am he you will die in your sins." You will miss the mark and never reach your goal unless you believe that you are right now the man you want to be. Is happiness your goal? Then assume it, for unless you assume "I am happy," you will remain unhappy. You want to be secure? Then assume "I am secure." That is the only way you will attain it. I am Imagination, the only power in the world, for Imagination is God. Unless I imagine I am the man I want to be, I will continue to imagine I am the man I do not want to be. No power on the outside can make me other than what I think I am. I must assume my own divinity, and as I do it will unfold within me.

Have you ever thought that when Jacob placed his head upon the rock he made contact with eternity? Or that the ladder he saw was Christ? Just think of it: when you put your head on a pillow tonight and close your eyes to this world, you are really on your skull, making contact with God's power and wisdom, the mediator between human nature and divinity! That is the true ladder of Jacob. Dwell on it, for I tell you it is true. God's power, as ideas, descends from and ascends into heaven via that spiral ladder.

It is said that he who descended is the son of Man. Well, if God's Son becomes the son of Man through his descent, is he not destined to become the Son of God in his ascent? And if God and his Son are one, is there anyone else? Can you see it? You and I are truly one in the most intimate manner and I mean that seriously. But if you do not believe me you will continue to descend that spiral staircase into diversity, delaying your ascent into the oneness of the Father.

Descending as God's sons, you will ascend as the Father of God's only Son, David. Then you will know from experience what you formerly could not believe. And only after you have descended into these bodies of decay can you discover that there is only one Imagination, only one God, only one Father.

While in this world of Caesar, go to bed this night and putting your head on the true pillow (called the skull), dare to assume you are the man (the woman) that you would like to be. Just assume it. Tomorrow, if the world denies it, turn your back on its denial and persist in your assumption and you will become that which you have assumed you are. But when your world reflects your persistent assumption, don't forget how you brought it into being. You brought it to pass by assuming: "I am he," and there is no other God.

You may not be listed in the social register or as one of the millionaires of the world, but no one is more important than you. I have yet to meet one person that I have felt was greater than I. Having awakened from the dream of life, I know there is no other to be greater or lesser than. Weak and limited as I am, there is only one being in the world and that being is God.

In the beginning we could not believe that we were God. We had to be detached to bring us to that consciousness. Being sons of the Most High we were told that we would die like men and fall as one man. The one who said this is waiting for us all to return to the consciousness of being that one man. He has set up a pattern by which we will return and there is only one way. That is by way of the pattern man called Jesus Christ, and by this way we return as God.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard 1953

SOUND INVESTMENTS

Today's subject is "Sound Investments".

I want to share with you today what I consider one of the truly great revelations of all time.

On Sunday morning, April 12th, my wife woke from what was really a deep, profound sleep and as she was waking a voice distinctly spoke to her; and the voice spoke to her; and the voice spoke with great authority and it said to her: "You must stop spending your thoughts, your time and your money; everything in life must be an investment." So she quickly wrote it down and went straight to the dictionary to look up the two important words in the sentence, 'spending' and 'investing': the dictionary defines 'spending' as "to waste, to squander, to layout without return." To 'invest' is to "layout for a purpose, for which a profit is expected" .

Then I began to analyze the sentence - "You must stop spending your thoughts, your time and your money, for everything in life must be an investment". As I dwelt upon it, I saw where everything is NOW; that through the portals of the present all time must pass, and this psychological NOW, the state in which I find myself now, does not recede into the past. It advances into my future.

So, what I do NOW is the all important thing, and thought is the coin of heaven; it is the money of heaven; and so the thought I entertain now, the thought to which I consent, as told us in Ephesians "All things when they are admitted are made manifest by the light, and all things when they are manifested are light:" and the word 'light' is defined as consciousness. So the state to which I now consent must be made manifest, and when it is manifest, it is only that state of consciousness made visible, coming to bear witness of the state in which I abided.

So, every moment of time, I am either spending or I am investing. Unfortunately most of us spend the coin of heaven, and morning, noon and night we live in negative states for which there is no return, when we could easily have spent, not spent, but invested that moment, so at the end of that day we really would have a wonderful portfolio. The religious minded person invests possibly on Sunday morning. Through the service he is lifted for a moment; if he is not overly critical he might be carried away with the hymn; he might be carried away with the solo, the organ music, the address from the pulpit, and for a moment he is investing; but the rest of the week he spends.

Now you know from experience if you put all your money into one great concern, it may be wonderful, it may be sound, but at the end of a year the directors may decide to reorganize and therefore decide to pass the dividend, and if you depended on a dividend check for your daily needs, though it is a good, firm, wonderful concern, when they passed the dividend, then you must either sell some stock or raise or borrow on it. While every moment of time you could have a most marvelous portfolio and if one passes a dividend check it does not matter. If you devoted every moment of time to positive thinking, constructive thinking, by not accepting any rumour that does not contribute to the fulfillment of your desire, no matter what it is - it could be the most obvious fact in the world - if it does not contribute to the fulfillment of your dreams, do not accept it. If you do you are spending; if, not by denying, but by complete indifference, complete non-acceptance, you turn to what you wish you could have heard instead of what you heard, you are investing. It's not the hearing that matters, its the admitting the truth of it that matters.

All things when they are admitted, not all things when they are heard, but if you give consent to it, if you accept it as true; then you either spend by acceptance or you invest depending on the nature of the state accepted. So, this revelation which came through my wife to me is one of the greatest that I have heard; had it been told in our Bible, it would have been told in its strange meter "And the Lord God spoke unto her this day and said to her, his servant" and they would have told what revelation would have come in that manner but it came to a normal natural wife, came in a normal natural manner to instruct not only her, but to instruct her husband, for I was the first one to whom she told it and I can't tell you what it has done to me since I heard it on the morning of the l2th April, for it made me more aware of the moment, made me far more conscious of every moment of the day so that I am not spending; I must invest - time is too precious and because these moments do not recede. they do not pass away; they are always advancing into my future to either confront me with a waste or to show me some wonderful return; if I invest it's for a purpose and, therefore, I hope, not only hope, I expect a reward: I expect a profit on my investment. So a moment spent now, this very day, could tomorrow pay you great dividends.

Now I told a story here two weeks ago of Jimmie Fuller. Well, I didn't have all the details of the story, but after the meeting; dozens of you said to me, not only after the meeting that day, but after my meetings at the Ebell Theatre, that Jimmie Fuller to have made the fortune that he made, must have had great capital. Well, I could neither affirm nor deny your bold assertion, for you spoke as though you knew and many of you almost convinced me that he had great capital and that's why he turned it into great returns. So on Friday night I asked him to tell me more of the details. He said "When you came here four years ago, Neville, I came to hear you. My wife asked me 'Why do you come to hear Neville? Who told you of Neville? He said, I turned the radio on one night and I heard Dr. Bailes. I had never heard of the man before. At the end of his lecture, which I thoroughly enjoyed, he said Neville is coming to speak for us and it's a MUST. Well the next night, I so liked Dr. Bailes that I turned him on the next night, and for the next two weeks he kept on promoting you, and he was so generous in his praise, I thought I've got to hear this man. So when I came, I enjoyed what I heard on Sunday morning, and then you announced you were speaking the following night at this place, but it was two dollars. Well, he said, between myself and the next I actually had Fifty four dollars. I had a wife and a little boy; we couldn't leave the little child alone; he was a babe: it meant a sitter-in, but my wife and I came to everything you gave and one night we could not pay the sitter-in; we just didn't have it, but we took our last which was fifty four dollars and came to your every meeting - the two of us - and one night we didn't have it to pay that sitter-in. Three years later, Neville, I had not proven your theory. You know my problem, as I told you before."

Perchance there is someone here who did not hear it - the man is a negro, and his problem was that because he was a negro, all the marks and stripes of the world were against him. I tried to convince him it was only in his own mind that these stripes were placed; his acceptance of that as restriction made it restriction, but if he could only drop it by non-acceptance, by complete indifference, to the pigment of skin he could accomplish his every dream by acceptance of it now.

Well, in the last year, Jimmie Fuller by complete acceptance, investing his moment, his now, has turned the year into a net profit of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. He did not have one penny when he started; he did not raise large capital; he didn't have it. He only invested God's coin. God gave it to him. He gave him the moment, which is time. So instead of spending his thought, which everyone has, and spending his time.

which everyone has, he had no money, but he knew that thought was money; so he invested his thought in the now, knowing that it was not going to recede and vanish from sight; that was an investment: it would advance into his future.

Well it did. It so advanced that he tells me now everything he touches turns to gold. Now he has three children; they come here every Sunday to Sunday school: he doesn't want his children to start with his stripes, so he wants them to feel what this Church gives. So every Sunday, Jimmie tells me many a Sunday he feels like taking off for the beach or up to the mountains with his wife, but he will not go because he wants his children to have an opportunity he didn't have. He says "My people were very religious, but they must have worshipped a very poor God, for they were steeped in poverty. So I just wouldn't go near the churches of my mother and my brothers and these people, because I couldn't conceive of such a God doing that to us; yet they never missed service. For when I found in this what I found here in this Science of Mind Church, I brought my children to Sunday School. Now this is what happened to them. Here God is love, and love surrounds them and they know nothing but love, that God is love. For one day my little girl which is the youngest of the three, was quite sick, a beastly cold. and that night when the little boys said their prayers. these are the words they used 'Thank you God, that sister is perfect tomorrow.' They could not look at the little girl, sick as she was, and say 'Thank you God that sister is well now', but they said 'Thank you, God, that sister is perfect tomorrow'. Neville, it was a miracle. The next day that child was perfect; there wasn't the sign of a cold - a complete absence of all that we saw the night before, and these two little brothers simply gave thanks."

"Now, he wanted a watch. I wouldn't give him the watch. I could have bought a thousand watches for him. I want my little son to learn a law which I didn't know until recently. So he filled his mind with the possession of a watch, and he spoke of the watch as a 'live' watch - one that ticks, one that is alive, not a toy watch. So then he fills his mind with the possession of the watch. On his way to school he found a 'live' watch. Now he knows the working of law - that the complete acceptance of the state in consciousness must result in an externalization of the state accepted. So if he accepts the watch he need not turn to his earthly father, as the medium through which the watch will come. I don't want to think for one second he has to point to his mother or his father as the only channels through which his good will come. I want him to recognize an Infinite Father - the Father of US all - who gave to him as he gave to me everything that I will accept. I want my children to learn it as I have learned. Yes, I could shower him with gifts, but then he would look to me as the only channel through which it will come. That I must not accept. So you should see the little boys and little girls actually live by this law. God to them is love and the only reality and love surrounds them. So they never miss the Sunday School here."

Then he goes on to tell me all other wonderful things that have happened by the mere acceptance of this law. He said. "The getting of my car, this convertible Cadillac - I treated it loosely, I sat quietly in my living room and drove my Cadillac, and I simply treated for this loosely," he said, "I didn't put real effort into it, I accepted it and then when I decided to get it I simply put in three telephone calls and that day I was driving this car, Neville. Now everything happens just like that. Today, instead of going to my office and working in the office I work behind the scenes. I sit all day and I hear the report that is good from my employees; my entire office staff must tell me good news, the only thing I will allow myself to hear. I ride my car; I'm in the office; I am at home; I'm in the office but I am only hearing good news, and seldom do I go to the office physically to do office work, so I am behind the scenes only hearing good news. So I have completely forgotten the so-called pigment of skin and, Neville, honestly I can tell you today I feel that I am blessed beyond all men because I was born a negro. I am so proud to be born a negro; I am so proud I'm one."

And here is a story that will interest all of you; he said "I had some property to dispose of, I had certain things in investments for those who had money, and so I advertised it and a man called me on the wire. He saw the ad, and asked me if I was the gentlemen, so I told him I was the one who had the property. The first thing he said to me, "I don't want any nigger property." Jimmie said, "I didn't answer, as if I hadn't even heard the word. If he wants to be prejudiced, he may be prejudiced, that's his right. He wants to be silly about it, that's his right. He can spend; he need not invest. So I said, "It is perfectly all right, sir, I have all kinds of property, I have all kinds of things for your investment." A week later he called me up and said, "Would you come and see me." He said, "I went to see him. When I got out of my car his knees almost buckled, for he didn't know a negro was coming to see him, and a negro walked up his stairs into his living room." He said within a matter of minutes he purchased $37,000 worth of mine that I had to offer. He said the first $25,000 that he bought he simply bought that to buy back his face, and then the remaining $12,000 he bought that because it was a very good investment. Well, since that time this gentleman has spent tens of thousands of dollars with me and constantly calls me to thank me because they are such wonderful investments.

Now here is a man who is proud of his skin; he has no prejudices because that's spending his time, he can't afford to spend. So in harmony with the revelation given to my wife, let us all now stop spending our thoughts, our time and our money. For everything in our life must be an investment. We know the truth. This platform radiates the truth. You are told that everything proceeds out of your own consciousness, but what you and you alone accept as true, that will externalize itself and mold itself in your environment. All the conditions that you will encounter will simply bear witness of the state you have accepted. Well, if you don't like what you are encountering, then stop spending and learn the art of investment for every moment of time is an opportunity to invest, not to spend; yet on the other hand, you and I are free, we are free to waste every coin in the world. For that we have a right, we are free beings, we can spend, we need not invest, but if you know you can invest, why not choose the wiser way.

Now we are told in the thirtieth chapter of the Book of Deuteronomy, "The commandment I command you this day is not hidden, and it isn't far off. It's near unto thee; it is in thy mouth and in thy heart. Now, I set before you this day, life and good, death and evil, blessings and cursings. Choose life, choose blessing." But the choice is ours for we are free. He sets before us this day, this very moment, a commandment. He sets everything before us; it's not far away, it's in our tongue right now. And before me now is a blessing or a curse; I can accept the fact you don't like me; it doesn't matter, you may love me; but if I accept the fact that you don't like me, don't like the teaching, I'm spending my time. Tomorrow you'll prove to me that I have spent my time by your behavior relative to me. On the other hand, if I accept the fact that you do like it, because you are proving it, then I would have no doubt in my mind that you could not do anything other than contribute to this teaching. So it is up to me to either bless myself or curse myself.

I can choose life or I can choose death. I can choose the good, but I am free, I can choose the evil. It's entirely up to me. But if you and I loved this, accept it and believe it, then we are wise indeed if, knowing the whole is before us, we go out determined to become investors, not spenders, not wasting and squandering our substance, but laying it out for a purpose. Every moment become conscious of the moment, what are you doing. I am accepting now the fact that I am a noble, dignified, wonderful being, that my father is proud of the son who is like him. So I will not hear or accept as true anything other than that which contributes to that noble concept I will hold of myself. For I will see that I am secure, and maybe a headline would startle the world but I will not accept it, for if I don't admit to it, it can't proceed out of me. For all things when they are admitted are made manifest, not unless they are admitted.

So if I now will admit that using this moment as my moment to invest, if I am what reason denies, what my senses deny, and I proceed in that assumption, knowing that even though it doesn't confirm itself tonight or tomorrow, I will still live in the assumption that I am what I want to be and all day tune in and listen only for the good report. I know these are investments and tomorrow these dividend checks must come. They must come. That's the law of our being. So everyone here, take it to heart, and though you don't need money, and so I say to the hundreds of you who say to me in private, "He must have had money", I tell you I know the story now; I didn't know it when you boldly claimed that he had money but now I have it from the source. He only had $54.00 and the $54.00 he spent coming to my meetings, even when he couldn't spend a dollar on a sitter-in; so I tell you he didn't have it; he has it today. But you don't need even $54.00.

All you need is time and you have it, it's now. All you need is the thought, that's money. So instead of spending that now, and spending the thought in the now, invest it now, for your now, this very moment as I stand here and I will get off the platform in a little while - and you will think, well now this is gone, he'll come back next year - this is not gone. What I am doing now is not going to slip away; it's going to move forward and embody itself as a condition, embody itself as the circumstance of my life. So that my now's, my reactions to what I am hearing and saying and seeing, all of my reactions are in the now, and my reactions are spelling out my tomorrow. So I will repeat it - through the doorway of now - because he said, "I am the door", I am is always first person present. Not I was the door, or I will be the door; "I am the door," "I am the resurrection," so what I do in the present, now, is not going to recede, it is going to advance into my future for through the door of the present, of the now, all time must pass. Now don't spend it as it passes; as it passes through the door of the now, invest it. Every moment of your life see that it is a positive, constructive, noble moment. I promise you a wonderful, healthy, radiant future if you will invest the now.

Now this being my last talk for a little while, I would like while I have this opportunity because the theatre, the Ebell, can't take all of you, I hope that many of you will come this coming week and make it a really fruitful, wonderful week, but I know you can't all get into the Ebell; so here, one lady as I came through the door said, "Neville, you made it so clear on Friday night; something I'd not seen before, for you told us this year you brought a wonderful revelation and that is the wide difference between thinking from an end and thinking of an end. For you emphasized that time and time again since you've been here this time, but I didn't get it until Friday." I said, "Well, how did you get it?" She said, "Your picture of the balcony and the stage." Well, now we have the same situation here. We have a balcony, so we have a stage. Well, if she having heard it so often didn't get it, the chances are many of you didn't get it. Well, now she got it by my illustration, so I will repeat the illustration that all may get it. I said that when a man learns the art of thinking from the end, that man is master of his fate, for he defines his end, he formulates an aim in life, and then feels himself right into the situation of that end. So he thinks from it instead of thinking of it. The average man defines his dreams but he remains back here looking at them before he's thinking of them. The wise man occupies the state of his dreams, so he radiates from it, he thinks from it. And then to use this little illustration. I'm standing here looking out at the auditorium, and I would describe this theatre based from this angle, for I am seeing it from the stage. You, sitting in the auditorium, or sitting in the balcony, you are looking at it from that state, so you would see the screen and the speaker.

So the difference between us we see the same theatre from different angles. I would define it from here; you would define it from there. If I desired to get your point of view, while standing here I would assume that I am seated where you are and therefore within my imagination look from that position. I would then have to see the stage, not the auditorium; I would see the thing behind me, this cyclorama, and I would describe the theatre from that position which I am assuming that I am. Now, if that position represents, say one of security and this one of insecurity I would then assume by physically standing here assume that I am now secure. And to prove that I am, I would then look from the state of security, so I would describe the world relative to my assumption. If I am still seeing what I saw when I was insecure, I have not succeeded in occupying that desirable end; I am still only thinking of it. So the wide difference between thinking from and thinking of must be clearly seen and then see the wisdom in learning the art of thinking from a desired end.

So here, look out at your world, formulate your lovely aims in life and just ask yourself, "What would it be like were it true that I now embody that state? How would I feel?" And in response to that question would come a feeling, a feeling that corresponds to that end. Learn then to think from that end, though reason denies it, though everything denies it, you occupy that end. It's now, you're investing it and these will become real within your world.

Now another thought that I tried to make clear and it's this which again Jimmie Fuller told me was one of the cues in his success. When the action of the inner man corresponds to the action the outer man must take in order to appease his desire, he will definitely realize his desire. There are two of us; there is an inner man and an outer man. The outer man is always made to say, "I of myself can do nothing; the Father within me, this inner one, He doeth the work. What I see him do, that, I, the outer do also." So there is an inner you. If I now sat here and immobilized my body by relaxing it and then imagine what the outer would have to do in order to appease his desire, and with the outer relaxed, just let me imagine that I am actually it now, so I keep the body immobilized but I imagine that I am actually experiencing it now. I would experience in my imagination that which I would have to experience in the flesh to appease desire, and then imagine that state over and over and over, so that the actions of the inner man correspond to the actions the outer must take in order to realize desire. When that is done - I promise you it's going to be done in the flesh; no power in the world could stop it when these two actions coincide, but let it always be from the inner you.

And now at the end of the silence, this is what we do. Knowing that any time that we exercise our imagination lovingly on behalf of another, we are actually and literally mediating God to man. So we can sit quietly in the darkness and simply listen as though we heard the good report that we want to hear. We look into the darkness and imagine we are seeing what we want to see. This is then investing this two minutes; we have taken the moments that go to make up two minutes and really are investing it now. So when I take the chair and the lights are lowered let us listen and let us look as though we are hearing and seeing what we want to hear and see. And we are actually fulfilling the command of that wonderful voice that spoke to my wife when it said to her, "You must stop spending your time, your thought, and your money. For everything in life must be an investment." Let these two minutes be your greatest investment.

Neville 05-16-1969

SPIRITUAL SENSATION

The Reverend Dr. Trusler saw the Bible as secular history, and criticized Blake, saying he needed someone to elucidate his ideas. Blake responded by saying: "You ought to know that what is Grand is necessarily obscure to Weak men. That which can be made Explicit to the Idiot is not worth my care. The wisest of the ancients considered what was not too Explicit as fittest for Instruction because it rouses the faculties to act.

Why is the Bible more Entertaining and Instructive than any other book? Is it not because it is addressed to the Imagination, which is Spiritual Sensation, and only immediately to the Understanding or Reason."

Tonight I will use scripture, but my premise will not be along any orthodox concept of Christ, for scripture is a mystery. It is God's secret, which cannot be read with complete understanding, but must be experienced.

When you read in the Book of Revelation, "Jesus Christ, the faithful witness, the first born from the dead," you may think - as the world does - of a unique being who came into the world two thousand years ago. But the word "Christ" means "the Lord's anointed." This is not one man called 'the Lord" and another man called "the anointed," but one who knows himself to be the Lord's anointed. Who is the anointed? Your own wonderful human imagination! That's the only Jesus and the only God. When a friend asked Blake what he thought of Jesus, Blake replied: "He is the Only God, but so am I and so are you." This statement is true, but man will not accept the fact that his human imagination is God. He cannot grasp the idea that the God who created and sustains the universe is one with his human imagination, but Blake meant his statement to be taken literally. Your own wonderful human imagination is Jesus, the Only God - and so am I.

Matthew made this statement: "Thank you Father that you have hidden these things from the wise and the understanding and revealed them to babes." God chooses the unlearned (the babes in faith) to confound the wise, for such is His gracious will. Then Matthew adds this thought: "And no one knows who the Son is except the Father, and no one knows who the Father is except the Son. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me." I ask you to take my yoke (my understanding of scripture gained from personal experience) upon you and learn from me. My yoke is easy and the burden is light, but you must be willing to take that which is in conflict with the teachings of the world, and follow me. We recently saw ninety man-made saints defrocked by the church.

After making hundreds of millions of dollars out of the poor people by selling little medallions and statues of these saints, the church now proclaims they never existed. They were all one grand myth, started by the church for monetary purposes. Millions of these little medallions were sold as intermediaries between man and God, when the human imagination is God, whose name is I AM!

Christ is the faithful witness, the first-born from the dead. The word "Christ" means "the anointed." Proclaiming to come into the world only to fulfill scripture as recorded in the Old Testament, we must turn to the first book of Samuel to find who the anointed is. In the 16th chapter we read: "Rise and anoint him; this is he." Then Samuel takes the holy oil and anoints David. And in the 89th Psalm the Lord speaks, saying: "I have found David. With my holy oil I have anointed him. He has cried unto me, 'Thou art my Father, my God and the Rock of my salvation.' I shall make him the first-born and scripture cannot be broken." David, the anointed of the Old, is the Christ, the faithful witness, the firstborn from the dead, of the New. The Jesus of scripture is the I am of every child born of woman, who is God Himself. It is God who wears these garments of flesh you and I believe ourselves to be, for our awareness is He. Having made a garment for man out of the dust of the earth, and taking upon himself all of its weakness and limitations, God proclaims: "When I am lifted up from the earth I will draw all men unto me." The word "men" has been added. The original script reads, "When I am lifted up from the earth I will draw all unto me."

Now, God only acts and is in existing beings or men. Acting as your imagination, God will play every part He created in the beginning. And when every part has been played, the sum total of all the parts will appear as eternal youth, personified and called David, the anointed, the Christ-head, the messiah. No one can complete his journey in this world of death until he has played all the parts, because only then can David be resurrected.

In the Book of Psalms, David cries out to the Lord for help, saying: "Thou hast put me in the desolate pit." Then these words are proclaimed: "Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, faithful God." The human imagination is the God who redeems David. It is that God who wears your garment of flesh and answers to your name. Imagination's mighty power is buried in you. He is your son, who will erupt within you when you have played all parts, to reveal you as his Father and the Rock of his salvation. The Bible is sacred history, not secular history, and the events recorded there go on forever and ever.

The being that you really are is God. There never was another and never will be another God, for He is one, not two. You say "I am" and I say "I am," yet you cannot divide I am. We are the Elohim who fell into division and will resurrect into the unity of the grand I AM. The crucifixion is over, for you have been crucified with Christ. Your death and burial is past. You have entered hell (this world) and you will rise from it after you have played all the parts you promised in the beginning.

You and I as brothers form the one who is called the Lord, the I AM, the Father of David. The word "Jesse" is any form of the verb "to be", or "I AM." One day you will find David, the son of Jesse, and know him to be a man after your own heart - who will do, has done, and will continue to do, all of your will. I cannot condemn anyone for what he has done, is doing, or what he may do, for I have found David. My memory has returned, and I know there is not a part, personified in this world, that I have not played. David, he who was promised before the foundation of the world, is made manifest at the end of time. Then you will realize that he is not secular, but sacred.

The Bible records sacred history and the David spoken of there is sacred. When he stands before you and calls you Father, there is no uncertainty as to your relationship. You know your son and he knows his father. The story is not how the Son reveals the Father (which he does) but how the Father reveals the Son. In the Book of Malachi, the last book of the Old Testament, the question is asked: "A son honors his father. If I am a father, where is my honor?" It takes unnumbered years before the Son is found in the New Testament, which is only the fulfillment of the Old. There could be no New without the Old, for the New is its fulfillment. And the Old, being a sacred promise, finds its fulfillment in the New. The drama of the Old makes sense as it begins to unfold in the New, in you.

I am a man, born in the year 1905. If I could trace scripture as I can my ancestral background, what relationship would I have with Solomon, when I don't know what Solomon, what David, or what Abraham? I tell you, these are eternal states of the mind, personified, and not physical flesh and blood beings. They are states through which God passes as you and I, because God became us that we may become God.

Our journey of self-imposed limitation began when we said: "No one takes away my life, I lay it down myself" yet we have condemned a race of people for taking the life of one, who - like St. Christopher - never lived. The Jesus of scripture is the human imagination in which the Christ of scripture unfolds, and the Christ of the New is the David of the Old. He is the anointed.

When your imagination has finished the work he came to do, the sum total of all the parts he has played becomes personified and stands before you - his Father - to look into your face and see the one he knew before that the world was. And when you see David, you see your reflection, the end result of your imagined journey through death.

This is the great mystery of the seed. Unless it falls into the earth and dies, it remains alone, but if it dies it bears much fruit. God died by restricting himself to the limit of contraction and opacity of man in order to go through this world of generation and decay. He is now buried in Zion (your skull), which is the stronghold David takes by going up the spiral water-shaft. One night I felt an explosion in my skull, and when everything settled, I, God, observed my son David, my beloved in whom I am well pleased. I found my anointed and fulfilled scripture. I tell you: you are not predestined to be rich or poor, known or unknown. You are here only to fulfill sacred history.

Right now you can use your powerful imagination to assume you are what at the moment your senses and reason deny. Walk in this assumption, knowing you are all imagination, and all things are possible to you. Dare to believe in the reality of your assumption and watch the world play its part relative to its fulfillment. Your assumption may appear to be false when first imagined; but if you will persist, it will harden into fact, because God is he who is doing the assuming. All of the objective facts you see here on earth are only shadows, which fade because imagination is their reality.

But the real predestination spoken of in scripture is not secular, but sacred. It was proclaimed before that the world was. Then God died in order to assume these garments of flesh, and play all the parts. I know, for I speak from experience. I ask you to take my yoke upon you and learn from me. Believe my experiences, for "If I be lifted up I draw all men unto me." I have been lifted up out of this world and out of this earthly body. I ascended in a spiral motion to find myself clothed in a body of fire and air. I needed no sun, moon, or stars, at the time, for I knew myself to be the light of the world. As Spirit, I glided above the earth, where I came upon a scene of human imperfection. The blind, the lame, the halt, and the withered, were waiting for me there; and as I glided by, each was made perfect because I was perfect. Then these words came to my mind: "Be ye perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect." That night, in that experience, who played that part? The Father. And who is the Father? I am! And when each was made perfect, the heavenly chorus sang out the last cry on the only cross God ever wore, saying: "It is finished."

Man has nailed God to a wooden cross by his concept of scripture, but God was never nailed to any wooden cross. He is nailed to your garment of flesh. As that heavenly chorus sang out: "It is finished," I felt myself once more congeal to this little garment (my cross) in order to tell my story to all who will listen. Some will believe me and some will not, but I will tell it anyway to encourage those who may be persuaded to modify their inherited, fixed ideas. Being born into a certain environment, they inherited their religion and find it difficult to modify it; but I tell you: the Bible is within you and must unfold within you at the journey's end. Then you will discover that the Father is yourself. This will be revealed to you by your Son, David, who comes to you in the Spirit; and you, too, will say: 'Thou art my Son, today I have begotten thee."

Now, the names Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, are titles to books whose authors are unknown, but we do know that the Book of Luke is written by the same man who wrote the Book of Acts. In it we read: 'Thou, Lord, who by the mouth of thy servant David has said, 'Why do the nations rage and the people imagine vain things against the Lord and his anointed?' "The word translated "servant" here, is translated "son" or "child" every other place in scripture. If it is found before the word, "Jesus," it is translated "son;" but if found before the word, "David," it is translated "servant" - which is error.

In the 2nd Psalm, David declares: "I will tell of the decree of the Lord; he has said unto me, 'Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee,' and the Word of God cannot be broken." We are told not to add to or take from His Word, but to fulfill it. Your worldly accomplishments will all vanish like smoke, and the earth will wear out like a garment and all within it likewise; but your salvation will be forever, and your redemption will have no end. Today, men are making fortunes to leave behind some monument to themselves. Our new president is doing this very thing. He hasn't made a dent so far, upon the world, but wants to leave his little footprint on the sands of time by building a library in his name - not realizing that one day the tide will come in and wipe his footprints away, as though they never existed. Bless him. May he have his desire fulfilled, even though it is such nonsense, when the only purpose for life is to fulfill scripture.

I have come only to fulfill scripture. I have taken the Bible, and beginning with Moses and the law, the prophets, and the psalms, I have explained all the things concerning myself, for it is all about me in the volume of the book. Here I am a simple man, telling all who are born as I was born, that the Bible is written - not about the garment I am wearing, called Neville, but the Being within me. It is that Being who has experienced scripture.

I invite you to take my yoke upon you and learn from me. Don't take the traditional concepts which have been handed down year after year, for they are false. What Christian, this night, hearing the words "Jesus Christ", would not think of a unique, single being, who was born in some unusual manner two thousand years ago; yet it isn't so at all.

Yes, there is an unusual experience within the individual, but it is going to happen in everyone. It is a birth, but not from the womb of a woman called Mary, or any other name, but from the womb of one's skull. Coming out of your own skull, all of the imagery as described in Matthew and Luke surrounds you. You will then realize that the Bible was written of you. Beginning with your awakening within your skull, you discover you are entombed in it, and you come out of that skull just as a child comes out of the womb of a woman. At that moment God (your human imagination) is born to a higher expansion of yourself, for there is only God, who is forever expanding.

There is a limit to opacity, but no limit to translucency. Taking upon himself the limit of opacity (which is this world), imagination plays every part known to man, breaks its bonds; and God, individualized, has expanded beyond what He was prior to his descent into this hell. No, God is not absolute. If that were true, there would be no joy, no fun - for Imagination could not expand. If you were beyond expansion you could never know anything greater than yourself, and that sameness would be hell beyond measure; but truth is an ever increasing illumination.

You cannot pigeonhole truth, for its expansion goes on forever. Having united all of the experiences of being man within myself, I am greater by reason of the experience. Now I can conceive another play -a far more difficult one, and take upon myself the limitations of it to burst its bonds and resurrect once more; for resurrection is God's mightiest act.

When I say I am God, I don't mean this little tiny thing called Neville, but the being who is speaking to you, for he is the one who had the experiences. This thing called Neville is subject to all the pains of mortality. It can drink too much, go to sleep with a big head, and wake tomorrow with an even bigger one. If you are going to judge me by what I do physically, you will never know the being that I am, or the being that you are; for the being who is so identified with you, who answers to your name and feels your pain and joy, is God. God only acts and is in existing beings or men. He is acting in me as my human imagination, as he is acting in you as yours. There never was another God and there never will be another.

Take my yoke (my experiences) upon you and learn from me, for you are here for only one purpose, and that is to fulfill scripture. The part you are now playing is adding to your whole; and when you have played every part you agreed to play in the beginning, your immortal Son, David, will bear witness to your Fatherhood. He is the result of your experiences in this world of death, and will only be found when death has been conquered.

Now, on this practical level, you can put your human imagination to the test; for I tell you: all things are possible to him. Test yourself by determining what you want. I am telling you a principle and leave you to your choice and its risk. You may want to hurt someone. I hope you do not, for there is no other, and you are only hurting yourself.

There is only one God who is playing all the parts, so when you pray for another, you are - in truth - praying for yourself. Job prayed for his friends by forgetting himself. In his love for and sincere desire to have them succeed, Job entered into a state of empathy for his friends. In that state his own captivity was lifted, and he became twice as rich, twice as great, as he was prior to the horrors that he experienced.

Name your goal. Imagine you have reached it, and persuade yourself it is true. Believe in the reality of your imaginal act, for it is God in action. An imaginal act is God's Word, which cannot return unto him void, but must accomplish that for which he sent it. If your imagination is God, then your imaginal act is God in action. Everything in the world was first imagined. The clothes you wear, the chair upon which you are seated, your car, your home, the pictures on the wall - all were first imagined. When I told my tailor what I wanted in the way of a suit, he took a piece of cloth which had no shape and used his imagination, before he even started cutting the cloth. Then he produced what was once only imagined.

Let no one tell you that one man can, in any way, enslave the world, because no one can stop men from imagining. A tyrant like Hitler or Stalin frightened men into accepting their leadership; but the minute men stopped being afraid of them, they were afraid. The minute you are not afraid, you are not enslaved. So, be not afraid. That's the story of the world. Our economy is based upon fear. The war scare, the peace scare, the market scare. If you can lose all fear, and imagine what you would like to have in spite of what seems to be, and persist in that awareness, your persistence will bring your desire to pass.

If it takes unnumbered tens of thousands to play their part to aid the birth of your imaginal act, they will, not even knowing they are playing the part you assigned them. You don't need to know who they are. All you are required to do is persist in your imaginal act, because that is God in action; but if you quit, then you do not know who God is. You are told: "The word that goes forth from my mouth shall not return unto me void, but must prosper in the thing for which I sent it." That word is an imaginal act. It must return to you and bring you the fruit of that which you intended when you sent it out.

Believe me, the Jehovah of the Old Testament and the Jesus of the New is your own wonderful human imagination. That is God. The Christ of the New is the messiah of the Old. The word "messiah" means "the anointed," who is David. When David stood before me and I looked into his eyes, my memory returned. It was as though I had suffered from amnesia, for when David stood before me I knew I was his Father.

Now, like Paul, I can say: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race, for I have kept the faith. Now there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness." What is that crown? My Son, my honor. I cannot enter a more exalted state than that which I left, unless I bring the result of my journey with me. That result is David.

The world may not believe me, but it does not matter, I know that each and every one must experience all the parts, so I forgive all. I cannot condemn a part when I know I am its author. Having written all the parts, I could find no one to play them; so I came down, diversified myself, and played them all. Having resurrected into unity once more, I returned with David - the result of my having played all the parts.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard 5-10-1971

STEP INTO THE PICTURE (WHO GOD REALLY IS)

We are told: "With God, all things are possible." I think anyone who believes in God would say "yes" to that. But then we are told that: "God is Spirit, and the Spirit of God dwells in us." I think any man who believes that should make every effort to find out who God really is who "dwells in us." He is Spirit, and "the Spirit of God dwells in us." This God creates all things. "By Him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made."

So everything in the world, regardless of what it is, -- for we are told: "I form the light, and I create darkness; I make the weal, and I create the woe. I am the Lord who do all these things." Well surely, we should make every effort to find out who He is.

I firmly believe, from my own experiences, that this God of whom the Bible speaks is our own wonderful human imagination; that God and the human imagination are one; that all natural effects in the world, though they are created by the Spirit of God, are caused by Spirit. So, "every natural effect has a spiritual cause, and not a natural. A natural cause only seems; it is a delusion of our" -- fading, I would say, "memory." (Blake, from "Milton") For here in this world I can't quite remember when I imagined that which is now taking place in my world. I do not recall it. I can't quite remember when I set it in notion.

But if this is Law, -- and a Law that no man can break, -- at some time, somewhere, I imagined what I am now encountering; that my present moment is not really receding into the past; it is advancing into the future to confront me, but I forgot it. And I now think it has a natural or physical cause, and it does not have a natural cause.

"Every natural effect has a spiritual cause," or the Bible is completely wrong. For we are told: "By Him all things were made," -- without exception; "and without Him was not anything made that was made." And: "He is Spirit," and "the Spirit of God dwells in me." Well, if He dwells in me, I have identified Him with my imagination. Only on this level, I do not remember having imagined it; but along the way, I must have if this is Principle.

Now let me share with you some of my experiences. We are in this room tonight, and the room -- at this moment -- is more real to us than anything in the world. It has a cubic reality, because we are in it. Think of your home; you know your home far better than you know this room, but your home -- at this moment -- is not as real as this room. This room now occupies reality to you, and everything else is shadowy as you think of it. Why is this real? Because you have entered it. You are in it. You occupy it.

This I know from experience. Sitting in a chair, suddenly I am seeing what reason tells me I should not see. I am seeing what seems to be the interior of a home. Or lying on my bed, I see the interior, -- or it seems to be, -- of a great hotel, an unoccupied suite ready for occupancy but not occupied. It was just as vivid as any painting of a great artist. An artist would give us the impression of a three-dimensional picture. We know, for reason tells us, that it is on a flat surface; it is simply depicting three dimensions, but it is all on a flat surface.

Well, while seated in the chair or lying on my bed, my consciousness follows vision, and I entered that room. I actually occupied it. I came back to where I was seated, on one occasion, --to where I was lying on my bed on another; and then I went back, and again it took on a cubic reality. I came back knowing exactly what I am doing, and knowing this whole thing makes no sense whatsoever to the rational mind, but I cannot deny what I am experiencing. Here I have the evidence, -- no one to share it with, but I have the evidence. I came back, and then went back into the picture. At the moment I entered the picture, it took on cubic reality; and after doing it maybe a dozen times or more, I said to myself, "I am going to explore. This time I am going to go right into it and remain there and explore," which I did.

So I stepped into the picture; and as it closed around me, from my bed it seemed to be thirty by twenty; but when I stepped into it, determined this time to keep going regardless of consequences, it closed around me, a third of what it seemed to be as I looked at it from the bed. So thirty by twenty became ten by seven. I found it to be a dressing room -- a dressing room of a huge, wonderful suite ready for occupancy. No one was in it; I am the only occupant now. I came out by opening up a door. I didn't go through it by some vapor; I actually opened the door, and to myself I was solidly real, just like the man who is talking to you now.

My hand could open a door, and the door was solid and it was real, and I went through the door. I entered the corridor. It was a nice, wide corridor dimly lit. At the end of the corridor, intersecting it was a brilliantly lit corridor. I walked down to the very end; and when I got to the end, here is this luminous, luminous, wonderful corridor.

I saw two ladies coming down the corridor. I knew exactly what I was doing. I knew how it began; it began by seeing what seemed to me just a vision, like a painting. I knew that I left my bed, my consciousness following vision, and entered the painting; and the painting took on cubic reality. I knew it: so I call that a "dream." Knowing it began as a dream, I said to myself, "It has still to be a dream. But I am dreaming now awake. I am not dreaming sleeping; I am fully awake, and it is a dream."

And I said to the ladies as they came by, "Ladies, this is all a dream." They did exactly what any nice ladies would do -- a stranger standing in a corridor and saying to them, "This whole thing is a dream." They thought they were looking at a mad man. So they got as far removed from me as they could, and got right next to the wall. But the wall was as solidly real as that wall (indicating) They couldn't go through it any more than I could.

While looking at them, -- and they are frightened to death, -- they walked quickly by; and then I saw something hanging, like a chandelier. It reminded me of an object that I had seen about six months before in a friend's home, and he said to me, "You can hardly tell that this thing is suspended. If you look closely, there is an almost invisible thread that connects it to the ceiling." So I looked, and I did see that very little, thin thread connecting this to the ceiling. Then I was convinced, -- "Well, it is a dream. This is a memory image of what I saw in my friend's home."

So again, I said to the ladies, "Look, this must be all gossamer." But as I held it, it was solidly real. It was just as solid as this (indicating). That surprised me. They kept on moving, and they moved rapidly towards the end; and here I am, holding this thing in my hand. I took my hand off and I said to myself, "Now you know it began as a dream, Neville, and this still has to be a dream. All ends run true to origins, and the origin of this experience of yours was a dream. So this must be a dream." But it is not a dream. I am just as awake as I am now, talking to you, as I was talking to those ladies.

When they got to the end, they looked back at this mad person. In their eyes, I was mad, and they simply disappeared by stepping down a few steps into what undoubtedly was the great reception room, the foyer of a huge, big hotel.

Then I said to myself, "You know, -- how are you going to get back? How are you going to get back? There is no road leading beck to that bed on which you left a body. You have unfinished business. You have a wife and an uneducated daughter who has the ambition to go to college, and she's now only in high school; and you have left inadequate funds to take care of your obligations to your wife and daughter. You've got to get back."

How to get back? I couldn't go through that door that led from the suite of rooms into the corridor and find any exit from there back to where I lived in Beverly Hills. What on earth am I going to do? I knew -- reason told me that if I don't get back within a very short time, they will find that body on the bed and they will have to examine it, and they will declare it a heart attack or something; but they have got to find a physical cause for it. And here, I am looking at something entirely different. It will "die" all right if I don't get back. I must get back. Then I remembered a similar experience that happened years before when feeling brought me back.

Feeling awoke me in a dream. I found myself on a beach. It wasn't Barbados. It was more like the Pacific Islands. I have not been there, but I had been born in the tropics; so I knew exactly what they must look like. But it was not the West Indies; it was the East Indies. And here, I know I am dreaming. I thought to myself, "1 wonder if I held a physical object and forced myself to wake, if I would wake?" So, I tried it. I held onto a pile driven into the beach there -- a solid mass of cement. As I held it, I said, "I am not going to let go; I am going to awake right here." So I held it; and as I held it, I said, "Come on, awake: You know you are dreaming." And I felt myself come to, as a person comes to when they are waking in the morning. I awoke and there I am, completely awake, wading in the water, holding onto this object. Then I went towards the beach, and a strange, peculiar animal approached me, and it scared me. I got back through fright, and I awoke in that water through feeling.

Now, I am not afraid of what I am doing. My only concern is to get back and take care of my obligations in life, which is my wife and my daughter. Now, how to get back? I am not afraid. I said, "I can't frighten myself, because I am not afraid." But I thought feeling would do it. So I closed my eyes, and I imagined that my head was on a pillow, and that I could feel the pillow; and then after a little while when I opened my eyes, I am still standing in the corridor. I tried it again; and then by the third time, as I tried it, I could feel something under my head. I allowed that to remain; then suddenly I could feel it.

I tried to open my eyes, and I couldn't this time. Instead of standing as I am now, perpendicular, I feel I am lying horizontally. So I felt, "Well, I must be back now," but I couldn't move my body. The body was cataleptic and I am frozen like this. Then in about, -- oh, maybe, twenty seconds or so, I could move this little finger. I couldn't open my eyes. In a little while I could move from the elbow down; and then, with tremendous effort, I could move the arm, and I pushed it out to feel the warm body of my wife. Then I knew I was back, but I hadn't yet been able to open the eyes.

Then, with a tremendous effort, 1 could open the lid, and see the familiar objects in the room that I had left behind me. Then I knew what makes everything real in this world: "The Spirit of God dwells in me," and He is my own wonderful human imagination. I walked into a thing that I could only see lying upon my bed. Entering that state, it took on a cubic reality. God made this world real by entering it. As we are told, He is not only translucent -- I would say, in a translucent manner; we are told, He is above all. He is also through all, and He is in all. If He is through all, He is Omnipresent. If He is in all, He is immanent. Then I am told, He dwells in me. He is in me, He is in you, He is in everyone.

Am I now confined to this little place here at the podium? I am not. I proved that that night. I have proved it unnumbered times since. I am not actually confined to where this body is. I dwell in it; and He who dwells in it is the Spirit of God, and the Spirit of God is my imagination.

I have proven to my own satisfaction that my imagination can travel. I don't have to stand here and think of my home. I can stand here and penetrate my home, leaving the body here as I did on the bed; and penetrating the home, the home becomes a cubic reality, as it will tonight when I take this body home and enter my door. The house is a cubic reality. But must I wait until I get home tonight in this body to give it that? Can I not now, knowing Who God is, -- God is Spirit, and He is now encased in this little garment of flesh; but He is Spirit, and I have discovered He is my own wonderful human imagination.

So when man "dies," he cannot die; only the garment that he "wears" can die. But that Being that he really is, is all imagination. And as He enters, wherever He enters, it takes on cubic reality. That I have proven. The Immortal You cannot die. It did not begin. So when you leave this world, because you are all imagination, -- the very moment that you depart, you are in some state; but, you being there, you give it cubic reality. That world is just as real as this world. It's terrestrial, just as this world is; and no one in this world can "die." Everything dwells in your own wonderful human imagination.

The purpose, now, is to awaken that Being in you, so He is fully conscious at all times. That is the purpose of life. He who came down and took upon Himself the weaknesses and the limitations of this garment and confined Himself to it, is destined to awaken while He walks this earth. And by "this earth," I mean this earth to the senses; but it does not end where my senses cease to register it. It doesn't terminate at the point called "death," because the Being in it goes on, and He is still in the world. But His entrance into that state gives it a cubic reality just like this room now because we are in it.

Now we come down to a practical use of this Law. Because this is so, your dream now is shadowy. You would like to be other than what you are. I think everyone does in this world. It's a form of growing and growing; and we grow, and we outgrow. So you would like to be it. But to those who are not in their dream, it's shadowy -- a mere possibility. But to those who enter into the dream, it seems the only substance.

A man who is now poor and embarrassed because of his poverty -- he can still dream, and dream of wealth, dream of security; but it's a shadowy state. It is something that seems to him almost impossible if he is going to use reason. He will say, "How is this thing possible? Because I have no background either intellectually or financially or socially to even hope to achieve that sort of thing." But if he knows who He really is -- the Spirit of God who creates all things dwells in him, and that he can detach that Indwelling Being from the body that he "wears," and actually enter his dream, -- the dream will take on reality. And, if he persists in it, it will objectify itself in this world.

I know that from many problems that I have had. When I was told that I could not do this or I could not do that; having remembered experiences that were all mystical, I applied them to practical things, and they work just as well in the practical state. I entered into my dream. It was a dream.

When I was in the Army, I couldn't get out; but I wanted to get out, and I wanted to get out honorably. I did not wish to be dishonorably discharged. I wanted to go through this world as a very honest -- I would say, clean, wholesome American citizen, and not when asked the question, "Were you ever in the Army?" and then they say, "Were you honorably discharged?" and have to say, "No, I was dishonorably discharged." I didn't want that on my record. So, I would not run away from the Army. I wanted out of it, and to get out of it before the end of the war, and to get out of it honorably; so I took the same lesson that I had learned, and I applied it to that.

So while in the Army, I assumed that I am in my home in New York City two thousand miles away. I was in Camp Pope, Louisiana; and I had an apartment in New York City in Washington Square. So going to bed physically at Camp Pope, I went to bed in imagination in my home in New York City, -- not there on furlough, not there on some little escape, but there honorably discharged. Then I got off my imaginary bed, walked all through my apartment and saw everything that I would see if I were there. It took on cubic reality.

When I awoke the next morning, I was still in Camp Pope, Louisiana; but that night a strange thing happened to me. It was 4:15 in the morning, and here a sheet came before my eyes, and on this sheet a hand appeared from here down holding a pen, and the pen wrote: "That which I have done, I have done. Do nothing." First of all, the voice said that, but the pen scratched out my disapproval, for I applied for a discharge, and my Colonel disapproved it. He said, "Disallowed,' and signed it "Colonel Theodore Bilboe, Jr." That was his name, which is on a record. You can look it up, for he was the one who disallowed my application for discharge. And the hand simply scratched it out, and over that it wrote in: "Approved," -- this hand holding a pen. Then the voice said to me: "That which I have done, I have done. Do nothing." What did he do? He scratched out the Colonel's disapproval, and he wrote in, "Approved." And then I awoke.

Ten days later I was honorably discharged by that same Colonel, and he shook my hand; and as I left that base, he said, "I will see you after the war is over."

I said, "All right, Colonel. Thank you very much." And that very night I was on a train back to my place in New York City.

That's how it works. I know from my own personal experience. I am sharing with you what I have experienced, both in the world of Caesar and in the world that is transcendent, something entirely different; so when I speak of being "born from above," I am not theorizing. I am telling you exactly what happened to me.

When I speak of meeting the Son of God who calls me, "Father," I am telling you exactly what happened to me. When I tell you I ascended into Heaven like a fiery serpent, as told in Scripture, that's exactly what happened to me, When the dove descended upon my hand, and then smothered me with love, kissing me all over my face, my neck, my head, I know exactly what happened, because it happened to me. So I am only sharing with you, not theory, not speculation, but only what I know from my own experiences.

So tonight, the most impossible thing in the world -- and who is not confronted with it? I am, -- an almost impossible thing that I have to actually deny the evidence of my senses and apply my Principle towards that event. I know it could not have happened -- nothing happens by natural causes. Nothing in this world happens by a natural cause; it's all spiritual. And you may say --and the world will say -- it happened because you did so-and-so over a period of time and that is the cause of your present physical ailment. It isn't so at all

You admire someone intensely, and try to duplicate their every act in this world, and you wish you were just like them; and they depart this world by a similar experience, and never once did the physical things that you are accused of having done that are the cause of what is happening to you. Never for one moment did it ever occur to her, the one she admired, to actually do for one moment what this one, suffering from the identical thing, is now suffering. And the world will say you are suffering from it because of a physical cause. Had you not done for 40 years what you have done, it could not happen; but yet her own loving mother that she worshiped beyond anyone in this world, and tried so much to emulate, never once in her life smoked a cigarette. She would take an occasional little drink -- an occasional a little drink, but very sweet, very weak; and died of the very thing that she now is suffering from. There was no one in this world that she worshiped more than her mother.

That imaginal act in the beginning of time -- and the whole thing came forward, and now she is fulfilling completely her ideal to be just like her mother. And the world will tell me that the thing that is happening to her is caused by a physical state. It isn't so at all. I could duplicate that and multiply it by the unnumbered number, if man only had a memory that could retain the imaglnal acts of the past.

"Every natural effect has a spiritual cause, and not a natural. A natural cause only seems. It is a delusion of the perishing vegetable memory." (Blake, from "Milton")

If man could only bear in mind that every simple little imaginal act sends a quiver through Omniscience, right through Omnipotence, and right through Immanence so the whole thing is like a huge, big computer, -- your imaginal act instantly is added to the sum total of it all; and instantly the whole. thing is changed, and the world is reflecting every imaginal act in this world of man, and keeping it all perfectly recorded, so that there is no such thing as a natural cause. It is all a spiritual cause.

"All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made."

And where does He dwell? He dwells in us, for He is Spirit, and "the Spirit of God dwells in us." He dwells in us, and I have, by experiment, discovered what that Spirit is; and I tell you from my own experience, the Spirit of God and the human imagination are one. They are not two.

So when you depart this world, your reality -- which is the Spirit of God - is your own wonderful human imagination; and that gives cubic reality to everything in this world if you enter it. Now, the secret is to enter it. Can I enter the state of my wish fulfilled? Those other states were simply experiments. Can I enter the state of the wish fulfilled? I have done it. On several occasions I have. When it seemed essential, I did it. If someone asked of me, I tried my best to do it. And how do I do it? By feeling.

As we are told in the 17th chapter of Acts: "Happy is the man that feels after Him and finds Him," -- he is speaking now of God, -- "for in Him we live, and move, and have our being."

He has just got through speaking to the Athenians. He said, "Oh, men of Athens, I see that you are very religious; but I notice over your temple an inscription to the Unknown God. Now, the one you worship as unknown, I will reveal to you, for He is not a God afar off. He is near, that you may feel after Him and find Him; for in Him we live, and move, and have our being." So the God of Whom I speak is never so far off as even to be near, for nearness implies separation. No matter how near he is, that's not the God. He can't be near because I AM He. "Be still and know that I AM God." That is what you are told in the 46th Psalm, the 10th verse.

"Be still," -- why? That you may know "I AM He." I am God. So the fundamental sin of Scripture is the lack of faith in "I AM He." As you are told, "You will die in your sins," -- that is, you will die missing the mark, -- "unless you believe I AM He."

"And before that the world was, I AM."

"Before Abraham was, I AM."

So "I AM" can't he near; that's the core of my being. I can say, "I am a man," and that's something near. "I have a hand"; that is near. "1 am rich"; that is near. "I am poor"; that is near. But before I can say anything, I must first establish the sense of being, and that is I AM. So I must first be, before I can be anything in this world. And so, the lack of faith in that reality is the fundamental sin.

So here I share with you what I have discovered. I have discovered that your own wonderful human imagination is the Spirit of God, and that you can enter any state in this world, and on entrance, it ceases to be a flat surface, depicting reality. It is reality. Why? Because you are the reality who dwells in it. Wherever you are, things are real. If you are not in it, then they are not real. They go to their flat surfaces.

And all things exist in the human imagination. We are called upon to select that state in which we will dwell -- the state that we will enter and make real in our world. And I do it by simply feeling. What would the feeling be like, were it true?

How would I feel, were it true? And how would I see the world, were it true? Then I feel myself into that state, and try to give it all the tones of reality, all the sensory vividness that I can. If I can give it sensory vividness and the tones of reality, even though I do not see it, it will work; but sometimes it becomes so vivid and so intense, you do see it. The whole thing opens. Your eye opens, and the whole thing is real; and then you are in an entirely different world -- the world of your dreams, for because you entered it, it is real.

But whether the eye opens or not, it will still work, may I tell you? This is the Law spoken of in Scripture; and because no Creator in the world exists but God, -- He is the only one, -- He has to create good and evil. If there is good and evil, God does it. If there is darkness and light, God did it.

He said, "I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal, and none can deliver out of my hands." We think a "devil" kills and God makes alive; that the devil wounds and God heals. It's God who kills and God who wounds, and God who makes alive and God who heals. There is only God. Read it in the 32nd chapter of Deuteronomy.

"I, even I, am He, and there is no God beside me. I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; and none can deliver out of my hands." And the God spoken of in that chapter is seated here in everyone who is seated, for that one in you is the Spirit of God, and the Spirit of God is your own wonderful human imagination. So blame no one in this world for anything that befalls you.

It's too late to share with you an experience of mine last Sunday morning, but I will on Friday. I asked for it. I woke at 1:30 and thinking of many things concerning my dear wife, I asked for some wonderful experience now, and then fell asleep. And it came in the most glorious manner while I was waking at 6:15. I ran straight to my yellow pad and wrote the whole thing down. It was the most vivid experience in answer. Because I wove myself into an experience, it had to take place. What experience it would be, I left it in the depths of my own Being to decide that. But give me some wonderful experience this night in answer to something; and then came the most glorious experience. And then I wrote the whole thing down. It's too long to tell tonight. I will tell you on Friday if you are here. Or whether you are here or not, I will tell it on Friday.

Let us go into the Silence.

Now, are there any questions, please?
A Lady: What is the difference in the reality factor between the body on the bed and what they call astral projection? Is there a difference?

Neville: Well I have had out-of-body experiences of what the world would call astral projection, but they are not anything like this. I am convinced that the Thing-That-You-Really-Are is dreaming what you believe yourself to be. One day you will awake; and you and the dreamer of you will be one. I have seen myself out of this body many times, but it is not that of which I speak today.

Any other questions, please?

Another Lady: If you have time, I would like to hear again the story that you told about an experience you had in the past where you tried to get through a wall, and you couldn't get through it.

Neville: That was really an astral projection. I was living in my hotel room in New York City; and I felt this peculiar force in my head, and I moved out in a circular motion -- or rather, a spiral motion, and I found myself on the beach. I didn't know anyone, but I knew I had just left a body on the bed in New York City. I was more curious about how that thing happened than about the people on the beach. They meant nothing to me. So I inwardly wished to return and duplicate it, but this time not to go to the beach, but to actually come down in the room and observe the body out of which I had just spun. So I had no sooner wished it then I came back into the body; and I am in the body, and I am not in the body.

But now the same motion is taking place, the same intensity; but this time, as I whirled out in a spiral motion, I willed myself to come back into that room and not go elsewhere. I wanted to see exactly how this thing works. So I came into the hotel room, and there was the body on the bed. The face is covered with a cloud. There are breaks in the cloud; and through the breaks in the cloud I can see my face, but only through breaks in the cloud. And here I am looking at this "thing," -- I call it a "thing" because the Reality is looking at it. That which I always believed to be my reality, my self that I shave in the morning, that I bathe in the morning and I feed all through the day, -- that's only an envelope. I am the Being looking at it.

Well I figured: Now, if I am now out, I am Spirit; therefore I could easily go through the wall. And so, I ran towards the wall and ran at it and bumped my head. I came back and was thinking to myself, that's crazy. Spirit, -- there is the thing that should bump its head, not me. I ran again, and I bumped my head again. I came back and this time I said, "Now, there must be some way that it can be done because I am Spirit."

I imagined myself out of that room, and instantly I was where I imagined myself. The mere fact that I saw the wall as a barrier, it was a harrier to me; and so, trying to go through it, I was going against my own rational mind, and so I bumped it. But when I stood in the room, not going through any wall or any door, I simply imagined myself elsewhere, and I was elsewhere.

So that's how I learned that lesson, -- with a good bump. Now that was an involuntary projection. I have had many voluntary ones. But I am not talking of that. That is behind me now. That is like child's play. I am speaking of God in us, who is called in Scripture "Jesus Christ," for the divine body of God is your own wonderful human imagination, which is one with God, who is Jesus Christ. That's the Lord.

And may I tell you, in the end, although all these bumps and these horrors of the world, in the end, He is Infinite Love. He appears at first as power -- destructive violence; but in the end, it was Love behind it all -- just sheer Love -- nothing but Love in the end. And that is God.

(audio lecture "THE SPIRIT OF GOD") 44:50

Neville 01-29-1963

SUMMARY

We have been talking about God's law and God's promise. God's law is conditional. You cannot be in one state and not suffer the consequences of not being in another state, and you and I are free to imagine any state in the world, and imagining that state we can occupy it. Occupying the state, we fertilize it; having fertilized it, it has its own appointed hour for fulfillment. Every vision has its own appointed hour it will flower; if it seems long, wait for it – it is sure and it will not be late. Some things will grow overnight, and some things will grow in a week, then in three weeks, and then in a month, and some things will take years. It could be a problem over which we seem to have no control. We have told you the story here, where on one occasion it took five years, but oh! the joy of reaping the fruit then. It was the relationship of a mother and son-in-law. I have told you unnumbered stories where it took intervals of time, but it doesn't matter, if we apply the principle.

Now today if you read in the headlines: "England denies union with Europe," and you may be inclined to resent De Gaulle – restrain your resentment. I was born and raised a Britisher, born under the Union Jack. All my family are still living under the Union Jack. I am very proud I was born with that background, a rugged, rugged background of Scotch, English, and Irish. My forefathers were from Cornwall, that rugged English setup. I wouldn't change it for anything in the world. They were adventurers when they ventured and re-adventured across all the seas of the world. Nothing could be more clear than my background.

Last Sunday in the English paper, there came a little note, held in the secret archives of the British foreign office for forty-three years. It was dated, May 1, 1920, not yet made public to anyone, but conceived by the British minds in the Foreign Office. They conceived it and wrote it. De Gaulle didn't write it, no Frenchman wrote it – they wrote it, but they didn't think it wise to make it public on the first day of May, 1920, which was only a matter of a year after that frightful First World War, when England's flower of manhood was slaughtered in the trenches. The universities were empty and all the brains of England went down. Then came the Second World War and after four weeks, France collapsed, collapsed like a little paper doll. And England – and England alone – held until America came in, but she held it alone, or today there would be no France. There would only be a unified Germany under Hitler, we know that. And so today you are inclined to judge too harshly, for his attitude, the one who made it possible for today to have a France.

Let me quote now from this memorandum, dated May 1, 1920: "We must not insist now or in the future on the friendship of France. Nothing can alter the fundamental fact that they do not like us in France and never will..." I am quoting accurately: "…and they never will, except for the advantages of the French people as they can extract them from the English." Now a Frenchman didn't write that. Englishmen wrote that from the Foreign Office, which is like our State Department, for they determine foreign policy. That was considered judgment of the brains of England of 1920, and it took forty-three years to hatch out. So having read it in the English press printed last Sunday, and requoted here in Monday morning paper, I can only give praise to the Lord God that he is completely impersonal.

It doesn't matter whether he is an Englishman, Frenchman, American, or Russian – it is only law. If that is what they believe, that is what they are reaping: the law of identical harvest. They believed it and checked it in the secret archives of the Foreign Office, and then forty-three years later out comes the opposition – when you would think (judged by human levels) that anything in this world that France would have done, would be to welcome with open arms England, who made it possible for there still to be a France today. But England planted the seed and planted it firmly and it was watered over the years. And then comes one –God never forgets, he can't forget, he watches all, he sees all; nothing is hidden from God, he sees exactly what you are doing. "Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in the dark, every man in his room of pictures?" (Ezekiel 8:12) We think that no one sees us. I say: nothing is hidden from God. If it had not been printed in the English papers on Sunday, you and I would not know that some English group had planted it.

I am an American by adoption, but I cannot rub out my love of England. All the physical blood that flows through me comes from Scotland, England, and Ireland. A little bit of Holland Dutch got in from my mother's side, for they were rugged individualists too, living on dykes (living on water, really). But though physically I would like to resent it, I am happy I saw it. I knew that somewhere the seed had been planted, for you can't have something grow in this world and not have a root from which it springs. So I ask you: knowing this law (for those who did it, know nothing of this law which you know, which is the law of falsification of the record) – had they known the scriptures as you know them: the story of the unjust steward (Luke 16), keeper of the pigs, and the pig is the symbol of Christ.

I have told you my vision of the pig. I found him and then came the growing of the pig, but I hadn't fed it as well as I should have fed him in the interval of discovery, and when I saw the same pig years later I found it . . .What did I find? I found that imagination creates reality, and in the interval of that discovery that imagination creates reality, I forgot it, so he was not well fed. But I always remembered that imagining creates reality. No matter what you tell me in fact, I would actually change the fact, for truth depends not upon fact, but upon the intensity of imagining. The real record is my memory.

Functioning on this level, it takes a little while to persuade ourselves when reason denies it and our senses deny it. Were we functioning on higher levels, everything would be immediately subject to our imaginative power. On this level it takes a little while, and so it takes persistence, it takes patience, it takes diligence. These are the things we pay, the price we pay for the fruits we are seeking to reap in this world. Here we always bear in mind the distinction between states and the occupant of the state. You are an immortal being occupying a state. That state may be poverty, wealth, health, sickness; it may be to be known in this world or to be unknown –but they are only states. You are neither known or unknown – you are immortal; you are neither rich or poor –these do not really define you at all. You can assume that you are, and to the degree that you are persuaded you are, you bear the fruit of that state – but you are neither rich or poor. You are immortal, destined eventually to inherit the whole vast universe, for it is God's purpose to give you himself as though there were no other in the world, just God and you – and not even God and you – just God, and you are he. That is the purpose.

Listen to these words: "Holy Father, Keep them in thy name which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are one." (John 17:11) The name he gave me is his name, and he is addressed as, "Holy Father." How could he give me the name of "father" – "Holy Father" – unless at the same time he gives me the Son who makes me [a] father? I can't be a father and [have] no son. There must be a son to bear witness of my fatherhood. So he gives me his Son, his only begotten Son, and in doing this he gives me fatherhood. The "Holy Father keep them" (those who shall be brought to that level) "in thy name," is the name that he gives me – the same name, your name, you give to me. What is the name? The name is "father." And he does it in the most marvelous way: he presents his only begotten son and no one tells you who he is. You know who he is, and you know he is your son, and you know that he is not only your son, but he knows you are his father. At that very moment you inherit the glory that is the Father; but the glory of this heavenly inheritance – which is the whole vast universe –cannot become actual, or at least not fully realized in the individual, as long as he is in this physical garment. But when he takes it off for the last time after that experience, automatically he is one with God the Father: "That they may be one, even as we are one." And that is every child's destiny in the world.

But you pass through all kinds of trials and tribulations, and he gives us a law – a law by which we may live wisely and happily. As we are told: "Blessed is the man who delights in the law of the Lord, for in all that he does he prospers." Not in a few little things, but in everything that he does he prospers – if he knows. Were you sitting in that cabinet forty-three years ago when this decision was brought in and typed and filed, if you knew what you know today and you sat there, you would say to the gentlemen: "I know gentlemen, these are the facts based upon reason." It is like they hate, as you hate the man who feeds you, because you are embarrassed to be fed, so after a while you are waiting to get even. You don't want to be fed, and so when he keeps on feeding you, you feel yourself a slave. As a slave feels his power, he wants to cut the throat of the one who fed him. That's automatic.

So if you were there you, would have said: "Gentlemen these are the facts, but let us now modify the facts, let us falsify the record and rewrite that memorandum, and let us persuade ourselves that they love us, that we can one day become a unified body – all of us – regardless of the differences of tongues, and let us file that report.

Maybe they would not have done it, but one individual in that group would have done it in his mind's eye. But they didn't know what you know. As we are told: "The wise men of old, the prophets and the kings would have given anything to have heard the things that you have heard and to see the things you have seen, and they did not." And so in our State Department – or the Foreign Office of England, or in the foreign office of any power in the world – they are not hearing what you are hearing. This doesn't make sense to them; they must be rational beings and play the game as they played it for unnumbered centuries, with all the mistakes and replaying all the silly things all over again. I tell you: don't forget it, because God doesn't forget it, and we create by our imaginal acts.

What are you tonight imagining? I don't care what it is; one day you are going to be shocked beyond your wildest dreams when you see the other side. Like the story of "Lazarus laughs." He returns from the dead and all the values were changed, and the rich were poor, and the poor were not poor. All the values on this side were completely reversed on that side and everything was changed when Lazarus returned, and he laughed at some things we are doing here. So I tell you: don't forget God's law, for "Blessed is the man who delights in the law of the Lord, for in all that he does he prospers."

Now tonight you take it, though everything in the world denies it. Reason denies it, your friends will deny it, and you dare to assume you are the man – already the man, already the woman – you would like to be, and that things are already what you would like them to be. And as you dare to assume that you are, and you walk in that assumption just as though it were true, in a way that no one knows you will be led across a series of events toward the fulfillment of that assumption, and no power in the world can stop it if you are persistent in that assumption. Believe that imagining creates reality. "Therefore I tell you, whatever you ask in prayer, believe that you receive it, and you will." (Mark 11:24) Just as simple as that – but how to believe that I receive it? If at this very moment I believe that I have received what today I deny, I would look at the world differently. I wouldn't see it prior to that fulfillment. I would now mentally look at the world, and I should see it as I would see it, were it true that I have become the man I want to be. I would commune with my wife, my daughter, my friends, from that assumption, and though no physical thing in the world could force me, I still should persist in the belief it is done, and carry on that assumption, and sleep in the belief that it has taken place just as though it were true. And if I do, may I tell you: I know from experience it will come true on this level. It is already true the very moment I believe it; at that moment is the creative act. But man's memory is very short and he doesn't remember the act, so when he reaps the harvest he denies that it is his. He didn't plant it, and yet we have a law established in the very beginning called the law of "identical harvest." "While the earth remains, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night, shall not cease." (Genesis 8:22) Everything will bear according to its nature; it cannot bring forth other than its nature.

That which ye sow ye reap. See yonder fields!
The seasum was seasum, the corn
Was corn. The Silence and the Darkness knew!
So is man's fate born.

So when I reap these things in the world, I may deny it and try to argue my way out of it, but it confronts me and there it is. It would not have been brought into the world were it not planted as it was planted, because there it is, there's the fruit. And so if today I am unwanted by the world, sometime in the past I must have felt very sorry for myself and felt unwanted. I feel they should really want me, because I had been so kind to them in the past. After all my kindness, this is what they do. Then I feel a reaction, then I feel unwanted. That's what nations do, individuals do, families do – don't you do it! Do God's law. God's law is no respecter of persons. He doesn't care whether you are an American or Russian or Chinese or African. He made all and he is sunk in all and the same law operates in all.

We are all one and eventually we will all awake, and our name will be one and our name will be "father" – "Holy Father" – looking at our own beloved son, and his name is David, the only begotten son and there he is and you are his father. And if I am his father and you are his father, then we are one. If the whole vast world becomes the father of the only begotten son, then we are one – though we are individualized.

May I tell you from my own visions: you haven't the slightest concept of what is in store for you – the beauty, the joy that is yours. You are not this. If you want any comfort or any slight vision, read the 1st and 8th [chapters] of Ezekiel. You get a glimpse of what is in store for you, for the being spoken of there implies it is God – the only God – is you. And for all the identity of your person, your face will be glorified beyond your wildest dreams. We will be glorified; nothing will be left impermanent. I will recognize you and you will recognize me. But – for all this identity of person, there will be a radical discontinuity of form.

The vision of Ezekiel saw a glimpse of it. As he describes it: "Then I beheld, and, lo, a form that had the appearance of a man; below what appeared to be his loins it was fire." (Ezekiel 8:2) I've seen it –it is a fire – a glorious burning, liquid, golden light. "And above his loins it was like the appearance of brightness, like gleaming bronze." He's right – no stomach, no need for any of this; you now know, for you are life in yourself. You don't need any cure from outside yourself. You are a life-giving being – a seraphim [sic] –that is your destiny. Everyone is destined to be that being, though human in face, human in hands, human in feet, but nothing else. You are a fiery being. You differ as much from what you appear to be now as the butterfly from the caterpillar, and yet out of the caterpillar comes the butterfly. Out of this will come the being you are destined to be, but not until you are made perfect and all these things we are going through. It takes all of it to hatch us out, as it were. But you apply the law.

I was reading today that in the day of Coolidge (which goes back into the twenties) there were eight men who met in Chicago. They had a greater wealth among the eight of them than the national income from taxation of this country. Within eight years, seven of them either died in poverty, or were in prison, or committed suicide. Seven of the eight. Their names were not mentioned, but together they controlled greater wealth than our national tax produced, and yet within eight years seven had made dishonorable exits from the world – suicide, prison, and right into the dregs of poverty. Don't you do that! Know this law and use God's law wisely, hurting no one in the world, just assuming you are the man you want to be, just as though it were true. Your friends will argue with you, but you don't argue back. Let them argue if they want, but you persist in the assumption that things are as they ought to be and go about your business, telling to others what you want to. In fact if you are inwardly convinced of it, you can't restrain the impulse to share it with others. As Lord Lindsley said to a group of ministers once: "You ministers are making a mistake. In your pulpits you are arguing for Christianity and no one wants to hear your arguments. You ought to be witnesses. Does this thing work? Then share it with the rest of us." That's what I have been trying to tell you: how it works.

When it comes to the promise, I share it with my visions. You can't misuse it, for that is unconditional. The law…yes, you can produce the results, because that is conditional. You get into a state, remain in a state, and it produces a result. When it comes to God's promise you cannot produce it; God gives it to you, it's grace, it's unconditional. And may I tell you: all that is said in the scriptures of Jesus Christ, one day will be said of you. It's the model of every child born of woman – everyone will play that part. Don't be concerned – the crucifixion is over. Don't think you are moving towards that disastrous end – it's over. Listen to the words: "For if we have been united with him in a death like his, we shall certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his." (Romans 6:5) So the death is over; the resurrection takes place individually, one by one. Don't be concerned about the cruel end – that is over. Let your hope be fully placed upon that gift, then you are resurrected from the grave – for you are going to be, every one will be. In the meanwhile play fully and grant to everyone the good he asks of you, without putting your hand in your pocket. Grant it by an imaginal act on your part. Try to be as faithful as you can to that imaginal act; believe in the creativity of that imaginal act, and as you do it, they will all become the embodiment of what they asked of you.

Bear in mind what we told you earlier. These great nations led by wise men did not hear what you are hearing, and if they heard it they didn't have ears to hear it, because they didn't act upon it. They were convinced they were unwanted, and then, in time – all visions having their own appointed hour –that vision flowered, and today they are reaping the fruit of a seed they themselves planted forty-three years ago. But don't be carried away tonight when you read the headlines or listen to the radio, that the ungrateful Frenchman did so and so; they had no choice in the matter whatsoever, if you know this law. He was pushed up to play the part he is playing because England planted the seed they planted. They could tonight plant another seed, and be so welcome tomorrow that they would simply embarrass the French to offer. It could be, if they only knew how to plant the seed. They could plant a seed of being welcome and wanted in that wonderful body of men, because they are wonderful. They have all given so much to the world. The French have, the Germans have, the Danes – all of them. There isn't one in that huge combine that haven't given so much to the world. And so they could with open arms bring them all in, and they could make a bigger world. But someone has to plant the seed, and I am glad that someone printed that in the "Los Angeles Times." It came out only the day before in the English "Times" and I quoted it accurately. It not only said that this would not be changed – it was fundamental, a fundamental fact they were unwanted, unwelcome – but they would always be. That's a stupid concept. There is nothing "always." The only thing that is eternal and always, is that you will get God's gift – which is himself.

Outside of that there is nothing fatalistic in God's world. The only fatalistic thing is given to us so clearly stated in the Book of Romans (8:29, 30) when he calls us one by one: "For those whom he foreknew he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, in order that he might be the firstborn among many brethren. And those whom he predestined he also called; and those whom he called he also justified; and those whom he justified he also glorified." So we are foreknown and predestined, predestined and called, called and glorified, glorified and then justified. That is the only predestination that I can find. Yes, there are other passages, but that hasn't a thing to do with you being rich. You aren't predestined to be rich and you aren't predestined to be poor, to be known or to be unknown – that is your choice. But when it comes to the other, that is God's predestined gift. He's going to give you himself. God is determined to give us – all of us – himself, as though there were no other in the world. Just God in you and God in me, and then just God – individualized. And not in eternity will we be absorbed into a God, losing our individuality – never. I am individualized, you are individualized, and we tend forever toward greater and greater individualization – and yet, God.

Now let us go in to the silence.

Test Him and See

25 July 1969 by Neville

Tonight's subject is: Test Him and See. In the Second Letter of Paul to the Corinthians, the very last chapter, the 13th, he calls upon all of us, -- for, he is addressing us. Although it was written two thousand years ago, he really addresses every one in the world who will read the letter; and he said: "Examine yourselves, to see whether you are holding to your faith. Test yourselves. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" (Second Corinthians 13:5)

Well, if every Christian in the world were brutally honest with himself, he would answer, "No, I do not realize it. I think of Christ as something on the outside." That's what the Christian would say, -- "and you tell me He is in me." I am called upon to test myself: "Do you not realize that Jesus Chris is in you?"

Well, if Jesus Christ is in me, where is He? for I am told that "all thing are possible to Him" (Mark 9:23). I am told that by Him "all things were made' (John 1:3), "and without Him was not anything made that was made."

Well, if the Being who created and sustains the universe is in me, I want to find. I should devote all my life to the discovery of that Being who occupies me, who created and sustains the universe, to whom all things are possible Well, I'll tell you who He is. He's your own wonderful, human imagination! Your own wonderful imagination is the Divine Body of the Lord Jesus.

Well, now, test Him and see, because He creates everything. There isn't a thing in this world that wasn't first imagined. Name it! Everything in the world that is now proven as something that is factual was once only imagined. You mean, My imagination is the Lord Jesus? Yes, your imagination is the Lord Jesus; but He's dreaming. He is dreaming this world. He is dreaming that He is you; and, as you, He is dreaming whatever you experience in this world. I don't care what it is: good, bad, or indifferent, He is suffering with you, for He is dreaming the dream of your life. He laid Himself down within you to dream; and as He dreams, He dreams that He is you. And whatever you think you are, that is what Jesus-in-you, who is the Lord forever, is dreaming! And when He wakes, He is you! And you are the Lord Jesus.

This is the great mystery of all!

I have many a time stretched out on a bed or reclined on a chair and begun to see what I should not see. I saw what Reason would deny that I could possibly see; yet I couldn't deny that I am seeing it. I could no more deny the evidence of this experience than I could the evidence of my senses at any other moment in time, -- I couldn't. And then my imagination -- call it "imagination," call it "consciousness" -- it follows the thinker. I am seeing what I should not see; and then I step into the world that I am seeing, and it is rea -- just like this, and I am real to myself, and the people are real, everythin is real -- just like this. Then I return to the place where I knew I was when I began to see it. I return, and yet I am still seeing it. I step into it again. I return -- oh, maybe a dozen or more times; and then I decided to ven ture, regardless of consequences. No matter what happens, I will go, not only into what I am seeing, but I am going to stay there and really explore. And my consciousness steps into what I am seeing, and it's a world just like this! Real, solid, and I am solid; and I walk out and I meet people, and they see me but I know exactly what I am doing. I know where that thing began! My body i on a bed. I know exactly where that bed is; it's in Beverly Hills, on El Camino. I know the number, I know everything, -- I know exactly where it is. And, yet, here I am in a world like this, and it isn't this world, and yet it is this world.

And, then, I say to these ladies, "Ladies, this is a dream. This whole thing is a dream." And they looked at me, as any one present here tonight would look at me if I told you right now, -- and I can, may I tell you? -- tha this is a dream! If I told you right now, "Ladies and Gentlemen, this is a dream," you would think, Why did I come here tonight? This man is insane; he' mad! Well, that's what they felt: that I was mad, and they got as far away from me as they possibly could down the corridor. There they walked as far a they could, looking at me suspiciously; and I am looking at these two lovely ladies -- gracious ladies, as you are, -- no desire to hurt, only to tell them this whole thing is a dream!. And when they got beyond and felt safe, they al most ran down the corridor -- a beautiful, beautiful interior of a plush, plus hotel. And there I stood, shut out in a dream.

I knew exactly where I laid my body down in Beverly Hills on a street cal El Camino. I knew it was a double bed, and my wife was right next to me; and here I am, standing erect in a place more lit than this, far more plush than this is -- luminous, and I am shut out; and I have unfinished business in thi world that you and I now know. A child not yet educated -- a child just ente high school; a wife, and I had not yet prepared to cushion the blow if I shoul depart now. What would they do for -- well, money in the immediate future, fo I hadn't yet prepared to cushion their life beyond my departure. And here I a standing, and there is no way back to Beverly Hills, and that world is just li this.

Then I remembered what I did years before, when I had a similar experienc and it was all based upon feeling; and I could touch something, and I held wha I touched and made myself awake. So, as I held it, I said, "Come on! wake up!" and I woke, holding the object that I imagined, which was in this world. And that's how I awoke. I remembered that; so, then, I said to myself, while stan ing perfectly erect, "I will now imagine that my head is on a pillow. It's in Beverly Hills, in my room on El Camino," and I could feel the pillow. And, the when I could feel that pillow, I felt myself back -- not in a vertical state, but in a horizontal state, but I couldn't open my eyes. I was cataleptic. Th body was "dead." I was alive within a body that I could not move; the thing was completely cataleptic. Then in about -- oh, maybe a half-minute, I could move the little finger, and then move the hand, then push it out and I could feel the warmth of my wife's body. Then I knew I was back. I still couldn't open my eyes. And, then, maybe in another half-minute, I made a tremendous ef fort, and the eyes came open, and here are all the familiar objects in the room: the bureau, pictures on the walls, -- the normal, natural things that I had left behind; and I knew that I had entered a world, just like this, and I entered it from a state that the world would call a dream.

When I came back, I could only conclude that this world where I am now, o the bed -- touching the woman who is my wife, the mother of my daughter, -- an this, too, is a dream, but I can't remember where I laid that body down when I began to dream this dream. I couldn't remember where that body was, for that was the original body that started this dream, and the other was only a dream within a dream.

Well, then, I began to experiment, as I did prior to that. If my imagina tion is Jesus Christ, as taught in Scripture; and if by Him all things were made, "and without him was not anything made that was made" (John 1:3), well, then, I can take the challenge that Paul gave us: "Examine yourselves to see whether you are holding to the faith. Test yourself" -- not the other -- "Tes yourselves. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" (Second Corinthians 13:5)

Well, if He is in me, then He is the one who stepped into that world and returned into this world; and in this world He's dreaming this, and can He modify this dream? I began to experiment, and I began to imagine that I am what Reason denies, what my senses deny, and I became it in this world! I began to teach it to others, and I told others to do it in a simple way, like a dream. You start with a dream; and you conceive a scene which, if true, would imply the fulfillment of your dream in this world; that the potency of that thing is all in what it is implying.

Just try it. Bring before your mind's eye a scene, friends, and have the friends congratulating you on your good fortune; and you accept it just as though it were true, and then drop it. And, then, let it happen in this world! Let it happen.

Then I repeated it and repeated it and repeated it, and taught it; and those who believed me, who tried it, proved it. Then I found who He was. I found that really the God of the universe is in man, and man [illegible] is his own wonderful, human imagination! That man's imagination is the Eternal Body of the Lord that is called Jesus. That is Jesus. He's crucified on this body, on your body, on Humanity.

The day will come that He will awake from this dream; but in this world He is dreaming. He is dreaming that He is you! And the day will come that He will awake from that dream, strangely enough not leaving you behind detached, but He will awake and you are He!

"Unless I die," said He, "Thou canst not live." (See John 12:24) "But if I die, I shall arise again, and thou with me." He will not leave you behind He actually became humanity, that humanity might become God! That's the story and it's not talk; but I am telling you what I know from my own wonderful human experience. I have done it time and again: gone right into a world just like this, and nothing dies.

Tonight when some one appears to die, they will only close a section of the Eternal Book that they were dreaming. They simply close it, and you call them "dead." They are not dead! They are in a world just like this, and they are solid. They are terrestrial; the world is terrestrial. How? They are unaccountably new. I cannot explain to you how it happens, any more than I can explain to you how tonight when I go to bed and sleep and dream, that I am real to myself in my dream, and I am real to those who see me. I am clothed; yet the body is on the bed. And I sleep, and have for the last forty-odd years, in the nude. I go to bed, and find myself clothed the way I am now. Where is the clothing? Where is the body? The body is on the bed, but that dream is real; and when I awake within the dream, it's just like this -- just like this.

So, this is as much of a dream as the dream in which I have awakened; and not one friend of mine has ever died. I see them, and they are solidly real, and unaccountably new -- not little children, but new, -- no need of false teeth, no need of glasses, no need of anything. They are new. But eventually they have these things because they grow old there, too. They age there and die when they come to the end of that section of the Book of Life. Then they awaken to find they are "reading" another chapter, and they continue the Book of Life; and we are dreaming the Dream of Life.

In the end, we will awaken from the Dream of Life, knowing that every one eventually will do it; but while we are in this world, we can modify the dream. If I know I'm dreaming, I can change it. So, some one comes into my world, and he's unemployed, yet he needs money; he has a family to support. He needs money to buy all the things that a family needs; and I'm dreaming that. Well, I'll change that dream!

I will see him as gainfully employed and happy in his family, and everything is as it ought to be. So, I changed the script. I have the power to change it, and he conforms to my change, and he works.

Now, I can't see you now unless you penetrate my brain. Everything that I perceive, I perceive only because it as an object in space is penetrating my brain. So, at once, you exist, not only in me, by penetration, but you exist as an object occupying a place in space independent of my perception of you; but you do exist simultaneously in me, because you have penetrated my brain, and you also exist as something occupying space in the surrounding world. Now, must I wait for you to change, to change in me? Or, can I change in me what I see there, and make the change take place there? Well, try it. This is the test.

If Christ is in us, — well, then, do I wait for objects in space to change for it to change in me, or can I change it in me, for you are penetrating my brain or I couldn't perceive you? Well, I'll change that which penetrates my brain, and it is one with that which is in space, because if you should change it would change in me. Well, now, if I change you in me, I could change you in the other world. Then I try it, and it works. I try changing in me what others appear to be. It was not lovely, and they requested a change; they felt they couldn't bring it about, and turned to me.

All right, so if He is in me, and all things are created by Him, "and without Him is not a thing made that is made" (John 1:3), well, then, I will change it. So, in my mind's eye I represented him, or them, to myself as I would like to see them and as they would like to see themselves; and then I did nothing, beyond simply changing them in me, and persuading myself of the reality of that change; and then they conformed to it. Well, if they conformed to it, then I have found Him! "For all things are made by Him, and without Him is not anything made that is made." (John 1:3)

So, "examine yourselves, to see whether you are holding to the faith. Test yourselves. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" (Second Corinthians 13:5) Read it in the 13th chapter of Second Corinthians. And there's no more glorious end than in that chapter, the greatest benediction that you could ever read:

"And may the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all." (Second Corinthians 13:14)

That's how he ends that letter. Have you ever heard a more glorious benediction? ". . . be with you all." What? The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. Well, "grace" means a gift unmerited, unearned, unwarranted; a complete, wonderful gift that no one could ever earn, -- the gift of the Lord Jesus Christ!

Then he comes to the love of God. I can't conceive of that; it's infinite. He is infinite in His love. And, then, the fellowship of the Holy Spirit, making us all one. That's the benediction.

But that challenge in that 4th verse, when he asks you if you do not realize that God -- he calls Him "Jesus Christ: "Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" (Second Corinthians 13:5) Well, you ask that of the Christians of the world; and if they were brutally honest, they would tell you, "No, I don't realize it." But, now, test it; and when you test it, you find Him.

And after you find Him through testing, I'll make you a promise: You are going to have the experience of Jesus Christ. And everything said of Him in the Bible, you are going to have it in a first-person, singular, present-tense experience; and you will know that you are the Lord Jesus Christ! That God actually became us, that we may become God! That is the story.

So, when, sitting on a chair or lying on a bed, -- and it's happened to me so often, -- I see a world that is so real, and I shouldn't see that world -- because if I am seeing what I ought to see, I should see the walls, the pictures that I know, the things -- the objects that I know that are in this room, -- and I am not seeing these things at all. I am seeing an entirely different world, and then something moves within me, and my consciousness follows my vision; and I step into the world that I am seeing. I enter it. And then I remain in it long enough to have it close upon me, and this world is completely shut out. Yet, that world is as real as this world, and I find myself moving in that world -- I stroll. And it's just as real as this world!

Now, last night a friend of mine, who is here tonight, having heard this story of mine a little while back, -- he told me of an experience of his, and it really was a thrilling experience. I am going to ask him to take the platform and tell you what was told him when he sat at a bar on a hot summer's day.

I am going to ask him to keep it down just to the essentials, not to embellish it and not to attempt to interpret it -- just to tell you what was told him by one who had this experience.

Verne, will you take the platform?

Verne: I have been coming to Neville's lectures four or five years in San Francisco, and I live about 55 or 57 miles down the Peninsula. It was last summer just before Neville came to San Francisco that I had been taking some material to the Post Office about 5:00 o'clock in the evening, and was returning to my home through the business district, and I saw the door of a barroom open. It was a very hot day, and I thought, "Oh, on an afternoon like this, the nicest thing I could have right now in my experience would be a cold bottle of beer." So, I parked my car and went into this bar. I noticed that it had been redecorated. I had been in this place before, but not for several months. There was new leather paneling all around the walls with metal studs. There were new stools, and the floor was all redone. It was very attractive and a very pleasant place to be. And the bar had been modified a little bit to make it rather "L" shaped. I noticed that every seat was taken, except at the far end where the small leg of the "L" would be. So I went down there to find myself a seat, and there were two stools; but the one I could not occupy because there was an ash tray there that had a cigarette in it, and there was a glass. Some one was occupying that stool; so I took the only one that I could which was next to the wall, wondering who might be in the seat next to mine.

In a few moments a man came back from the lavatory and sat down beside me. He was about five feet seven, clean cut, shaven, coal dark hair, and rather solidly built, -- a pleasant-looking person. But it's not my custom to seek for companionship in bars, and I had no desire to conduct a conversation with him; but he wanted to talk to me. I was not rude to him, but I answered everything that he said in monosyllables, to sort of indicate that I'd rather conduct my affairs by myself; but he insisted on speaking to me, and he wanted to know if I was an engineer because I live in that part of the Peninsula where there is a lot of electronics industry. I said, "No, I am not an engineer."

"Well, what do you do?" he asked.

I said, "I happen to be a writer"; and the fact that I was a writer triggered something in him. He had been down to that portion of California where old treasures are reputed to be, and some months ago he had found some old Spanish coins, and he had written an article about these coins which had been published in a magazine. He brought that out because he thought it would be o interest to me, which it was; and then we got to talking a little bit more, and he said, "You know, that's the part of the United States where many of these people go that are interested in unidentified flying objects. Do you believe in those things?"

I had to say that I didn't have any feeling one way or the other about it because I had had no experience with them; but I said, "I can tell you somethin of interest if you are interested in that sort of thing. I was the Personnel Officer with the United States Air Force in 1952 at a large radar station in Wisconsin, near the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul; and we had the radarscope working 24 hours a day, picking things out of the sky, as part of our surveillance over the Canadian border." I said, "Our men used to pass on weather reports to commercial airliners because they would pick up advance notice of these things." And I said, "One night they clocked some object in the earth's atmosphere that was going at an enormous rate of speed -- nine thousand miles an hour, or something like that, and then it stopped with no curve or anything and just took off in another direction." I said, "That is the limit of my experience with unidentified flying objects. We made a photographic impression of what appeared on the radarscope and sent it to Washingto and that's the last I heard of it."

Our conversation came to a halt at that moment, and then he said, "You kn when I was in the war, I was a Marine and I was in the Pacific Theater, and I was wounded in the leg there and was taken to a hospital in Japan. And one night while I was on this hospital bed in Japan, I had a dream. And all of a sudden," he said, "I awoke in this dream, and I found myself in a large beauti ful ballroom, and there were many couples who were dancing to some very stately music, and it must have been something like a French court or a European royal family of some kind, because," he said, "it was very ornate, and it was very stately." He said, "All the women were wearing hoop skirts, long hoop skirts, powdered wigs that came down to their shoulders, and the men were wearing knee breeches with silver buckles on their shoes; and I am dancing with this woman, and I am trying to tell her that I am having a dream on a hospital bed in Jap and she was part of my dream, as all of the dancers were, and she wouldn't a accept what I was saying. She said to me, 'Oh, you've had too much to drink out of the punch bowl; so I think maybe we should step out of this dance and g over there and have one more glass to get you straightened out.'"

So, they broke away from the other dancers and he, protestingly, went alo with her, trying to tell her that he believed he was sincere in what he was telling her, and she wouldn't accept it, and he began to get a little bit loud about it, and finally it was noticed by other dancers and some of the men broke away and came over to see what all the trouble was about. She told them, "This man is out of his mind and is insisting that this is a dream, that we are all dream figures"; and he insisted on it.

He said, "At that point they began to move in on me as though they were going to overpower me and shackle me, because I was creating such a ruckus." And then he said, "Pfff, it was like smoke, and it all disappeared, and I was back on my bed in Japan."

It was then that I told him Neville's story, and I thought his eyes were going to fall out of his head because he had not heard of this experience from any one else.

Neville: Thank you, Verne; thank you. Thank you very much. Now, here you've heard it from one who was told it at a bar. If I said you are all figures in my dream, you would think me completely insane, and yet I will not retract one word. You are dreaming me, and I am dreaming you; and we are dreaming this scene to be; and while we are in it, in the world of Caesar, we can modify the dream and change it and make it conform to a better dream than the script that we are "reading." But the day will come, you will awaken from the dream of life; and when you awaken, you are the Lord Jesus Christ! This is the story that I am trying to get over to every one in the world.

So, you condemn no one, for what you are seeing is all part of your dream. Now, test it and see. But you are told in this 13th chapter: Test yourself. You don't test the other. You test yourself, and the other is a part of your dream; so you can't appeal to him. You appeal to yourself!

If he is in your dream and he's not doing what you'd like him to do -- he's unemployed and he's a burden on society. Well, then, employ him. See him gainfully employed, making far more than he ever dreamed that he could ever make, and let him go. He will conform to your modified dream.

See the other, and the other one wants to be -- I don't care what he wants. If they want to be socially prominent, if they want to be this, that or the other, what does it matter in the dream. So, he wants to be something very important. Does it take anything from you? No; you are the dreamer. The dreamer in man is God.

Now, there are three ancient manuscripts concerning the beginning of the Bible. They are known only by letters. We speak of the "J" manuscript, the "E" manuscript and the "P" manuscript. Scholars do not know who they are. They are all attributed to a mythological figure called "Moses." But nevertheless, in the Book of Genesis it is only "J", "E" and "P"; and they havenamed it "Jehovah, "Elohim," and the "Priestly"; but the "E" manuscript begins with the 15th chapter of the Book of Genesis. It doesn't mention the first fourteen chapters; it has not a thing to say about the so-called creation and the flood. It begins with Abraham, before his name was Abraham, when his name was Abram. That's the 15th chapter, and in this chapter he asks for a son. He said, "I have no son. Why can't you give me a son? And the son born in my household of a slave will be my heir." And the Lord said to him, "He will not be your heir; your own son will be your heir." (Genesis 15:3)

Then the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Abram, and Abram slept. (Genesis 15:12) Now, not a thing is said that he ever awoke! Abram slept, and the Lord said to him, "You will be slaves for four hundred years; and when you come out, you will have an abundance beyond what you had prior to the deep sleep that falls upon you, and you will suffer. You will be a slave during this sleep." This is the 15th Chapter of Genesis (Genesis 15:13,14).

May I tell you? you are the Abram spoken of. The "four hundred" doesn't mean four hundred years as we would measure time. Four hundred is the numerical value of the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, which is "tau"; and the symbolical value of that is a cross. The "cross" is this (indicating physical body) body. This is the cross, the "tau," the four hundred that you wear; and until you take it off finally, at the very last, you are enslaved. You are enslaved by the cross that you wear. You perform all of its functions.

No matter how powerful you are, you cannot pay any one or command any one to perform for you the normal, natural functions of this cross. You must assimilate and eliminate, and do everything that this body demands; and you cannot turn it over to some one else to do it for you, no matter who you are. So, this is the slave body that Abraham wears; and when he comes out of this dream, he will be enhanced a hundredfold.

Whatever the creative power you possessed prior to your descent into this garment, it will be enhanced a hundredfold. Whatever the wisdom that you possessed prior to the descent, an hundredfold. So, this is God, and God alone who is playing all the parts.

Here we have a play, and you and I will not avoid the play. We read it and we play it.

Now, to play a part, a good actor must, to some extent, feel the part that he is playing, and to the best of his ability identify himself with the character that he is playing. He must do that. So, God is not pretending that He is you; He had to completely forget His infinite power and take on the limitations of you, in order to play "you" as you ought to be played.

So, God is not pretending that He is man. He became man! He became man, that man may become God! That's the only way that God could actually extend His own Being -- His wonderful Being. So, you are the God of Scripture. You are the God of the universe. You were the God that created the heavens and sustains the heavens for a divine purpose; and when the play is over, and we all awake from the dream, we know each other, for you and I knew each other as brothers before we descended.

I knew you and loved you beyond the wildest dreams that man could ever think of, -- a love so dear, so tender, that not a thing on earth could ever compare to it. That's how we loved each other. And you and I agreed to dream in concert, and not to break the dream until it was over. And when the whole thing is over, -- and may I tell you? it is over, not collectively, but it is over one by one because you are so unique, you can't be replaced. Not one person in Eternity can take your place in the Risen Body of the Living God! Not one. It would be a catastrophe beyond redemption if you could be lost. You can't be lost. You must return as a living stone in the living body of the Risen Lord. And by "living stone," I mean a Being way beyond the wildest dreams of any one here on earth. And when we meet in that Living Body, we will remember the Being that we loved before we descended, as told us in the 82d Psalm :

"I say, 'You are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless, you shall die like men, and fall as one man, O ye princes." (Psalm 82:6,7, Revised Standard version, with footnote)

So, we actually fell as one man, and became diversified in these garments of flesh and blood, wearing different pigments: some wearing white bodies, yellow bodies, black bodies; and behind the mask of these bodies is God -- not less than the other one. Not one because of the pigment of the skin is less or greater. It's all God! There's nothing but God.

I wouldn't want to be greater than the one I loved before the Fall, and I will not be. All will be one. We ventured into this world of death, and we will come out of it, and return to the world of life -- the eternal world. This is the most marvelous venture in the world; but while you wear the mask, we can't quite see it.

Now, I am telling you this tonight, not from speculation. I am not theorizing; I am not speculating. I have experienced Scripture. Everything said in the Gospels concerning Jesus Christ, I have experienced, from the Crucifixion straight through to the descent of the Holy Spirit in bodily form as a dove!

The ascension, the discovery of the Fatherhood of God, -- all these I have experienced in a first-person, singular, present-tense experience.

And, yet, while I wear the garment to tell the story, I must still continue the sufferings that the garment imposes upon me. It gets old, and it gets older and it gets older, it gets weaker, and I have to bear it. I must bear this cross to the very end.

Well, as Paul said in the 8th chapter of his letter to the Romans: "I consider that the sufferings of the present time aren't worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed in us at the Revelation of Jesus Christ." (Romans 8:18) When Christ reveals Himself in us as us, what does it matter what we have suffered through the play. But I cannot stop the suffering as the body gets older and decays; but this time I am taking it off for the last time, not to be restored any more, but to completely leave it behind, and then to return to the One Body that is gathering one by one by one all into the Risen Lord. I'm already part of that Risen Body, but I was sent to tell this story; and tell it, I must; and tell it, I will. And if it offends some one, if it disturbs some one, it doesn't make any difference to me; I still must tell it.

If some one becomes completely self-publicized and is distorting the mystery of Christ, I must protest the distortion of this great mystery of God. They set themselves apart as though they were elected to tell a story of a moral issue; and that one is no good, and that one. That isn't so at all! There isn't one in Eternity that will remain unredeemed; and the part he is playing was essential to the whole, for "all things work for good for those who love the Lord." (Romans 8:28)

Then we are told: "You didn't sell me into slavery," when the brothers confessed they had sold him into slavery. He said, "No; it was the Lord; it was the Lord's will. You were instruments used to sell me into slavery; but He knew my innate wisdom, my innate 'know-how' to interpret the signs of the times and so I interpreted the signs of the times to save civilization." (See Genesis 45:5,6,7). "So a famine was coming upon the world. Without my knowledge of the Pharaoh's dream, then we would not have lived. So, He allowed you to sell me into slavery, that I may be in contact with Pharaoh and read his dream for him and prove it true, and then become equal with Pharaoh in the running of civilization."

So the brothers thought that they had sold him. So, you think you have injured some one. Time will prove you didn't at all. It was part of the unfolding drama, part of the play. This whole thing is a play. I have seen it so clearly, and I can't tell you the thrill when you sit comfortably in a chai thinking of not a thing in particular -- not dwelling on anything; and suddenly you aren't seeing the interior of your living room. I know the interior of my living room backwards. I have a lovely library, comfortable chairs; it's a homey life. It's not for show. My wife and I live in a place that I call "home." So, if any one comes to our place, we make them feel at home; it is restful. And my books are used; they are not for show. The chairs, the furniture, -- everything is usable. We have not a thing for display, -- lovely pieces -- some beautiful pieces, but no one comes every year, as they do in L.A. -- I suppose they do it here, too -- to take the value of your furniture, and they estimate the value, and you pay so much off it. Well, they will come into my place, and here I have a beautiful library; but they are all used book So that's discounted right away. We have some lovely old pieces that came fro my wife's mother's estate. Well, that's several generations; and it's old to them, therefore it has no value, and I wouldn't dare tell them; but any one wh knows the value of these things, as I have had them come in and say, "Will you take three thousand for that?" "Will you take two thousand for that?", -- but to the one who is sent over to value the things, they wouldn't give them room in their place, because they are old pieces. But, to us, they are not only ol but they are lovely, and they are functional. Everything in our house is functional.

So, I will sit in a chair, and then suddenly I am not seeing what I ought to see; and sometimes I will take the venture and step into what I see. Consciousness follows vision, and I step into the vision and explore a world just as real as this. You find people who the world would call "dead"; they aren't dead at all! Solidly real in a world that is terrestrial. Trees grow, and th wax and they wane and they die. People grow; they wax, they wane, they die; and yet they do not die. All things are restored. You're reading a play, and you are playing the part that you are reading; and the day will come you will awaken from it all. And when you awaken, you are the one who created it.

The Old Testament is the portrait; the New is the reality. The day is coming that you will realize within yourself the reality. You will compare it to the portrait, and you will see certain things in that portrait that you could change, -- and you could at any point, -- certain things you would add that the portrait did not catch, certain things you would delete, for you are the reality.

I'll tell you, the story is true. It is not chronologically accurate, bu it is true. Every bit of it is true. I could tell it in a more chronological accurate way than it is told in the Gospel, telling it from my own personal experience; but it is good enough to be left just as it is, for when you, the reality, unveil yourself, you will compare it to the portrait, -- and you will know it's your portrait; and you will say of it, "It's an excellent likeness, but it's not the reality."

Now, let us go into the Silence. Good!

Now, first before we take the questions: Verne, thank you. I enjoyed every moment of it; and do me a favor, and write it for me. I like to hear these stories and then have a record of it, that I may share it with those whe I go back south. So, if I have it in written form, I can share it. So, thank you.

Now are there any questions, please?

A man in the audience: Would you care to comment on the transparent race

Neville: The transparent race? Well, I do not know of any transparent race. I know of a Body of Glory that you will wear. As far as a transparent race, these bodies are permanent; they are fixed forever as God moves through them. When you come out of these, these are the garments that decay (referrin to the physical body), -- you are wearing a Body of Glory, and it's the Body o the Risen Lord. And may I tell you? it isn't transparent; it's glorious! It' glorious beyond measure. It is not transparent.

A lady in the audience: Will you explain what is meant in the Bible abou the "second death"?

Neville: The second death only appears, really, in the Book of Revelatio and the only "death" is this: If I do not now, in this world, have the exper ence of the Risen Lord, I will continue and be restored, -- it's not death, really. I am restored to life to continue until it happens. But people don't quite understand that when one departs this world, that the world does not terminate at the point where my senses cease to register it; that he continues, restored -- unbelievably new; and that, to us, -- well, he dies. Well, if he dies to us, therefore he'll die again. That dying again is simply going from one stage to another stage to another stage; he doesn't really die, as told us in the 20th chapter of the Book of Luke. In other words, it is called "death," but if you understand it, it isn't really death. Because, if I drop now, at this very moment, you would say, "Neville died," and you would name it this day in 1969 and this month; but, not this one, -- prior to my "birth from above I would have been restored to life, and I would find myself 20 years old, not necessarily in the year 1969; I could find myself in the year Four Thousand, or the year One Thousand, whatever is best for the work yet to be done in me.

And, so, to the others, I would be one who would die again. But I don't die; I simply pass through a door. It's so thin, -- the little garment -- the little thing that separates this world from that world, which is not anything more than an extension of this world, is so thin. I often wonder why people don't see it. It is simply almost -- well, the gentleman used the word "transparent." It is just like that. It is so thin that separates this world from that world and they don't die at all! But the miracle is: how do they, dying here old and withered and minus senses -- eyes are gone, teeth gone hair gone, and suddenly they stand before you and they are restored, unaccountably new. And there are 20, and in a section of time -- it could be 1969 -- it could be; the chance are, it will not be. It will be in a section of time, which is already fixed, best suited for the work yet to be done in them, as told us in the letter to the Philippians: "He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ." (Philippians 1:6, Revised Standard Version) That is, when it's formed in you and you unveil yourself as God. But, I can't see a second death. You die to those who see you go, but you never really die to yourself. You don't die to yourself; you only die to those who can't follow you. But no thing in this world ever dies to itself! It is unaccountably restored, and it's new. You "die" here when you lose almost all your faculties. If you lived long enough, you would lose all the faculties, and yet they are all restored.

A lady in the audience: Where is eternal damnation?

Neville: Oh, forget damnation! God is infinitely merciful. There is no such thing as damnation. Our priests are not only dissatisfied with this world which is hell enough, but they make another one. Oh, Lord! Last Sunday morning with this excitement of our boys coming on the moon, -- I turned the TV on early when I got up, -- I got up about 5:30, and my wife arose at the same time. She said, "Darling, turn it on as early as we can and softly so it will not disturb the neighbors"; so I turned on the TV, and things were coming on. And here's this man, -- I don't know who he is, and I don't want to know; and he's talking of two kinds of hell: an upper hell and a lower hell. Well, Lord! there's no one better equipped to enter them than he is! And here he is speeing off this nonsense to the world about an upper hell and a lower hell; and people think because some one is on TV that they are suddenly endowed with intelligence; that when some one spends twenty million dollars to publicize himself, suddenly he is a wise person. What nonsense! My father had a saying: "Money doesn't care who owns it." If you have twenty million dollars, and you want yourself publicized, spend your twenty million dollars, and think yourself wise because you spent it.

No, my dear; God is infinitely merciful. God is love, — I know; I am not speculating. I stood in the presence of Infinite Love, — and it's man, and it's God. And He communed with me as man to man, and embraced me when I answered the question that he asked, and I became one with the Risen Lord. So, now I am one, though I seem not to be to mortal eyes, — I am one with the Spirit of the Risen Lord, wearing His glorified body of Love; but no mortal eye can see it. You can't see it with these eyes. It would blind the eyes to see it! Yet, I know I wear the body of the Risen Lord.

"I have one body, one spirit, one lord, one God and Father of all." (See Ephesians 4:4-6). Well, any one who is united with the Lord becomes one spirit with Him.

Any other questions, please?

A lady in the audience: (Question inaudible on the tape.)

Neville: My dear, it's instantaneous. You do not wait. If you drop now this very moment, we all rush to hold the body that we love and call for help, and do what "Caesar" demands that we do. But you, instantly, — you'll be saying to us, if we could hear you, "Leave it. It was mine; it is not I."

The same lady: I was thinking of someone very seriously ill.

Neville: My Dear, I don't care how seriously ill they were, in what pain they were; it's an instantaneous dropping of all that that body represented. There is no pain; there is no absence of anything; they are restored and they are young and they are beautiful — altogether wonderful. That's God! God is Love! He isn't putting Himself through to hurt Himself. It is essential. If I were to extract gold from ore, I must put it through the furnace. These are the "furnaces." I am bringing myself out by the "furnaces," and I think sometimes that the world despairs it will ever see its Father again. And no one knows how long — how frightful the furnace is 'ere he finds his Father; but he will find his Father. When he finds his Father, he is the Father! It's the Father putting Himself through, — not to hurt any one. So, when people tell me all this nonsense about, "Look, what she is doing and what he is doing, they should go and read the Scripture more thoroughly.

Let me read you one little passage from the Book of Romans: "God has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy upon all." (Romans 11: 32) Read it in the Book ofRomans: "God has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy upon all." You would never know mercy unless you were unmerciful; and then it can be showered upon you when you are unworthy of it; then you know what mercy is. And so he actually consigned — If I told you right now, I am going to give you the whole vast universe, provided in the nex

24 hours you do not think of a monkey, I could keep my gift; you're not going to get it! So the whole command must be in the negative: "Thou shalt not." You have to break it; you have to break everything that is placed in the negative. "Thou shalt not . . . " So, man, because he's afraid of the consequenc of his act, he doesn't actually commit adultery; and there isn't a man who was ever a man who did not commit it in the true sense of the word. As we are tol in the Sermon on the Mount:

"You have heard of old, Thou shalt not commit adultery. But I say to you that any man who longs after a woman has already committed the act in his heart." (Matthew 5:27,28)

So it's a psychological act, not a physical act. I may restrain the impulse because I'm afraid of the consequences. I don't want to destroy my social position or my financial position or my family life; yet I may entertain the thought. Well, I am told, my cowardice did not save me from the act. Others went out without contemplating the consequences, and they were caught in the act.

Really, when you come right down to it, as some one brought up the other day, at Rutgers University these six professors made a survey of, I think, twenty or thirty ex-convicts who went out into business for themselves, and so they were doing very well in their own little way. They are making from ten thousand to thirty thousand a year each in these small businesses, which is a very good living today, with all these big mergers to compete with the big conglomerates; but they are ex-cons. And what do you think the six professors' conclusion is? They have the kind of mind that big business executives need to succeed in business; therefore they are telling you, without saying it, tha the big businessmen are the same "convicts" -- only they weren't caught. That is what they are telling you! The same mentality, but they were not caught. They have exactly what it takes for a big business executive: the president o the organization or the chairman of the board; but they were powerful enough to hush that and keep on going. But the same kind of mind -- a sense of independence, a sense of venture, a sense of taking a chance when other fellows wouldn't take a chance but are playing it safe. It's not always the man who plays it safe; he takes a chance. Well, in their case, they were caught. Wit the big fellows, they were not. And that came out this past week in the New York Times; and these were professors from Rutgers University back east who spent one year with Government money making this survey. And these men are quite happy now to make their ten thousand, fifteen thousand or thirty thousan a year; and when they can do that today, with the competition, -- you open a small grocery store, and you're in competition with a big conglomerate that can buy trainloads of eggs, not just a few dozen eggs that you can sell in a course of a day. They can buy in such quantities, they own farms that supply the eggs; they own the farms that supply the meat. How can you compete? And, yet, they are running these small businesses; so they compete in a small business today against these enormous conglomerates. It takes quite a mind, and these are twenty-five or thirty ex-convicts.

So, "He has consigned all men to disobedience, that He may have mercy upon all." (Romans 11:32, Revised Standard Version)

Well, I'll be back next year.

Oh, by the way, I've been forgetting it night after night. I use your name and address only to let you know when I'm in the City. I don't offer you anything for sale, I don't try to sell you anything, I do not appeal for any money. When I come to the City, I let you know if you are on my mailing list. There's only one friend of mine in this area to whom I have given my list, and I recommend him one thousand per cent; and if you are on my list, you will be on his list, because he teaches what I teach. And his name is Freedom Barry. So, you will hear from him, but he's not going to sell you anything. He's not going to sell you anything, appeal for any money; he will simply tell you where he is and how many days he'll be here. But I do not use your name and address for any other purpose; so you can feel free to give it to me if you would like to have me send you a notice the next time I come to the City.

A question from a lady in the audience: Where can your books be bought?

Neville: My Dear, my books ought to be bought in every bookstore; because it's a nice publishing house. If you don't find it at the time you ask for it, ask them to order it from my publisher, and his name is DeVorss. He is in Los Angeles. It should be in all the bookstores because he has a good sales force. So if they don't have it in stock -- and they can't carry every book in stock; but if you go into any bookstore, like Books, Incorporated or the Metaphysical Library, or any of these bookstores; if they don't have it, you can tell them that it is available, and they can call the publisher, and the publisher's name is DeVorss, and he is down in the Los Angeles area.

Until the next time, thank you.

---oOo---

Neville 09-25-1967

TEST YOURSELVES

Faith is not complete until through experiment it becomes experience. God's promise cannot be tested. It cannot be earned, for it is given by grace. But your faith will be increased when you experiment, when you test God's law. It is easier to accept the Christian faith than to live by it, but you must live by it for your faith to grow!

In his 2nd letter to the Corinthians, Paul is speaking to the whole world when he says: "Examine yourselves to see if you are holding to the faith. Test yourselves! Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? - unless of course you fail to meet the test. I hope you will discover that we have not failed."

Now, in the earliest gospel, the Gospel of Mark, we find these words: "The time is fulfilled and the kingdom of heaven is at hand; repent and believe in the gospel." The word "repent" means "a radical change of attitude (of thinking) towards anything that you either dislike or want to change." A radical change on your part will produce a corresponding change in your outer world. So now you are urged to examine yourself to see whether you are holding to the faith. Are you accepting as facts the headlines you see in the paper? The telephone call you just received! The morning's mail or the news on TV which suggest unlovely, horrible things to you? A friend calls, and pouring out all the bilge in the world tells you how bad things are and how they are destined to get worse. As you listen, their woes enter and are assumed by you. Now, if you understand this law that imaging creates reality, you should, like a computer, choose what you are going to allow to enter. And when the conversation is finished and your friend's voice is still fresh and clear in your ear, hear her changed words, the changed tone of her voice, and feel the joy emitted there.

Let me now share three stories of a lady who is here tonight. She said: "I have found my telephone technique infallible. It never fails me. One day a friend called to tell me she wanted to take an examination to become a court reporter. Giving me nine reasons why she could never pass the test, I changed every one as I heard it, and when the conversation was finished I imagined an entirely different one. I heard her tell me she had passed the test with flying colors. My friend took the test, and although during the interval of six weeks she remained negative, I continued to believe she had passed. Then one day she called, saying: 'Do you remember when I took the test?' and I replied: 'Yes, and you passed.' Then she said: 'Yes, but aren't you surprised?' I have been trying to tell her that imagining creates reality, but she cannot understand how an imaginal act unseen by the human senses can be held onto and produce results, but I know it always does!"

Her letter continued in this manner: "My telephone technique never fails. I can give you dozen of stories of the results I have received through its use. Here is another. A friend, in her 50's desired to change her job for financial reasons. She wanted to return to the electronic plant where she formerly worked but felt that because of her age she would not be accepted. Ignoring all of the negative thoughts, I simply heard her excited voice tell me she had the job! One week later she called, saying: "They not only gave me the job with a large salary increase, but I am receiving credit for the ten years I worked there before, which will be added to my retirement."

Now in the third story, she said: "My friend's maid weighed 25 pounds more than she wanted to, and her doctor had told her she must lose this additional weight. Desiring to weigh 140 pounds, she told me how she had tried and tried but could not lose a pound. I ignored her comments regarding her past attempts and heard her tell me she had reached her goal. That she now weighs 140 pounds. Soon after that I left the city for two months, and when I returned the maid called again, saying: "I have been trying to contact you to tell you that I have lost weight. I couldn't find you when I weighed 140 but now I weigh 139!"

How the weight was lost my friend does not know; she only knows that she examines herself to see whether she is holding to her faith in imagining creating reality. She firmly believes in God's promise and knows that eventually Christ will awaken in her as her very self. But in the meantime, while she waits in faith for the fulfillment of that promise, she is exercising God's law. She now knows that whatever she desires, if she will but believe she already has received it, she will. So instead of making a false statement on the outside, saying: "I am Christian" and doing nothing about it, she lives by this principle on the inside and makes it a part of her life.

You are told: "Why call me Lord, Lord and do not the things that I say?" Well, what did he say? That all things are possible to God, that no matter what you believe, it will come to pass. If you don't want unlovely things to happen in your world then you must watch what you are thinking in the course of a day. You need not wait until the day's end to change a thought to fulfill a desire. Why not do as my friend does and revise the conversation as you hear it? If the words are not what she wants to hear she does not listen, but puts on that same wire the thoughts she wants to hear come through. She hears what she desires to hear and believes it will come to pass.

Scripture tells of those who - calling themselves leaders - are blind guides, and when the blind lead the blind they all fall into a pit. Who are these blind leaders? Those who teach doctrine as the law of God. Those who teach the precepts of men, saying you can't eat this or wear that, are not the law of God, for in God's law everything is in order. Are we not told that food will not justify or get you to God, that you are no worse off if you do not eat and no better off if you do? I know and I am persuaded by the law of Christ Jesus that there is nothing unclean in itself, but to any man to whom it is unclean, to him it is unclean. The uncleanliness is in his thinking and not in the thought itself.

If someone wants to wallow in self pity, let him. You are not asked to test the man but to test yourself. You are not asked to prove it to another, just yourself. See the world as nothing more than yourself pushed out and everything in it as aiding the birth of your imagination, for the behavior of the world relative to you determined by the concept you hold of yourself! It doesn't really matter what your individual personal life is, the whole vast world is yourself pushed out and everyone in it is there to aid the birth of all of your imaginal acts. Regardless of whether it takes one or one hundred thousand, everyone will play his part, and you don't have to ask his permission for your world is animated by your own wonderful human imagination.

So the first thing you are asked to do is examine yourselves to see if you are holding to the faith. If you are satisfied that you are, then test yourselves. Then he asked the question: "Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" The average person would answer negatively, but I ask you: Is Jesus Christ in you as another? Do you think of him as a second person to be addressed as Lord or Christ? Do you not realize that you are the temple of God and the Spirit of God dwells in you?" If you can answer this last question in the affirmative, are you still going to test him as another?

God first reveals himself as God Almighty (El Shaddai) telling us in the 6th chapter of Exodus: "I made myself known unto Abraham and Isaac, and Jacob as God Almighty, but by my name the Lord I did not make myself known." The word "Lord" means "I am." God's name has now been revealed to you as "I am." Now, ask yourself this question: "Do I realize that I am the temple of God and that the Spirit of God dwells in me? My awareness is the Spirit of God which dwells in me, God's temple." If you know your awareness, your I Amness, is Jesus Christ, you cannot think of him as a second person, as someone other than yourself, can you? I know it sounds arrogant but this is what Paul is trying to tell everyone.

Did this lady turn to anyone and ask him to take 25 pounds off her friend? No! She did it all within her wonderful human imagination. Scripture tells us: "All things are made by him and without him was not anything made that was made." Did 25 pounds come off? Yes! And if all things are made by him, who is he who removed the excess pounds? He is the Lord Christ Jesus, the human imagination!

At the end of his poem called "Reverie", Robert Browning said:

"From the first, Power was - I knew,
Life has made clear to me
That, strive but for closer view,
Love were as plain to see."

Life is God's power on display, but if you will look closer love will be plain to see! Many years ago I was taken in Spirit into the divine assembly where the gods hold judgment. There I encountered El Shaddai, God personified as Infinite Might! He was a man no larger than you are, but with the power to destroy the universe if he so desired. It was Power, who - after the recording angel checked my name - took me into the presence of Love. They are the same being, for you cannot separate God's power from Himself; but what a different face was infinite love! Wearing the human form divine, the Ancient of Days, all love, embraced me and made me one with his body and I still feel that presence today. My friends know me as Neville, my daughter as her father, my wife as her husband - but I no longer feel this body of flesh and blood. I feel only the body of love. But power came first, that I knew; but looking closer love can be plainly seen. These two beings cannot be separated. Love is Spirit and Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God - but God is love! He is the Father of all, and one day everyone will receive his gift of love!

In the meantime exercise your power. Have faith in the promise by exercising his law and proving it in performance, for faith is not complete until through experiment it becomes your experience! This lady knows what she has experienced. She knows the law works. She would never be interested in hearing of any special diet to become more spiritual, or any meditation to become aware of her so-called cosmic consciousness. But through exercise, through testing herself, God's law is becoming her experience, and one day the real gift, the gift of God Himself will be hers.
No one can earn God's gift. It could happen to all who are here this night, or to one. It is my desire that everyone will have the experience before I depart, but I am not to know the time that God the Father has fixed in his own accord. I do know that we reconstruct the temple one by one. All the things you and I do here will vanish like castles in the sand. But the Bible, which is the Word of God, is forever. It will never pass away. It is engraved on the Rock, the Rock that is Christ, the gospel contained in all.

Paul uses the word "rock" because of vision. I know, for back in the 30's while sitting in the silence not thinking of anything in particular, I closed my eyes in contemplation and saw a quartz, a solid rock (the symbol of death, the limit of contraction which God took upon himself.) As I watched, the rock fragmented itself. Then I saw all the tiny pieces gather together as if by some unseen hand and mold itself into a living statue sitting in a lotus position. Looking at this wonderful creature, I realized I was seeing myself. As I recognized Neville the whole thing began to glow, to become radiant, and when it reached the limit of intensity it exploded and I awoke sitting in my chair.

The symbolism is true. Engraved upon the Rock that is Christ is the eternal Word of God. Having put the eternal Word (the Rock) into the mind of Man, when he reaches the end of the race God's Word will be fulfilled as the being in which it is revealed, so the symbolism is true. I saw the Rock which is Christ fragmented. Every little piece was a part that I had played in the drama called life. The villain, the hero, the rich man, the poor man, the beggar, the thief - I have played them all, and having finished the race I have gathered my various selves together to form the being that comes to the end of the journey. And as I watched I saw it glow like the sun and when it reached the limit of intensity, it exploded. Scripture, from the beginning to the end, is all engraved on the Rock and placed within the mind of Man.

Tonight you can take this simple principle as recorded in the 13th chapter of 2 Corinthians and "Examine yourselves to see whether you are holding to the faith." When you are satisfied that you are, then test yourself. If the morning's mail brings bad news don't call the person and tell him he shouldn't have written the letter, but revise it. Change the letter completely. When you answer the telephone test yourself again and hear only what you want to hear. Do as my friend does, for her telephone technique never fails her.

As Fawcett said: "The secret of Imagining is the greatest of all problems to the solution of which the mystics aspire, for supreme Power, supreme Wisdom, supreme Delight, lie in the solution of this far-off mystery." I invite you all to share in the solution of this mystery. My friend has contributed her discovery. She calls it her telephone technique using revision. Now the Bible does not use the word revision. It uses the word "repent" which means "a radical change of attitude." I use the modern word revision because the word "repent" has grown barnacles. We think of a person repenting by getting down on his belly and moving forward like a worm towards someone to whom he repents. But when you revise (or repent) you don't confess to anyone. How can you confess any sin to anyone when you are told in the Book of Psalms: "Against thee and only thee have I sinned, O Lord." You cannot sin against another; you can only sin against yourself for your true self is God. I should go to someone just as foolish as I and say: "Father, I want to repent?" Never!

The priesthoods of the world give us man-made precepts and call them the doctrines of God. They are blind leaders of the blind. When the Pharisees and scribes came to Jesus, saying: "Your disciples are violating the precepts, the traditions of the elders by not washing their hand when they eat," Jesus replied: "Why do you transgress the commandment of God for the precepts of men? It is not what goes into the mouth that defiles a man (for that goes through his stomach and passes on), but what comes out of the mouth of man that defiles him." That which comes out of the heart defiles, not that which enters the belly. Call your man-made precepts as a something coming from God and you transgress his commandments. This is true everywhere. Man is forever condemning another for what he believes the other ought to do to obtain salvation. But salvation is yours. It is coming to you whether you live wisely or foolishly. No matter what you have done you are going to receive God's gift and not one will be lost.

So while you are here, why not use God's law and live wisely. I find it much easier to pay my bills than to run from creditors, so why not pay them when the law allows me to. I simply imagine having enough money in the bank to pay them! I find it easier to live in the feeling of plenty than to feel a sense of lack. Living this way doesn't make me better in the eyes of myself called God than the one who does not know this law, or - knowing it, does not apply it. It makes no difference in the end, because both of us will be the one being who is God the Father. You and I are not only brothers, we are God the Father, for He is a compound unity of one made up of others.

Everyone is predestined to know he is the One, but in the interval all are invited to take this wonderful law and apply it wisely toward definite objectives. Like the fellow who came into the bar, and when they wouldn't serve him a drink said: "You think I'm a bum, but I want you to know I am a very important person. I know what it is to be rich and I know what it is to be poor, and of the two I'd rather be rich." Now, I'm not telling you what to desire, but I am telling you that I know what it is like to be dispossessed because of lack of means to pay the rent. During that time I owned the world and didn't know it. Everything was mine but no one told me about it. The world is yours for the taking but if you do not know it you can go hungry for want of a dollar. No one will hold your money in deposit for you or go out on the street and tell you of your investment. Instead he will use it, and until you make the demand, he will not release it to you. You must claim it by appreciation. No one is going to force your desire upon you. Everything is yours for the taking. Appropriate your every desire by applying God's law, just as this lady did in her wonderful telephone technique.

Start examining yourself. Do you believe that imagining creates reality? If you do, then test yourself. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? Do you have the courage to claim; "I am He and besides me there is no other?" In the 8th chapter of John, the statement is made: "You will die in your sins unless you believe that I am He." This is not a statement of another telling you that you must believe he is God. No! You are forever talking to yourself! Limited by the five senses, "I" - Christ in you - will miss my goals in life unless "I" believe that "I AM" that which "I" formerly desired to be.

Ask yourself: "If I now believe that I am He that the world worships as the Lord, and all things are possible to me, then I must test myself and according to my faith in myself will it be done unto me." It is up to the individual to perform the action, for the evidence always follows the action. Act as though things are as you would like them to be. Persuade yourself that it is true and let the results follow. This is how you are called upon to operate in this world. It is not written in detail, but only sketches that you fill in with your life.

Now let us go into the silence.

Neville Goddard

November 6 1967

The Bible is Addressed to the Imagination

Blake asked the Reverend Trussler, who always criticized him, “Why is it that the Bible is more entertaining and instructive than any other book? Is it not because it is addressed to the Imagination, which is spiritual sensation, and only immediately to the understanding or reason?” If you’ll take this thought of Blake, take it seriously, you’ll be amazed at what you get out of it. When you think there are sixty-six books, it’s a library in that one book of ours…sixty-six books. It’s a challenge, something addressed only to the Imagination. The understanding is simply like the mediator…it passes through, as though someone comes in to mediate some problem. And from the depths of your own soul you’re speaking to the surface of your being, the enormous, infinite Imagination speaking to human Imagination. So it’s not really addressed or directed to understanding or to reason.

Now, let us take just a simple theme tonight. I challenge you to test it. May I tell you, you will not disprove it; if you test it, you’ll prove it. This is what Paul said in his 2nd letter to the Corinthians, “We walk by faith, not by sight” (5:7). Now, what does he mean? You and I when we walk by sight we know our way by objects that the eye sees. For instance, while we are seated here suppose the entire city was suddenly rearranged. Take a simple example, here is Wilshire…if all the buildings on the south were suddenly transferred, still related to each other, to the north of Wilshire, and all of the north to the south; and this building here, which is now north of Wilshire is just as far south as it is now north, and all the buildings that are now on this side equally distant…and you started home tonight and you turned here and turned toward Wilshire, and by habit you turned, say, to the west but as you go the Ambassador is on the north side, well, you know right away you’re going in the wrong direction. Then here is the Brown Derby, that’s on the south side. Well, you know you’re in the wrong direction. So what do you do? You turn around. Do you know you’ll never get home?

But fortunately for us in our simple childlike manner, these things are fairly stable. Not completely, because if someone came back from the last century into New York City today, who knew New York City well, they would not know New York City. They would have to be directed and ask question after question where to go and so and so. I came back to New York City in 1922. Well, I have lived there for years, and go back every year, and every year an old landmark is gone and some towering thing is in its place. So I know the city well…I haven’t really left it, because going back every year for at least five or six weeks at a time, I keep in touch with it. But if you are gone, say, for a long spell of time, you wouldn’t even know it. They change the names of the streets. What was, when I first came there, Sixth Avenue is now called the Avenue of the Americas. You wouldn’t know where you are, because that was not something…it didn’t exist. So now, that’s how I walk by sight. When I walk by sight I know my way by objects that my eye sees.

Now how do I walk as Paul said he walked and invites us all to walk? He said, “I walk by faith, not by sight.” When I walk by faith, I order my life by objects that only my Imagination sees, that’s all, when I know where I want to go. Where do I want to go? I want to go to the top of his particular business. I want to be promoted from where I am to where I want to be. Well now, how do I rearrange the structure of my mind? I can’t rearrange the structure of the outside physically, that doesn’t help me. But if I walk by faith, I will now walk by a rearrangement of the structure of my mind, all the things of my mind, and so set them up that that’s all that I see. I must now remain faithful to this state.

Now he makes another observation, he said, “This is the one thing I do.” Well, if it is the one thing I do, I should read it over and over and over. What is the one thing that he does? This is in his letter to the Philippians, the 3rd chapter, "But the one thing I do, forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead" (verse 13). Now, you name it. He had his goal. So that was his, but you need not have such a high goal. You can have any goal in this world…a business beyond the wildest dream of man. There is not a thing that did not begin in the Imagination. No matter what it is, whether it's the highest political position in our world, the greatest financial structure of the world, all things begin in the human Imagination. Because there's only God and God and man's own wonderful human Imagination are one.

If they differ, and they do, it's only in the degree of intensity, that's all. Keyed low as we are, well then, we have to either walk by sight or walk by Imagination. We may falter in Imagination. Walking by sight is easy, because we know things are fairly stable. They are not going to be rearranged suddenly overnight so that you may lose your way tomorrow morning when you come out and turn in one direction through habit to find the building isn't there and you're completely lost. But if I walk by faith, I now order my objects in my mind's eye, as these are ordered here to my physical eye, and then I walk in that manner.

Now I can tell you unnumbered stories where men and women simply ordered it in their mind's eye and they walked faithful to what they fixed up in their mind's eye and they became it. I think of my brother, my family, who had not a nickel, not a penny, and here he rearranged in his mind's eye a certain structure which if true would imply that we owned this building and all that it contained. It took him two years. Two years later without any more money than when he started, a total stranger…I wouldn't say a total stranger, but we knew him, but not socially. We never wined or dined with him; he never wined or dined with us. This building is up for sale. In the meanwhile, it faltered, it failed, and the sale is this day. The very day of the sale he comes in and asks my brother if he wants to buy it. We didn't have any money, no collateral. Well, he said, "I have been watching you and your father…you seem like an honest family…and so I have money. So I'll buy it, but not for myself. I'll have my lawyers bid for it, because if they knew that I am bidding they'd bid it up. So whatever I can get it for, will you take it? What it will cost I do not know, but will you take it? Yes? No collateral, just your signature that's all." And that day we owned the building.

We sold it…we bought it for only $50,000 in 1924, sold it eight years ago to a bank for $850,000… and there is no capital gains in Barbados. Didn't lose the business, didn't buy our business, only the building, only the little plot where it started. So we bought it for $50,000 on borrowed money, did a whale of a business in it, expanded beyond the wildest dream, and then sold it for $850,000… without any capital gain tax whatsoever. That is my brother Victor. Every day as he passed by he saw on the marque instead of the name that was there he rearranged the structure of his mind and he saw what he would like which if true meant we owned the building. For our name is Goddard; my father's initials were J. N. He saw "J. N. Goddard and Sons" and the name read "F. N. Roach & Co." Well, you can't transliterate the initials of F. N. Roach & Co. and make it spell J. N. Goddard and Sons, so he walked by faith, not by sight. Sight told him it was F. N. Roach & Co.; faith tells him it's J. N. Goddard and Sons. So in the structure of his mind he simply rearranged the entire structure. Every day for two years, as he walked past this building on his way to a little tiny shop on a side street which my father had and on the way back home at night he always stopped and looked and saw what he wanted to see. That was the beginning of my family's good fortune. That one had the good sense to put into practice this which is taught in scripture. We walked not by sight, we walked by faith.

Well, faith is what? Now let us go into the Book of Hebrews and get the definition of faith. We are told in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen…so what was made was made out of things that do not appear" (verses 1-3). That's what we are told in the very beginning of the 11th chapter of Hebrews, that what was seen was made out of things that do not appear. Well, that certainly did not appear, but it was made out of unseen things. No one by my brother Victor performing this mental act saw what he saw. In this world even in a simple manner I can say to anyone, you see what I see, but you do not see what I see. As Blake said when someone asked him, “When you look at the sun, don’t you see a huge big disk like a guinea?” he said, “No! What I see…I see a host of angels singing “Holy, Holy Lord God Almighty!” Others look at the sun and see a disk, a round disk, a huge big guinea, and he sees a host of angels singing, Lord God of Hosts.

I look at a tree. Do we all see the same tree? We don’t see the same tree. So I can say, you see what I see but you do not see what I see. So you can look at someone who is in need and we see the same being, but you do not see what I am now seeing. I’m seeing one who is not in need. So we see the same thing, but we see it differently. So I either live by faith or I live by sight. If I want to live by sight, well then, let me be just simply an automaton and accept everything that happens; and if I fight from now to the ends of time to change it, I will not change it. I will change it only as I begin to live by faith. So I walk in faith and not by sight. That’s what we are told.

Now, if there’s one thing he tells us that he does, he forgets the past. No matter what he has done or did not do, he completely puts it behind him. “One thing I do, forgetting what is behind me, what lies behind, and I then stretch forward towards what lies ahead” (Phil.3:13). Now his ideal is to be called to the highest spot of God, that’s his ideal. Maybe that is not your ideal. I hope it is, but maybe it is not. Maybe other things are pressing and you need money, and you need this and you need that. Alright, if that is what you need, take that as your objective. But take the same technique; put the past behind you. Don’t look back and become like Lot’s wife who turned into a pillar of salt. Salt is a preservative. You want to preserve something you simply put it in brine and you can keep it indefinitely. So that is salt. If I turn back to the state that I want to leave behind me, if I turn back and dwell upon it, I turn back to it and once more re-enter it and become it. But if I will turn my back on the past, no matter what I have done or didn’t do, and then stretch forward towards what I want to do in this world, and remain faithful to it, there’s no power in the world that can stop me because there’s no other power. You will actually become the man that you’ve assumed that you are, the lady that you’ve assumed that you are, if you remain faithful and persistent in this assumption.

So this is why Blake said, is there any book in the world comparable to the Bible? It’s the most entertaining. What a challenge! And it’s the most instructive. Because as you read it…on the surface it’s not the easiest thing to read, but he said, if it were easy to read it, it would not be worth my care, for the ancients discovered that what was not too explicit was fittest for instruction. And so if you want me to make it so explicit that everyone in kindergarten can see it, well then, it isn’t worth my care. You’ve got to dig. They made it in this manner because it rouses the faculties to act. So you read something, take a simple, simple thing like this. One of the most glorious…of course, they’re all glorious, all the books…but take Hebrews. “In many and various ways God spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets; but in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son…who reflects the very glory of God and bears the very stamp of his nature” (Heb. 1:1, 3). Well, you read this and you wonder what is it all about?

“In many and various ways God spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets.” Well, the 118th Psalm, the 19th Psalm, all these psalms will give you where the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament shows forth his handiwork, and all these things we see as he spoke this way. But then, who are the prophets? We see as we read it they are only instruments through which he spoke… these are the instruments. All these things came through in a not altogether conclusive way. They were foreshadowings of what God intended. But in the last days he has spoken to us by his Son. You read that and may I tell you from my own experience, I am still—not here in this group because you do believe me and you accept it—when I go across country or if I’m invited on a panel on TV or on radio, it’s the most difficult series ever to convince man to accept this Son of whom I speak.

They will say “he means.” It doesn’t state it in the book…no one knows this unknown author, he remains unknown, and no one knows to whom he addresses the letter. When we speak of the letter to the Philippians, the letter to the Ephesians, to the Corinthians, we know to whom it is addressed, but the letter to the Hebrews does not in any way indicate who is the recipient of the letter. It’s unsigned and no one knows the author of the Book of Hebrews. But here, "In many and various ways he spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets; but in the last days he has spoken to us by his Son." Because you read the Old Testament and then we have a New Testament, and the churches of the world tell us that son is Jesus Christ. There we are stuck. Now he's stuck—it's Jesus Christ—and it isn't so at all.

This is the most fantastic revelation: In the end he is going to reveal himself, and he's going to reveal himself only in one manner…through his Son. So it is the "last day" of the one to whom he reveals it—it's not the world is coming to an end—we come to the end of the journey, individually. So the individual who experiences this Son has reached the end of the road; it's his "last day." In the last days he has spoken by his Son…spoken to us. When the Son comes, you are so thrilled and so surprised that you can't, well, can't describe it in words. And the Son is David; it's not Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ is God the Father. And he calls Jesus Christ "my Lord." He calls Jesus Christ "my Father." So when he calls Jesus Christ, "my Lord, my Father" and then he appears and calls you "my Lord, my Father," then and only then do you really know who you are. I could tell you from now to the ends of time that you are Jesus Christ, you are God the Father, but not until this happens will you really believe it…really believe it, really know it.

I'll tell you why. You and I, I don't…no, I shouldn't say that you and I, because I don't think for one moment that you do doubt the authority of scripture…but many in high places in the world, like Bishop Pike, he questions the authority of scripture. Yet he is the highest that in the Protestant world one can go, you can't go any higher. We don't have popes in the Protestant world, and the highest order is a bishop. So, he questions the authority of scripture, well, that's alright. But may I tell you, let him do it. He questions the authority of scripture, but no man can question the authority of scripture after he has experienced scripture. Now, scripture is called the Word of God and we are told "his name shall be called the Word of God," speaking now of Jesus Christ in Revelation (19:13). Now in the Book of John it is said, "And thy word is truth." Now, if you experience it then you know it's true, don't you? Well, may I tell you, a truth which man has experienced he knows more thoroughly than he knows any other thing in this world, or than he can know that same truth in any other way. For I can tell you what I've experienced and it's true, and so you've heard it and you believe it—if you come here, I think you believe it—but you do not know it to the degree you will know it after you have experienced it. So a truth which one has experienced he knows more thoroughly than he knows any other thing in this world, or tan he can know that same truth in any other way.

So I tell you from my own experience, as I've just told you about my brother, it can't fail you. You say two years? Well, what's two years? He was just only a kid really. He hadn't yet turned, well, he was in his early twenties when he started this. Now, he's two years my senior. And so today we have this fantastic, I would say, set-up business-wise in the islands, because someone really believed scripture and walked by faith rather than by sight. Because sight told him he didn't have a penny and no possibility of getting any. A large family, all these mouths to feed and to live, all kids, all little children, and what on earth are we going to do when we think forward in time to support a large family of ten children, a father and mother and grandmother and aunts, too. For we never neglected anyone, we included everyone who was part of the family tree. Not one went outside; if we had anything, they shared it. Then he started this wonderful walking by faith, ordering his life by objects that only the Imagination could see.

Well, others ordered their lives and walked and found their way by objects that the eye sees. Your eye can only register what is right there now. If you don't like it and that's all you're going to register, you'll continue to perpetuate it. But if you don't like it, you have a power within you to completely change it and change it radically. That power is Christ in you who is the Father. Who is he?—your own wonderful human Imagination. That's Christ in you.

So tonight you can start. May I tell you, it will not take you long, but you are the operant power. And you can tell where you are going by simply watching at any moment in time what you are imagining…just watch what you are imagining and you know where you are going. If I imagine certain things based upon my past and it's not lovely, that's where I'm going. I'm only perpetuating, bringing it forward again. But if I would turn my back…as he said, "This is the one thing that I do, forgetting what lies behind and stretching forward towards what lies ahead." If that's the one thing he does, then let me do it. But he had the highest ideal: his ideal was the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

So it's entirely up to us. I invite you to try it. May I tell you, you'll never disprove it, not in eternity. But being the operant power, then you have to live by it if you're willing this night to actually live by it. I could tell you unnumbered stories where an individual having nothing …you don't have to have anything…that's the wonderful story. You start just where you are and start moving from there. But you must walk by a certain direction and you walk by the direction that you yourself set up. What would it be like if it were true…what, what you want to be? What would it be like? Well then, conceive it in your mind's eye, what would the feeling be like? Now Blake said Imagination was spiritual sensation. Well, what is spiritual sensation? Analyze it. Feel a piece of glass. Can you feel it? Alright, can you feel a baseball? Does it feel like a piece of glass? No. Can you feel a tennis ball? Does it feel like a baseball or a piece of glass? Can you feel a piece of cloth? Can you feel a violin? Can you feel a piano? Do they all feel alike? No. No two really felt alike. That's spiritual sensation. You can do the same thing with the ear. It's simply a living, a vivid living way of seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, feeling…a vivid way of doing it. And you can do it right now. I can feel right here without going elsewhere.

In New York City one night when I was giving something similar, a lady sat in the front row…and she lived in the Waldorf Astoria. She said, "Well, I'll try it now," and she embraced mentally…as she sat in the Silence she embraced a huge, huge bunch of roses. She was passionately fond of roses and she embraced roses. She could smell them, she could feel that velvety petal; she could actually, well, she could see them in her mind's eye. She saw the roses, she saw all these things. And then she departed as they all did at the end of the meeting. The very next day this is what happened. When she went back to the Waldorf Astoria, the one that is now called the Queen Mother Elizabeth—not the present queen but her mother—they gave a party for her at the Waldorf Astoria, and there must have been, I would say, 2,000 who attended. Naturally the flowers came, like gardens and gardens. But the next day, the maitre d' looking at all these lovely fresh flowers wondered what to do with them. This lady was a permanent resident of the Waldorf Astoria. He said, "Well, I'll tell you what, take three dozen up (calling this lady by name) take it up to her room and place it in her bedroom for me. Then take this to so-and-so and take that to so-and-so, and he distributed all the flowers. But he sent to her room three dozen roses named for the Queen Mother. It was a new rose that year named for her because of this occasion. They all knew that it was going to happen, that she was coming to what is called the English-speaking Union. So, when she came home that second night, walking down the corridor she could smell this fragrance, this lovely…almost like someone had broken a bottle and the attar of roses is coming out. She stopped at three doors beyond her door and wondered if it's coming from that room. She was overpowered. And then she got to her room and saw these lovely things on her bureau, three dozen of these lovely, giant beauties left on her bureau. She simply embraced it and lost herself in feeling it.

I try to get everyone to feel it and walk by faith and not by sight. Now, if something is very important to your life, maybe you can't lose yourself to that extent…and then you are looking back on what you are against what you want to be. She didn't have to have flowers, so she could completely forget anything in this world, and she lost herself in embracing roses, not just flowers but roses. And here, the maitre d' casually said, "Take these up to Mrs. Neidemeyer" (that was her name)…"Take them up to Mrs. Neidemeyer." Because she was a gracious lady, very kind to all the people who lived there, and all of a sudden he had one idea, take three dozen to her.

So I tell you, even in the simplest thing…a lady came one day, she said, "I want more money" I said, "What do you do?" She said, "I am a seamstress and yet I am also an artist. I design and yet I'm a seamstress, but I do aid in designing." I said, "Now what do you want?" She said, "I want x-number dollars, and then minus…I'm a single person living in a hotel, so minus my deductions for taxes and all the other things that are taken out of my salary, I want exactly $100." This goes a way back in years, not today; I'm going back when a hundred dollars was really not what a hundred dollars is today. And she said, "This is what I did, I held the envelope in my hand and then I tore off the end. I could hear the tearing of the paper, the envelope. I shook the contents out and then I counted out the money, even to the very pennies that I would get if I had x-number of dollars minus that they would deduct. I counted everything out. That very week the phone rang in the lobby of my hotel and here was a total stranger…she knew of me but had never met me…and she asked me if I would see her. So I came down to the lobby, not knowing who she was, and here was someone who employed many people and offered me a job and paid me to the penny what I had counted out." That lady could have counted out much more, but it was more than she got before and she was quite satisfied with it. Right to the penny and it all happened that week.

Well now, if there is evidence for a thing, what does it matter what the world will think? How could you now take from her what she has experienced? So the truth that she has now experienced is paralleled in scripture, for "all things are possible to him who believes." Well, how do I believe? I've got to imagine. How can I believe without imagining? Believing what? I'm believing I'm getting this money…that's what I'm doing. Well, if I'm getting it, will I not do it? Well now, bring all of your senses to bear upon the act, for Imagination is spiritual sensation. And so, all these things…she played every part. She could hear the paper tear, she could hear that; then she shook the contents out, she heard that; and she felt it, felt the paper, felt the contents. Do you know that money has an odor unlike anything in the world, so you can smell money. If I put a piece of money before your nose and you closed your eyes, what are you smelling? You know exactly what you're smelling…it's money. You can smell it. So, all the senses were brought to bear upon this event, and that very week she started working for this party as a seamstress plus designing in part.

And you can go through…I can take you all through even silly little things…like a lady going into Stearn's department store on 42nd Street in New York City. She said, "Now Neville said I could have anything I want if I can imagine it and believe it." Well, she had no money, but none. She couldn't really purchase anything. She takes off her hat and she tries on a hat and she likes the hat. Leaves her hat there and she tries on the hat, and she walks around admiring herself before all the mirrors, and then she comes back. She can't afford the hat. Then she wonders "Where is my hat?" So the one who is selling hats asked her, "What hat?" She described the hat. "Oh," he said, "I'm sorry, I sold that hat. I couldn't find the price tag on it, but the lady loved it and the lady bought it." So he called a section manager over and described the problem and where is her hat. He was frightfully embarrassed and he said, "I'll tell you what, no publicity, take any hat in the department and it's yours." So she liked what she had on and she walked out with it. That was her hat.

Another story of a similar nature…here is a lady whose profession in this world was a lady of the evening. There are all professions in the world. In New York City this lady came to all of my meetings, and I ran into her on 73rd and Broadway. She lived at the Ansonia. She said to me, "You now, Neville, the strangest thing happened. You told me that I could have anything that I wanted by simply imagining it." I said, "Yes I do. I still teach that." She said, "You know, I saw a beautiful hat in the window and it was"—in those days you could buy a hat for $3.50-$4.00, but this was $18.00—she said, "I stood before the window, I imagined that hat on my head, and then I walked up Broadway. As I came back, I would not look into the window to become disillusioned to see the same hat there, so I walked by as though I had the hat on my head. Then when I went home I took off the hat without looking into the mirror and put it up as though I took off that hat that I saw in the window. It was my hat now. Well, the next morning when I got up the old hat is still there, and so I wore that hat for maybe a week or ten days. Then a friend called me and asked me to come and see her, she wanted to see me; so I called on my friend and during the conversation she said, 'Pardon me a moment.' She goes into her room and brings out the hat and she said, 'You know, Ann, this hat I bought…I must have been insane when I bought it, I wouldn't wear it to a dogfight. Yet, strangely enough, I think it would look lovely on you' and brings out not a hat but the hat," the very hat she saw in that window. Something possessed this lady to buy it; she buys it, takes it home and keeps it for eight-ten days and calls up the one person, and says, “I think it would look lovely on you.” So she gets the hat.

Then she said to me, “But Neville, why didn’t God give me the money to buy the hat? Why did he give me the hat in this manner?” So, knowing her profession, I thought I could talk to her openly, I said, “Now tell me, Ann, do you owe any rent?” She said, “You’re too nosey.” I said, “I’m asking a simple question, do you owe any rent?” She said, “Yes, two weeks.” I said, “I presume you pay just about $17.50 a week rent, don’t you, at the Ansonia?” She said, “I do, exactly $17.50.” “And you owe two weeks, so you owe $35. What price hat do you usually buy?” “Oh,” she said, “$3.50, $4.00.” “Have you ever bought a $17.50 hat? That’s what the hat cost.” She said, “Never.” I said, “Now, Ann, tell me honestly, if while you were watching the hat you saw a $100 bill, and it was all yours now…you found a $100 bill, owing $35 in rent and the uncertainty of your future, would you, without ever having bought a $17.50 hat, would you have bought it?” She said, “No. I still say you’re too nosey.” She had confessed she would not have bought it if she found a hundred dollars. So I said to her, “Well, how much must God give you to get you to buy the hat? If he gave you a hundred, you wouldn’t have bought it; if he gave you, what, a thousand dollars to buy it, he could do it cheaper than that…so he gave you the hat.” Someone bought it who didn’t like it, so what. I have bought clothes and when I went home I wondered what possessed me to buy it, and then called up a friend and gave it away. I’ve given all kinds of things away after having bought them. At the moment I was possessed to buy it…and someone was treading in the winepress elsewhere; I was simply the one moving and he was treading it some other place. Someone wanted a suit of clothes. So I go to my tailor, I said, “I think I’ll take this” so he sells me something that when I came home my wife said, “Alright, so you bought it. Don’t expect me to go through the door with you.” And then a friend who wanted something just like it, he comes and gets in touch and he gets the suit. So he was treading the winepress while I bought the suit.

So may I tell you, Imagination, as Blake defines it, is spiritual sensation. Really believe it! It’s a vivid sight, a vivid sound. When Beethoven went deaf, all sounds to the outer ear came to an end, but it didn’t come to an end with Beethoven. Didn’t he hear with the inner ear? Don’t you and I go and enjoy all these lovely things that he heard not with the outer ear but with the inner ear? Well, can’t you now think of someone that you love and hear what they are saying? Can’t you hear them? Anyone that you know, whose voice you know, you can hear them. If you can’t see them vividly, you can hear them. Well, any one of the senses is enough to get through—a touch, a sound, a sight, an odor.

I know in New York City years ago I walked through Harlem and I would get the whiff coming from someone’s cooking and it was all West Indian food. Why, instantly I’m in Barbados. I could smell odors that only come from Barbados…the kind of vegetables that you only get in the West Indies, the kind of fruit, and the mixtures…I could get everything. I walked by and suddenly an odor is coming…why, I’m walking in Harlem and yet I’m in Barbados. It just transports you 2,000 miles away. So you can bring back an odor and put yourself in any place in this world…a sight, a sound, a touch.

So, “I walk by faith,” said Paul, “and not by sight. But this one thing I do, forgetting what lies behind I stretch forward to what lies ahead.” Now he names the most glorious thing…but it need not be yours. You read this in the 3rd chapter of Philippians. So he named the most glorious thing, the highest calling in the world, the calling of God in Christ Jesus: To become one with him so that before you stands his only Son who in turn calls you Father, who calls you Lord.

Well, tonight you try it. For your life is forever, may I tell you. Nothing dies, but nothing dies. Even the little rose that blooms and you wear it in your lapel, you take it out, it’s gone and you throw it away. “The rose that blooms once blooms forever.” Nothing passes away. And so tonight, if one should cease to be in this little sphere, he doesn’t end. He’s instantly restored to life and carrying on the wonderful journey in this age until that moment in time, the last day, when he speaks to him by his Son and the Son calls him Father. Then and only then does he know who he really is: the author of it all. His journey in this world is over, and when he takes off the little garment, as he tells us in Philippians again, “I desire to depart and be with Christ, for that is better by far” (1:23). Then he uses an expression which always interests me, “But,” he said, “it is more necessary”—an unusual expression—“it is more necessary that I remain in the flesh on your account.” Longing to depart and be one with Christ—because there’s only one Christ who is God the Father—but it is more necessary. And when I first read that it struck me as the most wonderful way of expressing something…that he remain in the flesh because it is essential for us that he remains and continues the instruction.

So tonight, you take this. It’s very practical. All that I have told you has been right down here. But I will not limit you as to your goal. You’re goal may be God, you’re goal may be anything, but whatever the goal is, take this and walk by faith and not by sight. Then take the one thing Paul said he did, the one thing that I do, and then he turns his back on anything that he’s ever accomplished, and then he goes forward. Doesn’t matter what he’s done before. He has a goal and now he walks by faith towards that goal. So you set it up in your mind’s eye. What would I see if it were true? How would I feel were it true? What would I do were it true? Now walk in that state and you cannot fail!

Now let us go.

* * *

Q: (inaudible)

A: The fairy tales? My dear, all the fairy tales are based upon vision. Well, I will some night.

But they really are all based upon vision. Not…I would say, they’ve taken the true vision and put it into the form of the fairy tale, for sometimes that’s the best way to get it over. But all the great classics are really true, and to sit down and read them and all of a sudden to see what they saw…for they’re telling the truth. The Bible is simply a story based upon vision, an actual experience. But man doesn’t know it, and he’ll fight to the death to protect his concept which is complete misinformation of who Jesus Christ really is. I tell you, Jesus Christ is the true identity of every man. You couldn’t breathe were it not that Jesus Christ became you. Actually, he is the true identity of every child born of woman, regardless of the nation, race, religious background, anything. He is the true identity of every being…that’s Jesus Christ. Were he not within you, buried within you, you couldn’t even breathe. One day he will awake within you, and when he does, you are he.

Goodnight.

Neville Goddard

6/16/1959

The Cup and the Cross

We firmly believe here that Imagination creates reality. We believe that man is all Imagination and that God and man are one. There is no difference in nature; the difference, which we recognise, is in the degree of intensity of the operative center of imagining itself. We are keyed low. When keyed high, an imaginative act on our part would be an immediate objective fact but keyed low it must be realised in a time process, but it cannot fail, if we remember the act and remain faithful to that act. A man can be what he wants to be in this world. No matter what you have done you are one with God, and you are all Imagination.

We will turn now to the Bible – Acts 5. Peter is made to say, "We must obey God and not man." And those present were angry to the point of which to do the disciples harm. But there was one among those who heard him – a teacher, a Pharisee, who said, "Do not kill them, for if this teaching or this work be of men it will come to naught, but if it be of God you cannot overthrow it and you may even find yourselves in the position of having to fight against God." (Name of the teacher: Gamaliel) Here we tell you that the Bible, which is the greatest book in the world, is completely misunderstood, for it is not history; it is a series of visions, which are acts of Grace. It is the unveiling of the great Reality that men call God.

Matthew 26: Oh my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. And he cometh unto the disciples and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" And again he said, "If this cup may not pass away from me except I drink it, thy will be done." And he came and found them asleep again. You think that an individual, 2000 years ago, went through an agonising frightful experience to save the world. No. The story is all about you. You are the being spoken of. The central figure of the gospels is that presence in man, which is man's own wonderful Imagination. But at the very limit of opacity in which it functions in this world, it is called the "death" of God, for to make man alive, he had to completely forget that he is God. The awakening of man to the height that is God will come, and our purpose for being here is to learn how to awaken. "Cup" means "to imbibe," and He is called in the Bible "the wine bibber" – he who drains the cup. The man who said, "Do not touch them!" etc. was Gamaliel, which comes from a word meaning to wean, as a child is weaned, so now it is able to go out and feed on other food. We are here to mature and to be weaned from what we have formerly thought was true.

Years ago I was sent to do this work that I am doing. I was told, "Go! And down with the blue-bloods!" It means the traditional state. We speak of blue-blooded horses, blue-blooded people, meaning the fixed and accepted states. I was told to go out and tear down all the traditional misunderstandings of the greatest story ever told to man. It is not history. It did not take place in space or time. "Go and tell them the story of Christ Jesus in man." "If it be possible for this cup to pass from me, let it pass, but if I must drain the cup I will do so."

What is it I must do? I tell you that the story I have come to give you is the story of revision. You see a man and he looks as he should not look to anyone in this world. My senses reveal him as he appears to me and others. I am confronted with the cup. Must I accept that appearance and perpetuate it in the world, or must I revise it and nail myself on the revised image? I must. So, "I am crucified with Christ, yet not I, for Christ liveth in me, and the life I now live I live by the faith of the son of God who loved me and became man". So, each time I see another as he should not be, I am confronted with the cup, and I must now imbibe to the fullest and become the "wine bibber" and so yield to the image and so live by it that I see this man now as he should be. I must drain the cup.

I must crucify myself on that image, even if I do not live long enough to see it resurrected. For it will be resurrected. Crucifixion without resurrection would be the very triumph of tyranny. There must be resurrection, for I will awaken and so will you; not one will fail to awaken, and then we will take every being in this world and take the ideal of that being, and so yield to it that we nail ourselves to that imagined state, and remain faithful to it, so that no matter how long it takes, it will be done.

That is the cup you and I are called upon to drink. It is offered to you tonight, not 2000 years ago. You drink it for yourself or for a stranger. The man you want to be, that man you will be, if you will nail yourself to that state. That is reality. It seems crazy! Men reject the teaching of Christ and of Christianity, for the churches have no concept of this teaching. It has nothing to do with ritual. We conquer only by the sword of forgiveness. Identify the other with the ideal that he has failed to realise, and to the degree that you do it you have truly forgiven him. Though as yet no one sees him as you now see him, still if you walk faithful to it you will make it real in your world.

Do it for everyone. Everyone is immortal. He is not contained in this little body; I am not, you are not. I am scattered over all my Father's visible and invisible universe. So, reject me here and you will find me there. So I must in my mind's eye resurrect you, and you must in your mind's eye resurrect me. Not one can be left behind, for we are all scattered and we must gather that which is scattered into the perfect body that my Father saw when He became it. So he became alive by nailing Himself here on Golgotha – which means "the skull." Here is where He is crucified. And the measure of awakening is measured by my awakening you in me. So, no matter what anyone has done, it was only in a nightmare. I will represent each to myself as my Father saw him, and to the degree that I lift each up within me, will the veils be removed and God's eye will open and I will see the perfection of everyone in the world. There is no place that you are not and I am not, for you are infinite and scattered all over God's universe. I cannot run away from you, so I must face you here and see you as you should be seen. And, walking in that state, I lift it up. Now we can do it in other ways, the practical ways. What I am telling you now belongs to a higher level of being, but take it on a lower level if you wish: a job, or a home, or money, or health – whatever your need is. We are entitled to it, for God gave it to us. For you and I are citizens of heaven. I was actually sent to this sphere to tell you that no matter what your race or your background is, you are a child of God. "Down with the bluebloods" – the old traditional, fixed beliefs. No matter who tells you otherwise, their concept is completely wrong. Every man living is God made visible – black, white, red or yellow. Man goes through different stages of awakening. Do not think because you are wearing a light pigment that you are more awakened than one wearing a darker skin. "Listen to them" Gamaliel said. And it means to wean, to ripen. "If what they say is of men it will fail; if it is of God you cannot stop it and you may even find yourselves opposing God."

I know what I say is true. You can prove it. You can take anyone in your world and represent him to yourself, as he would like to be. Take an incorrigible child and bring him before your mind's eye and see him as you would like to see him and he will embody that state. Revision is the most practical thing in the world. The story of Christ is the story of revision. But the world does not understand because it was told in a parable. It is told in the story of the unjust steward, which I have given you before. I know what the day revealed to me. Change the day. Can you change it? I was just reading this master work on psychology which claims the past has ceased to be, but influences the present through memory. So it is said in this wonderful work that it has ceased to act save through the gathered experiences stored as memory. It cannot be acted upon. It has not ceased to be at all. The sentient are not now in these states. A man who went through a gas chamber is no longer going through it. The forms remain and the day will come when they will see that he never went through a gas chamber. There are many forms of the remembered past. Revise! Go back to your second year if you can remember that far and take any incident and change it and represent it to yourself as you wish it had been and living in it you will change your entire world now. For if the past is influencing the present by the memory of it, you change anything in the past and then change the present. If I miscreate something God gives me, I have the opportunity of finding how to change it. I can stretch back in time and take any incident in my miscreated past and changing it, change my entire present.

God became man and he is in every being. There is no other way that God could become me but by giving Himself in that becoming. Though I call myself Neville, it is still God. You think that is blasphemy? I do not care what you think. Every child born of woman is God and that which became man is Christ Jesus. It bears this cross of man and this state is like a tomb, and as Blake says, "God himself enters death's door with them who enter it and lies down in the grave with them in visions of eternity until they awaken." God himself entered this "grave" when I jumped in my mother's womb. And he will never leave me, for if he should leave me I would cease to be. And then I awake by doing for the whole world what God did for man.

So take any man's dream and nail yourself mentally upon that cross by imagining he is that being he desires to be, and walk just as though it is true and live in the dream for the other as if it is true, and as it becomes true, you will lift him up. Man saves himself by – and only by – the saving of his fellow man. He who lifts up the world is lifting up the eye of God within himself, and when he is fully awake then he is God.

Do not ask another why he wants something. Give what he asks for. You persuade yourself that he has it as you witnessed it and to the degree that you persuade yourself that he has it, so will it become true. No reward: you want no reward. Whether a man is wonderful or horrible – do not condemn him. All are in states, which the soul falls into in its dreams of good and evil. You make it your business to see that everyone is already the ideal he wishes to embody, no matter what it is. For in this way you are opening up the eye of God. For this is the story of Christ. "If it really is of God, then you cannot stop it."

All He asks is that I try. Must I drink this cup? Yes. There is no other way than the way of the cross. I must cross one state to another state. We conquer by the cross. It is not a thing hanging on the wall, though as an object it is very beautiful. It is crossing from where you are to where you want to be, from seeing what you appear to see to seeing what you want to see. That is the Passover. I cross from one state to another. Is there any other way? "If it is possible, then let this cup pass from me; if not, then thy will be done." What is God's will? "All that You gave me I have kept and none have I lost." All that he gave me I must lift up again, and He gave me you and you. I meet you and you are a gift from my Father out of the nowhere. I must lift you up for I will meet you beyond all the veils, for you are an infinite Being. You have an Immortal Body and there is no place in God's universe that you are not. If I do not redeem you here in me, I will meet you elsewhere and still have to redeem you.

Well, the most practical teaching in the world is also the most profoundly spiritual. There is no transforming power in death. Think of your home right now. At this moment it is subjective to you as you are seated here. You do not see it with these physical eyes. It is subjective to this room. But really in your heart you do not think it is subjective as the world speaks of it. It is out of the range of your senses, but you know it is right where you left it. It is the same with all the worlds of my Father. Subjective and objective are determined by the level on which consciousness is focused. Everything is objective to my Father. And when I awake, my dream may seem unreal and therefore subjective, but it is not, if I am interested, for then it should become to me objective, for that is only defined by the level on which consciousness is focused. While my dream lasts is it not objective? I recently told the story that if you can touch something and hold on to it and awaken you will awaken in your dream world and find it completely objective. A lady wrote to tell me she tried it and proved it. I know from experience it cannot fail if you try it and you will prove that subjective and objective are just names.

To the psychologist "objective" is just you from the cradle to the grave. But think of this fantastic universe extending beyond a hundred million light years. It is estimated by a great scientist that if each star represented one tiny grain of sand and only those stars, which are visible to this world were included, this "sand" would cover England to a depth of several hundred yards! If you are only on this little speck, then what are you? They spoke only of the stars, not including the planets. And then someone says they have 1000 acres! The common man, which means us, sees things about us as so solidly real. We feel it is real if we can touch it. But the scientist says it is not solidly real at all, but is only an aggregation of molecules and atoms and electrons moving rapidly in space. They say our experience of a solidly real object is actually what they call "electro magnetic fields" between my fingers and the object. But my finger is of the same material as the object! If both are "all space", then the one we spoke of just owns 1000 acres of "all space". Possessions mean nothing. What is important is the awakening of God in man. When man begins to awake he does not desire to possess the earth; he is the earth and he is heir to everything, for his Father gave it to him. Finally you awaken and claim it. Let no one tell you that this person is better than that one.

The sun shines on the just and the unjust. If you salute only your brother, if you love only those who love you, how are you better than another? You are doing nothing that all do not do. But it does not matter. It is only awakening that matters. So take every person in the world and try to awaken him in you by lifting him up. So crucify yourself for him, for that is a little death in the divine image. As you go through these little deaths, seeing what you should see and "dying" to what you formerly saw, then God sees, and then you find nothing to condemn, for no matter who the man is, it is God playing every part. So there is a complete misunderstanding of the greatest story in the world. The Gospel does not tell how Christ came at all, but how he comes. He must come in the mind of every being in the world. If he came 2000 years ago he is now gone, but if he comes in the mind of every man, that is important. He comes as God came to man by so loving him that he became man and "died" by believing that he was man. But man must do the same thing for his fellow man as God did for him, and he yields to the dream for another, and to the degree that he is faithful to it he will make it real in the world and then finally he awakens. Ask me how I know? I know.

Years ago, on a little freighter in the Caribbean I retired early. And then I found myself outside my body, which remained on my bed. I was in a lovely twilight and I found I radiated this twilight, for there was no sun or moon, only this light from myself. I floated in this state; I did not walk. And I heard this heavenly chorus singing, "He is risen!" and I knew they meant me. I found myself beside this vast sea of sick and malformed beings waiting – and I know they waited for me. And as I passed each was refolded and refashioned into the image of perfection. Missing eyes or limbs reappeared. All became perfection because it was so that I beheld it. Then I heard the voices say, "It is finished!" and then I became crystallised again into this opacity called Neville. So when man is lifted up all that is unlovely is lifted up and there is nothing unlovely on that higher level. Raise it up by revision.

For everyone is there and when you raise him within yourself to that level you will find he is completely perfect. On this level you see only scattered portions of his eternal body, but when you rise high enough you will find him perfect. I felt after the experience I have just spoken of that I had a fantastic fight with Death and I had been victorious. What formerly was unlovely I had overcome and in overcoming I had lifted every being with me. I know it is not a unique experience, for on a certain level every being is perfect. You rise to that level as you lift up another within you. For there are no strangers, there is only God. For God became man that man awakening may become God.

You can ignore any being here, call him your servant, whatever you like, but he is also immortal and you will meet him in God's fabulous universe and then you will understand John 17: "Now return unto me the glory that was mine before the world was. And of all that thou gavest me not one is lost save the son of perdition (the belief in loss), and they dwell in me and I in them, and we in Thee."

Now let us go into the silence.

QUESTION: What should I do after I have made the mental structure? Is there not something to be done on the outside, such as work, etc?

NEVILLE: Your dream compels physical changes if they are necessary to make it true in this world.

It is like a child growing toward the moment of birth; it exerts such pressure that it cannot be held back. For my dream is an unborn child and regardless that child will be born when the time is come. These pressures force physical transformations.

THE DIVINE BODY

Tonight's subject is "The Divine Body." The Bible speaks of two bodies: one belonging to this age and one belonging to That Age. It speaks of the body of this age as flesh and blood, and it speaks of the body of That Age as the body of Spirit.

Blake made the statement that: "Man has no body distinct from his soul. That called 'body' is a portion of soul discerned by the five senses, the chief inlets of soul in this age." (-- from "Marriage of Heaven and Hell" by William Blake)

I will share with you tonight my experiences of the two bodies, and then you can form your own conclusions. Metamorphosis is the central theme of the Bible, the transformation of man into God. Well, here we are in garments of flesh and blood -- garments that grow, they wax, they wane, and they vanish. We all reach that inevitable point where we say that they are "dead," and they turn to ash, turn to dust. Yet, I know from experience that man does not die. I do know from my own experience. This is not theory. I am not asking any person in the world to support it. I only know what I know from experience.

The wise men of this age will say, "No, that's stupid." One just died here recently; and on his 90th birthday, with all the honors that man can confer upon him, they gave a birthday party for him. His name is Bertrand Russell. And this lady friend of his sat next to him at the party and said, "Bertie, you know, undoubtedly you are the most famous atheist in the world; and after today, at ninety, you undoubtedly are the oldest atheist in the world. But, Bertie, suppose you are wrong. Suppose, -- and it can't be too far from now, -- when you depart this world you should meet Him. What would you say?"

And with a twinkle in his eye, pointing his finger toward the sky, he said, "Well, I would say: 'God, you gave us insufficient evidence.'" I can almost hear him say, "You gave us insufficient evidence," because as a brilliant mind, brilliant mathematician, philosopher, plus the fact of his rigid belief that there is no survival, he couldn't conceive of anything outside of the brain as a physical organ, and its activity made man; and its disintegration was the end of man.

But I have news for him: that man does not cease to be when men call him "dead." I know from my own experience with those who have gone beyond, many of them -- the majority of them -- do not even know of the transition; they do not evan recognize the fact that they have made the transition. So, let me share with you one experience of this -- a very close and very dear friend of mine. His name is Jack Butler. He was my secretary. When I came out here, either my second or my third year, he was just about 50 years of age. In fact, he would have been, the following December, but he departed in late August.

But the day I was leaving for New York City, I received a cable saying that Jack had been found on the floor, that Jack had a heart attack and was dead. So, I went back to New York City and attended to his funeral. I took care of all the things for him. His sister wanted a Catholic funeral; so we gave him a Catholic funeral in Haverstraw, New York. I went up and took care of all the affairs and paid for the funeral.

My sister-in-law, -- I have two, -- and this sister-in-law of mine always said to me, "You know, I like you personally. I really do, Neville. I like you because you are very kind to my sister -- a good husband and a good father. But I don't believe one word that you teach, you know, for I am a Christian in the orthodox sense of the word."

She was a pillar, and still is a pillar, of the Christian Church in Summit, New Jersey. But she said, "I don't believe these things that you teach." It's perfectly all right. Now, Jack died in August, and she knew it.

In the month of January, the following year, -- say, almost now six months later, I am thoroughly awake, but I am not in this body. This body is on the bed, and I am fully aware of where the body is. I meet my sister-in-law in a world just as real as this -- just as real, just like this; and she said to me, "I still do not believe what you teach, you know." I said, "That's perfectly all right, Al; but look at Jack"; and she said, "What has Jack to do with it?" I said, "Don't you know that Jack died?" And she said to me, "Jack died?"

Before she could say anything further, Jack said to me, "Who is dead?" I said, "Jack, you are not dead; but you died, you know." "oh," he said, "you are stupid. I am not dead, but I died?"

Al recognized the fact that he had died, for she knew that I came back from California and had paid for his funeral and took care of the entire thing. I said to Jack, "I gave you a good, wonderful, Catholic funeral, Jack, in Haverstraw where you were. And your body was put down in a grave. By now, it's all decayed right in that little bit of earth. If it hasn't yet, it will soon decay and turn to dust; and here you are, solidly real." I said to Jack, "Come over here, Jack." He came over. I put my hand upon his thigh and squeezed it. It was solidly real, as it was Jack's thigh before he died!

Jack looked about 20 or 22 years of age. Now here is a man, 50 when he died; he never wore glasses, he never had any false teeth; he missed a few, naturally -- some were missing. But here is a man who could look into the mirror, see the reflection of his face, and not recognize the fact that something had happened. He was gone six months, and he did not know of the transition. He knew nothing about it.

My sister-in-law, Al, she knew he had gone; and the next day Al did not remember the experience, any more than 99 per cent of the people today remember these experiences; but Al changed from then on. She became hungry to learn more and more of God. She lessened her hold, as it were, on that orthodox concept, but Jack did not. He did not know.

And Bertrand Russell, at the age of 97 when he died, -- wearing glasses, wearing false teeth, wearing all the aids that a man of that age needs in order to function here, would look into the mirror and see a young Russell -- a young Bertie in his 20's, and not recognize the fact that he had departed this life.

You see, the wisdom of this world is foolishness in the eyes of God; and in this world of ours, we think ourselves so wise. He said, "Since, in the wisdom of God this world did not know God through wisdom, it has pleased God through the folly that we teach to save those who believe."

So, I meet them time and time again, and they are totally unaware. You know why? Because the world is just like this. You depart this world, and you are instantly restored in a body that is new -- unaccountably new -- in a world that is terrestrial just like this, in an environment best suited for the work yet to be done in you by He who started it. Your Father started that work in you. He is transforming you into Himself. He will not complete the work until He makes you Himself. So you are God the Father?

"He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ." (Philippians 1:6, Revised Standard Version)

Jesus Christ is the image of the Invisible God. You are destined to be Jesus Christ; but until that day He unveils Himself in you as God the Father, you will be in a world just like this, doing what you do here. It may be an entirely different kind of work, but it's a terrestrial world. You suffer there as you suffer here. You go through all the experiences that you have here. And may I tell you? you die there, too! You reach the age when you die there and are restored to life in a world just like this, in bodies just like these, only the body is almost new -- not a baby or child -- new; always around 20, 22, 23 years of age. That's about the time that you pick it up.

Now, it's a mystery. How on earth does it work? Well, let me share another experience to see how it works.

Fifteen years ago in Beverly Hills, I am asleep in my bed, and yet I became aware; and I am seeing a bed that I should not see from the position that I am occupying on my bed. Here I am, looking at the interior of quite a plush hotel; and yet, on my bed no one in my room could see anything but the four walls and the things on the wall; the bureau, the little objects on the bureau. Not a thing could be seen concerning what I am describing. I am seeing the interior of a wonderful hotel. I am looking into a wonderful suite of rooms.

Consciousness follows vision, and I step into that room. my body is on the bed; I know exactly where it is. My wife is sharing the bed with me; it's a double bed. I went into that room and returned to my body on the bed. I did it, maybe, a dozen times. Then I said, "Now I will adventure. I will take the plunge and remain in this room, and then explore."

When I made my decision to remain as consciousness followed vision and I stepped into that place, the room closed upon me. Here I am, in a world just as real as this, in a body just as real as this; and then the world closed upon me, and I am completely shut out in body, but not in consciousness. I know exactly where a body is. This world calls me by a name called Neville. I am still aware that I am Neville. I know there's a body lying on that bed next to a woman bearing my name. She is Mrs. Goddard. I am Neville Goddard. And I'm going now to explore.

I see the entire room close upon me; and what seemed, from the bed, to be a 30 by 10 becomes now just a third of itself. It's now an anteroom, just a dressing room. I do not go through walls; I act there just as I act here. I went through the door into a hallway. I started down this lovely hallway, with plush carpets; and when I came into another hallway intersecting this, it is all lit -- beautifully lit with chandeliers -- perfect. Two ladies are walking down the hallway, and I say to them, "Ladies, this is a dream," because I knew exactly how it started; and I am telling them, "This is a dream," and they are afraid of me, as though I were stark mad. I hear something that seemed to float from the sky. It wasn't floating from the sky; it was attached to the ceiling. But I remembered something similar that I had seen in a friend's home that I had seen not more than six months before; so memory tells me, because I know where my body is, that this is only a dream; so I started there, and I heard it, and it seemed to me very solid, very real. But remembering that I encountered something similar in a friend's home in the hills of Hollywood, I said, "You see, this is a dream."

I thought at the moment that this would simply be gossamer -- just a shadow of what I had remembered. It wasn't any shadow; it was as solid as this (touching the podium). My hand could not go through it; it was solid. I am solid to myself, and the ladies that are walking down -- they are as solid as you are. They followed what I call the "duck file." One got in front of the other, and they got as close to that wall as they could, because they were afraid of me; and they hastened their step and kept on moving toward the end of the hallway. And, then, before they disappeared, they looked back to see if this thing is still in the hallway talking to them.

Then I realize, now there is no way back to my body. I can't go back to the room, and from the room go back. I am shut out! I am locked out completely from this world, and I am in a world just as real as this. That world was just as solidly real as this world; but here I am, shut out, with unfinished business. My business is, I have a wife. I have not provided for her adequately. I have an uneducated daughter. She hasn't yet gone through high school. She is qualified, I know, and she desires to go to college, and I have not made provisions for her college; and I have unfinished business in that section of a world that this seems to be but a section of it. If I do not return to that body and re-animate it, they will find the body and they will call it a "dead" body, and they will give some reason for the dead body. They will say it is heart failure. They will find some way to account for it. They have to, first of all, operate on it, for I carried a small insurance policy. So, it is customary to open it up to see why it "died." I knew that that is simply the end of that body unless I got back.

I closed my eyes; held it for a few seconds. When I opened my eyes, I am still standing in the hallway. I close my eyes again, and I could see nothing any more than I can see anything now with my eyes shut. I open my lids, and I see you. I opened my lids, and I see that wonderful hallway, with lovely chandeliers and everything lit. And here I am, fully aware of what I did deliberately.

Then I remembered something I did many years before when I found myself awake in a dream. I wanted to experiment, and I held the object in my dream, and I wouldn't let it go; so I said to myself, "I know this is a dream. Now hold an object and don't let it go," -- something that is stationary; not a living animal that can move, but something stationary, which I did. And holding it, I compelled myself to remember what I did; and I awoke in the dream, -- and here I am, completely awake in my dream. I realized then that I awoke by feeling the solidity of that "world." I remembered that I returned to this world by feeling the solidity of this world. So, then, standing there, with my eyes shut now to the obvious, I assumed that my head was on a pillow -- the pillow that I knew I had placed my head upon before the whole thing started. I could feel the pillow. That's all that I did.

Then I felt myself, instead of standing vertically, -- I assumed I was lying horizontally; and then I could actually feel myself in a horizontal position with my head on the pillow, but I could not move. I was cataleptic. There I am, now, with a body that is as "dead" as bodies can be, and I am alive in a dead body. I couldn't move my finger. I couldn't open an eyelid. I could do nothing!

Now, I know exactly where I am. I am back in Beverly Hills, and the body is cataleptic and I can't move it. It seemed an eternal time; but after, maybe, about twenty-five or thirty seconds I could move the little finger, and then a few seconds later I could move some more; and then I could move the elbow. I pushed it out, and I could feel the warmth of my wife's body. And after tremendous effort, I could open the eyelid, and there I saw the familiar objects on the wall. I saw the bureau. I saw all the things return, now, to consciousness; and here is my body that I have shut out completely.

What is a body? Blake is right: "Man has no body distinct from his soul. That called 'body' is a portion of soul discerned by the five senses, the chief inlets of soul in this age." (William Blake from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell")

The body I left on the bed is only a portion of this activity of my imagination, which is the real body; and the body that I clothed myself in when the ladies passed by and I talked to them was only a portion of the soul, but still related to this world. That's not the Divine Body. These are the bodies of flesh and blood. That body would have bled as easily as this body would bleed if I cut it. It's a mystery. It's a miracle how you can produce that body and see it just as you see this reflected in a mirror; how that body can grow, as it grows here; how that body can suffer, as this suffers here; how that body is entangled with the relationships of men and women, as this body is entangled here.

Now, before we come to the Divine Body, let me give you a story taken from the Book of Luke. The wise men of that day are called, in the Bible, Sadducees. They are the scientists of their day. Like Bertrand Russell, they did not believe in the Resurrection; they did not believe in survival. If they kept the law outwardly, they kept it only for political reasons. It was wise to be seen in the Synagogue. It was wise, for business purposes, to be seen as a holy man keeping the laws of Moses; so they abided by the external law, and they observed the dietary law and all these things. But they did not believe in the Resurrection.

So, they turned to the central figure of Scripture, and they said to him: "Master, Moses in the law said that if a man marries and dies leaving no offspring, and he has a brother, the brother should marry the widow and raise up issue for his brother. Now, there were seven brothers, and the first one married and died, leaving no offspring. The second took her as his wife, and he died leaving no offspring, and the third; and eventually all married -- the seven married her. All died, leaving no issue, and then the widow died. Now, whose wife is she in the Resurrection?"

He answered and said, "In this age, the children of this age marry and are given in marriage; but those who are come to glory to attain to that age, they neither marry nor are they given in marriage, for they are Sons of the Resurrection, and they die no more. They are now Sons of God, being sons of the Resurrection."

Something entirely different when one reaches that age; the body differs completely, and he is above the organization of sex. He is neither male nor female there; he is Man, and "God is Man and exists in us and we in Him." (William Blake, from "Annotations to Berkeley")

The eternal body of man is the imagination, and that is the Divine Body of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is then the Lord Jesus Christ, functioning in an entirely different body. It's not this body that waxes, wanes, and disappears. It's not this body that needs the companionship of the opposite sex. It is not this body that , between this and the opposite, produces something similar and calls it a child. Well, it neither marries, nor is it given in marriage, -- not when it is in that body, which is the Body of the Resurrection.

They asked him no more questions. Now, what is "that body"? I will tell you my own experience, and you draw your own conclusions as to this Divine Body.

I was coming through the Caribbean Sea on a freighter -- my wife, my little girl and myself. We were bringing boxite. That is the ore from which we make aluminum. The ship is going to British Guiana, and they load up just a certain amount; and then they come down the river at high tide, and they can get over the bank. If they took a complete load, they could not get over the bank; so they put on just enough cargo that when the high tide comes, it floats them over the bank. Then they come to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, and fill it to the gunnels, for they are bringing all the boxite from British Guiana and storing it in Trinidad, for these ships are taking just a certain amount of the load, come to the Port-of-Spain, and then fill it. We flew from Barbados to pick this boat up in Trinidad. The ship is down to the water's edge. I wonder how on earth this thing is going to take us to Mobile, Alabama, for that was the port. But we got aboard. They were only allowed to carry twelve passengers, on American freighters, unless you had a doctor. So, to avoid carrying a doctor, they only carry twelve. We had not a thing to do at sea.

The Captain called me in the very first morning. He was in an open shirt -- a khaki shirt. He said, "I am dressed for the entire voyage, Mr. Goddard. We have our breakfast between 8:00 and 9:00, our lunch between 12:00 and 1:00, and our dinner between 5:00 and 6:00. If you are hungry in between, in this little kitchen here you will find coffee 24 hours a day. There is milk in the refrigerator, cold cuts, cheese; the bread box is always full of bread, with butter. You've got everything you need if you are hungry in between. This is a union ship, and we do not serve before or after time. You see all the buttons in your stateroom; every one works. Every one is perfect, but don't push one of them, because no one is going to come; and if they do come, at the end of the voyage, I am going to get a huge, whopping bill for overtime. This is a union ship."

I said, "All right, Sir. I will not be pushing any buttons. I will go into the kitchen and get myself coffee if I need it. If my little gifl wants milk, there's milk. I have all it takes."

"If you drink," he said, "I hope you brought your own with you, because we don't have it aboard the ship. But the ice is there, and the setups are here; so you can have everything you want right here, but not alcohol, although you are allowed to have all you want if you have it already aboard." So, I thanked him and told him, Yes, I had my supply. So, the ship started. You could do nothing of an evening, -- just a small little deck. So, I retired quite early for my entire trip.

Well, this night in question, out of the blue, -- with the most thunderous suddenness it came, and I found myself fall like a spiral out of my head. And here I am, fully aware, and a heavenly chorus is singing, and they took just three words: "Neville is risen," and this heavenly chorus is singing, "Neville is risen." And I found myself in a body of fire and air. It felt that way to me, and the body was self-luminous. I didn't need the sun, the moon, the stars. Wherever I wanted to go, I just simply floated, -- I glided. Here is a body that is fantasti I did not lose my identity; I am still Neville, but I am clothed in an entirely different body; and the body, though human, is a body of fire and air. And I am a little bit off the surface of the earth. And, then, as far as my eye could see, I saw this sea of human imperfection. There were the blind, lame, halt, withered shrunken, -- you name it! Here they were in this enormous sea of humanity. I had no compassion. I simply glided by, and I knew they were waiting for me. And the chorus is simply singing out. How they could take three little words, "Neville is risen," and play upon it as they played upon it, is beyond description, -- but the most heavenly music, only using three words: "Neville is risen."

As I glided by, eyes that were missing -- empty sockets; they came out of nowhere and these beautiful eyes reappeared in the sockets, seeing perfectly. Arms that were missing came back. Feet that were missing -- the lame jumped for joy. The deaf heard. Everything in this world was made perfect as I walked by! That is the Divine Body. I know now, from my own experience, that Heaven is not a realm. It is the Divine Body; for wherever you are, clothed in that Body, everything is perfect. Nothing can remain imperfect in your presence when you are clothed in the Divine Body.

Trees long dead, if you walk through the forest of dead trees -- petrified forests, -- they would all burst into blossom. Barren fields must erupt into lilies of the purest white. The blind saw, the deaf heard, the lame jumped; everything was perfect as I floated by! And when I came to the very end, and the end was made perfect and every one was perfect; then this heavenly chorus exulted, and it said, "It is finished." Well, I felt myself actually crystallize into this body that is really like, I would say, a strait jacket that you put the insane in. This body, to me now, having experienced that, is just like a strait jacket. I must wear it, and I must suffer in it, and I must take care of it like a slave.

I must feed it, water it; I must assimilate all that I put into it. And what I cannot assimilate, I myself must expel; and no one can do it for me. I am a slave of the garment that I wear here in the world of flesh and blood; but I have tasted of the power of that garment when the chorus sang out, "Neville is risen." That is the Divine Body that every one, one day, will wear! And that Divine Body is in you now.

It came out like a fiery serpent, but it came out of my head, and I was it. I was the body. I was not only wearing it; I am that body when I am clothed in it. It needs no substance from without. It needs nothing. It is self-sustained, and it's perfect. So, when you read in Scripture, "Be ye perfect as your Father in heaven is perfect" (Matthew 5:48), it is that body. And that is Heaven itself!

So, when we read in Milton, where Milton makes Satan say, "Wherever I fly is hell, for I myself am hell" (from "Paradise Lost"), -- this body is Heaven, and wherever it goes is Heaven, for I myself am Heaven! I cannot go any place clothed in that body and not find it perfect as the body is perfect. Nothing can be made imperfect in the presence of that body. It is Heaven!

So, Heaven is not a realm. Heaven is the Divine Body. It is waiting in every man to clothe that one when the work in him is finished. It will be finished. No one will be lost!

Tonight you may drop, this very moment, and find yourself not necessarily in the year 1970. You could find yourself in the year One Thousand, and be just as comfortably adjusted to the year One Thousand as you are now adjusted to the year 1970. You could find yourself adjusted to the year Three Thousand just as easily now as you are adjusted to the year 1970. But the work that is to be done in you will determine what section of time you will find yourself awake in; but the body in which you will awake will be just like this. And if marriage is in order because it is necessary for the work yet to be done, you'll be married. If something else is necessary, that's going to happen to you. You can drop now this very moment, and you could be the Queen of England and find yourself tomorrow the maid of the latrines. It hasn't a thing to do with your present position in this world. You could be now the biggest thing in the world in the eyes of the present world and find yourself tomorrow, if that is necessary, shining shoes for a living. "He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ." (Philippians 1:6, Revised Standard Version) He does not judge any one from their present external position in the world. What you are is irrelevant.

It's what He is doing in you. And what is He doing? He is transforming you into Himself! Metamorphosis is the central theme of the Bible -- the transformation of man into God the Father. And when He has completed the work, because He is God the Father, His son stands before you and calls you, "Father." And then, and only then, do you know who the Father is, -- only when He, the Son of God, calls you, "Father"; for, "No one knows who the son is except the Father, and no one knows who the Father is except the Son and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal it." (Luke 10:22, Revised Standard Version) So, when the Son reveals you and you are unveiled in the presence of the Son, you are God the Father. That is the end, the climax, the purpose of it all.

So, judge no one superficially. Judge no one by his position in this world, for you do not know how near he is to the unveiling of the purpose of God, which is to unveil him as Himself. It is God's purpose to give man Himself, actually and literally; so that, when the work is done, you are God the Father, and you will wear the body of the Lord Jesus Christ. And that body, -- I can't tell any one what it is to wear the body of the Lord Jesus Christ, -- the Divine Body. It is perfect; and may I tell you? when I walked by this sea of human imperfection, I did not heal them by stopping to ask anything of them. I did not raise a finger in compassion. Where I am, everything must be perfect. If they are blind, they cannot remain blind. If they are dumb, they cannot remain dumb. If they are lame, they cannot remain lame. No matter what they are, they must be perfect in the presence of the Body that is perfect, and everything is made perfect. That is Heaven.

So, Heaven is not a realm. Heaven is the Divine Body of the Lord Jesus, and every one will be saved by being incorporated into that body. So, this is what I mean by the Divine Body.

If, in this world, you have to feel important, -- all right, feel important. It's far better than feeling unimportant! If in this world you've adjusted yourself to a way of living, and you must have a certain income, adjust yourself. Don't think for one moment that poverty is nearer to God. Don't think for one moment that wealth is nearer to God. None of these things have any indication as to the nearness to the end of the work that is being done in you. You can't judge by any outside picture as to how near you are to the unveiling of the work; but when the work is unveiled, you are Jesus Christ. You are the Divine Body of the Lord; and this is the great mystery that you find in Scripture when you have experienced it.

I can't tell any one the thrill in store for him -- laid up for him until that day when he experiences Scripture. When you actually, literally experience Scripture, it's the one true book in the world. It is not based upon theory. It's all reality. And the day will come, you will experience it.

So, behind the masks we now wear -- these garments of flesh and blood, -- the male and female garments and all their children -- male and female; but in the Resurrection we are above the organization of sex. We do not need any sex split into two in order to create. We create by being the Divine Body! And when we create, it's automatic, and it's perfect. Everything is perfect.

Now, you draw your own conclusions. Can it be that men who depart this world not yet resurrected, clothed in their broken bodies, are gathered together and wait for one who has been missing to walk by to set them into a new frame in new bodies? My Mother, when she died at the age of 61, looked about 90. She died wracked with cancer. She bore her twelve children. Nine boys and one girl survived, and one boy and one girl died at birth. And my dear Mother, -- and she was altogether precious -- a wonderful mother; at 61 she looked about 90, -- a thin, small, little, withered creature. Mother was always plump, blonde, blue-eyed -- a precious person. For the last two years of her life she came down with cancer -- riddled with cancer, and she was in constant pain. The pain showed upon her body. The day she died I was seated in my place in New York City, and she appeared before me, a girl of 20.

Mother was actually fond of flowers. She had a lovely garden. She had two gardeners always doing her bidding. I would see her in the morning, -- she didn't call it an umbrella; she called it a parasol, -- taking her parasol, giving orders to these two young gardeners: how to cut it, how to do it, what to do. In her garden, she was always with these two gardeners, telling them what to do.

She appeared before me, and she was under an arbor of flowers. There she had a brush in her hand, brushing this long, beautiful, blonde hair. She was very, very blonde. She had the lightest blue eyes. And there she was, brushing her hair; and she looked to me as a girl of 20.

Mother died in '41; I was born in 1905. So, you can see how much older I was than the girl who appeared before me; yet, there was my Mother! She appeared as a girl of 20, but she didn't talk to me. I spoke to her; she looked at me and smiled.

I sat right down and wrote my sister, Daphne, and told her what I had just experienced, in the hope that it meant -- it seemed beyond the wildest dreams that man could ever hope for -- that something had happened and Mother was released at that moment.

There is a difference of one hour in time between New York City and Barbados, where Mother died. And in that interval of one hour's difference, my sister wrote and told me that Mother had passed, and she gave me exactly the time.

You see, the war was on. There were no airplanes flying to Barbados, and you had to wait for an occasional ship; and they censored every cable. All things were censored. So Daphne wrote, and placed it into the normal mail; so I didn't get the letter for eight days -- eight or ten days; and she described the entire passing of Mother. And allowing for one hour's difference, that was the moment in time when my Mother passed, wracked with pain, looking like 90; and she appeared before me at 20!

The same thing happened with my father. He died at 85. And here was my young, wonderful, handsome father. He was a tall, strong, strapping man -- a man of my pigment. And here, my father appeared young.

Others I knew appeared in the distant future; but because they are in the year Three Thousand, it doesn't mean they are wiser than they were when they were here. In this 20th Century we've had the Einsteins; we had men in the 30's that could unlock the secret of the atom. And, yet, in the Twentieth Century, they are just as dumb people as they were in the Year One! They are just as stupid as they were then. You go all over the world, -- there are three and a half billion of us, and there are those who do not know how to come in out of the rain! And this is the Twentieth Century! They are just as foolish, -- don't think for one second that we are moving forward into some wonderful, progressive understanding. No! In the midst of stupidity you find Einsteins; you find the "this," you find the "that." So, to find yourself tonight, should you depart this world, in the year Three Thousand, -- there is no transforming power in "death."

It is He who is doing the work in you that is important, and He is God the Father. And when He completes the work that He set out to do, you are God the Father. And, then, all wisdom is yours, and it's not the wisdom of man; for, "The wisdom of man is foolishness in the eyes of God." (First Corinthians 3:19) It is the Wisdom of God.

And what is the Wisdom of God? The Bible defines the Wisdom of God as Christ, in the first chapter of First Corinthians, the 24th verse: "Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God." So, you find yourself in possession of the power and the wisdom of God. You don't need any wisdom of man, when the work is completed in you.

And may I tell you? all the world will not undo what your Father has done in you! He will not turn back until He completes the work. He said, "I will not turn back until I have executed and accomplished the intents of my Mind. In the latter days you will understand it perfectly." (Jeremiah 30:24) And the "latter days" are simply when He unveils Himself in you as Him.

So, this is what I mean by the "Divine Body." It's a real body. All I can say to you: it is simply the most glorious, luminous thing you've ever known. It is something that you are. You are the Body itself! Rather than wearing it; you are the Divine Body -- your Immortal Self, your Eternal Self. And wherever you are is Perfection. So, you could go right into "hell," and "hell" would cease to be where you are! You will transform "hell" instantly into the harmony that is Heaven; and if you are not clothed in that Body, you can go into Heaven and transform it into thd "hell" that you are.

So, this is the Divine Body that is housed within every one, and one day we will be awake in it; and the heavenly chorus will sing your praises too.

When I told the story in my little book called "The Search," I was persuaded by a dear friend of mine not to tell it in the first person, for people would think me arrogant and think it blasphemy; so I told it in the third person. I should not have listened, but I told it in the third person. I told it saying that they said, "He is risen." They did not say, "He is risen"; they said, "Neville is risen." When I said in the story I knew intuitively that they meant me, I did not have to know it intuitively, -- they were calling me by name. I knew I was the one who was risen. I knew I was the one of whom they sang and I was the one who wears the Body of the Risen Lord, and I was the one whose presence transformed the sick, the lame, the dying, the dumb into perfect states, and certainly once more in the world terrestrial just like this to continue the work that must be done in them. So, I have shared with you my own personal experience concerning the Divine Body; and my experiences with this body (indicating the physical body) are like a body within a body within a body, because this was on the bed in Beverly Hills, and yet I was clothed in a body just like this, just as limited, just as weak.

Fortunately I remembered what once I did through feeling to return; and, so, with unfinished business, with a wife not yet provided for and a daughter not yet fully educated, I knew I had to return or I should return. So, I took the feeling that I once experienced, and I felt the pillow and returned through feeling to that body, to find it cataleptic, -- to find that I could not move it, and after a while I could move it, and then a little bit more and a little bit more; and then it came back to a normal state. So, I know that it is like bodies within bodies; that you seem to exude with them in this world terrestrial, until that Body, which is the Immortal Body, -- and it doesn't need anything but itself, -- and, clothed in that, you are Heaven itself! You are the Lord Jesus Christ.

Now, are there any questions?

A LADY IN THE AUDIENCE: I realize from what you said that the Father has no concept of time as we know it. Then, my question is: You made the remark that somebody would die now and wake up in the year Three Thousand. Will you explain that difference in time?

NEVILLE: Right, my Dear. The world is finished, but man will not believe it. The Book of Ecclesiastes is possibly the most discussed and the most critical book, possibly, in the 56 books of the Bible. Im the Bible you read in Ecclesiastes: "There is nothing new under the sun. Is there a thing of which it is said, 'See, this is new'? I tell you, it has been already in ages past, but we have no remembrance of former things, nor do we have any remembrance of things to come among those who will come after." (Ecclesiastes 1:9-11)

Then, we are told in this book: "There is a time to be born, and a time to die; . . . a time to weep, and a time to laugh; . . . and God has put eternity into the mind of man, yet so that man cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end." (Ecclesiastes 3:2,4,11)

It's like a play, and you can be inserted into any section of the play and find it perfectly natural, for you are not going to be inserted into an unnatural state. You are already rehearsed in the part that you will play.

A very dear friend of mine, who was born and raised a Roman Catholic, -- he, his father and mother and brother lived in a very small area in Iowa. They had 150 acres of corn, and that's all they had to support them. The two boys and the father drank heavily; in fact, they were alcoholics. What can you do with three men on a farm when they are not contributing? They were alcoholic.

Well, this chap in particular, he spent so many days and weeks of his life in jail through sheer drunkenness. Then he joined AA. He hasn't had a drink now in possibly twelve years -- not one drop. You could not pour it down his throat; he knows he can't take it. But he's never had a vision, never had a mystical experience. He comes to all of my meetings, and one thing he wanted above everything else was an experience to prove to his own satisfaction, although he believes me, -- my experience are not satisfying to another; they want a similar experience for their own satisfaction.

He wanted to be assured that his mother survived. He knew what hell he, his brother and father gave her, -- if he could only be assured that his mother survived. Well, this night in question, he became fully awakened in a dream. He felt it a dream, but it was more than a dream; and there he saw his mother.

The mother knew the relationship of herself to this man -- this friend of mine. She said, "I am living. When I died, I found myself a girl of 20 years of age" -- now that was twelve years before he had the vision, -- "I felt myself 20, and I looked 20. I found myself in the year Three Thousand and Eight in the State of Pennsylvania."

Now, she never saw Pennsylvania before; she was born and raised in Iowa, and died there. Here she was 20 years of age; now she is 32. She has matured in the twelve years. He said, "I knew she was married, but I felt it was not to my father. I felt that she was married to some one else. My father followed her in death; and she is remarried, but not to my father. She spoke to me, and I said to her, 'You know, you sound like Neville. You are talking Neville's language.' She said, 'I never met him, never heard of him. Then I was rebuked, for we all know of him here. We know his teaching, and this is what I have experienced. I have found myself in the year Three Thousand and Eight, living in Pennsylvania. Here we marry, too; and here we are just as afraid of dying as we were when I was your mother,' -- just as afraid of dying!

There has been no change. She was a simple woman, a peasant, living on a small farm in Iowa. She is still a simple woman. The work -- the true work -- is still being done in her. Now she has become aware of a teaching that she did not know existed when she was here in the Twentieth Century. She was born and raised an ardent Catholic, as she raised her family, but she never heard it in Catholicism as she understood it. That was something entirely different. So, here is the evidence one person -- a simple person -- has concerning the change in time without a change in understanding.

But when I was born in 1905 my mother, so she told me years later, -- she said, "The church bells were ringing when I felt labor. You came at 9:15 on Sunday night in 1905, the 19th of February. And before you were born, I knew a bit of your destiny. I knew what you were going to do, only I interpreted it as a minister. I knew in some strange way you were sent to do the work of God, but I thought that you would be a minister in the Episcopal Church," -- which we then called the Church of England. Well, I never became that, not in her eyes. In her eyes, I hadn't yet accomplished what she felt inwardly that I came to do.

I was three weeks old when she was walking the floor with the little child in her arms, and she said to me -- the babe, "What should I call you?" And she said, "I heard a voice, and the voice said, 'His name is Neville.'" Then she said, "I heard footsteps coming up the stairs, and I thought it was your father." My father's name was Joseph. And she said, "Joseph, is that you?" and the voice replied, "No, it is I, Rollo."

That was her brother, her younger brother, who lived with us. And he said to her, "What are you doing up so late?" and she said, "Well, I am waiting to name this boy. What name should I call him?" And she told me that Rollo closed his eyes as though he listened, and then he said to her, "Call him Neville." Then she said, "I went cold, and felt as if I dropped and the world came to an end, -- your name was Neville"; so she called me Neville.

And, then, when I was a boy of about seven, a very strange lady from England, who was out on some pension, lived in Barbados -- lived back in a wild, wild area where everything is blenced by the sea. All trees are bent by the sea winds as they come forward. And I sat with her one day, and she said, "You are going to leave Barbados, and you are not going to return, save to visit. You are going to be the first one of your family to get married, and you are going to have two children. You will be married more than once, and you will have two children."

Then she said, "You know, you are going to talk to unnumbered people, and you will be selling something. I don't know what it is, but you will be selling something. But centuries and centurie after you are gone, they will use your name and link it with two others who did similar work." She said, "Your name and two others"; she didn't tell me whether they preceded me, whether they would be contemporary, or if they would follow. But she told me that unnumbered years after I am gone and future generations were gone -- centuries afterward, "They will tell of the work that Neville did."

And I know I was in the presence of the Risen Lord. He sent me to do exactly what I am doing, and to tell my own personal experiences concerning God's work.

---oOo---

THE DWELLER ON THE THRESHOLD

14 June 1971

> Only that which has no right to live must die, and only that which has no right to exist must be brought to an end.

And that hasn't a thing to do with any child born of woman, or any flower that ever bloomed. It's something entirely different from what the world would suspect, for you and I have been given the greatest gift in the world.

> "God became as we are, that we may be as He is."
> [Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

In that, we were given complete freedom to misuse the gift of God! And that is His Power.

I will share with you this night an experience of mine, -- it happened years ago, -- to show you the only thing that had no right to live -- the only thing that had no right to exist, and must be brought to an end.

Suddenly I found myself confronted with these two creatures: one, the most monstrous thing you could ever conceive; and the other, the most angelic being that you could think of. The one that was the monster -- a hairy, monstrous being, -- I would almost be unfair to the "monkey" world to call him a guerrilla or a baboon; but that is the picture, only he was far more than that. And he spoke gutterally. He looked at this angelic being, and called her "Mother." It annoyed me, and I began to pommel him; and he gloated. He loved violence. Every blow made him stronger. He was the embodiment of every evil thought and act that I had ever entertained or expressed.

I was totally unaware of this creation of my own until that moment in time when I was strong enough to confront it; and I can't tell any one the emotion that permeated me when I saw what I had done. I created that that had no right to exist, and it must be brought to an end. I created that which had no right to live, and it must die. Blows could not kill it. It lived on blows; it lived on violence. As I looked at it, an emotion permeated my being that I had never felt prior to that that I remember: one of compassion -- infinite compassion, that if it took me Eternity to redeem this, I would do it. I pledged myself -- there was no one I could swear to; there was no witness. Something within me pledged itself to redeem this monster if it took me Eternity. It didn't take me more than a split second!

From the moment of the decision when I decided that I would redeem it because it had no right to exist, -- at that moment the whole thing withered before me. It got smaller and smaller; it only took a matter of seconds really. And that thing that was a monster thing one moment before now completely withered before me, but it was all energy -- mis-spent energy. It returned to me. I have never felt stronger than I did at that moment when all that energy that went to build and create this thing that had no right to exist returned to me; and here I am as powerful as I'd say the Universe.

And this wonderful creature that was the personification of every noble, lovely thought that I ever entertained, either expressed or unexpressed, -- she glowed like the sun. She had a right to exist. She was the personification of my use -- my wise and loving use -- of God's gift to me; and this monstrous thing was the personification of my mis-use of the same gift! That is what, one day, you will confront. That is your "dweller on the threshold."

Every one, at a moment in time, will actually meet him and meet her; and she will live and glow, and he -- in a second -- will simply wither before your eyes. There was no loss. He had no right to exist. But in our progress from the receipt of the gift of God to the full use of that gift lovingly, we make mistakes. There is no condemnation of the one who made the mistake. In fact, there is no condemnation. That is the only thing that will cease to live. It's the only thing that has no right to live.

So, man -- the most horrible creature in the world -- he has a right to live. All the Stalins in the world -- they have rights to live! All the Hitlers -- they have rights to live, and they will live; but one day they will confront the monster of their own creation, and they too will be filled with a compassion to redeem it, not knowing it is only the personification of their own mis-used energy. It will all return to them, and they will swell with power as the result of the return of that energy.

Now we are told in Scripture: "No one can say 'Jesus is Lord' except by the Holy Spirit" [I Corinthians 12:3]. That goes for every one that walks the face of the earth: "No one," -- you can say it in words and confess with your lips, but you don't know it until the Holy Spirit reveals it within you. Well now, Who is the Holy Spirit?

We turn to the Gospel of John. He said, "It is to your advantage that I go away, for if I do not go away, the Holy Spirit, who is the Spirit of Truth, cannot come to you. But if I go away, I will send him to you." [John 16:7]

Now remember his words: the Sender and the "sent" are one. He said, "He who sees me sees Him who sent me." [John 12:45]

"I came out from my Father, and I came into the world." [John 16:28]

I am never alone. The Father who "sent" me is always with me, but you do not know my Father and you do not know me, for the Sender and the "sent" are one. So, if I send the Holy Spirit, -- well then, you are also going to see me. But now, I will now disappear physically, -- that's what you are telling them. Not a man, but yo8r concept of Jesus Christ is of a man external to yourself. The day will come that that concept that you now hold of Jesus, so that when you hear the word "Jesus" it conjures in your mind's eye some presence external to yourself, -- that must come to an end. It's an awful moment in the life of one who calls himself a Christian!

When you see the story is not secular history -- that we have taken personifications for persons, we have taken the vehicle that conveyed the instruction for the instruction itself and the gross first sense for the ultimate sense intended; and when the non-historicity of Scripture is revealed to man, and man accepts that so that the physical, visible concept of Jesus vanishes -- he vanishes. What an awful vacuum in your life at that moment! It will continue for a while; but now, because he now vanishes from you as an external being to whom you could turn and pray and now you can't, -- now the Spirit of Jesus will rise within you. It is then that the Spirit of Truth comes; and when will he rise? He comes "like a thief in the night" [I Thessalonians 5:2]. Suddenly he will rise within you as you, and then you will know who the Lord Jesus is! [See excerpts from "The Quest for the Historical Jesus" by Dr. Albert Schweitzer, added at the end of this transcript.]

When the Spirit of Truth unfolds himself within you as you, you will know the mystery of the Lord Jesus, and then you will know that the Lord Jesus is God! You will know from your own inner experience that Jesus is the Lord. And when you read these words: "And then the kingdom of this world will become the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ" [Revelation 11:15], you always thought that Jesus and Christ were one and the same. They are, in a sense; but here in the 11th Chapter of Revelation -- and we are warned over and ocer: "Add not one word to this book or take one word from it," with a threat as to what will happen if we do [see Revelation 22:18,19]. Yet not one book in the New Testament has been more violated than Revelation.

I have books at home concerning the Revelation of the Bible -- that is, the book called "Revelation." What stupid interpretations! Do not change it. It is all vision. Leave it just as it is, and it's going to unfold within you.

So, in the 11th Chapter of Revelation: "When the kingdom of this world becomes the Kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ," -- now Christ is the Messiah. I'll tell you who he is. The Messiah is David. That is the "Lord's Christ," for he said, "I am going to the Father. I am leaving the world and going to the Father."

I came out from the Farher, and I came into the world. Again I am leaving the world and going to the Father." [John 18:28]

When he returns to the Father, he is a father; and there must be a son to bear witness to his fatherhood, and that "son" is David. And David one day will stand before you and call you "Father." Then you will know the "Lord's Christ." Then you will know Humanity, for Humanity completely gelled together into one single being and personified comes out as David.

So, having played all the parts, I forgive all the parts. And having played them all, I reach the end and will say, with Paul: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race. I have kept the faith. Now there is laid up for me the Crown of Righteousness." [II Timothy 4:7,8]

"Let no one, now, bother me, for I bear on my body the marks of Jesus" [Galatians 6:17], -- not the little stigmata; no, -- the marks -- the great, wonderful, supernatural events through which the individual must pass. He must be "born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh nor the will of man, but of God [John 1:13], -- "born from above," for: "Unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven" [John 3:3], no matter how good you are in the eyes of yourself, -- and what man doesn't think himself good and worthy to enter? Read the 16th Chapter of the Book of Proverbs: "Every man's works are perfect in his own eyes, but God sees the heart" [Proverbs 16:2]. And so because of his social, intellectual, financial background, we think he's worthy, -- well certainly he would not have these things in the world; God must have loved him more than the others because of what he has in this world! And it must be, in some strange way, some demonstration of God's affection! It hasn't a thing to do with it.

So, here in the end, you will know the Lord, and you will not know Him as something external to yourself. You will know Him as your Self.

"God became as we are, that we may be as He is." [Blake, from "Jerusalem"] And He serves us, whether our will is good or evil. He waits on us just as quickly and as indifferently when the will in us is evil as when it is good.

Now, what will? Your imaginal acts. Your every imaginal act is a creative act; and one day you are going to see it. Long before you actually see it personfied, both in this lovely creature and this horrible monster, you will see the evidence of this truth by things that happen to you in the world. You will see things happen, and then you will remember: "I once imagined that. I once entertained that imaginal act, and lost myself in the belief that it was true." And to the degree that I actually accepted it as true, it projected itself on the screen of space and became a fact in my world. At first, I didn't quite relate it. I couldn't quite believe that I had the power to do that. Then I tried it, and tried it again, and then again, and these things became realities in my world. Then I realized who this Being is of whom they speak in Scripture.

Then we are told: "By Him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made" [John 1:3]. So then, I found who this One is. He must be my own wonderful, human imagination! If the one spoken of is God, then my imagination must be God; and that's the Being that I have been mis-using morning, noon and night!

And then comes the end. When I reach the very end of the journey, -- and here I must, now, find that I am the Father, for the end is to find the Father, the cause of it all; and finding the Father, there must be a "son," and here David stands before me! And there is no uncertainty as to the relationship between the boy who stands before you and ypu who see him. He knows you are his father, and you know he is your won.

Every one is going to have this experience, I prophecy for you, regardless of your present sex. In the Resurrection, we are above the organization of sex. We are a Brotherhood. All of us are Brothers; and together, collectively, we form one Being, and that one Being is God the Father. And you, one day, will discover you are the Lord Jesus, and you will know who "His Christ" is, as spoken of in the 11th Chapter of Revelation: "Our Lord who is now king over all the earth and His Christ." And "His Christ" is spoken of in Scripture as the "Prince of them all"; that "I, the Lord, will be their God and King, and . . . . David will be their Prince." [Ezekiel 34:24 and 37:25]

Well, if he's a king, his son is a prince, and his son is David. Read it in the 34th and 37th Chapters of Ezekiel. He states it forever and forever; but man, seeing this thing as secular history, has completely missed the entire point. So, "No man can say that Jesus is Lord, except by the Holy Spirit"; and the "Holy Spirit" is the spirit of truth which comes to man after he loses the concept of an objective, visible, secular being called "Jesus." But --

"Truth embodied in a tale Shall enter in at lowly doors."
[Tennyson]

It seems that man, on the present level, could not quite grasp this great truth; so it was told to him in the form of a story.

So Mother told me the story when I was a child, and told me of a Jesus, -- I can see a picture now on the wall of the living room. It was "The Slaughter of the Innocents." How Mother got it, I do not know; but many a day I stood before that picture and cried, that some one could be that cruel to take little innocent children and slaughter them to reach one child that they wanted to destroy. So, they took all the males under two years of age and destroyed them to reach the one they wanted to destroy because he was prophesied as the King of Kings. He was going to come to displace all the powers of the world. I can see that picture now -- some gruesome thing that Mother got. Where she got it, I don't know.

But not knowing it, having heard the story, I took it as Mother took it. We took it as secular history. The Bible is not secular history. There is no secular history in the Bible. They are still looking for the bones in the Near East. They are still trying to find pieces of the wood that he is supposed to have been crucified on. They are still trying to find the pieces of cloth that he wore. And what amazes one is that there are those in the world, supposedly intelligent people, who will give a listening ear to them and bring it out to justify their own strange, peculiar misunderstanding of Scripture.

I tell you, there is no burial ground of Jesus Christ, save in the skull of man. That's the only place where he is buried -- in every little child's skull. That's where he is buried. The little body that he "wears," -- that is the cross, and he will "wear" it as long as he wears a body of flesh and blood.

Physical death does not terminate the little body. It is renewed, as told in the 103d Psalm. "He renews our youth as the eagle" [Psalm 103:5] -- the young eagle. So, you drop it off here; and suddenly, you find yourself clothed. Though you've dropped off a 90-year-old body, you are clothed in a "garment" about 20 years of age, -- in a world just like this, with problems just like the problems that you thought you left behind; and 99 per cent of us who depart this world, who have not been awakened from the dream of life, do not even know they have departed. They are in a world just like this, and they do not know they are even gone. They can look into the mirror and see a youth instead of the 90-year-old, and still not recognize the fact that something must have happened. They look and see a lad of 20, and they knew they were without hair, without eyes, without teeth, without everything only a moment before; but they still do not recognize it. I meet them; so I know what I am talking about.

You call them "dead"? They are perfectly right in telling you that you are stupid because they know they are not dead. They are very much alive; so how can you call them "dead"? And if you say to them, "You died, you know. I was at your funeral," -- as I have said to those, -- "I went to your funeral. I conducted your funeral."

They say, "You're stupid! What funeral?" Here he is standing before me, and he is a strong, healthy, wonderful, young lad; and I am telling him I went to his funeral, gave him a nice Catholic funeral and put him in holy ground, and had the priest do all the little things for him as his sister demanded, and I paid the expenses. She didn't cough up one nickel, but she wanted all these things; but I loved my secretary, and I did all these things for his sister, not for Jackie. Jackie would not have wanted these things. So, I told him, "I took you up to Haverstraw, New York, and put you in a lovely little grave in a nice holy ground -- a Catholic ground. The priest came and he did all these things for you."

He looked at me and laughed, because Jack to me, although he was my secretary, we were as brothers. Jack died suddenly one day on a hot day in the month of August in New York City, and I went back east and took care of the funeral. And when I met him six months later, I turned to my sister-in-law and said, "How can you say there is no survival when you see Jack?"

She said, "What has that to do with it?"

I said, "Don't you know he died? He died six months ago; he died last August." This is now either late January or February of the following year; and she remembered he did die; and while on her face was just a peculiar look of astonishment, Jack said to me, "Who is dead?"

I said, "You aren't dead, Jack, but you died. And I came back from California, and I got a wonderful, lovely Catholic funeral for you."

Well, he thought that was the most stupid thing in the world. I said, "Come over here, Jack"; so he came over quite obediently. I said, "Watch this, Al," -- her name is Alice; I've always called her "Al." I said, "Watch this." So I put my hand on his thigh. I said, "You see, he's solid. He is real. This is flesh and blood. My hand doesn't go through it. This is not gossamer. It's real!"

And Jack did exactly what he would have done here. He did this (indicating): "Take your hand off me," -- just exactly . . . .

There is no transforming power in "death." If you are a thief here, you are one there. If you are an idiot here, you are one there. The only thing that differs is that if you are now blind, you aren't blind there; you are renewed, like the eagle. Your youth is renewed; so you do not go without the arm, without the teeth, without the hair, without these things. All these things are renewed by contemplating the Being that is Eternal. You actually contemplate, and in no time you are reclothed in a "garment" -- a solid, wonderful "garment" just like the one you had when you were 20 here. Not a thing is missing. But that still will not get you into the Kingdom of Heaven. You must be "born from above." For, "Unless you are born from above, you cannot

A delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou arisest upon
My weary eyes, even in this dungeon and this iron mill . . .
Thou also sufferest with me, although I behold Thee not."

You can't behold the Being that is having the experience as you do objects in space, because the Being having the experience is that which is called "Imagination." You can't behold imagination. Imagination is the reality that is called this-thing-called-God. So, the Voice answers, -- and it's your own wonderful human imagination answering:

" . . . . . Fear not! . . . . . I am with you always,
Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from the dead
Your brother who sleeps in" -- this world called -- "Albion."
[from "Jerusalem"]

Every one will rise. Not one can stop -- they couldn't even stop it if they wanted to. There is no such thing as complete annihilation. There is no annihilation. You gave it up in the beginning to come here; and when you came here, you completely forgot -- total amnesia; you forgot Who-You-Were. Listen to the words:

"Return unto me the glory that was mine, the glory that I had with Thee before that the world was."

This is not new. You gave up the Fatherhood, and yourself came into the world as the Son -- the one that is "sent," -- the one that is now to be made a burnt offering. And you are the "burnt offering" in this world, and you pass through hell in this world; but you are still one with the Father!

"I and my Father are one," -- even though "My Father is greater than I," for I'll return to my Self, the Father, having experienced what I came out to experience; and I as Father will be enhanced by the experience of being man.

So, every one is going to have it. Not one will fail.

So, today if I really see it clearly, you'll see this peculiar mystery in the Bible. The whole vast world is yourself "pushed out," and all these characters are simply states of consciousness into which you can in one little moment vanish. You try to grasp him, and all of a sudden, he vanishes into this one, into that one. You can't quite put your hand upon Him. But you do, in the depths of your Being; and you bring back glimpses of it, and then you share it with your brothers, because in the end we are all one, and yet without loss of identity.

You'll be God the Father, the father of David. And I know I am God the Father, the father of David; and yet, we are the same father! We have the same son, and yet we have no loss of identity. That is something that is difficult to explain.

So, this comes to us -- this mystery called "Christ" -- he comes to us as "one unknown." Not from the outside; he's on the inside. He rises in us as "one unknown," in the most strange, wonderful, ineffable mystery. Yet, He is That One who lets us experience Who-He-Is. You

Raised as I was in a very wonderful Christian home, where Mother saw that we all had a solid foundation as to the story, because Mother firmly believed the story to be true as she was taught it; my father believed it to be true, and we all heard it from our Mother's knee, and we believed it to be true. And when I heard it was not history -- and when I heard of the non-historicity of the greatest story ever told, my world collapsed. I didn't know where to turn. I had no "god" then! I was without anything to whom I could turn and hold onto; and, oh, what an emptiness comes upon a man at that moment in time! So, you are told: "Now your hearts are distressed." Read it in the Book of John [14th Chapter]: "Although I have told you that I must go away, you are sad of heart; but if I do not go away, then the Spirit of Truth cannot come to you; but if I go away I will send him to you, because I am going to the Father," -- and the Sender is the Father, and the "sent" is one with the Father. So, He sends his Spirit to you.

When suddenly you have lost all external concepts of God, then the Spirit comes; and the Spirit unfolds Himself within you as you. And then you will know how true the Christian story is. And the Christian story is only the fulfillment of Judaism. It was all foretold in the Old Testament, but they could not understand it then any more than they understand it today, because when it happened in one and that one told it, -- that's not what they were looking for. They were looking for an external Savior who would come and destroy their physical enemies and set up Israel as a mighty power. And that's not the story at all.

When you lose all concepts of a secondary cause, then Israel has no "enemy." When a man has no other being to whom he can turn -- he can't turn to another -- then he is freed from the tyranny of second causes. But the first shock that comes to man when man actually discovers that it is not secular history, -- and yet more true than anything ever recorded in this world of Caesar, becauae all the history of the world is only an opinion written centuries after the event.

All of our historical events are written after the event. Even when they are written as contemporary works, they differ. We had the Second World War, and you and I only have to remember the Second World War. Read the books concerning the Second World War. If a Britisher wrote it, then Montgomery was the outstanding General. If an American wrote it, Eisenhower was. If a German wrote it, Rommel was. If a Russian wrote it, Stalin was. All these men wrote it, and yet it is the same facts. We are looking at the facts; and yet in trying to put the facts down on paper and calling it history, they are as far apart as the poles. If that happened in our generation, just imagine what happens after three, four or five hundred years.

I tell you, the Bible is not secular history; it's salvation history. The dream is taking place in Eternity, but they must be reproduced here in us while we are generated on earth, for "No one can attain to bliss except he be generated on earth."* [Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

So, here this is the most marvelous experience that you could ever have, to find yourself clothed in flesh and blood, because while

---

* The actual quote from "Jerusalem" reads:
"Nor can any consummate bliss without being Generated On Earth, ... "

you walk the earth in flesh and blood which decays, this Immortal thing is going to happen within you; and then the Immortal You will rise, and you will know Who-You-Are. And you will know that you are the Lord Jesus.

Then in your world, you will tell it; and before you depart this world for the last time, -- for after the "birth from above," your physical "death" is the end of your journey. No more restoration; just once more, you are now one with the Father. And while it happens to you, you will tell it, and there are those in the world who will see you and know you to be the same being they know, but they know that you are God. They will know that you are Stanley, and yet know that Stanley is God. They will know that you are Jan, and know that Jan is God. There is only one God, and that God is every being who awakes! It is God expanding Himself, and it takes all together to form the one God.

So, "No one," -- but that means no one, -- "can say Jesus is Lord, except by the Holy Spirit." And that comes after the disillusionment; and then you realize there is no secular history in Scripture. And what an emptiness comes to the individual who makes the discovery! But it's only for a short while. Listen to the words:

"In a little while you will see me no more, and in a little while you will see me, because I go to the Father" [John 14:19]. And they wondered, What is he talking about? "In a little while you will see me no more; again in a little while you will see me, because I go to the Father." He goes back to the Source of it all; He is one with the Father.

But now you, who lost the physical vision of a Savior external to yourself will receive in his place the Spirit of Truth, for he defines himself as the Truth. So, if he sends the Spirit of Truth, he is sending Himself. Now, when the Spirit of Truth comes within you, then Jesus unfolds within you. And all that is said of him, you experience as yourself. Then you will know Who-You-Are. So, in the end there is Jesus only -- nothing but Jesus. And Jesus is the Lord God Jehovah "and His Christ," which is the sum total of all the experiences of humanity personified as a single youth, and that youth comes out as David.

So, when you read it: "Our Lord, who is now king of all and His Christ"; so the book ends -- the last book of the Bible -- ends on these words: "Come, Lord Jesus" [Revelation 22:20]. Let it come! "Come, Lord Jesus."

But a warning comes just before that: "Do not add to or take from the words of the prophecy of this Book" [See Revelation 22:18,19]. But in spite of the warning, they do it morning, noon and night. But I tell you, the most impossible thing recorded there, you are going to experience. I have experienced Scripture. I am only sharing with you my experiences. I am not theorizing; I am not speculating.

If I were told in the beginning of time, I must confess, I had forgotten it, for it is simply the return of memory. So, the Spirit of Truth is called the Comforter. He is called the Counselor. And then you are told, when he comes to you, "he will bring to your remembrance all that I have said unto you" [John 14:26]. So, he is a Remembrancer! So, man remembers.

So, when you actually confront David, it's not something that is taking place for the first time. You were always hie father; so you must have suffered from total amnesia, because it's like the return of memory.

Can you inagine some one in this world who looks right into his wife's face, who bore his children, and actually he cannot recognize her? Now, this is not a theory; theae are facts. There are people who have a little partial amnesia, but there are cases of total amnesia where he just does not know his father, mother, children, wife, friends; he knows no one. And you can hit him over the head and give him all the shocks in the world, and you can't bring back the memory. Well, "the Holy Spirit will bring to your remembrance all that I have said to you." And what I have said to you is: You are the Lord Jesus! You are the father of Humanity. Humanity collectively, personified as a single being, comes out as David. That's who you are.

Now, when your concept of a "god" external to yourself vanishes, and you have just a little interval of time not knowing where to go, like a ship without a rudder; but the Spirit will come in that interval. In that interval he will send the Spirit of Truth. Then the Spirit will stir within you, and then you will realize what I have told you, because you are going to experience it in the first-person-singular, in a present-tense experience. Experience what? The story of the Gospel! And you will know who Jesus is. But every one will! So, let me repeat what I said in the beginning:

> Only that which has no right to live must die; only that which has no right to exist must be brought to an end.

And it hasn't a thing to do with any child, no matter how vile he is in this world. That was done in Love! Everything in the world that you see round about you -- these are done in Love. Never would you have made anything if you had not loved it.

But you are creating something that has no right to exist, and one day you will confront it, and it's only the personification of your misspent energies -- energies that you were wanton about and threw it away as though you had it forever. And you do. He gave it to you. Yes, even to mis-spend, and so you mis-spend the energy; but you will confront it. But let me comfort you. It won't take more than a second to redeem it -- not Eternity. But you cannot monkey around with it. But, may I tell you? you won't. You'll make a pledge, not because there is some one listening -- no one is listening; it's all within yourself, and then you will know the words when the Lord swore to Abraham:

There was no one to whom he could swear; so he could not swear by another. So, he swore by himself. You will swear by yourself. No one is your peer. And you will take an oath that "I will redeem him if it takes me Eternity." And Eternity will collapse into a second; and the whole monstrous being will wither before your eyes. And the energy that made him alive returns to you. There is no loss of energy. And then she -- your glorious creation -- will glow like the sun. Then the whole thing will vanish.

So, here tonight, I hope that I have taken -- in the years that I have been talking to you -- your historical Jesus from you. If I haven't, well then he hasn't gone away. I hope I have. If perchance

I have succeeded in taking the historicity of Scripture from you and caused you a moment of blackness -- a moment of despair, I rejoice. Because in that absence when he goes, it's only for a little while, then he comes again; but now he comes as the Holy Spirit. And "no one" will know -- and "can know" -- and can say -- "that Jesus is Lord, except by the Holy Spirit." For, if he goes away, he will send the Holy Spirit. If he does not go away, the Holy Spirit cannot come to you.

So, as long as man holds onto his little external "Jesus" as a thing to whom he can turn -- make a little cross, put him on the cross, stick him on the wall, and cross themselves for luck, -- that's what they do; as long as you do that, you still hold something on the outside.

So, if I can say "God," "Lord," "Jesus," or any of these lovely names and in any way arouse within you the sense of some thing that exists external to yourself, then I have not succeeded in going away. But if I can mention these words and you do not jump on the outside, and you cannot turn to another then he has gone away; but only for a little while. Read it carefully. You will find the words that I have quoted tonight in the 16th Chapter of John. You will find them also in the 14th Chapter and the 15th Chapter:

"Unless I go away, the Comforter," -- he is called in one translation, and the Counselor in another; but he equates it with the Spirit of Truth: "I will send you the Counselor who is the Spirit of Truth."

And when he identifies himself with Truth, he is sending his spirit, and "the letter kills, the spirit makes alive" [II Corinthians 3:6]. So he will send that which will make Jesus alive within you -- alive in the sense that you become Jesus, but you do not change your identity. You are still the same being that you are; and those who have the privilege of seeing you while you are still walking this earth as God and yet as the being they know, -- and they can't deny the experience because they have seen it. It's something that is completely different from anything in this world. They see you and they know you are God! It's something out of this world. As he aaid, "I am not of this world. I am from above. You are from below. You are of this world; I am not of this world." [John 8:23]

So, when you see Him, He is not of this world; so you will see him as God, and still know him as your friend and your Brother. For, in the end, we are all Brothers and all friends, and all the same God and Father of One Being; who is David.

---oOo---

34/S2

THE FLOOD IS STILL UPON US*

[The tape commences in the middle of a sentence]: -- describing things that happened unnumbered years ago, but I tell you it's contemporary. You read about the Flood, and you think, "Well, certainly, that happened unnumbered -- if it ever did happen, it happened unnumbered yaars ago."

This morning, as is my custom, I turned on Channel KFAC. That is a radio station that plays through the day and night, 24 hours a day, only lovely classical music; so you can read to that music -- only a few interruptions. On the hour, you get a 5-minute bulletin and weather report. But between 9:00 and 10:00 there is always a lovely piano recital, as it were -- the great masterpieces played by great artists. So I can sit down with my Bible and read as I listen to the music. And the one interruption that came today was an ad from the Herald-Examiner. They were advertising this paper as the one paper in our city that gives the facts -- only facts, not embellished; no frills, just plain facts -- all facts. That's why we should buy that paper because it is simply filled with facts.

Well, facts have overflowed the world like the Flood. Man actually is "drowned" with facts, -- victimized by facts. It is in the imagination that everything lives, and not in its actuality -- not in the fact. Unless imagination penetrates the facts, the deluge remains a deluge. We are now in the deluge. This is the Flood!

A man is in jail. That's a fact. And he knows he's there for "X" number of years; that's a fact. And he simply waits and hopes that in some strange way he will get some early release from this confinement. He never uses his imagination, save in some violent way to get out, -- but not to penetrate the fact.

When in March of 1943, by using my imagination to penetrate the fact I, too, was in "prison" in the Army, but I didn't want any part of it. So, I simply penetrated the fact and saw myself in New York City, in my own apartment with my family. And in nine days I was out, honorably discharged, in my apartment in New York City.

I wrote a friend of mine who was in the Army. He was my age; he was a Freudian, -- a professional psychoanalyst, but Freud was his background. That was his schooling. When I wrote him in detail exactly what I had done, -- I didn't mince matters; I told him exactly what I did. As I physically slept on my little bed in the barracks, I imagined I was simply elsewhere. The "elsewhere" was a definite spot in space -- New York City in my apartment. I told him what I did.

I could "feel" the bed. I could "feel" the things in my house. I went about feeling all the familiar objects in my apartment; and I gave it all the tones of reality and all the sensory vividness to the best of my ability. I "touched" everything, and it felt real, and then I went back to sleep. Then I told exactly what happened to me that morning; and then nine days later, I was honorably discharged by the same man who had disallowed my application.

* Titled "[illegible]" (page 155) in [illegible]

He didn't answer my letter because in New York City he used to come to my meetings as a friend, because he was so convinced that the Freudian concept was true; but he said, "I come to your meetings for this reason, Neville," -- we knew each other well; he'd come home for dinner; I'd go to his place for dinner; but he said, "I come to your meetings because you turn my daily bread into the substance of fairy. I sort of like that," he said. "But when I listen to you, I hold the chair, and I put my feet right firmly on the ground to feel the reality and the profundity of things. You aren't going to take me away with you. You are going to leave me right here where things are solidly real; so I feel the place under my foot and I feel the things next to my hands. I hold on tightly, while you weave your story concerning moving off in one's imagination."

So, he would not penetrate the facts. So, when did he get out? When the other millions got out. So he remained with his facts for the next three years! I got out in March of '43; he came home to New York City in '46, demobilized as the other millions and millions of boys were. He could not let go the facts. This is the Flood; there is no other flood. This is the Flood. We are "drowned" with facts -- victimized by them.

Now, does the Bible teach this story of getting through the facts using my imagination? It certainly does. Let me take you into the 27th Chapter of the Book of Genesis, the first book -- the Book of the Beginnings. If you are not familiar with the story of Isaac and his two sons, -- they were twins; let me just refresh your memory if you have forgotten it. It is said in the story that Isaac had -- that is, his wife had the two sons -- Rebecca; but he was the father of the two sons, Esau and Jacob. It is said that Esau was a hairy one. He came first. And then Jacob came second, and he had no hair. He was completely hair-less, while Esau was covered in hair from head to foot; but he was the first. One was called Esau and one was called Jacob, because he came second and supplanted the other.

Now we are told that when the father Isaac was old and his eye was dim so that he could not see, -- in other words, he was blind, -- he said to his son Esau, "I cannot see, and my days are numbered. I want you to go into the fields and hunt and bring me some well-prepared, tasty venison as I like it -- savory venison." We are told that Rebecca, who loved her second son more than she did the first, overheard the conversation between Esau and his father; and then because she loved Jacob and wanted Jacob to get the blessing, -- for the father feels his days are numbered and he must now give his blessing to one of his sons, and the first one must get it.

So the mother told Jacob what she had heard, and then suggested that: "we take one of the kids from the flock and we kill it and take the skins of the kid and put it upon you, so that you will have the appearance of Esau."

Jacob thought otherwise. "Suppose my father discovers it?"

And the mother said, "Leave that to me. It will be on my shoulder if he discovers it," and sent Jacob into the field to bring the kid.

Well, he took that kid and brought it tastily prepared for his father. He came quickly into the presence of the father, and the father said to him, "Come near that I may feel you, my son -- whether you æ my son Esau or not."

So Jacob came near to Isaac, his father, who felt him; and then Isaac said to Jacob, "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau." And then he blessed him. He gave him his blessing.

He had no sooner left the presence of his father when Esau comes in now with the savory venison; and the father said, "Who was it that came? for I have already eaten? Who came?" And then he discovered that it was his son Jacob who came with guile and betrayed him. "But," said the father, "I have given him your blessing, and I cannot retract it, and blessed he is. All will serve him. Every one will serve him, because I gave him the blessing, and I cannot take it back."

On the surface you will say, Now what is the story trying to tell us? Well, in this same book, in an earlier passage [Genesis 6:14 and following], we are told about the Ark. "Build the ark with three decks: the lower, the second and the third deck." Well, you think it's a huge big building. Well, use your imagination. You cannot conceive of any building that could house all the animals of the world in pairs and all the socalled "good" ones, who will be in seven pairs, and enough food to feed them for forty days and forty nights. Well, you just simply could not conceive of it; nevertheless that's the story. But there are three decks. The obvious thing is the facts of life, then the psychological interpretation of these socalled stories, and then the spiritual consummation of the story. So you have the lower deck, the second deck, and then the third deck.

So, here is a perfect example of the second deck. This room, now, is a fact. We are all here in the room. It's a fact. But suppose I don't want to be here. Suppose it becomes a prison to me. Can I get out of it? If I know how to penetrate the fact -- if I know that I am the Ark: that "All things exist in the human imagination" [Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem"], and the human imagination and God are one, -- they are one, not two, -- I can in my imagination penetrate any wall. I can now, without batting an eye, in the twinkle of an eye I can stand on the street and see this thing [indicating the podium] without a man standing before it. It is no problem whatsoever to assume I am on the street, and looking from the street to this platform.

But you may say, "Well, what would that do?"

Well, let me do it and feel the reality, feel the solidity, of the street under my foot and see this building from the street rather than looking to the street from here. If I do it and give it solidity -- give it reality, I'll be compelled to go there. This is what Scripture teaches. That is my "blessing." I can penetrate a fact; and penetrating a fact, I can stand wherever I want to stand in this world.

Then the promise is made [Deuteronomy 11:24]: "Wherever the sole of your foot shall stand, that I have given to you." I am not going to make you a promise and not fulfill it; I'll give it to you if you can stand upon it. So, I actually "stood" upon my apartment; I actually stood upon that floor, and I felt the bed. I felt everything, and gave it reality. My friend wouldn't allow himself ro sleep in one place and assume that he was sleeping elsewhere, because that is a divided state of mind. He didn't want to become a split personality. So, he wanted to be completely coordinated. Well, he was coordinated all right for the next three years, all in one little spot in his barracks; and for three years he couldn't get out, because -- first of all -- he wouldn't try it, because I turned his "daily bread into the substance of fairy." So, he did not answer my letter. I have reminded him a few times since: "Why didn't you answer the letter?"

"Well, first of all, it didn't make sense; and I don't believe," said he, "that really what you did was the sole cause of your discharge."

He always questioned it. Then I'd repeat it another time and tell him again what happened this time. "Well, that would have happened anyway." Then you do it a third time and you do it a fourth time. Do you know? if you did it a thousand times, he would still say, "Do it once more."

It will always happen, as far as they are concerned. It just didn't happen because you did something; these things would have happened anyway. I asked, "Why do you analyze people then and let things happen?"

"We are not the creatures of circumstance," said a man who bears your name, for his first name is Israel; and Disraeli's name is simply "of Israel," -- Benjamin Disraeli. He said, "Man is not the creature of circumstances; circumstances are the creatures of men." He knew how to create things all in his imagination.

So, I said, "You bear the name of Israel, but you don't apply the story of Israel. If you'd only apply it, -- why, these things are taugh us in Scripture." Scripture is not secular history; this is contemporary. It didn't happen thousands of years ago. The Flood is on! This is the Flood. The whole vast world is inundated with "facts," like the prominent papers, -- the evening paper, the Examiner; and they are proud of the fact that they only print "facts." They don't embellish it; no frills, only the facts. Therefore buy the facts, and they go all over the world to find frightening facts. I am not denying that he didn't kill her; I am not denying that he did not receive a sentence of "X" number of years.

But when people ask anything of me, I am not concerned about why it happened. What do you want? And I will simply apply my imagination lovingly on behalf of that request. I don't care what brought you to that state; I am here to simply get you out of the state. What do you want? All through the Bible: what do you want? He didn't condemn any one. The woman taken in adultery, he didn't condemn her. What do you want? "Go and sin no more." He didn't call the act of adultery a sin. If she called it, or they called it, a sin, -- all right, call it a sin; therefore don't repeat it if you call it a sin.

"Sin" is simply knowing what to do but not doing it. That's sinning. So, if I discover what to do to penetrate a fact: to go beyond the fact and create a condition for myself and dwell in it and think from it instead of thinking of it, for the great fallacy of the world is perpetual construction -- deferred occupancy: to create and create in my mind's eye all kinds of lovely things I would like to realize but never occupy them. I do not penetrate the state and go right into it and give it cubic reality. But I know -- and you know -- and it's not difficult to understand why the sense of touch is something we believe in more profoundly than we do in, say, the sense of sight or the sense of hearing or the sense of smell.

I stumbled upon this one day in a dream. In my dream I came upon this huge, big pillar -- a pile driven into the ocean, and the bridge that it formerly supported was gone now. Only the piles remained. And I knew I was dreaming, and I figured to myself, if I held that pile, and I could touch it, if it seemed to me solidly real; what I am going to do: I'm going to hold onto that pile in the dream. I know it's a dream, but I am going to hold that as solidly as I can and compel myself to awake holding the pile. Well, I did. I held the pile with all my might. I said, "Now, Neville, you know you are sleeping. You know that you are dreaming now. So awake!" And I awoke in the water, actually holding that pile; and I am standing up in what formerly I knew to be a dream. It ceased to be a dream; it's real.

I'm in a world just as real as this; and here I am, holding this enormous pile, and it's in the East Indies -- not the West Indies where I was born. It was in the East Indies, a very primitive area. And then some animal came down to the beach -- a strange-looking creature, and at that moment I was a little bit -- I was panicky. In that moment of shaking emotion I awoke on my bed in New York City.

But I discovered that secret of feeling. So, he said, "Come close, come near, that I may feel you, my son." He heard the voice; he said, "Your voice is the voice of Jacob. Come near and let me see really if you are Esau." And he did it by feeling.

So, lying on my bed one night right here in Beverly Hills many years ago, -- it must have been fourteen or fifteen years ago, -- I suddenly became aware that I am seeing what I shouldn't see. I am looking into the most marvelous interior of a plush hotel. It seemed that way to me. So, consciousness followed vision; and I found myself in the room, but I knew I was on the bed. So I came back to the bed. I am still seeing the interior of the room, and I went back into that room. I came back again. I must have done it twelve or twenty times. It was fun going into the room, and the room was just like this -- real, and then I came back to the bed.

Now I said, "I am now going to explore. Regardless of consequences I am going to explore." So I went into the room. It seemed like a room 30 by 20 from the bed; but when I entered it with the decision to explore, the room closed in upon me and became a third of itself. Say, it became ten by seven; and I found it was a dressing room for a huge, big suite, beautifully done, but it wasn't yet occupied. It was there to be occupied, but the room at the moment -- that is, the suite -- was not occupied. And I thought, "Well, now I will go through the door." I didn't go through like some gossamer; I opened the door with my hand, and I walked right through that doorway. I was solidly real to myself. Then I walked down the corridor, and the corridor that I walked down was intersected by the main corridor, and all the lights were on. And two ladies were coming down that corridor -- the main one. But I knew this thing began as a dream. So, I knew that all ends run true to origins; therefore, if the origin is a dream, this is a dream. So I said to the ladies, "Ladies, this is a dream. This whole vast world is a dream." Then they were afraid of me.

Who wouldn't be afraid of a man who suddenly appears on a place where you are walking and tells you this whole vast world is a dream? You would think he's nuts -- he is insane. So, they thought I was insane, and they got just as far as they could from me and walked right next to the wall, duck-style -- one behind the other, looking at me very suspiciously.

Then I saw this object hanging from space. It reminded me of a similar object I had seen in a friend's home in North Hollywood. So, I said to them, "Look see this?" And I held it; and to my surprise, it isn't gossamer. This is not an after-image. This is not a memory image. This is real. The thing is solid. Well, I held it; and by this time, they were way down. They took one last look as they looked back at me and then darted into the main room. And here I am, standing alone holding onto this thing. I said to myself, "Neville, you know this is a dream. The origin is a dream; the end is a dream. Come on! Wake up!"

I closed my eyes to the obvious and held this thing here, and I couldn't -- I opened my eyes again; I am still standing there. I said, "How am I going to get back to my room in Beverly Hills?" I didn't know what -- there was no place I could go to take me back there, but I remembered: Feeling is the secret.

I am holding this here now, and it's real. It is solid. I am solid. They are solid. They heard my voice. And I walked down, and every step was solidly real as walking here now. So, I imagined that my head was on a pillow; and when I could feel a pillow under my head while I am standing, I suddenly felt myself in a horizontal position, and my head is on a pillow. Then all of a sudden, I could feel that pillow, but I was cataleptic. I couldn't open my eyes. I couldn't move a hand. I couldn't move a finger. Here I am, a living being in a dead body!

So, I said to myself, "They will find the body tomorrow morning, and they've got to cut it up," because I am insured for a little bit, and to prove that nobody took my life, they have to cut it up to find out why he died. They always have to ask that question, and they give it a name. If they can't find it, they have to give it a name anyway.

So, here I am. I couldn't open my eyes, I couldn't move my hand. In about fifteen or twenty seconds -- it seemed much longer than that -- my little finger, I could move it, and then I could move my hand a bit. I still couldn't open my eyes. We were sleeping in a double bed; so I pushed my hand out -- my left hand, and I could feel the warmth of my wife's body. At that, I knew I was back on my bed. In another fifteen or twenty seconds I could, with great effort, open the lids of my eyes, and here came all the familiar objects on the walls, on the bureau; everything returned to consciousness.

Now, I had stepped into a world just as real as this. I am telling you, there are worlds within worlds within worlds, and they are all here -- right here -- just like turning on a radio. You turn it ever so slightly, and you have a new wave length and a new station coming in, bringing in something entirely different. And they are not interfering with eath other! And these worlds are all here now, and they are peopled, just as we are peopling this world; and they are just as real as this world. It's terrestrial, and it doesn't -- you don't have to walk to it. I was on the bed. I seemed to walk into it, -- I would say what? ten feet away; but the same area permeated the bed, and the bed did not obstruct it, and that world into which I stepped did not obstruct the house that I lived in in Beverly Hills. It's all here -- the whole vast world -- worlds within worlds within worlds!

So, I tell you, "facts" are the Flood. That's the Deluge. There was no other kind of flood. We are actually inundated with the "facts of life." And these facts -- we change them every day. Today this is the cause of so-and-so. Tomorrow that's not so; it is another cause we have found, and the next day another cause; but while we haven't found the next cause, we believe that to be the fact, and we worship the facts. So I tell you, all things are in the human imagination.

"Man is all imagination; and God is man, and exists in us and we in Him." [Blake, from "Annotations to Berkeley]

"The Eternal Body of man is the imagination. And that is God Himself." [Blake, from "The Laocoon"]*

There is no other god! It's all your own wonderful human imagination. And the one thing the whole vast world aches for is the awakening of the imagination. And when it comes, it comes with the birth of the promised child which sets a man free from the horrors of this world we call "the world of nature." For Nature is simply that principle on which depends the sameness of forms in transmitted light. And so the thing goes, over and over.

Haven't you observed a year -- that at a certain time of the year -- money is tight? All of a sudden it flows and then at a cettain time of the year it stops. Why? It's a habit. It's a transmitted state. You fix that fact in your mind's eye; and if you got fifty thousand dollars today and say it's the month of December when money is always tight, -- you are going to loan the money out or give it away before December comes by; so when it comes by, you are going to be tight again. It's a peculiar -- I would say "slavery" -- this thing called "Nature," in the sameness of forms in transmitted light.

Now, you can penetrate the fact and break it; and that's what we are here to teach. "I come, not to abolish the law and the prophets," -- I come not to abolish them, -- "but to fulfill them" [Matthew 5:17], -- and to tell you the real Law. It's not washing your hands before meals, although that is a very nice, clean thing to do. It's not giving certain diets, doing this, that and the other. He explains that the entire Law is psychological. He takes one of the Commandments, which is a graphic one, to show you how everything must be interpreted psychologically.

---

* Neville often quotes both these passages from Blake together.

He said, "You have heard it said of old, You shall not commit adultery. But I say unto you, Any man who looks lustfully upon a woman has already committed the act in his heart with her." [Matthew 5:27,28]

Well, what man hasn't? What man has not violated that? So, he tells you the whole thing is a psychological thing. You cannot restrain the impulse. You may restrain it, based upon a thousand little reasons. Maybe you are afraid of the consequences. Maybe you are afraid that some one will find out. Maybe you are afraid of this, that and the other; but the impulse was there, and he tells you the impulse is the act. Well, if the impulse is the act, then creative acts are imaginal, for it was an imaginal act; so I have to observe my imaginal acts, for the imaginal act is a fact. It's going to actually become a fact, and then it will confront me.

There was a lady in San Francisco. She said, "My brother," -- and she said to me, "I think he's innocent, but I do not know the facts of the case; but he was given six months at hard labor. He is in the Army. And I don't think my brother should get six months' hard labor in the Army."

I said, "You want him out?"

She said, "Certainly I do."

I said, "I tell you what. You may try it, so that you may give all praise to yourself and not to me. You do it."

"Well, what must I do?"

"If he was out, would he come home?"

"Oh, yes, he'd comé straight to my place."

"All right. And if he came to your place, what would you do?"

"Well," she said, "I would throw my arms around him and kiss him, feel him."

I said, "All right, do that. When you go home tonight, sit where you would normally sit, and just imagine that your brother is there and that you have thrown your arms around him and you are holding him and hugging him, and kissing him."

The next Sunday morning in my meeting in San Francisco, that woman could rise and tell this story. She said, "I went home, and I imagined I heard the doorbell ring; and the doorbell is downstairs. I have to run down one flight of stairs to answer that door. So, I heard it ring and I ran downstairs, and I flung the doors open, and here stood my brother. I went back upstairs. There was no brother, but I did it so vividly that it was almost like a disappointment that I didn't actually see him standing there, because it seemed so real to me."

Well, a few days later she was sitting upstairs and the doorbell rang. She said, "I almost broke my neck to get downstairs. I knew what was going to happen." As she threw the door open, here was her brother!

She stood up in the audience and told that story to the thousand who were present that Sunday morning. They all saw her. No one, I presume, would go and verify it; I trusted her implicitly. If she lied to me, then it's entirely up to her; but I am convinced the whole thing was true.

I don't check on you. I believe you when you tell me that it happened. But the thing is to practice. We are the operant power. And the Flood is on. Let no one tell you the Flood is over. And the Flood is deeper and deeper, because we are more and more inclined for facts -- the "facts of life." Do you want the facts? Well, you had better make the prison walls all the thicker. But learn how to penetrate the facts.

As you penetrate the facts, you must go to a certain objective beyond the fact. What do you want now? Well then, you go into the state of the wish fulfilled. What is the state? You decide. You determine what you want in this world, and you go right into that state, and then ignore the facts.

Suppose the facts now still deny what you did. It doesn't matter. Let the facts remain; they will dissolve. They will all dissolve because you are going to remain faithful and you will occupy the state. No longer are you going to construct it and not occupy it. You are going to occupy the state. And as you occupy the state, it is going to work.

You can do that with a job. A friend of mine in New York City -- he came from out west. He was an engineer, and he said, "Neville, I want more money and I want more responsibility. I want to work for a certain firm."

I said, "Do you know where they are?

He said, "Yes, on Madison Avenue. They do international work. They build bridges, they build dams; they build things all over the world. And I would like a job that would send me away because I could get three times the salary."

I said, "Well now, go to the place and see where you would sit if you got the job there. Before they send you off, you would work in the home office first, wouldn't you?"

He said, "I think so."

"Well, go up there and just take a good look."

He walked into the place, picked out the desk, picked out the place; and then he assumed, when he got back home, he was seated at that desk, and that was his job, and he named the sum of money, which was a considerable sum of money. He and his wife and daughter used to come to my meetings. Within a month he was in that job, and within two weeks he was on his way to the Near East, building bridges.

Unfortunately in a way, he did not live very long. He was a young man. But in about three years he was gone. He had a heart attack, and he was gone. But he would have gone anyway, whether he was here or there, for we come on time and we go on time. But at least, before he departed this world, he found the Principle, which he will carry with him into the next world, for there is no "death." He is restored to life in a world just like this, clothed in a body just like this, only young. Young as he was then, he'll be younger. But he has at least the memory of what he did to get what he wanted, and it worked. So, now he goes with the Principle in his mind's eye.

So, when you tell me of your dreams, and that you in your dreams are applying this Principle, like the lady tonight -- she is here. She told me her dream. I asked her to write it out for me. But right in the dream she is actually discussing with others this principle of imagining and how you imagine a certain state and you produce it in this world; and that there is nothing in this world that dies. All things are restored to life, and she is carrying on this conversation in her dream. Well, that's most flattering and very thrilling, when you can carry it beyond into what the world would tell you is a state where you are not in control of vision; that you are simply the slave of vision rather than its master. You don't direct it; you simply follow it. Well, she didn't follow it; she directed vision.

When you get to the point that you can direct in what they call a state called "dream," where you are not supposed to be in control but you are simply the victim of your vision, -- well, she is not the victim of her vision; she actually controlled the vision. So the day will come, -- it's inevitable, -- we all take off the garment. But I tell you that you are going to find yourself completely restored instantly -- not waiting for anything -- instantly restored -- in a terrestrial world with the problems that you have here, but you will know how to solve them. You will solve the problems because you know the Principle.

So, the Flood is on. The whole Bible, from beginning to end, is contemporary. Jesus is not something that died. He is something that lives within man, and he is dwelling in man.

God Himself came, and comes, into human history in the person of Jesus in you -- in me -- in every one in the world. And the day will come, you will know it when you are the Lord Jesus, but asleep to what you are. The day will come, you will be completely awake to the fact that you are the Father, and then you will know.

I have been asked, "Why do you express it all the time?" This is important. It is so important, -- the Father is the most important part of Scripture -- the most important part of Scripture. Oh, I can have all the power in the world and yet not know I am God! I can have a sense of awareness where there is not a thing in the world but myself, and yet not feel that I am God. But when the Father comes and I know that I am the father of that one and only Son of His, then I know I am God! There's no other way to know it.

If I had the power that I could destroy the universe, I still wouldn't know I am God. And if I was completely aware, as I was in 1926 while reading a book, it fell upon my chest, -- it must have been not more than 10:00 o'clock; when I woke next morning, it's 9:00, and I had not turned from left to right in the entire interval, because the book was still on my chest and the light was still on by my bed.

Usually in the course of the night, a man turns often from side to side. How often, I do not know, but they all do. No one goes to bed on his back and remains there for nine unbroken -- or, in this case, almost eleven unbroken hours.

So, I went right down into a deep, deep sleep in a trance; and in that state, I became Infinite Light. There was nothing but light, and I was It. There was no circumference. I was the center of it all, -- no light outside of this Light that I am. No sun, no moon, no stars; but nothing outside of the Being that I am. I was infinite, pulsing Light. But still, I did not bring back the feeling of being God. That evaded me. But when you see His Son, and that Son calls you "Father," then you know; and there is no doubt in your mind as to Who-You-Are. That's why I say this is the most important part of Scripture, and yet it's the one thing that people will question me on: "Why do you emphasize it? Why do you repeat it over and over?" Because it's the one thing in the world that you will -- one day -- experience which will convince you that you are God. Not a thing in the world will convince you outside of that.

But in the meanwhile, we can penetrate the facts. The man imprisoned need not be behind bars. We are imprisoned by the things that we do. All right, we can break them -- break anything in this world. A man can be imprisoned by gluttony. He can break it if he knows what he wants. Maybe he doesn't really want to give it up. If he wants to give it up, let him create within his mind's eye a scene -- a simple scene -- that if he had given it up, a friend or some relative would know. He doesn't brag about it; they simply know, and there is a normal discussion that he has no longing for it any more. He has no desire for it. He didn't take any drugs for it; he didn't do anything to feed it. Just simply -- it wasn't there. That certain taste that we have in this world -- all of a sudden -- you've had it; you are saturated with it, and you don't want it any more. All things are acquired.

Today, I like -- for instance -- a thing called an oyster. I love them, especially those lovely eastern oysters. But the first time I had an oyster, I thought I'd die.

I was a small boy. I must have been about nine or ten, and I went down to the -- it was then called the Virgin Islands -- owned by Denmark; they are now our islands, St. Thomas, St. John and Santa Cruz. And my mother said to me, "Now, Neville, you know, you are going to a strange place, and they speak Danske. You don't understand the language but you'll get by. You are going to a boarding house where there may be twenty or twenty-five boarding. You will all sit at one big table together. Now you are a boy, and you do not know their habits; so watch what the lady does; and whatever she does, you do it."

I sat down at the table, and here was this plate of oysters. I had never seen oysters in my life before, and then all the little things before it. I saw this lady take a little fork from the side; so I picked up my fork, and then she took a little horseradish, she took something else, then a little tabasco and did all these things to it; and then she stuck it into this oyster and dipped it into all that she had done; she closed her eyes and ate it as though she had honey in her mouth. I expected the same thing; so I did the same thing. And when I got that thing in my mouth, -- Lord! It wouldn't go down, and I couldn't bring it up. I'm not supposed to bring it up, -- Mother told me that. So, here it stuck.

But the funny part about it, I not only had that one; I looked down to find there were five others, and they had to go down. Well, that was my introduction to oysters. But now today I love them. I have acquired the taste for oysters.

The first time I had a drink, I can't tell any one that it was something like honey to me; but I acquired the taste, and today I fairly enjoy a drink. I try not to go beyond a certain point, because I want to keep my faculties alive. But I enjoy a drink.

I've tried and tried and tried to acquire a taste for smoking, but I can't. Therefore I gave that up after I tried it for about six months, and I couldn't do it. I was then only twenty-one or twenty-two, and I couldn't seem to enjoy a cigarette, a cigar or anything. It made me sick. So, I gave it up; I never acquired it.

But all the other things we have acquired. We don't come into the world with these tastes; we acquire these tastes. You can acquire the taste of living in comfort. You can acquire the taste of living as a gentleman, or a lady. Acquire the taste. If you want to actually live like a lady, live like a gentleman, with no pressure to pay the rent, no pressure to do these things, -- all right. Assume that you are that lady, you are that gentleman. Penetrate the facts. The facts tell you that you are not; you don't have it. Penetrate the facts and live in the state as though you had it. And may I tell you from experience? you'll have it. You will actually have it! Don't ask me how. The ways and means are contained within the state that you enter.

So, you enter a state. It contains all that is necessary to externalize that state. So, pick out your state -- a lovely state -- and go right into that state and dwell in it. I call that "occupying the state" and thinking from it instead of thinking of it, just as you now think from your present state with all the facts around you to anchor you into it. Get into another state, all in your imagination, and the facts will appear to anchor you into that state. And the day you tire of it, you can get out of it and go into another state.

You know when you move into a new home or move to a new city, you have to actually adjust yourself to it. Well, you are the Pilgrim passing through unnumbered states. The states remain, but you -- the Pilgrim -- pass through them, like a traveler passing through a city. The city remains, but you -- the traveler -- pass through it. So, you go right into another city. You don't rub out the state. Poverty remains a state when a man who was once poor moves out of it. He moves out of the state of poverty into the state of affluence, but he doesn't destroy the state of poverty. Any one can fall into it.

As Blake said: "I do not consider the just or the unjust to be in a supreme state, but only to be in these states of sleep which the soul may fall into in its deadly dreams of good and evil."[from "A Vision of the Last Judgment"]

---oOo---

THE HIDDEN SECRET OF GOD

12 April 1971

The mysteries of God are mysterious in character, yet they are proclaimed to all who can understand them. Paul, in his letter to the Corinthians -- the First Letter; you read this in the 2d Chapter of First Corinthians. He is telling them a story that their faith may not rest in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God. Now, he speaks of a different wisdom altogether.

He said: "Yet, among the mature, we teach wisdom. It is not a wisdom of this age or of the rulers of this age, for they are doomed to pass away." [First Corinthians2:6] He speaks of an entirely different wisdom that he claims to be the secret -- "the hidden secret of God, which God decreed before the ages for our glorification." [First Corinthians 2:7] Then he said: "For what person knows the thoughts of a man except the spirit of the man which dwells in him? So also, no one comprehends the thoughts of God except the Spirit of God." [First Corinthians 2:11]

Now we are told, after the Resurrection those who were closest to him still did not understand him. For when he appeared, they said, "Lord, will you now, at this time, restore the kingdom to Israel?"

And he said to them, "It is not for you to know times and seasons which the Father has fixed by His own authority. But you wait until you receive the power which will come upon you when the Holy Spirit comes upon you."

That is the power of which I speak, when the Holy Spirit comes upon you. And then, with that power, you will be my witnesses, witnessing in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria to the ends of the earth, but not until it comes upon you; and when it comes upon you, you are told, the Holy Spirit is one's remembrance. "He will bring to your remembrance all the things that I have told you." The whole will come back, and then you will actually reproduce within yourself my story, -- that's what he is telling them.

He now disappears. He has now revealed to them the true Exodus; that the Exodus of the Old Testament was an adumbration -- a foreshadowing. Resurrection followed by the "birth from above" is the true "Exodus" from this world of tears, this world of bondage. So, the Jews celebrate the Exodus, and they are still in bondage; and the Christians celebrated the Resurrection, and they haven't yet been resurrected. That whole thing is a drama.

When the Spirit comes upon you, which is the spirit of power, then "he will bring to your remembrance all that I have told you, which I have received from my Father." So, within the individual upon whom this power comes, which is the Holy Spirit, the whole thing will unfold within him.

They completely misunderstood it, and they thought the restoration of a national theocracy was what was intended with the coming of Messiah. They did not realize that the truest coming of Jesus was the manifest power of the Holy Spirit; that when this power comes, it lifts you up from within yourself, and then you actually are the Being that the world yesterday celebrated about his Resurrection. You are that One spoken of in Scripture. But you will not know it and be a witness to this until the power comes upon you. And that power is the power of the Holy Spirit. Then the whole thing unfolds within you.

Now, you have heard of the story -- you all know the story. Did you ever dwell upon the character called "Judas"? Today we speak of a man who is a betrayer of a trust, -- he is a "Judas." He simply betrayed the trust -- any kind of a trust. A man just died in New York City in prison who betrayed the trust of the Maffia.* He was one of the leaders in the Maffia, and he gave to the FBI the true name, "Our Thing" -- Cosa Nostra. No one claimed his body. There he was; he died in prison because there was a price on his head -- a fabulous price to kill him. So, he was protected while he was in prison because he had revealed the secret of this thing that wormed its way into society called "Our Thing," where they made billions that you could not put a finger on it; therefore it wasn't taxable. But he betrayed it; so he was a "Judas."

Well, that is not the Judas of Scripture. But who is this Judas? We are told that at the Last Supper he said, "The one to whom I will give the sop, for my time has come," -- everything was done on order in the Gospel of John. He never moved. He resisted all action until the right moment. "My time has not yet come," beginning with the Second Chapter. He said to the brothers in the Seventh Chapter, "My hour has not yet come." He goes through the entire book stating that the time has not yet come; he is following a divine plan.

So here we find predestination in one, and we find free will both joined together in man. He teaches man to exercise free will, and shows them how to change the pattern of life; but he is under compulsion to fulfill the Father's will. Everything must be done on time. So, the moment of betrayal has come.

In the Oriental custom, two would sit on a divan or couch. The honored guest was always the one to whom the host gave the sop. He would take the sop, dip it into the dish, and then hand it to the honored guest. So, "The one to whom I give it, he will betray me." He turns and gives it to Judas, and Judas goes out quickly; and he said to him, "What you have to do, do quickly." It is perfectly told, may I tell you? I know from experience. "What you have to do, do quickly." And Judas goes out. Yet they do not understand who it is going to be who will betray him.

"Lord, is it I?"

"Lord, is it I?"

"Lord, is it I?"

Well, it is obvious the one to whom he gave it. Who, then, is Judas? He betrays the Messianic secret. Now, "No one knows the thoughts of God, but the Spirit of God." Is he not, then, the Spirit of God? If he betrays God, only the Spirit of God could betray God, "for no man knows the thoughts of a man but the spirit of man, which dwells in him, and no one knows or comprehends the thoughts of God but the Spirit of God." Then, is he not the Spirit of God? For, no one can betray me but the spirit of myself!

---

* Joseph M. Valachi died 3 April 1971, at age 67, having disclosed the workings of Cosa Nostra to 1963 Senate.

Now we are told there are two traditions as to his "death" in Scripture. Matthew tells it in the 27th Chapter that he went out and hanged himself. In other words, he committed suicide. Jesus is made to say, "No one takes away my life. I lay it down myself. I have the power to lay it down and the power to take it up again." So, here we find the suicide -- the parallel. But in the Book of Acts, it is said "He swelled up; and swelling up, he burst in the middle. Then all of his bowels came gushing out." [Acts 2:28] They were two entirely different traditions: one given us by Luke, for Luke wrote the Book of Acts; and then we have the one in Matthew.

Now a friend of mine, -- and he is here tonight, -- he said, "This happened to me a year ago. I didn't tell it because I didn't know -- it seemed so strange to me. But this weekend I was reading the 13th Chapter of the Book of John, reading of the Last Supper, reading all about the sop -- reading of these things; and I wondered, 'What nonsense! They saw where he gave the sop -- to whom he gave it. Why ask all these questions? Is it I? Is it I? and then one whispered to ask him who it is.'

"The honored guest could not be across the street; the honored guest would be right next to him -- the one whose head was on his bosom; and he dipped the sop and gave him, and said, 'What you have to do, do quickly.'"

Now he said, "A year ago I had a vision; and in my vision I saw you dead. You were dead. You were dressed in white -- radiant white; and your bowels were completely out. That was your death. Not understanding it, I hesitated to mention it because it struck me at the time that that would be Judas. And so, I saw you dressed in white -- radiant white, and you were dead; and your death was caused by the swelling up and the bursting in your middle, and out came all of your bowels, gushing out."

Here was Neville, and he was dead. He saw the perfect vision. I tell you, when it happens everything in you: "All you behold, though it appears without, it is within, in your own wonderful human imagination, of which this world of mortality is but a shadow." [Blake, from "Jerusalem"]

So, all these characters are within himself! And the nearest to him is the Spirit of himself, which is Judas. The word "Judas" is the same as "Judah," -- the one mentioned in the genealogy. And speak- of the genealogy, "Jacob [was] the father of Judah and his brothers." [Matthew 1:2] It didn't mention the first three brothers. It never mentioned the first three; it jumps over the first three and goes to to the fourth one, Judah. "Judah" means the "hand"; but it's the hand of God, the power of God. It's the creative power of God, the directive power of God that can fulfill His purpose. And His purpose is to give Himself to man.

The story of Jesus is the biography of God. That's God. Now, when that unfolds itself in man, God has succeeded in giving Himself to man. That man then tells it.

So, today here we single out an individual as though this thing happened on earth. It didn't happen on earth. This is God's plan. It is all written in Scripture. When it happens in you, you read Scripture to find the parallel, but the whole thing is taking place in a supernatural world -- all within you. "He speaks to man through the medium of dreams, but He reveals Himself in vision." It is God unveiling Himself.

So, one who comes into my world, -- and no one comes unless the Father within me calls him, -- he has a vision. He hesitated for quite a while to tell me because of the tradition concerning Judas. He was the one whose bowels, as he swelled up he burst in the middle, and all of his bowels gushed out. He was the one who betrayed the secret, as I betray it every time I take this platform. I am telling you the secret of God every time I take this platform. I am playing the part of Judas every Monday and Friday night. I play it every time I talk to a friend. If they call me on the 'phone, I am betraying the secret. "I have come, not to abolish the law and the prophets, but to fulfill them." So, I tell you the Law. I reinterpret the Law psychologically, and tell you that: "An assumption, though false, if persisted in will harden into fact." [Sir Anthony Eden]

Two thousand years ago you heard that same statement told in this manner: "Whatever you desire, believe that you have received it, and you will." It's the identical thing told in a more modern form -- the same thing. If you dare to assume this, that or the other, and persist in your assumption, it will harden into fact and project itself on the screen of space. That is the Law. It's psychological.

Now the Prophets -- they predicted the sufferings of the coming One, and told of the glory that would be His. First, He wss chosen in Him before the foundation of the world. "Those whom He foreknew, He also predestined to be conformed to the image of His Son; and those whom He predestined, He also called; and those whom He called, He also justified; and those whom He justified, He also glorified."

Well, you can't take these five terms and come to any other conclusion than predestination. That is the Spirit-in-man fulfilling the Will of God, leading that man up to God Himself! For the story of the Gospel is God's biography. When that story unfolds itself in the individual in the first-person-singular and present-tense experience, now it's his biography; and if it's God's biography and it is his experience, then who is he? He is that Power. When that power comes upon him, he is power. And who is the power of God? Jesus Christ. "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God."

When some one, now, puts his or her hand to the plow and turning back, he unfits himself tor the Kingdom of Heaven; but the One Who called him will not allow him, or allow her, to unfit himself, or herself, for that Kingdom. And so, if he appears to her or to him as sheer power, it is for a purpose.

As we are told, "If one will not believe, having been called and having been spoken to," as told us in the story of Gabriel [Luke 1:18-23]: "And Gabriel came into the presence of Zechariah and told Zechariah that the Lord had sent him," and then told Zechariah of the coming of the birth of John; and he said, "How will I know this? I am an old man, and my wife is advanced in years." And the Angel replied, "I am Gabriel. I stand in the presence of God," -- that is, wherever the messenger is sent, God is with him, fer the Sender and the "sent" are one. And the word "Gabriel" means either the "power" of God or the "man" of God. You can translate it in either way.

So, now you want a sign? "Well, this shall be your sign: you shall be silent and unable to speak until that day when this thing is fulfilled."And when he came out of the Temple, he could not speak; and those who waited on the outside in prayer while he lit the incense on the inside were dumbfounded because they knew something had happened when they saw him. He couldn't speak; he was dumb."

Then, when the child was born, and then on the 8th day, which was the day now to be circumcised, they wanted to know what to name the child; and they thought certainly "Zechariah," after his father. And he made signs, for he could not speak, to bring him a tablet, that he could write; and he wrote on the tablet: "His name is John*." And as he wrote, "His name is John," the whole thing was fulfilled, his mouth was opened, his tongue was loosed, and then he spoke.

That was sheer power. "Christ is the power of God and the wisdom of God." But in this world of ours, when I am put into the place of playing such a part, in His infinite mercy He takes from my conscious, reasoning mind that individual act that I am not left with it; that I will play in the depths of my own being -- I will play anything that my Father, who is one with my Self, commands me to play, that they who would now stray from the path will be brought back into it.

If that little thing was only for one moment that you are dumb, unable to speak, -- and here for one moment there was no speech; but I tell you, this play is the Eternal Play. It didn't close yesterday when the Bowl overflowed and all of a sudden they came out, when they reinterpreted the entire story and called it "positive thinking" or "positive decisions" and all this nonsense. This is the eternal story.

Wait until you receive power from on high, for the power will come and you will be overcome with the Spirit -- the Holy Spirit; and "when the Holy Spirit comes upon you, it will bring to your remembrance all that I have told you." And what have I told you? My life. I have told you exactly what happened to me supernaturally. That will then happen to you individually, and you will know that I told you the truth. That is the eternal story of the Gospel.

So when he said, "Among the mature, I too impart a wisdom; it is not the wisdom of this age or of the rulers of this age, for they are doomed to pass asay. I impart a secret and hidden wisdom of God which God decreed before the ages for our glorification."

That's what he imparted. Then he tells us in that same chapter, the 2d Chapter of First Corinthians, how it's impossible for any person to know a man's thoughts, except the spirit of that man which dwells in him; and therefore no one knows or comprehends the thoughts of God except the Spirit of God.

And so, He sends the Spirit upon you. So the real coming of Jesus -- the return of Jesus, in the truest sense, is simply the manifested power of the Holy Spirit. That's his "coming." He can't come in any other way. He becomes invisible. He departs this world, and then sends the Holy Spirit. Well, the Holy Spirit comes like the wind, may I tell you? -- just like the wind! And when you hear it, it's the most unearthly sound you have ever heard, but it's wind. It possesses you, and then you wake. And you wake to find yourself entombed, and then you come out of that tomb where you have been buried; and then everything -- the entire story now -- unfolds within you, scene after scene without any deviation; and that's the Being that you are. And when it happens and it comes to the very end, you know Who-You-Are. You are God Himself!

* John the Baptist

You are the Power of God that is Jesus Christ, -- "the power of God and the wisdom of God." And now you know the true Exodus from bondage. What you read about in the Old Testament was only an adumbration -- a foreshadowing; but when it happens to you, this is the true Exodus when you are set free -- set free because you have found the Son. "If the Son sets you free, you are free indeed." And the Son stands before you, and you know exactly who he is, and he knows who you are.

So, don't close the book and wait for a year. "Set your hope fully upon the Grace that is coming to you at the unveiling and the revelation of Christ in you." For that's where He is! He is all buried within you.

In the meanwhile, use the Law psychologically. External observation means nothing. All the outside ceremonies mean nothing -- absolutely nothing. It's all just -- well, that was my command when I was "sent": "Down with the bluebloods!" -- all church protocol. That's what it means. Down with it completely. Pay no attention to it, -- even to the little simple thing, which is a very pleasant thing: When you sit down to dine and some one calls upon you to say grace, say grace. Don't be abusive about it; say it, but you know it means nothing. But do it if you are called upon to do it. We do not have it at home. We sit down and I thoroughly enjoy my meal that my wife prepared; and I thank her for preparing it. But if one calls upon you to do it, do it; but all outside ceremony means absolutely nothing. That was my command when I was "sent": "Down with the bluebloods," -- down with all church protocol.

So, the socalled "kissing of the feet"* that you saw in this picture the other day and the washing of the feet of these twelve elderly men and kissing the feet, -- that's out! It hasn't a thing to do with real, real Christianity.

I tell you what it is from experience. He will wake within you, and then you will know every one of those Disciples -- what aspect of your own being each represents. And that one who was closest to him, the one who was his friend, the one to whom he gave the honored piece, -- that was Judas, the "Hand" of God -- the directive hand that could fulfill his purposed end by betraying the secret, as I do every time I talk to you. I betray the secret of God. I can't betray it if I don't know it. No one can betray what he does not know; and so one must first know it to betray it. But I am betraying it. I am telling you exactly how it happens. It happens in the way that I have told you.

It will come suddenly upon you -- the Holy Spirit. It will come like a storm wind; and when it comes, you will wake to find yourself entombed, and then you will have the innate wisdom, -- for Christ is also the wisdom of God, not only the power of God, -- to move that stone from where it was. That was the "seal." Break it by pushing it from within; and you will come out, and you will find surrounding you the witnesses to the Great Event that God succeeded in His purpose, which was waking you as God. For this is the "birth" of God, "not born of blood or of the will of the flesh or the will of man, but of God." And you come out; and the sign of your "birth" is present, and here is the sign wrapped -- as you are told -- in swaddling clothes. And you pick it up and in the most endearing manner you say, "How is my sweetheart?" and the whole thing vanishes, including the three witnesses who witnessed the birth.

* "The Shoes of the Fisherman" by Morris West

Then comes the second Great Event, when he stands before you, and you fulfill Scripture, the 89th Psalm: "I have found David, and he has cried unto me, 'Thou art my Father, my God, and the Rock of my Salvation.'" And then he stands before you. And this relationship is forever. It's the returning memory, for you do not have the feeling that it happens now. It's simply that your memory has returned, just as though you had suffered from total amnesia. It's not something that startles you; you have always known he was your "son." That's the feeling that I had. So, all of a sudden, he comes back. What comes back? Well, "the Holy Spirit is upon me." Well, who is the Holy Spirit? He "who brings to your remembrance all that I have told you."

"And did not David, in the spirit, call me 'my Lord'?" Well, when he calls you "my lord," -- which is the name of my Father, for all sons called their father and spoke of their father as "my lord," -- so: "David, in the spirit, called me 'my lord.'" He does it in spirit, not here on earth.

And then comes the grand severance of your body from top to bottom: and your ascent into heaven, separating the event called "Resurrection" from the "Ascension." And you can count them. It's not any forty days. You can count the whole thing up. It's between -- mine was on the 20th of July of '59, and the Ascent took place on the 8th day of April of 1960; and that's when one ascends -- ascends into Heaven. And the whole thing, as you are told, reverberates like thunder.

And then comes the Seal of Approval on the twelve hundred and sixtieth day. And that is the descent of the Holy Spirit in bodily form as a dove. And here he rests upon you. You bring him up, and he is smothering you with kisses when the whole thing fades. And then you come, and you tell it.

And so, the story of Judas, -- when he does betray, he does it quickly, I tell you. You are seated on the floor explaining the Word of God to those who are seated before you, and he is one of them. And suddenly he jumps up, and you know exactly what he is going to do. He is going to tell, -- you don't use the word "betray," -- he is going to tell exactly what he heard you say, you are speaking of the Kingdom of God. And he is going to tell that you are speaking of the Kingdom, and that you are the King; and he is going to tell the authorities concerning what you said. He has to betray the Kingdom, and he goes out and he tells it.

Then comes the "authority" in, and he unveils your arm, and his name who went out is the "Arm of God," the "Hand of God." He unveils it, and you see the relationship between the one who went out and yourself. Now you are completely unveiled when he nails into your shoulder that peg -- that wooden peg and hammers it in, and then takes off the sleeve and takes the arm and it's bare. And then you know the 53d

Chapter of Isaiah: "Who has believed our report, and to whom has the Arm of the Lord been revealed?" And as everything is placed upon that Being, he has then to bear the burden; but he will see the travail of his efforts -- of his labour, and he will rejoice. He will be satisfied when he knows that he got through.

So, you can say to any one, if they see me in any role that seems a harsh role, then know that I consciously am not aware of it while I played that part. I have to play it, for this is a supernatural world of which I speak; it is a supernatural Being of which I speak; it's a supernatural part that I am playing when I play those parts at night. And certain parts, I am relieved of the memory of them, for they have to be done, -- to "jack one up," -- "having put his hand to the plow and turning back, unfits himself for the Kingdom of Heaven." [Luke 9:62]

And what caused him to turn back? Doubt.

They questioned; and so when Zechariah said, "How will I know this? I am an old man, and my wife is advanced in years. How could she conceive and bear a son?" he said, "I stand in the presence of God." In other words, I am speaking for the One who sent me, and He never left me. Therefore he stands with me. Now sheer power is going to make you dumb; and so he said to him: "You will be silent, unable to speak, until that which I have foretold has come to pass, because you did not believe the words that He gave me to speak. I spoke them, but you did not believe my words."

So, you will see me in many roles. Many of you have seen me in different roles. Yet my conscious, reasoning mind has always been removed on my return from certain parts that I had to play, for I am under compulsion to play those parts, after being awakened. And my friend had to see me in that role to know who Judas really is. And I am Judas every time I betray the Messianic secret. And I am the one who told him to do it quickly.

That scene I recall vividly. "What you have to do, do quickly." He certainly did it quickly. There was no time between his departure and the arrival of the authority who came in and severed my sleeve and hammered into my shoulder that wooden peg, on which he then placed the burden.

So, I tell you, this play is an eternal play. It goes on forever and forever and forever; and each one makes his exit -- which is the Exodus -- from this world of tears into a blissful state; but only in that way does he ever make the Exodus. So when they sing the hymns of how they were led out of bondage in Egypt into a world of freedom -- and yet all are still as enslaved as they were thousands of years ago, then what are they commemorating? For when the real leader -- the new Moses -- comes, they would not recognize him.

The new Moses came and was called "Jesus," which means "Jehovah." God Himself came this time in the form of man. And that's the new Moses; and his life is the pattern that man will one day imitate -- actually experience; and therefore, it's his pattern. It is his, and it's the only way you will ever make an exit from this world. "Death" will not take you out of this world. You will "die" and be restored to life just as you are now, in a world just like this. It's terrestrial, and you will still be making your effort as you do it right now.

There is no transforming power whatsoever in the thing called "death." There is no transformation in death. You find yourself the same being. Young, yes; but that's not transformation, -- the same identity. But that of which I speak is a complete transfiguration -- a complete transformation of form. You are no longer this little garment. You are glorified, and you "wear" a glorified Body that doesn't have the needs of this body at all. And wherever you go clothed in that Body, everything is perfect. There is no place you could go. Walk through "hell"; it will become heaven. And some one clothed in these garments [indicating the physical body], walking through heaven, would turn it into "hell."

So, I tell you, you are in for the most glorious thing in the world And what I have told you, I tell you from my own personal experience. I am not theorizing, I am not speculating; I knew that some one had to see me in that role, and he had this vision a year ago; but because of custom and his association with the idea of Judas as the one whose bowels -- first of all, he swelled up, and swelling up he burst in the middle, and all of his bowels came gushing out.

And loving me as he does, and believing me as he does, he didn't know how to associate that with the one that he so loves and trusts to tell the truth. Well, I can tell you, they are the same being, for he is the spirit of the one -- the honored guest to whom he gave the sop. That is the honored position, not around a table as we have it here in da Vinci's picture. There was no table, not in the Oriental world. You sat on a divan -- not more than two at any one moment; and divans were around. And the host, if he ever dipped it, would take a piece of meat and dip it; and the one to whom he gave the meat or piece of bread -- that was the sop -- the one to whom he gave it, that was the honored guest. As we today, sitting around the table, we seat the honored guest to our right; and here that is the honored position. But there, the one whose head was on his breast, -- and he just simply said, "Who is it?" Who is nearest to you but your spirit? "So, no one knows or comprehends the thoughts of God but the Spirit of God."

So, if God was ever betrayed, He could only be betrayed by the Spirit of God. It had to be revealed. It could not be discovered by any philosophical reasoning. No man in this world, as you are told in Scripture, -- "Man could not find God." All the wisdom of man could not find God. God had to reveal Himself, and the revealing is the betrayal of God. He betrays Himself by unveiling Himself to man. And this is the story as it is written and told us in Scripture.

You set your hope fully upon that moment in time when it comes to you. It is called "Grace" in Scripture. "Set your hope fully upon the Grace that is coming to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." Well, "Grace" is simply an unearned, unmerited gift of God to man; and that gift is God Himself. So you are raised from the level of being a Son to the level of being the Father.

---oOo---

THE IDENTICAL HARVEST

I am quite sure you are going to find this an interesting series. Tonight it is "The Law of the Identical Harvest." In the very beginning, God established the Law of the Identical Harvest.

"And God said, Let the earth put forth vegetation: Plants bearing seed and fruit trees bearing fruit in which is their seed, each according to its kind; and it was so." (Genesis 1:24)

Now we are warned: "Do not be deceived, for God is not mocked. As a man sows, so shall he reap." (Galatians 6:7)

So, do not try for one moment to deceive yourself. All that is taking place in your world, you planted. There is only one Planter in the world, and the Planter is God; but man looks for God outside of himself; and we are warned that He is within us.

We are told to examine ourselves. "Test yourselves. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you? unless, of course, you fail to meet the test." (II Corinthians 13:5, Rev. Standard Ver)

So, within us is the Lord Jesus Christ! And we are told: "By him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made." (John 1:3)

Now, where is He? Who is He? If He is in me and He is the cause of the phenomena of my life and everyone's life, then where is He? I should find Him. It's the most important search in the world, -- and I have found Him! Christ-in-you is your own wonderful human imagination. That is the Lord! Your every imaginal act is the planting of a seed, and the harvest is nothing more than the multiplication of the identical seed. You cannot change it.

How do I plant the seed? Well, I could plant it unwittingly, and most of us do. I read the morning's paper, and I react emotionally. At that moment, I planted a seed! You tell me a story, and I react emotionally. At that very moment I've planted a seed, and I am going to reap it -- the identical harvest.

Most of us do not remember. We do not remember the moment when we planted the seed; but every natural effect has a spiritual cause, and not a natural. A "natural" cause only seems; it is a delusion of the withering vegetable memory. We cannot quite relate the harvest to anything that we've done.

Let me now tell you just a simple little story. On March the 7th of this year, the Los Angeles Times printed a little story about a lost church organ. The minister called in the detectives and announced that the church organ was stolen. He gave a description of the organ, to the best of his ability. They found what they thought to be the organ that was lost, but all identification marks were removed. The serial number and everything about identifying it for ownership had been taken from the organ. The minister said to the detectives, "Look into the back of the organ and see if you find a paperclip with a little piece of paper clipped to it and this number written on the paper." The detective said "Why?" and the minister said, "I placed it there." He said, "Why?" He said, "Just in case."

Now, he is preaching the story of Christ. "Just in case -- " That is when he planted loss: "Just in case." To tell him that he was the source of the loss of that organ, he would strike you if he was bigger. Really, he was the cause of that loss, but you couldn't tell him that. Yet he will repeat from the pulpit: "Be not deceived, for God is not mocked." He will even quote Job: "My fears have come upon me." (Job 4:14) For my imaginal acts, whether they be in love or in fear, they are seeds, and I must reap them.

I will give you one that is very personal. When I planted it, I do not know, but I had to have planted it. And I will show you that, even though you plant unlovely things unwittingly, you need not be the victim. You can revise it, and change it, even though you are confronted with a seemingly insoluble problem.

When I left here last year, in the month of July, I checked my two suitcases at the airport. When I arrived in Los Angeles, one was missing. The contents I could not replace for $1500. They were all the lovely dresses that my wife has, and all her dresses are made by a certain couturier in Beverly Hills, and not one is under $195. She has made these dresses over the years for her. They were not new, but I couldn't replace them -- any one -- under $195, -- plus other things in that suitcase. My suits were in another suitcase, perfectly all right. I recorded the loss. They said, "When we find it, if we find it, we will send it right over to you, Mr. Goddard."

After five days and not a word, we called; and they said, "It is lost. We've made every effort, and it cannot be found. Put in a claim and send it off to San Diego, the headquarters for the PSA office." My wife did the legitimate thing in the world of Caesar. She itemized the contents to the best of her ability and what it would take to replace the items in that suitcase.

That morning about 2:00 o'clock I awoke and said, "Now, look here. I teach this principle; and, so, I have brought about a loss in my own world. I will have none of it! I teach Revision. I heard what the man said over the telephone: 'The thing is lost. They cannot find it; we have looked high and low.'"

Then you read in the papers that hundreds of millions of dollars are stolen every year at our airports, depots, and the wharves across the country; and it's an inside job, as it were. So, at 2:00 o'clock in the morning I took in my hands my suitcase. I felt the weight of it; I could feel the weight. I could see in my mind's eye the grey bag with the black leather. I could actually feel it, and I felt it with the sense of relief, for of all the pleasures in the world, relief is the most keenly felt.

When you are expecting some one, and they are late -- some one you truly love, and they are late, and it gets later and later and you get anxious, and then you hear the familiar voice; you know the relief that comes? Well, now, that's what you do when you feel that relief. And, then, I dropped it and got up and went into my living room and simply read my Bible.

It was early. We have a lovely apartment, and it was quiet. We have no neighbors. I turned on the lights and read my Bible. The next day, no report. The following day I received a letter postmarked San Francisco; a strange, peculiar hand printing my name: Neville Goddard. The address was correct. When I opened the letter, there was the little note in the same peculiar printing: "Your suitcase is in Box 524. Sorry. The Phantom," and enclosed a key. So, I called the security guards at the Los Angeles airport, and I told them the contents of the letter. I said, "I have the key."

"Well, we'll investigate immediately," which they did. They called back within a matter of five or ten minutes to tell me that there is no such box in Los Angeles. I reminded them that the letter came from San Francisco; so, he said, "All right, I'll call you back." He called San Francisco, and the security guards got the local police, and they opened 524, and there was my suitcase. They opened it up in the presence of the policemen, and the whole thing was ransacked -- completely ransacked, utterly turned inside out. They sealed it and flew it down, and asked me to come over with my wife; and in the presence of the security guards in L.A. they would open my suitcase in my presence, which they did.

Not a handkerchief was missing! Everything was turned inside out. The man was most apologetic, and he said, "Mr. Goddard, I am awfully sorry. We are sorry for the Company. These things happen. We do not know how they happen, but they happen. May we clean the things for you?"

I said, "No; that is something that my wife and I do every year. We travel for more than two weeks. Everything we wear is drycleaned. So, it is a little problem of ours, and we've always done it."

Then he gave me his personal card and said, "The next time you and Mrs. Goddard travel on PSA, you are our guests." I took the card and gave it to my wife; and now we are here and going back as the guests of PSA. But we did not lose one handkerchief -- not a thing; but it was a complete mess. What they were looking for, I do not know; but they found nothing there. However, that's done.

My friend Freedom Barry -- you all know Freedom.* About three months ago Freedom called me. He was distressed; he was in a panic. He said, "Neville, my most precious possession is my grand piano. I can't replace it for $4,000. It's only insured for two. Well, it needed certain repairs; so I sent it back to the factory for the repairs. When it was done, they called me and told me they would not deliver it until I came to the factory and tried it and saw the work done, and then agreed to the work. It was a $400 job."

---

* Discussed in somewhat more detail in the Los Angeles lecture "All-Powerful Human Words," dated 5 June 1970.

So, he made the trip to the factory, tested the piano, approved it; and they said they would send it off, and the date given was a Tuesday for delivery. He remained in all day on Tuesday, but no piano. He remained in on Wednesday, and no piano. On Thursday he called, and they said, "We were waiting for a full load. That's why we didn't get it off on time; but it is off now. But, unfortunately, we can't find either the truck or the driver. They have both disappeared."

At that point Freedom panicked. He said, "You know, I am so close to the picture, I can't do a thing. Were it another person, I could do it. But I can't do it for myself, and the one person in this world I can turn to in confidence happens to be you. Will you aid me in bringing back my piano?"

I thanked him for the confidence he had in me; and then, as I hung up the telephone, I went into my bedroom, and proceeded to put myself into the mood of hearing his voice -- I had just heard it -- telling me that he has the piano. That night a lovely piano concerto was on. Every night between 8:00 and 10:00 we have a station called KFAC, and they play two to three hours of lovely classical music. So, this night in particular they were playing beautiful piano concertos. So, I imagined it was Freedom. I sat there entranced with the beauty of this music, and I assumed it was Freedom playing; and then I turned it off just as it came to the end, so I would not hear who played it. I assumed it was Freedom. Then in my imagination I put my hands upon his shoulders and thanked him for the joy that he gave me and felt completely relieved in what I had done.

Two days later he 'phoned to say they had found the man. At first he would not reveal what he had done with the truck or its contents, but eventually he confessed, and they got the piano. So the piano is back in Freedom's house. All it needed was a tuning because of the long ride and the extreme heat through the day and the cold at night. Now he has his lovely piano, and he treasures that piano more today than he did prior to the loss of the piano. It's like a lost son coming home.

So, here we have a law. It's a principle; and morning, noon and night, you and I are operating this principle; and we can't stop it. If the world seems confused today, it's confused because we, the operant power, made it what it is. There is no power outside of man doing anything. Why? Because God became man, that man may become God! He actually became as I am, that I may be as He is! He's not pretending that He's Neville; He actually became Neville. He's not pretending that He is you; He actually became you. And in you, He is your own wonderful human imagination, and one day you will know it. You will know it beyond all doubts in the world. When He completely awakens within you and His Son calls you "Father," then you will know it. But until His Son calls you "Father," and you know that relationship, try it. Test yourself to see whether you are holding to the faith. What faith? People say, "The Christian faith." Well, what is the Christian faith? "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ." Well, do you believe that He is in you? "No." Well, then, you don't believe in the Lord Jesus Christ! "Do you not realize that the Lord Jesus Christ is in you, and that there is no other lord?" So, as Blake said: "Babel mocks, saying there is no God or Son of God;

That Thou, O Human Imagination, O Divine Body of the Lord Jesus Christ art all
A delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou arisest upon
My weary eyes, even in this dungeon and this iron mill. . . .
For Thou also sufferest with me, although I behold Thee not. . .
. . . . . And the Divine Voice answers:
. . . . . Fear not! Lo, I am with you always.
Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from death
Thy Brother who sleepeth in Albion." (From "Jerusalem")

That, I know from experience He can raise from death the One who sleeps in Universal Man, called Albion. One day you will experience it. You will actually experience the story of the Lord Jesus Christ! And when you experience it, you are the Lord Jesus Christ! You'll experience it in a first-person, singular, present-tense experience; and His Son calls you, "Father."

You say, "What! Jesus has a son?" "He is a son," the world will say. The world does not understand the mystery of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Father.

"Have I been so long with you, and yet you do not know me, Philip? He who has seen me has seen the Father. How, then, can you call me and ask me to tell you about the Father? I've been so long with you, and yet you do not know me."* "I and the Father are one." (John 10:30)

And then you will say, "But did he not also say, 'The Father is greater than I'?" Yes; but the Lord is not inferior as to His Essential Being; only as to the office, as the one that He sent. But he tells us the Sender and the Sent are one. So, when you see me, you see Him who sent me; but in the office of the Sent, I am inferior as to my Essential Bding, the Sender who sent me.

And, so, he said his law holds good forever and forever. Well, what is his law? Whatever you desire, believe that you have received it, and you will. That's the law. Whoever believes that what he says will come to pass, it shall be done for him.

Can you believe that? Can you actually believe that you can put your hand upon a friend and tell the friend you've never seen him look better? or hear him say he's never felt better? Can you put your hand into his hand and congratulate him on his good fortune and have him tell you he's never had more?

Here is a simple story. A lady called me about eight months ago, all excited. She said, "Neville, will you hear for me that I have ten million dollars? I will give you one million if you will hear for me that I have ten million. Well, I have known this lady over the years. In fact, I gave her away to her husband. She had no father, and she said, "Will you give me away?" I said, "Willingly, gladly."

During the reception a lady came up to me and said to me, "Now, tell me, who are you?" I said, "I'm the bride's father." She said, "You are the bride's father?" I said, "Yes." She said, "I paid for the service, but I saw you give her away. But, tell me now, who are you?." I said, "I am the bride's father."

---

* John 14:9
 John 14:28

"Well," she said, "it so happens that I am the bride's sister!" What could you do? She was the bride's sister. But I did not know she had a sister.

However, she called and asked me to hear she had ten million dollars. About, I would say, two months ago she called up. She could hardly speak, with the excitement. She said, "You know, my brother -- " and this seems an incredible story -- "received from this lady -- a very, very elderly lady, the entire estate; and the estate is in excess of one hundred million dollars."

Well, I didn't ask her to hold her breath until an estate of that size was settled. The chances are she'll be gone, and others will follow her. In an estate of that enormous amount, you will find all sorts of people claiming they are the mother, or her brother, or this, that, and the other. So, I didn't say one word to her to in any way disillusion her. She was in the mood -- a mood of enormous wealth; and she walked in that state, waiting for the brother to have the estate settled. Undoubtedly he promised her ten million of the hundred million, for he knew the value of the estate. But forget that part of it, -- she was in the mood of wealth.

She called me one month ago, and this is her story; and this is, now, factual. She does not have to wait for this estate. She said, "You know, these two elderly ladies came into the meeting." Her husband has a little church -- not much bigger than this room, and these two elderly ladies in pants -- not well dressed at all, -- you wouldn't think that they could contribute a dime to the support of the little church. They said to her one day, " Do you have a mortgage on this place?" She confessed, "Yes, we have a mortgage." "How much?" She told them, and they said, "All right, we will take care of it."

They paid off the mortgage on the house and the church one hundred per cent, bought her a new car and gave her the pink slip, and set up a trust fund for one thousand dollars a month for the rest of her earthly days. You see, she was in the mood. She was in the mood of fantastic wealth. Whether that enormous estate is ever settled or not, or whether it is true or not, at least she was in the state that called in her, by that imaginal act, the same identical harvest.

If you would really believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and pinpoint Him as your own wonderful human imagination, -- there is no other lord. He literally became as you are, that you may be as He is! The Incarnation took place at Calvary, not at Bethlehem. When God became man, that's Calvary. That is the Incarnation, and He is not pretending. He had to completely empty Himself of all wisdom and all knowledge, and all power to become us! At Bethlehem, we become as He is. That's the mystery.

And here tonight, if you know who He is and you trust Him one hundred per cent, you can turn to Him, for, "All things are possible to God," -- all things. There is no restriction placed upon the power of God, if you know who He is. But if you have some little reservation, -- you will do this, but, -- well, then, don't call. If you will say simply, "Well, I will ask three or four people, in case one fails," you don't know Christ.

If Freedom had called me and then, as he hung up, called a second or a third or a fourth person, he would have no confidence in my teaching -- none whatsoever. But I know Freedom, or I would never have told him to come to this City and teach. But I felt in Freedom the man I wanted him to be. And Freedom came here, and he taught; and he is a wonderful teacher. He doesn't teach the Promise because he hasn't had the Promise. He has had the Law, and he knows the Law. Well, when you are so very close to it, you find it difficult to operate.

Well, here is a hand. If the back of this hand began to itch, it can't reach itself; but what's wrong with this (using the other hand to scratch)? Can't this come to its assistance and scratch it? There's only one body. We are told: "There is only one body, one spirit, one Lord, . . . one God and Father of all." (Ephesians 4:4-6)

So, as one Body, he turns to an aspect of himself, which is the one body; and he turned to the aspect of his Body in whom he had confidence, and he called me. Well, at that moment I heard him, and then dropped it. You don't do it day after day; you simply do it, and it's done! There's always an interval of time between a seed that is planted and the harvesting of that seed; so just drop it. You don't pick it up every day to see if it's really growing. You leave it, and the thing germinates, and then it comes into fruition in its own due time.

Unfortunately, we are not aware of the moment of the planting of the seed; and when the harvest appears, we deny our own harvest. We can't believe for one moment that we did it.

Recently I read an interview with Mrs. Martin Luther King, the widow of the great evangelist, and she said the day that the late President Kennedy was assassinated, "My husband turned to me and said, 'That is the way I am going to die. I, too, will be assassinated.'" He was a powerfully emotional being; he identified himself with that martyrdom. Whether he wanted to be a martyr for his own cause or not, I do not know. But her own words: "My husband said to me when he heard of the story of the assassination of Kennedy, 'That's the way I am going to be killed. I am going out just like that.'" Now, you tell that man that he did it, and the one who now serves 99 years was only the means by which his will was externalized, he would not believe it. There's always somebody ready, waiting to aid the externalization of my will; and my will is a simple imaginal act, -- that's all. And, then, you, if you can be used -- if you are not in that state that you can be used, you will not be used against your will. But there are those who are falling into all kinds of states in this world. There are those who feel at home being a thief! Well, if I feel that I have lost something, the states occupied by men who believe themselves to be thieves -- they will fulfill my will for me. If I feel that I am secure, there are those in the world who will play their part and aid the birth of my feeling that I am secure. It's entirely up to us. What are we doing?

Well, you cannot change this eternal Law of the Identical Harvest. You will find it in the very first chapter of the Book of Genesis, -- the first chapter, 11th verse: "And God said, Let the earth put forth vegetation, plants bearing seed, and fruit trees bearing fruit in which is their seed, each according to its kind. . . And so it was." And not a thing has happened in the world to change that. It's the same wonderful law.

So, whatever we are today, we are by reason of the fact that we are the Sower. People love to sow. But the comforting thing is this: that the Word of God has been sown, and no one can change it. And where is it sown? It's sown in you. And the Word cannot return void, but must accomplish that which He purposed. For, in every child born of woman the Word of God has been planted, and that Word, in the fulness of time, will erupt; and the story of God will unfold in the man in whom He has planted it. Then that man will know he is the Lord Jesus Christ. That's the most glorious thing in the world! If you suffer now because of your strange planting, all well and good; but bear in mind: the Word of God has been planted, and you cannot fail.

Not one child born of woman in this world can fail to one day realize that he is God the Father. If one failed, the whole thing would fail. Not one can fail, -- no, not even a Hitler, not even a Stalin; for behind the mask called a Stalin and the mask called Hitler, there is that Word of God that is perfect, and it will grow. And, one day, it will erupt. They have gone from this world only to our physical senses, but they haven't really gone. They are in a world just like this, terrestrial, in a body that is new -- unaccountably new, but a new body, in an environment best suited for the work yet to be done in them, for: "He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the revelation of Jesus Christ." So, the whole thing is the process of the unfolding of the Word in man. The day will come, and it comes with shocking suddenness.

Next Monday (July 20th) will be my eleventh birthday of my "birth from above." Eleven years ago the 20th of July, I was "born from above" in this City in the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. It's true! The story is perfectly true as you read it in the Gospel concerning Jesus christ.

He is buried in the holy sepulchre, which is the skull of man. One day man awakes within his skull to find himself completely sealed, and he knows it's a sepulchre. There he is, completely sealed! But he is the Wisdom of God and the Power of God, as Christ is defined in the story of the Bible. Because you are the Power of God, you have the power to come out; and because you are the wisdom of God, you have the wisdom to know what to do. And you do come out -- out of the tomb of your own skull! And all the imagery of Scripture surrounds you: the babe, the witnesses, -- everything; and there you are -- "born from above"!

And you are told: "You must be born from above; for unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven," which means the New Age. But while you are here in this age, if you are not "born from above" before the socalled "death" takes place, -- "death" is only the passing through a door, but you do not die. Nothing dies! You pass through the door. Those who remain cannot see you beyond the door, but you aren't dead; you are just as alive as you are here: in a body like this, only it's young; not a babe, -- young, about 20 years of age, in an environment best suited for the work that you must still do. And, then, one day you are "born from above"; and from then on, you enter an entirely different world -- a New Age.

It's not an area; it's a body. And wherever you are, clothed in that body, everything is perfect. Nothing can remain imperfect in your presence, wherever you are! So, the Kingdom of Heaven is not an area. It's not a realm. It is a body! Wherever you are, nothing remains dead. Everything is made alive and perfect. Trees that are long dead and turned to stone burst into flower as you walk by. Things that are completely wrong are perfect as you walk by! Seeds that are not growing spring when you go by. It's a body.

So, the Kingdom of Heaven is a body! It's the Perfect Body. It is the body of the Risen Lord within you, which is the Lord Jesus Christ. So, nothing can remain imperfect when you are "born from above."

But tonight, in the practical world in which we live here, which will still be with you when you go through the gate called "death," -- it will be the practical world, -- you will find this Principle still operating. Everyone who is not "born from above" will still be looking for this principle to find out how to make things come into his world that he wants. It's a simple, simple principle.

You start knowing that your own wonderful human imagination is God. That's the Lord Jesus Christ. Though I do not now know from actual experience, I will believe it, and then put Him to the test. I will test Him; and then you take a goal in life for yourself or for a friend; and then persuade yourself that things are as you would like them to be. When you are self-persuaded that they are, you do nothing. The whole vast world aids in the birth of that assumption. All you need do is assume that things are as you want them to be, and in that state let it go; and all things move to aid the birth of your assumption. There's no need to go to any one.

First of all, the whole vast world is yourself "pushed out" anyway. There's no need to get even. Just go "about your Father's business" -- just forget it, doing good. You won't grow weary in the doing of good, for in due season you will reap if you do not grow weary

So, even though you feel you have been wronged, forget it. When I put my mind on the one who did it, or who I thought did it, -- who signs himself "The Phantom," I would still be looking for my suitcase. But I completely forgot that; and when Caesar called, I turned to the Only One Who Never Fails, and that is one's own imagination.

You see, we exist in physical bodies, but we live in imagination. You can't get away from it. That is your immortal body. So, you live in imagination; you only exist in physical bodies. And these bodies will turn to dust, but they will be restored quickly -- instantaneously, may I tell yoy? The world will say, "How do you know?"

Well, I know. I know from experience; I'm not speculating. I see my friends -- those who have gone, and they are in a world just like this. I meet them. They were not "born from above" while they were here; and they are not yet "born from above," now that they are there. And, so, I meet them, and I discuss with them and teach them this principle. But I cannot beyond this, for then I will not be functioning in that sphere.

Having gone through the four dramatic scenes as discussed in Scripture, I've reached the end of the drama. But only now, while I am still anchored to this body, can I meet them at night when I put this thing (indicating the physical body) down and go to sleep. I meet my father, my mother, my brothers; and I instruct them concerning this principle. Then they are instructing themselves; and I hope here in the world you, too, will become teachers and teach, even though the body sleeps on the bed.

For, what else should one learn? If you know there is a principle by which you can be what you want to be in this world, then what else is important? And you simply lead a nice, wonderful, free life, hurting no one, and just simply doing what you consider the good as you understand it, -- when you take it to heart and do not turn back.

Test yourself every day to see whether you are holding to the faith, and the faith is not: Do I believe in the Protestant faith or the Catholic faith or the Lutheran faith or the Jewish faith. No, -- do you believe in God? For God is in you. His name is in you, and He and His name are one, and His name is: "I AM." That's God.

So, when you say, "I am Mary," all right, you have put something on it. If you say, "I am Larry," you've put something on it. But His name is "I AM." Well, you can put: "I am wealthy," "I am secure," "I am wanted," "I am wealthy," "I am happy." You can put these attributes on it, and walk in the state of consciousness that you are actually this living state that "I am happy"; and in a way that you do not even know, you'll be happy. You will be happy here while you seemingly are awake and you are happy there while you seemingly are asleep.

The day that you really awake, -- what a shock! Because if you tell the whole vast world that they are sound asleep, they won't believe it. If I tell the whole vast world tonight, "You are sound, sound asleep, and the Dreamer in you is dreaming the dream, and the Dreamer is God," they would think I'm insane. I would have told any one who told me that, that they were insane too, until the day it happened to me. And when I, the Dreamer, awoke within my skull, I wondered, Who put me here? How long have I been here? And, here, all along, I had been dreaming, and the dream seemed so objectively real -- so altogether real -- that I didn't realize it was all a dream, and that I find myself was the dreamer of the dream; and the whole vast world is simply playing the part they must play because of the nature of the dream that I was dreaming. Then I woke within myself to find who the Dreamer was. And the Dreamer was the Lord Jesus Christ!

We are told in Scripture to "leave everything and cleave to your wife until you become one"; and man things it means the woman that you marry. No. This is my emanation. This is "my wife." I must cleave to it until finally the Dreamer and the thing it's dreaming become one. But the Dreamer is the Lord Jesus Christ.

So, wherever there are two, you are one; and you can share what you've done as experience with others, but you don't go around talking about it, because if any one ever says to you: "Look, here He is," or "Look, there He is," don't believe it, for you will never really know Jesus Christ until He looks just like you. When you see Him, He's just like you, I tell you.

We are told, He is the Rock. "But of the Rock who begot you, you are unmindful and forgot the God who gave you birth." (Deuteronomy 32:18) And they ran from the supernatural rock, and the rock was Christ.

I tell you, that if the Rock of Christ is in you, -- and I know that it is, -- then the Rock is in you. And one day you will see that within that Rock there is a man; and when you see it, you will say, "Why, it is I!" You will actually see Him, and you will say, "Why it is I!"

The Rock became fragmented, and that Rock drew together all its different fragments and formed itself into the Human Form. And one day you will see it. It's a human form that is seated before you. As you look at it, it glows; it's alive, but with a face that you've never seen such a beautiful face like it before. You have never seen such strength of character with a face of majesty. You name it, -- the face has it in perfection. That is your face! It is you! And, then, the whole thing glows like the sun, and then explodes. That's the Man-in-you. And the man is the Lord Jesus Christ.

So, we're told in Scripture, if any man should say to you, "Lo, here is Christ," or "Lo, there he is," don't believe him. Why? Because when He appears, we will know Him. Why? Because He will be like you, -- just like you; your face, beautiful as it is, raised to the N^{th} degree of perfection, -- no blemish, and what character! You've never seen such strength of character as you will see on the face that is yours. You've never seen such majesty as you will see on the face that is yours, -- such beauty as on that face that is your face.

So, the Rock as told you in the 32d Chapter of Deuteronomy, is literally true. Sitting one day in the silence, contemplating nothing in particular, suddenly a rock of lovely quartz that size (indicating) came before me. I simply looked at it, not expecting anything; and suddenly it became fragmented -- broken into numberless pieces, and then, like some magnet, drew all the pieces together into a man seated in the lotus posture. I looked at him, and suddenly I'm looking at myself; and then I realize: This thing is alive, and something I could not in eternity ever hope to be -- the beauty, the majesty, -- and I'm looking at myself! And then it began to glow, and it glows and it glows like the sun; and then it explodes, and you see the rock.

You might be familiar with that lovely poem of Robert Graves:

> Hold fast with both hands
> To that One Love which alone,
> As you search the earth, restores > Fragmentation into True Being.

"That One Love which alone restores fragmentation into True Being." Yes, that Rock was fragmented; and every part of the world is but yourself fragmented; and when you reach the end, you will bring it all back into the One Being that became fragmented. And it's your being -- the Only Being.

Now, let us go into the Silence.

---oOo---

The Man Within

Wednesday, 24 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

-- by Neville

---oOo---

Tonight's subject is: The Man Within. This "Man Within" is Jesus Christ, the image of God, called in Scripture, "The Son of God." Now, unless this Christ in us is raised to ever higher and higher levels, then God cannot fulfill His purpose.

Now, listen to these words carefully, from "A Little Boy Lost" by William Blake. He said:

Nought loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know

And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door.

If God wants me to know Him as He is, He will have to raise me to the level of His own being. I must become God to know God. If He would have me to venerate Him, He has to raise me to the level of Himself. If He would have me love Him, then He would have to bring me up to the level of God, -- and we are told: God is Love. So, I could not possibly know God, love God, venerate God unless I am God. If He leaves me as I am, "like the little bird around the door," that's the only love I can show for God. That's the only respect I can have for Him.

So, there's a man in man that is God, and that one has to be raised to the level of God, for God becomes man, that man may become God.

Now, here we are told we are destined in love to be His sons through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of His will. So the office of Christ, in the Gospel, is that men may become the sons of God through grace, by union with Him who is the Son of God by nature. This is spoken of in Scripture as rebirth, -- not reincarnation, rebirth -- a higher level and a still higher level.

We have the discussion taking place in the Third Chapter of the Book of John. It's introduced out of the nowhere. Nothing leads up to it. He suddenly turns to a member of the Sanhedrin, the highest body in the Hebrew world, and he said to him, "You must be born again." The word translated " again" or "anew" mean literally "from above." It's An-o-ther, the Greek word an-o-ther. You must be born from above. Unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the Kingdom of God (John 3:3); and he heard it wondered, How can I, a man -- an old man, once more re-enter my mother's womb and be born again? And he said, "You a master of Israel, and yet you do not know that unless you are born from above, you cannot see the Kingdom of God?"

It was not explained, and when you hear it, -- and I have heard ministers and priests and rabbis discuss it, and they say, "Well, you mean, it's a change of attitude"--a change of this -- a change of that. May I tell you? It is literally true! You are born from above.

I speak from experience. I am not speculating; I am not theorizing. I had no idea this thing was so literally true, that man contains within himself this seed that is Christ. He is called the Word of God, and the Word is called the "seed." There are three stages in the history of a seed: there is the sowing, there is the dying, and then there is the quickening.

The seed is sown upon man. Man hears it with faith, and then it's planted -- it's sown. Man goes through the fires of hell in this world here; and that is the dying. A seed must fall into the ground and die before it is made alive. If it does not die, it remains alone; but if it dies, it brings forth much. This is the great mystery of life through death.

So, the seed falls; it's sown. Then it dies, and then it's raised; it's quickened. And this is the seed called the Word of God that is Jesus Christ. It's actually in man.

So, you've heard the story of God; you've heard the story of the Gospe You either accept or you reject, but unnumbered chances will be given you to hear it an to accept it because you must accept it eventually, that God's purpose be fulfilled. So, every one will one day completely accept it; and the acceptance will then, in him, prove that he can be raised from the level where he accepted it up to the level where the seed will take him, which is God Himself. So, God becomes man, that man may become God.

Now, here I have told it in my own way. Every one will tell it as he himself experiences it. With different people it appears differently, as everything else does in this world. Now, here is one from the south, in L.A., -- how it came in his case. I'm very eager to get every one to share with me their visions and their dreams, because God speaks to man through the medium of the dream, and unveils Himself through the medium of a vision.

One finds himself at the base of a great tree, and then a winding road leading up; and here, at the top of this winding road is an enormous dog, and the dog is barking at him, but he knows the dog can't injure him and will not, because he is held by his friend. The "friend" has no outline of a man, but there's a radiant light -- a fiery light, and he knows it's his friend in the vision. The man takes the dog on the leash and brings him down and passes this man who is at the base of the tree. When he gets beyond, he looses the dog, but he himself returns to the man at the base of the tree and fuses with him. This radiant fiery being enters him and becomes him; and then he, still not quite sure of the dog, moves like lightning up this winding pathway; and when he arrives at the very top, he says, "At last I'm in the top room." The dog comes up and licks his face, and then he wakes.

This is also told us by a great poet, Francis Thompson, called "The Hound of Heaven."

I chased him down the nights and down the years,
Down through the arches of the years
Through the labyrinthine ways of my own mind.

and he paints this fantastic picture of the Hound, the pursuit of God. And when he comes to the end of the poem, he now takes a rest, and the Voice beside him speaks, and he says:

Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,
I am He Whom thou seekest!
Thou dravest love from thee, who dravest Me.

Now, you and I are seeking God, and we go into unnumbered blind alleys. We think we can find Him through diet, through meditation, through joining a cer- -ism, through doing this, that and the other. All these are theblind alleys, for the One we are seeking is within. "Unless you believe that I am He, you die in your sins." (_____)

I can tell you from now to the end of time that when you say, "I am," that God, and K there never was another and never will be another; but can I persuade yo Can I persuade you to stop looking on the outside for what is within -- that Man Within, which is I Am. I can talk from now to the ends of time in the hope that I will get you at least to try it; but I can't say that I've succeeded. You, and you alone, -- like my friend who had this vision. He's been coming for years. Thi happened here recently. He suddenly t began to actually accept the fact that it really is within; and what seemed to come from without did penetrate him, and abides now within him. So the friend took up the place within himself. I call you "Friend." And, now, he's no longer a servant, seeking on the outside; now he's found Him on the inside.

So, here this man -- this Man Within that we speak of as Jesus Christ, -- can only be born from above if I am joined in supernatural union to Him Who is the Son of God by nature. So, when I stook in His presence, it's an actual union; and don't be embarrassed, -- we're all adults. It's not a sexual union; you feel no sexual act, but the most fantastic sexual act in the world is like as nothing compared to the ecstacy of the embrace of the Son of God when He embraces you. When you stand in His presence, and He asks you the simplest question in the world: to name the greatest thing in the world; and whether you knew it prior to that moment or not, you are going to answer automatically, for you are fulfilling Scripture. And you are going to say: "Faith, hope and Love, these three; but the greatest of these is Love." At that moment, He embraces you, and you fuse -- you actually come one body -- one spirit. At that moment, you have had union with he Risen Lor

Now, the seed that I contain within myself bears my image. Find the appro priate soil in which to plant it, and it will grow into the likeness of myself from which it was taken. You take a succor from a plant; try to take it from the plant.

It participates in the life of the plant, but you take it from the plant and transplant it; it becomes in its turn the parent. So the seed of God is planted in man, and that seed is called Jesus Christ. It bears the exp ress image of His person. So the seed comes to the Womb, which is man. By "man," I mean generic man. It comes in the form of a story, which is the story of the Gospel, which is the story of God. He desires to raise us to the level where we can appreciate Him, where we can venerate Him, where we can understand Him; but I can't understand Him on my present level as He ought to be understood. For, to go back to the poem ("Little Boy Lost" by William Blake):

"Nought loves another as itself."

I can't. I could sacrifice myself tonight for some one. I would willingly, for my daughter, my wife, my friends. At my age, what does it matter? If I was given no choice but, "either your life or her life," -- no, I don't think I could hesitate for a second to say, "Well, take this." But it doesn't mean because I gave my life to save my wife or my daughter or my friend that I really truly, in the depths of my soul, loved them more than I do myself. "Nought loves another as itself,

Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

"And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?"

~~How can I? I love~~ -- how can I? --
I love you like the little ~~bird~~
That picks up crumbs around the door."

You want me to venerate You? Well, then, raise me. If You want me to really understand You and know You?, well, then, raise me to the level of Your own Being. Then I can really love you, because I can't love anything in this fabulous world as I love myself. If we are big enough to admit it, we'll admit it. If you say, "Oh, no, I love God more than I love myself," then define Him for me. And you'll give me some monstrous thing that I know full well you couldn't possibly love. You are going to paint something that is not God at all. For God reveals Himself to man within man as his own wonderful I-Am-ness.

"Go and tell them I AM has sent me unto you. That's my name forever, and by this name I shall be known throughout all generations." (_____)

Well, have you found Him truly as "I Am"? I tell you, the day will come you will find Him just as I Am. And His son will stand before you and call you "father." And when the son calls you "father," and you know the truth of this relationship, then you have found God. So, there is no other god. So, He sets up in the beginning that which, when it appears in you, reveals to you that you and the One you call God are one. Until it happens, you will not know truly that you are God.

And you will know the truth of the visions of these men like a Blake and a Thompson, and you will not be cynical about it -- you won't question it; you will admit it.

Now, you dwell upon it. Do you think it's possible for "Thought a grea than itself to know"? Can it? Do you really believe that you -- the individual here this night -- that you could venerate some one more than the thing that you really are? That it's possible to love another more than love self? I tell you, when you dwell upon it and you are brutally frank with yourself and honest, your answer is: "No, I can't."

Well, now, I admit that there is a Presence that created it all, and I am, relative to this Presence, like the little bird around the door. But I would like to know Him. I'd like to know Him so I can show my appreciation and my love. Well, then, raise me. Raise me up to Your level, that I may know You as You are. Raise me up to Your level, that I may venerate You as You ought to be venerated. Raise m up, that I may love You as you ought to be loved. And, so, He has a plan. God cho us in Him before the foundation of the world, and destined us in love to be his sons through Jesus Christ, according to the purpose of His will. "Through Jesu Christ," -- well, now, that's the seed. He tells us that this is the Word of God, and the Word is the seed, and the seed is planted on man; but man becomes the soil to receive that seed, and he receives it; and then it dies -- it dies in him. He walks the earth wondering, Where is the one that I'm supposed to find? And suddenly it erupts within Him; and that moment of eruption, no one knows when it's going to happen. It's like a woman taken at the very last moment -- she doesn't know it, and suddenly she gives birth. And man is then "born from above." From that moment on, you see everything differently. You see God in an entirely different light, -- no longer on the outside. You've found Him, and you've found Him ~~within=and=you=can=tell=others~~ within; and you can tell others, and there are a few among the others that you speak to who will call you mad or call you blasphemous. It doesn't really matter to you. You only hope they will accept Him. They may turn from you and say, "He's the most arrogant person I've ever met." It's perfectly all right, because when you have the experience, you know in your heart that they are going to ~~xxxxx~~ have it, too. And when they have it, you'll be far removed from them in time and in space, but eventually you will meet. There will be no bragging, no boasting because you preceded them into the Kingdom, because in the Kingdom they all are equal. So, when they come, they come as brothers; and then you will know the words: "Nought loves a brother more." When he comes, because he's had the same experience that he has found God, and he has found himself in finding God, and you've found yourself in finding God, then you are one. And you know the words of John: "And I dwell in them, and they dwell in me, and we are one, Father, as you and I are one." ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ And may they know that You have sent me, and love them as Thou lovest me." (_____) Only one.

So, here, this Man Within -- you actually feel Him, and you find Him, although you are clothed thereafter in the same garment of flesh, and you answer to the name they all know you by. So, they call you John, and you respond. But you know in your heart of hearts who you really are; but in the world of Caesar you bear a name, and the name is John or the name is Mary, or any other name, and to that name you respond. But within yourself, having had the experience, you know who you are!

And those who come to you, you know they couldn't possibly come unless the Father within you call them. And, so, you are calling one after one after one, because they are all beginning to awake when they are coming to you. For if you have awakened, then those whom you are calling are on the verge of waking! So, I can say number down in L.A. that dozens and dozens are having the experience of ~ birth from above. Every Monday and Friday are my two nights; and in that audience dozens are having it, but they have it differently, as they have everything else differently. We all are unique in this world, though the birth is the same; but when it takes place, the symbolism alters somewhat. The imagery changes somewhat. But it's all towards the awakening and the unfolding of the God-Within-Us.

So, when we are told, "Christ in you is the hope of glory," it's an actual fact, --When I speak of Christ in you as the hope of glory.

Now, in Scripture, when I tell ministers and rabbis and priests the story, they look at me as though to say, "What on earth did you ever study? Where is your theology?" Did you go to any college to study it?" Well, I never heard that in school when I studied theology!" Well, as far as I'm concerned, it is not something I studied in a book. I never heard it from a man, never read it in a book. It ~ by revelation. If it doesn't fit what you have heard, I would ask you to consider it anyway, because you have heard it from a man. How do you know what you heard from man was revelation? Could it not be the traditions of men, where men sat down to conceive and compose what they consider a workable philosophy of life; and this they considered the right thing, and then they gave it out as vision. But it isn't a vision at all. I am telling you what I've actually had by revelation. By "revelation," I mean God unveiling Himself in me as me.

And, so, when I tell you that Jesus Christ is God the Father, you will say, "No, he is God the Son." I'm tell you, He is God the Father. And as G the Father, He has to have a son, for He would not be a father without a son. Then you say, "But Jesus Christ has no son. He is the Son of God." And I tell you, He is God Himself! And God being a father, He has to have a son.

Now, I'll tell you who His son is. And this always startles them. His is David. David of Biblical fame, that's the son of the Lord Jesus Christ. They'd go through the ceiling, they are so afraid of what I'm talking about.

Then I turn to Scripture and say, Now to whom are these words addressed?

They are taken from the Second Psalm. "And David said, I will tell of the decree of the Lord. He said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee." Do you want to know where you'll find it? In the Second Psalm, the 7th verse. There you'll find it, written one thousand years B.C. Ah Here is a blueprint of what man is going to experience, for the whole story is the story of Christ. So, the whole thing is foretold until the time is fulfilled when God begins to awake within man.

Well, if God is a father, then show me his son. It's stated in the Second Psalm who His son must be when he appears to reveal God to man, -- and he appears in man.

Now, in the Books of Luke and Matthew there was no reason to bring it up if you read the chapter carefully. Take the 20th Chapter of the Book of Luke, or the 22d of the Book of Matthew; and here they are discussing something entirely different. The Sadducees said to him, "Master, Moses Moses in the law said that if a man marries and dies leaving no offspring, and he has a brother, that the brother should marry the widow and raise up offspring for the brother. Now, there were seven brothers. One married. The first married, and he died leaving no offspring. The second took her; he died, leaving no offspring. Then the third took her, and eventually all married her, and finally all dies, and then she died, and there was no offspring. Tell me, whose wife is she in the resurrection?"

Now, the question was asked by the Sadducees. We are told, the Sadducees were of the ancient world what the modern agnostic or atheist, or the extreme scientist who is looking for tangible proof of the existence of God, or something in man that could survive cremation. You cremate the body, and you see it turn to dust. What on earth could survive that? So, the mind who entertains that thought is called the Sadducee in Scripture. Not believing in the resurrection, he asks the question; and this is the answer:

"The sone of this age marry, and they are given in marriage; but those who are accounted worthy to attain to That Age and to the Resurrection from the dead, they neither marry, nor are they given in marriage, for they can die no more. They are now sons of the resurrection, therefore sons of God," -- implying until that takes place in man, man as he appears to die isn't really dead. He is restored to life to continue the journey, and he dies again; restored, continues the journey, and dies again. Not reincarnation, -- not what the world talks about reincarnation; but simply restoration, continuing in a body just like this, just as before, in a world, terrestrial just like this, aging just as we do here, making our departure from that world as we do here; but that world is part of this world. He only speaks of two ages.

So, my world here does not terminate at the point where my senses cease to register it. So, I meet some one at this very moment. They drop dead. I go to their funeral; I see the dust. They give me a little urn. She was turned into little ashes. But I can't touch her now, I can't talk to her, I can't see her; but that world does not end. It doesn't terminate at that point in time where my senses cease to register it. She is restored in a body just as before, new -- not a baby, but new -- young; not a thing missing. It's unaccountably new! She continues her journey, and she marries, as she did here; and she lives her life there as she lived it here; and she matures and grows old, and she dies there as she died here, to find herself restored once more to coontinue the journey, just as before. No loss of identity. Then comes this moment in time where man is "born from above." As he is born from above, he goes through the series of events leading up to the discovery of the Fatherhood of God, which is himself! Then he departs this age forever. He no longer is restored to life. When men call him "dead," he has entered the Kingdom of God, and his body is not the body of flesh and blood, for it cannot enter the Kingdom of God. That body is the body of Glory, his immortal body that cannot die. Every one has that body, awaiting the discovery of the Fatherhood of God, and he discovers it within himself when God's Son calls him, "father."

Now, after the discussion with the Sadducees, he brings up a point, and it's not at all related to the chapter, either the 22d of Matthew /t/ or the 20th of Luke, where you find the story. After he answers the Sadducees, he then asks the question: "What think ye of the Christ? Whose son is he?" For tradition had it that he was the son of David; so they answered, "The son of David." Then he comes back and says, "Why, then, did David in the spirit call him, Lord? If David thus calls him, My Lord, how can he be David's son?" So, he discounts the fact that he is David's son. He doesn't tell them, but he does tell them "David called him, My Lord." Well, the ancient son always spoke of his father as "my lord," -- always referred to his father as "my lord."

So, he is telling you in his own wonderful mystical way who David is relative to him. David is his son! That is set up in the beginning in that Second Psalm: "David calls him, Father."

The 89th Psalm makes the statement: "I have found David," Ps. 89:20 "and" He has cried unto me, Thou art my father, my God and the Rock of my salvation." (Psalm 89:26) Now, these are mysteries, but the mysteries of Scripture are not matters to be kept secret. They are truths that are mysterious in character.

So, when you read it and you take it as secular history, you'll never get the point.

Read it carefully, dwell upon it, and try to understand, "hat is he trying to get at in this point? Well, he is trying to reveal who he is. He tells now in the Bood of John when some one said to him -- Philip said to him, "Master," -- or, he calls him "Lord," -- he said, "Show us the Father, and we will be satisfied. He said I have been so long with you, and yet you do not know me, Philip? He who has seen me has seen the Father. How, then, can you say, Show us the Father?" (John 14:8,9)

He tells you he's the Father. In spite of that, after two thousand years of theology, -- which is not really theology in the true sense of the word, which is the knowledge of God, what the word would imply, -- it is nothing more than the traditions of men. Man has a certain set concept of what God ought to have done, and he teaches it as theology, ordaining people, and out they go to continue the lie. For it's not based upon the truth of Scripture.

Some lady came to me once, about six weeks ago. At the end of the meeting she came forward; she said, "I will take your theories under consideration."

I said, "Well, thank you very much."

Then she said to me, "You know, I'm an ordained minister."

I said, "That's very nice."

She said, "Are you ordained?"

I said, "Not by man, no. Undoubtedly you were ordained by a man, weren't you?"

She said, "By a minister."

"Well, was he a man?"

"Oh, yes."

"Well, then, he was a man, and you call him a minister. Well, all right, he was a minister, and he's a man. Let me tell you, they are not theories. You say I will take my theories under consideration. I speak from experience. I'm not speculating. I'm not theorizing." ¶ I am telling you what I know from experience; and that which a man knows from experience he knows more thoroughly than he knows anything else in this world, or than he can know that same thing in any other way. Now, you've heard me tonight, and you call it a theory. You can't deny that you heard it; therefore, you can say, Well I know what he said; but you know it as hearsay. You don't know it from experience. The day will come, you will know what I'm saying to be true, because you will know it from experience. Until you have experienced it, it is still only to you theory, -- something that some one said, and it's hearsay. So, you are going to go home and take it under consideration. Well, you go and take it under consideration. ¶ Now, one day, in God's infinite mercy, He will unveil Himself within you; and you will find that you, in spite of your present sex, will be God the Father. And it will not embarrass you. Although you now wear the garment of a woman, you will find that you are really the Eternal Man, and that Eternal Man is God. God is man. And I'm telling you, I know that from experience. You stand in the presence of Infinite Love, and it's man. He wants me to know Him? All right, raise me as that same Man. Don't leave me on the level of the bird, where I can only see You through the eyes of the bird and be satisfied with the crumbs, -- not knowing that He will throw the crumbs out, that you were great (?) to get the crumbs, -- I'm not even grateful for them. I take them, because there they are, and you gave me the appetite as a to eat them; so I ate them; but I do not know where they came from, and I'm not concerned. I'm a bird.

So, we go into the field, and we reap our harvest; and we don't even know how it came into being. If we planted a little corn, we have an ear of corn. We do not know the mystery behind the growth of the corn; and so I cannot know You until You raise me to His level Who grew the corn, and then I will know. Until then, I am simply the bird "feeding on the crumbs around the door." For nought can know, and -- ~~Nought can know and~~ Nought loves another as itself,

Or venerates another so,
Nor is it possible for Thought

A greater than itself to know."

So, Father, do You want me to know YOU? Lift me up.

Well, He has made a plan. The plan is contained in what He calls Jesus Christ. He has made known unto me the purpose -- His purpose -- which is set forth in Christ as a plan for the fulness of time. Well, if Christ is in us, then the plan is in us! For He said He set forth the plan in Christ for the fulness of time (_____) So, when that time comes, then it erupts and the shell is broken, and all that is contained in the plan comes forward in a first-person present-tense experience, and then we know who we are.

Then it doesn't matter after that when we depart this life. Whether we go this moment or ten years from now, it doesn't really matter. We feel L like Paul? "I wish I could, moment after moment, depart," said he. "I desire to depart and be with Christ. That's far, far better; but, for your sake, it is better that I remain, and tell you of the Word of God." But he desired to depart. Having fulfilled Scripture, what else can you do? There's not a thing in this world for man to do but to fulfill Scripture, -- not to build on the sands of time, for all things vanish, but to fulfill Scripture. So, when Scripture is fulfilled in man, he has not a thing left, but to tell it; and he will find those who are eager to hear it, those who will turn a deaf ear to it, but it doesn't really matter. In the fulness of time who don't turn their backs upon it will eagerly seek it, and then it will come. Some one else will carry on, and they will plant the seed and they will pick it up.

So, here, this Man Within is the same man spoken of in Scripture that carries the plan of God -- the pattern, and that is Christ Jesus. "Christ in us is the hope of glory."

And, so, he contains the pattern. He is the pattern man. Paul, in his letter to Timothy said, "Hold fast the pattern of the true word which you heard from me," for he told the story as he himself experienced it; and as he stated in Galatians, and said, "If any man changes one word of it, let him be accursed, for this is not something I composed; this is something that came through the revelation of Jesus Christ. I didn't hear it from a man; I wasn't taught it by a man. It came through the revelation of Jesus Christ."

So, I am telling you who you really are. You are God, keyed low -- to the level of the bird feeding on crumbs; but within you is a pattern, and that pattern is contained in the seed of God, and that seed is Jesus Christ. It is as much the seed of God, in the true sense of the word, as my sperm contains my image. And finding the proper womb in which to place it, my image will come out and be projected on the screen of space. But God found in us the proper womb, and He buried, through Jesus Christ, His pattern.

So, I say it is His purpose, His office, to actually turn men into sons of God by grace, through union with Him who is the Son of God by nature. Now, here is the perfect seed of God, called Jesus Christ. Buried in me, it sort of takes a graft; and like the little succor of the plant, although it lives upon the tree until detached, and partakes of the life of the tree, when once detached and transplanted, it becomes in its turn the parent. So, he takes his seed and transplants it, engrafts it, into man; and then that transplant in its good time becomes the parent, and the parent is God the Father; and, therefore, the same son that called Him "father," must call me "father." Then I will know that I am He; and there is no other way of knowing it.

"No one knows who the Father is but the Son, and no one knows who the Son is but the Father." Well, if no one in this world knows who the son is but the Father, then show me my son. Show me my Father, and when He comes, I'm He!

So, the Old Testament ends upon the note: "If a son honors his father, and I am a father, , where is my honor?" In other words, Where is my son? You read that in the First Chapter of the last book of the Old Testament, the Book of Malachi. "Where is my son?"

Now, you turn over the pages, and the New Testament gives the answer, for here is the Son and he comes; but the whole book is a sealed book -- completely sealed, and no one knew how to break the seal, for it's broken from within, it's not broken from without.

So this Being of whom I speak, which is the Being of whom you have heard time and time again as something external to yourself, is really the seed of God, the sperm God, planted in you. Therefore, if Mary carries the sperm of God to bear this Heavenly creature, then you must be Mary! For, you're carrying the sperm of God. So, in this very body, -- I don't mean this body of flesh and blood, but in that Something-Within, I bear, and have borne, the Son of God. He came out and stood before me and called me, "Father."

Now, let us go into the silence. Good.

Now, are there any questions, please?

Question: Neville, is it necessary to understand all these things before we have the experience of them?

Answer: No, I wouldn't say that at all. The question was: Is it necessary to understand all these things intellectually before you have the experiences? No. I do know that a hunger comes upon man that only an experience of God can satisfy. When that hunger comes, nothing diverts you; and you will find an interest in God's book, called the Bible, that no one seems to see. Others carry it for show. You'll find these ladies on the street in their robes, belonging to a certain Order, -- they always have a Bible in their hand, but it is closed. In New York City, they are riding the subway and they have the Bible in their hands. They think that's the Word of God, and they carry it as you would a piece of paper. What do they know about a thing that is contained in the Book. If you don't carry it that way; you go home, and you read it. I spend six and seven hours a day, seven days a week, reading my Bible There are only 66 books in it, but I never tire of it. I never tire of it. I brought two books here. When I went to New York City last summer, I carried two books. When I went to Barbados for three months, I carried the same two books. One was the Bible, and one was the Complete Works of Blake. That's all that I carried, and I have found in these two a library. First of all, there are many books in the Complete Works of Blake, and there are sixty-six books in the Bible. Well, that's a nice library. But you don't have to know it intellectually, -- it just happens, it comes; and when it breaks upon you, the whole vast world could rise in opposition, and it makes no difference to you whatsoever, -- none. You know what has happened, and you can't undo it. And you also know that all the world could not undo what God has done in you, and you have assurance. It doesn't really matter what argument they give you; they can't undo -- not in Eternity -- what God has done in you. And you are told: "He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion." When? At the day of Jesus Christ, -- at the unveiling of Christ within you.

Any other questions, please?

Question: What would this indicate: a fish coming out of the water and embracing someone?

Answe/r: A fish comigg out of the water and embraces some one? Well, first of all, the fish has always been the symbol of Christ. Water has been th symbol of truth !! psychological truth. And, so, if the fish comes out, man -- I wouldn't say has ceased to apply it psychologically, but he is going to turn it now into wine. As we are told in Timothy: "Drink no more water, but use a little wine for your stomach's sake," and your many infirmities." In other words, it doesn't mean, I will stop drinking water; but there are three symbols of truth. The first is the stone. That's the literal fact that is difficult to digest. Man can't understand it, for the stories are all parables, -- they are all allegories, and an allegory or a parable is a story told as if it were true, leaving the one who hears it or reads it to discover its fictitious character and learn its lesson. Well, the average person can't break that stone. He can't turn it into water and learn the lesson.

Now, if I should take a story and give you the psychological meaning so you can apply it towards the world of Caesar, I give you water. I offer you a s of water in the name of Christ by showing you the psychological meaning of the story. But don't stop there .

Take it and apply it, -- you are the operant power. As you apply it, you are turning the water into wine. So, it's stone, water, wine.

So, if the fish comes out, which is the symbol of Christ, and then embraces some one, -- well, he comes out of the water, which is his normal, natural habitat. Water being the psychological meaning, now he's coming out into the more living state. That's the interpretation I would give to that dream. God speaks to me, to you, and to the whole vast world through the medium of dreams, as told you in the Twelfth Chapter of the Book of Numbers.

Any other questions? We have plenty of time.

Question: What is the meaning of snakes in a dream? (most of questi is inaudible on the tape).

Answer: The lady dreamt that snakes were chasing her. I know that man has a strange concept and feeling towards snakes, and it goes back to the story in the Third Chapter of Genesis where the snake, the wisest of all God's creatures, deceived woman -- deceived her into believing she would not die. That's the story that is told: "For the serpent said to her, Did God say to you that you would die? And she said, Yes, if I ate of a certain tree -- the fruit of a certain tree. And he said, Well, God knows you would not really die -- not surely die." You see, the snake did not deceive her at all, because if you read the story carefully, you will find that this is said: "And God said, The man has become like one of us, knowing good and evil"; so he did not deceive her. He said, You'll become of the gods, knowing good and evil if you did it. And, so, the snake is not really what the world has believed it to be. As you are told in the Third of John: "And as Moses lifted up the ~~snake~~ serpent in the wilderness, so must the son of man be lifted up." So, he identifies himself with the serpent, for he calls himself the Son of Man; and he must be lifted up in the same way that the serpent was lifted up in the wilderness, and that's an actual, literal fact. It's the symbol of the Son of Man. But the Son of Man, on a certain level, scares man.

If you thought this very moment that your every thought -- your every emotion -- was exposed to the eye of God, you'd be scared to death. You would not live. But knowing that He can't see you, or thinking that He can't see you, you can entertain all the unlovely thoughts of the world, -- thinking now that I am hidden from the eye of God. But if you actually knew that you are not hidden at all -- you are completely exposed -- your every thought, your every mood -- to the eye of God, -- a man wants a shelter from God; so he runs from the Serpent. But in the end, you will find that is the perfect symbol of the Son of Man.

Any other questions, please?

Question: Is there any special significance in having seven brothers marrying the widow?

Answer: Seven is the spiritual number of perfection -- spiritual perfection. All numbers have significance, and seven is spiritual perfection, because on the seventh day he finished; he rested, satisfied with all that was done. The eighth is a new beginning, the resurrection. So, seven -- here here is the work; it's done. Now, whose wife is she? You can't undo it; it's all done done, for they are all dead and she's dead. Now, give me the answer, and He tells them, You don do not understand Scripture. If you understood Scripture, you would not have asked, for only in this age do men marry and are they given in marriage; only in this age do they die. When they attain to That Age, -- which is the resurrection from the dead, -- they cannot marry, or are they given in marriage. They are creative beings, not split into two -- male and female; they are Man. Man differs from male, and man differs from female. Man is God, wearing garments of "male", "female." But Man, in the resurrection, is above the organization of sex; he's neither male nor female. He's Man.

~~cause in seven days He finished~~

Question: What of the unnumbered crowds in the world who are not seeking what we here are seeking?

Answer: Well, first of all, until the hunger is upon them, they cannot really seek Him. "No man comes unto Me, except my Father calls him." And when my Father calls him, I will not cast him away. Now, we are told in the Book of Amos: "I will send a hunger -- a famine upon the land. It will not be a hunger for bread or a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the word of God." (Amos 8:11) And when that hunger is upon you, not a thing in this world can satisfy that hunger but an experience of God. So, until that hunger is upon you, you can have all the things thrown at you of that nature and it doesn't appeal to you. Go into a restaurant and you have a complete hunger for a certain item, and not a thing else on the menu appeals; you want that item. Well, when the hunger of God is upon you, you only want to feast upon Him; and you are going to eat His body and drink His blood. The body, in a physical sense, is that book -- the Bible, and you extract it. When you extract the life of it, you are drinking His blood; and then comes an experience, and you'o'll have the experience of God. And you will know that every one is going to have it eventually; but He calls us all in His own good time, one by one by one, as He builds His living temple out of living stones, -- a life-giving spirit, not just animated body. But the world now, -- it's all an animate body. We are destined to be life-giving spirits, where there is life in us, for we are the Father. As the Father has life in Himself, so He has granted to the Son also to have life in himself. Then, you'll be the power animating the world, -- not being animated by a power external to yourself.

May I suggest that my last book, -- it's called "Resurrection," -- that you read that book. I've told it just as it happened to me. I told it in the third person most of the time because I thought that people would accept it more readily than if I told it in the first person. I could have told the entire thing in the first person pk present; I only told snatches of it in the first person. But I told it in the third person, that a man picking it up for the first time, not knowing me, would be more -- I would say -- amenable to the story if he read it in the third person. But I wish you would read it. It's the true story of Christmas -- of the Resurrection -- of the discovery of the Fatherhood of God, -- of the ascent of the Son of Man into Heaven, as it actually takes place. I've told it from my own personal experience.

Well, until tomorrow night, thank you.

---oOo---

The Man Within

Wednesday, 24 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

by Neville

—oOo—

This "man within" is Jesus Christ, called in Scripture, "The Son of God."

Unless this "man" within us is awakened to ever greater awareness, God cannot fulfill His purpose.

"A Little Boy Lost" by William Blake (from "Songs of Experience")

"Nought loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

"And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door."

* *

If God wants me to know Him as He is, He will have to raise me to His level.

If He will have me love Him, He will have to raise me to the level of God.

If He leaves me like I am, like the little bird at the door, then that is all I can show Him.

The office of Christ in the Gospels is that man may become Christ . . .

John 3:3. ". . . Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

You must be born again. (You must be born anew.) The Greek word for "again" and "anew" means "from above."

It is literally true that you will be born "from above."

Man contains within himself the seed of God.

A seed has three stages: Planting -- man's belief.
Dies -- man going through the furnaces of affliction he Quickening

Unnumbered opportunities will be given you to hear and accept.

The acceptance in you proves that you can be raised to the level of God.

God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and reveals Himself through the medium of visions.

"The Hound of Heaven" by Francis Thompson (English poet) is the way the vision appeared to me.

Unless you believe that I am He, you will die in your sins.

We must actually accept the fact that He is within and find Him as friend, inste

DUPLICATE? NOTES OF 7-24-68

The Man Within

Wednesday, 24 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

by Neville

—oOo—

This "man within" is Jesus Christ, called in Scripture, "The Son of God."
Unless this "man" within us is awakened to ever greater awareness, God cannot fulfill His purpose.

"A Little Boy Lost" by William Blake (from "Songs of Experience")

"Nought loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

"And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door."

* *

√ If God wants me to know Him as He is, He will have to raise me to His level.
If He will have me love Him, He will have to raise me to the level of God.
If He leaves me like I am, like the little bird at the door, then that is all I can show Him.

The office of Christ in the Gospels is that man may become Christ . . .
John 3:3. ". . . Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."
You must be born again. (/) The Greek word for "again" and "anew" means
You must be born anew. "from above."
It is literally true that you will be born "from above."
Man contains within himself the seed of God.
A seed has three stages: Planting -- man's belief.
Dies -- man going through the furnaces of affliction he Quickening

√ Numbered opportunities will be given you to hear and accept.
The acceptance in you proves that you can be raised to the level of God.
God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and reveals Himself through the medium of visions.
The [illegible] Thompson (English poet) is the way the [illegible]

√ Unless [illegible] you will die in your sins.

We must [illegible] that He is within and [illegible]

of searching for Him on the outside, as a servant.

First Corinthians 13:13. "And now abideth faith, hope, love; but the greatest these is love."

The moment you say this in a vision, you fuse with God.

The "seed" God planted in man is Jesus Christ. It comes in the form of a story.

I cannot love anything in this world more than I love myself.

Have you heard Him actually as "I Am"?

His son will stand before you and call you, "father."

✓ Don't be cynical about it, or doubt it; believe it.

It is not possible to love "another" more than yourself.

✓ Jesus Christ is the Word of God, and that is the "seed" which is planted within ma

Suddenly it erupts from within man, and from this moment you see everythin in an entirely different light.

You find yourself in finding God.

You actually feel this man within, and you find him; but in the world of Caesar yo seem to be the same.

Those who come to you, you know they couldn't possibly come, save the h er in you call them.

We are all unique in this world, but when it takes place, the birth is the same, but the symbolism is different with each one.

How do you know that what you have heard from within is revelation or tradition?

Jesus Christ is God the Father -- not God the Son.

He (Jesus Christ) has to have a son.

David is the son of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Psalm 2:7. "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me: Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee."

Written one thousand years B.C.

Luke 20/Matthew 22 :23. The Sadducees say there is no resurrection

Sadducees = modern agnostics, atheists or scientists who want to know what can survive the cremation of the body.

Not reincarnation, but restoration.

As man is born from above, he goes through a series of events leading to his discovery of the fatherhood of God.

Matthew 22:42. "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is? They say unto him, The son of David."

Psalm 89:20. "I have found David . . . "

The mysteries of Scripture are not matters to be kept secret; they are truths that are mysterious to us.

"Show us the Father," says Philip. (John 14:8)

One day God, in His infinite mercy, will unveil Himself to you, and you will find that you are God the Father (regardless of your present sex).

Until that time, , I am merely the little bird "eating the crumbs around the door."

God's purpose is set forth in ~~the fulness of Christ~~ Christ for the fulness of God.

This comes forth in the first-person-singular/present-tense experience.

There is not a thing in this world for man to do but to fulfill Scripture.

I Timothy 1:6 "Hold fast the pattern: . . ." → over

The same Son who calls Him Father must call me "father"; this is the only way I can know that I am ~~God~~ He.

Malachi, first verse of last chapter. Malachi 4:1 →

In answer to a question: It isn't necessary to understand all these things intelligently in order to have the experience.

When it happens within you, the whole vast world cannot undo what God has done in you.

Fish = the symbol of Christ
Water = symbol of truth

Question: What does a fish coming out of water.

Stone = literal truth

We have to discover the fictitious character.

Water = psychological truth.
Wine

~~Snake~~
Snake = symbol of the Son of Man; but on a certain level this frightens us.

Man wants a shelter from God as he runs from the snake or serpent.

7 = spiritual perfection.
8 = symbol of a new beginning

Man is God wearing the garments of "male" and "female," but he differs from a man or a woman.

When the hunger (spoken of in Amos 8:11) comes upon you, not a thing will satisfy you except the knowledge and experience of God. → over

You are the power animating the world, not a being animated by an outside power.

The Hound of Heaven

I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him down the arches of the years;
I fled Him down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the midst of tears
I hid from Him and under running laughter.
Up vistaed hopes I sped;
And shot, precipitated
Adown titanic glooms of chasmèd fears,
From those strong Feet that followed, followed after.
But with unhurrying chase
And unperturbèd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat — and a Voice beat
More instant than the Feet —
"All things betray thee, who betrayest Me."

I pleaded, outlaw-wise,
By many a hearted casement, curtained red,
Trellised with intertwining charities;
(For, though I knew His love Who followèd,
Yet I was sore adread
Lest having Him I must have naught beside;)
But, if one little casement parted wide,
The gust of His approach would clash it to.
Fear wist not to evade as Love wist to pursue.
Across the margent of the world I fled,
And troubled the gold gateways of the stars,
Smiting for shelter on their clangèd bars;
Fretted to dulcet jars
And silvern chatter the pale ports o' the moon.
I said to dawn, Be sudden; to eve, Be soon;
With thy young skyey blossoms heap me over
From this tremendous Lover!
Float thy vague veil about me, lest He see!
I tempted all His servitors, but to find
My own betrayal in their constancy,
In faith to Him their fickleness to me,
Their traitorous trueness, and their loyal deceit.
To all swift things for swiftness did I sue;

Clung to the whistling mane of every wind.
But whether they swept, smoothly fleet,
The long savannahs of the blue;
Or, whether, thunder-driven,
They clanged His chariot 'thwart a heaven
Plashy with flying lightnings round the spurn o' their feet; --
Fear wist not to evade as Love wist to pursue.
Still with unhurrying chase
And unperturbèd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
Came on the following Feet,
And a Voice above their beat --
"Naught shelters thee, who wilt not shelter Me."

I sought no more that after which I strayed,
In face of man or maid;
But still within the little children's eyes
Seems something, something that replies;
They are at least for me, surely for me!
I turned me to them very wistfully;
But just as their young eyes grew sudden fair
With dawning answers there,
Their angel plucked them from me by the hair.
"Come, then, ye other children -- Nature's -- share
With me" (said I) "your delicate fellowship;
Let me greet you, lip to lip,
Let me twine you with caresses,
Wantoning
With our Lady Mother's vagrant tresses,
Underneath her azure dais,
Quaffing, as your taintless way is,
From a chalice
Lucent-weeping out of the dayspring."
So it was done:
I in their delicate fellowship was one --
Drew the belt of nature's secrecies.
I knew all the swift importings
Of the wilful face of the skies,
I knew how the clouds arise
Spumèd of the wild sea snortings;
All that's born or dies

Rose and drooped with -- made them shapers
Of mine own moods, or wailful or Divine --
With them joyed or was bereaven.
I was heavy with the even
When she lit her glimmering tapers
Round the day's dead sanctities.
I laughed in the morning's eyes.
I triumphed and I saddened with all weather,
Heaven and I wept together
And its sweet tears were salt with mortal mine;
Against the red throb of its insect-heart
I laid my own to beat,
And share commingling heat;
But not by that, by that, was eased my human smart.
In vain my tears were wet on Heaven's grey cheek.
For ah! we know not what each other says,
These things and I; in sound I speak --
Their sound is but their stir, they speak by silences.
Nature, poor stepdame, cannot slake my drouth;
Let her, if she would owe me,
Drop yon blue bosom-veil of sky, and show me
The breasts o' her tenderness:
Never did any milk of hers once bless
My trusting mouth.
Nigh and nigh draws the chase
With unperturbèd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy;
And past those noisèd Feet
A voice comes more fleet --
"Lo, naught contents thee, who content'st not Me."

Naked I wait thy love's uplifted stroke.
My harness, piece by piece, thou hast hewn from me.
And smitten me to my knee;
I am defenseless utterly.
I slept, methinks, and woke
And slowly gazing, find me stripped in sleep.
In the rash lustihood of my young powers,
I stood the pillaring hours
And pulled my life upon me; grimed with smears
I stand amid the dust o' the mounded years --

My mangled youth lies dead beneath the heap.
My days have crackled and gone up in smoke,
Have puffed and burst as as sun-starts on a stream.
    Yea, faileth now even dream
The dreamer, and the lute the lutanist;
Even the linked fantasies in whose blossomy twist
I swung the earth, a trinket at my wrist,
Are yielding; cords of all too weak account
For earth with heavy griefs so overplussed.
    Ah! is Thy love indeed
A weed, albeit an amaranthine weed,
Suffering no flowers except its own to mount?
    Ah! must —
    Designer Infinite! —
Ah, must Thou char the wood ere Thou canst limn with it?

My freshness spent its wavering shower i' the dust;
And now my heart is as a broken fount,
Wherein tear-droppings stagnate, spilt down ever
    From the dark thoughts that shiver
Upon the sughful branches of my mind.
    Such is; what is to be?
The pulp so bitter, how shall taste the rind?
I dimly guess what Time in mists confounds;
Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity;
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then
Round the half-glimpsèd turrets slowly wash again.
    But not ere him who summoneth
    I first have seen, enwound
With glooming robes purpureal, cypress-crowned;
His name I know and what his trumpet saith.
Whether man's heart or life it be which yields
    Thee harvest, must Thy harvest fields
    Be dunged with rotten death?

        Now of that long pursuit
        Comes on at hand the bruit;
That Voice is round me like a bursting sea::
        "And is thy earth so marred,
        Shattered in shard on shard?

Lo, all things fly thee, for thou flyest Me!
Strange, piteous. futile thing,
Wherefore should any set thee love apart?
Seeing none but I makes much of naught" (He said),
"And human love needs human meriting:
How hast thou merited —
Of all man's clotted clay the the dingiest clot?
Alack, thou knowest not
How little worthy of any love thou art!
Whom wilt thou find to love ignoble thee
Save Me, save only Me?
All which I took from thee, I did not take
Not for thy harms,
But just that thou mightst seek it in My arms.
All which thy child's mistake
Fancies as lost, I have stored for thee at home:
Rise, clasp My hand and come!"

Halts by me that footfall:
Is my gloom, after all,
Shade of His hand, outstretched caressingly?
"Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,
I am He Whom thou seekest!
Thou dravest love from thee, who dravest Me."

— Francis Thompson

The Man Within

Wednesday, 24 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

by Neville

—oOo—

This "man within" is Jesus Christ, called in Scripture, "The Son of God."

Unless this "man" within us is awakened to ever greater awareness, God cannot fulfill His purpose.

"A Little Boy Lost" by William Blake (from "Songs of Experience")

"Nought loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

"And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door."

* *

If God wants me to know Him as He is, He will have to raise me to His level.

If He will have me love Him, He will have to raise me to the level of God.

If He leaves me like I am, like the little bird at the door, then that is all I can show Him.

The office of Christ in the Gospels is that man may become Christ . . .

John 3:3. ". . . Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

You must be born again. (You must be born anew.) The Greek word for "again" and "anew" means "from above."

It is literally true that you will be born "from above."

Man contains within himself the seed of God.

A seed has three stages: Planting -- man's belief.
Dies -- man going through the furnaces of affliction he Quickening

Unnumbered opportunities will be given you to hear and accept.

The acceptance in you proves that you can be raised to the level of God.

God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and reveals Himself through the medium of visions.

"The Hound of Heaven" by Francis Thompson (English poet) is the way the vision appeared to me.

Unless you believe that I am He, you will die in your sins.

We must actually accept the fact that He is within and find Him as friend, inste

DUPLICATE? NOTES OF 7-24-68

The Man Within

Wednesday, 24 July 1968
Marines' Memorial Club
San Francisco, California

by Neville

—oOo—

This "man within" is Jesus Christ, called in Scripture, "The Son of God."
Unless this "man" within us is awakened to ever greater awareness, God cannot fulfill His purpose.

"A Little Boy Lost" by William Blake (from "Songs of Experience")

"Nought loves another as itself,
Nor venerates another so,
Nor is it possible to Thought
A greater than itself to know:

"And Father, how can I love you
Or any of my brothers more?
I love you like the little bird
That picks up crumbs around the door."

* *

√ If God wants me to know Him as He is, He will have to raise me to His level.
If He will have me love Him, He will have to raise me to the level of God.
If He leaves me like I am, like the little bird at the door, then that is all I can show Him.

The office of Christ in the Gospels is that man may become Christ . . .
John 3:3. ". . . Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."
You must be born again. (/) The Greek word for "again" and "anew" means
You must be born anew. "from above."
It is literally true that you will be born "from above."
Man contains within himself the seed of God.
A seed has three stages: Planting -- man's belief.
Dies -- man going through the furnaces of affliction he Quickening

√ Numbered opportunities will be given you to hear and accept.
The acceptance in you proves that you can be raised to the level of God.
God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and reveals Himself through the medium of visions.
The [illegible] Thompson (English poet) is the way the [illegible]

√ Unless [illegible] you will die in your sins.

We must [illegible] that He is within and [illegible]

of searching for Him on the outside, as a servant.

First Corinthians 13:13. "And now abideth faith, hope, love; but the greatest these is love."

The moment you say this in a vision, you fuse with God.

The "seed" God planted in man is Jesus Christ. It comes in the form of a story.

I cannot love anything in this world more than I love myself.

Have you heard Him actually as "I Am"?

His son will stand before you and call you, "father."

✓ Don't be cynical about it, or doubt it; believe it.

It is not possible to love "another" more than yourself.

✓ Jesus Christ is the Word of God, and that is the "seed" which is planted within ma

Suddenly it erupts from within man, and from this moment you see everythin in an entirely different light.

You find yourself in finding God.

You actually feel this man within, and you find him; but in the world of Caesar yo seem to be the same.

Those who come to you, you know they couldn't possibly come, save the h er in you call them.

We are all unique in this world, but when it takes place, the birth is the same, but the symbolism is different with each one.

How do you know that what you have heard from within is revelation or tradition?

Jesus Christ is God the Father -- not God the Son.

He (Jesus Christ) has to have a son.

David is the son of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Psalm 2:7. "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me: Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee."

Written one thousand years B.C.

Luke 20/Matthew 22 :23. The Sadducees say there is no resurrection

Sadducees = modern agnostics, atheists or scientists who want to know what can survive the cremation of the body.

Not reincarnation, but restoration.

As man is born from above, he goes through a series of events leading to his discovery of the fatherhood of God.

Matthew 22:42. "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is? They say unto him, The son of David."

Psalm 89:20. "I have found David . . . "

The mysteries of Scripture are not matters to be kept secret; they are truths that are mysterious to us.

"Show us the Father," says Philip. (John 14:8)

One day God, in His infinite mercy, will unveil Himself to you, and you will find that you are God the Father (regardless of your present sex).

Until that time, , I am merely the little bird "eating the crumbs around the door."

God's purpose is set forth in ~~the fulness of Christ~~ Christ for the fulness of God.

This comes forth in the first-person-singular/present-tense experience.

There is not a thing in this world for man to do but to fulfill Scripture.

I Timothy 1:6 "Hold fast the pattern: . . ." → over

The same Son who calls Him Father must call me "father"; this is the only way I can know that I am ~~God~~ He.

Malachi, first verse of last chapter. Malachi 4:1 →

In answer to a question: It isn't necessary to understand all these things intelligently in order to have the experience.

When it happens within you, the whole vast world cannot undo what God has done in you.

Fish = the symbol of Christ
Water = symbol of truth

Question: What does a fish coming out of water.

Stone = literal truth

We have to discover the fictitious character.

Water = psychological truth.
Wine

~~Snake~~
Snake = symbol of the Son of Man; but on a certain level this frightens us.

Man wants a shelter from God as he runs from the snake or serpent.

7 = spiritual perfection.
8 = symbol of a new beginning

Man is God wearing the garments of "male" and "female," but he differs from a man or a woman.

When the hunger (spoken of in Amos 8:11) comes upon you, not a thing will satisfy you except the knowledge and experience of God. → over

You are the power animating the world, not a being animated by an outside power.

THE MOST PRECIOUS GIFT

Tonight's title is: "The Most Precious Gift." If He Who created the Universe and all within it gave it to you, and with the whole vast universe owned by you, you would consider that the greatest gift in the world. And, yet, He gave you something far greater than that. He gave you Himself! God actually became as you are, that you may be as He is.

If you owned the Universe and it slowly -- through unnumbered trillions of years -- should melt away and you could not recreate it, though it's a marvelous gift, it could not compare in any manner whatsoever to the gift of Himself to you that could recreate it. For, God actually became as we are, that we may be as He is. [See footnote.]

Now, how do we know this? Scripture reveals it -- literally tells us how it happens in us. It is revealed in Scripture that God is a father. That's the ultimate revelation of God to man. It started off as God Almighty.

"I made myself known unto Abraham and to Isaac and to Jacob as God Almighty [El Shaddai]; but by my name, the Lord [which means, 'I AM'] I did not make myself known to them" (Exodus 6:3).

Now, He is speaking to the character called "Moses," but ultimately He reveals Himself as God the Father.

If He gave Himself to me, and God is a father, then I, too, must be a father, -- but not just a father; I must be the Father -- the very father that God is! And if God is a father, there must be a child to bear witness to His fatherhood; and Scripture reveals the name of that son. We are told, in the Book of Samuel [see II Samuel 7:12] that He will actually raise up out of him a son, and he will be the father of that son. And the son, coming out of Samuel, will be His son, as we are told in the 7th chapter of II Samuel.

This is now confirmed in the last chapter of the New Testament: "And I Jesus" -- the Lord "have sent my angel to testify unto you to declare . . . I am the root" [being the Father] -- "I am the root and the offspring of David, the bright morning star" (Revelation 22:16, Revised Standard Version). He is both the father of David and David's son. He did not say he was David. He was the father of David and David's son; so the grandfather and the grandson are the same Being.

"David" is the symbol of Humanity. The whole vast world of man is symbolized in a single being, and his name is David. Jesus Christ is God the Father! "He who sees me," said he, "hath seen the Father." (John 14:9)

---

* "Therefore God becomes as we are, that we may be as He is" (Wm. Blake, from "There Is No Natural Religion").

"How then can you say, Show us the Father? Have I been so long with you that you do not know me, Philip? He who hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9).

Here is God the Father, the Creator of it all, Who actually gave Himself to us in the most literal sense; and He is the Father, and David in Scripture calls Him, "my father, my lord."

So, in the Second Psalm David said: "I will tell of the decree of the Lord: He said unto me, Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee" (Psalm 2:7). Here David tells us that the Lord said to him, "Thou art my son, today I have begotten thee."

So, the question is asked in the Book of Luke; and they answered when he asked, "What think ye of the Christ, whose son is he? and they said, The son of David; and then he answered, Why then did David in the spirit call him, my Lord? If David thus calls him, my Lord, how can he be David's son?" (Matthew 22:42,43) He is David's father! (Matthew 22:44 and Luke 20:41-44)

Now, if God succeeds in His purpose to give me Himself, I must be David's father. Am I david's father? Born in this Century, in the year 1905; and David, chronologically speaking -- if you take it as secular history, which it is not, -- it would be that I am the father of one born three thousand years before I was born, if you take it as secular history. But the Bible is theology. The Bible is sacred history. The Bible is the story of Salvation; it is not recording any records of things on earth. The whole thing takes place beyond the wildest dream of man on earth.

I speak from experience. Now, let me share with you my experiences, for this is my last night. I am giving you tonight what I personally have experienced. I did not know until it happened. I was born and raised in the Christian faith; I have never wavered from it. Nothing has ever turned me from the Christian faith. I was first taught it at my Mother's knee.

Then, where I was born, the Bible was taught in our school; it was compulsory, but we were taught it as secular history, as my Mother taught it to me, because she understood it as secular history. And I believed it just as she taught it to me. Then one day, without warning, with the most sudden, sudden shockingness, the story of Jesus unfolded itself within me, casting me in the central role. Then I knew He actually gives Himself to me! He is not sharing it. He literally died for me!

He is not pretending that He is I. He literally died. And all that is true of Him repeats itself in us individually; and because He is the Father of Humanity, and David is the symbol of Humanity, when the individual has gone through all the experiences of Humanity -- good, bad, and indifferent -- and he has been tried "furnaces of affliction," the Lord Jesus Christ -- the Father of it all -- brings him out, awakens him from the dream of life. Then the whole drama unfolds within him, and David calls him, "Father."

You are first awakened in the tomb where you are buried. "For God Himself enters Death's Door always with those who enter, and lays down in the very grave with them, in visions of eternity, till they awake (Wm. Blake, from "Milton"); and when they awaken, they see the garments that the female had woven for them -- that my Mother wove for me, this garment [indicating the physical body]. And here was a garment that Mother wove, born from the womb of my Mother.

But my Father -- Jesus Christ -- Who gave Himself to me, awoke within me as my very Being, from the skull of my Being, which is Golgotha. And then I came out of my skull; and here surrounding me is the imagery of Scripture: the child wrapped in swaddling clothes; and here are the witnesses to the event that is now taking place, three men -- they were my brothers in this world -- my older brothers. And, here, they heard exactly what I heard: this fantastic, unearthly storm of wind; and they were just as disturbed as I was disturbed. Then one of my brothers, Lawrence, went over to investigate the nature of the disturbance, and he announced, "It is Neville's baby." And my other two brothers, Cecil and Victor, asked, "How can Neville have a baby?" with the most incredulous voice. He didn't argue; he raised from the floor the evidence of what he had said, a little child wrapped in swaddling clothes. And going over to where I was, he placed it on the bed. I took that infant up and looked into its face, and I said, "How is my sweetheart?" It broke into the most heavenly smile, and the whole scene dissolved.

Then, a hundred and thirty-nine days later, a vibration similar to the one that started in me began; but now, it is centered, not at the base of my skull (which was the first), but at the top of my skull; and when it reached the apex of intensity, it seemed as though my head exploded. And when the whole thing gathered itself together, I found myself seated and looking at a lamp; and here is David of Biblical fame, leaning against the side of an open door and looking out at a pastoral scene. He is just as he is described in the Book of Samuel, the 16th chapter: fair, -- the blonde -- beautiful eyes. He is a blue-eyed blonde. You can't describe the beauty of David! No one could paint him. No one could make a sculpture and fashion the beauty of that lad -- a lad in his early teens; and here I am looking at David, and David calls me, "Father." And I know I am his father, and he knows he is my son! And here, the entire imagery of Scripture surrounds me: the very head that is spoken of in Scripture as the head of the giant that he brought down, meaning that when man has played all the parts, he has overcome the enemy within himself, for he has discovered that the only enemy he ever had was his own thoughts that he entertained and harbored within himself; and what he entertained within himself objectified itself among men, and men played the part of the "enemy," and they then injured him. They abused him, and it was all himself. He was the enemy of himself. When man brings down the enemy within himself, he brings down the enemy of Israel.

Here is the giant head right before me as my son stands and leans against the side of the open door, and this beautiful relationship between the two of us -- my son, who is God's son.

Then, and then only, I knew that God literally gave me Himself. He is not sharing His son with me; He is my son. He gave me His son. And I'm going to tell you, He has given you Himself! You are going to have this experience, and you will see David, and David will be your son. Therefore, you and I are one, for God is One!

The word "God" is a compound unity. The word is "Elohim." It is one made up of others. We are the Brotherhood. We are the "unnumbered sons of God" that God decided to give Himself to His sons and raise the sons to Himself -- the Father, as told us in the most difficult Psalm of the hundred and fifty. It is the 82d Psalm. Thomas Paine, who was the editor of the most scholarly criticism of the higher nature of Biblical works, -- for he was the editor of the Encyclopedia Biblica [it is still to this day considered the most scholarly of all the higher scholarship concerning the criticism of Scripture] says, "This is the most difficult of all the Psalms to decipher. And I hope my guess comes near the meaning of the one who wrote it." Well, listen to just a few passages:

"God has taken his place in the divine council;

in the midst of the gods he holds judgment -- "

-- Psalm 82:1

Now, the word translated "God" and "gods" is the same word there -- "Elohim." "Elohim" is a plural word, but it is first translated in the singular as: "God has taken his place in the divine council."

The first time that word appears in the Bible is in the very first verse of Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" (Genesis 1:2). That word is "Elohim." It's a plural word, but translated there in the singular. Here [the 82d Psalm] it is translated both in the singular and in the plural.

"And God has taken his place in the divine council;

in the midst of the gods [Elohim] he holds judgment; -- "

Now God, collectively, speaks as a single Being, and speaks to all of us:

"I say, 'Ye are gods, -- [that's "Elohim"] -- sons of the Most High, all of you:

Nevertheless you shall die like men,

And you will fall as one man, O ye princes."

-- Psalm 82:6,7

We are the "gods" and -- in the beginning we are the brothers who actually form the One Man, the Lord Jesus Christ! And the Lord Jesus Christ fell "as one man," carrying all that is within Him; and then came the fragmentation -- Humanity. And after He passed through the "furnaces of affliction" and experienced death, as we were told we would, "you will die like men"; then we are called back into the One Body, one by one by one, because you are too unique to be called in pairs, to be called as a nation, to be called as a group. You are so unique, no one can duplicate you; therefore you can't be lost in the Divine Body. If one is missing, the Body is not complete. So, every being in the universe will be redeemed, and they will be redeemed in only one manner. There is only one "play" that redeems you. It's the story of the Gospel.

"I am the way, the truth, the life; No one comes to the Father, except by me" (John 14:6). Read the story of the Being who is speaking. You are going to duplicate it, because He indwells in you; and because He indwells, He will repeat in you His story. Well, when He repeats it in you, you are not a spectator viewing it; you are cast in the central role. You are the Lord Jesus Christ. There is no other story worthwhile in the world. There is only God the Father, and God the Father is Jesus Christ.

So, when Paul said, "The truth of Christ is in me" (II Corinthians 11:10), then he said, "He has made known unto me," -- speaking now of the Lord, -- "the mystery of His will which, according to His purpose, He has set forth in Christ as a plan for the fulness of time" (Ephesians 1:9,10, Revised Standard Version), the plan is buried in us. You will go astray, yes; we've all gone astray. But you will never find the Heaven that you seek -- you will never find the Father that you seek, save through this way. There just is no other way. It doesn't come in any other way; there is only one way. God unfolds Himself within you. As He unfolds Himself within you, it begins with the Resurrection.

If I told you now that you are sound, sound asleep, you wouldn't believe me. I would not have believed it either if any one had told me on the night of the 19th day of July in the year 1959. I was in this City. If you had told me the night I went to bed, -- it was the 19th of July 1959, -- that I was sleeping, and the world was my dream, and that I was dreaming this dream of life, I would have laughed at you. And, yet, I've been telling this story of God's law since my first time on the 2d day of February 1938. I had been telling it week after week, and I did not know it! I only knew the Law. I knew nothing of God's Promise. I did not realize that His Promise really entails His Self, that He actually gave me Himself. I didn't know that.

I went to sleep here in the hotel -- the Sir Francis Drake; and had any one told me -- the greatest authority in the world, I would not have believed it. And, yet, on the morning of the 20th the whole drama erupted within me. It began with the Resurrection. I awoke within my own skull to find myself completely sealed within this sepulchre that is my skull. It is Golgotha, and I had been dreaming all along, and I didn't know it.

I have never been so amazed in my whole life. Here I am, completely sealed in my own skull, and I knew it to be a tomb; and I knew that some one placed me there. I did not know that God Himself entered death's door with me when I entered, and that He laid Himself down within the tomb with me and shared with me this dream of life. And then He actually broke down the dividing wall between the two, and fused with me, and we became one Being. And, then, He awoke as me. He actually awoke within me as my very Being.

Then I came out of that tomb like a child being born from the skull -- from the "tomb" -- of man, where God is buried. I can tell you now, the world is a dream, and you are The-Dreamer-of-the-Dream. You can change the dream if you know you are dreaming; but if you don't know you are dreaming, you can't change the dream. If you know it's a dream, you can dream, because the power of The Dreamer is in you. And that Dreamer is God.

You can bring before your mind's eye what the world would call a "daydream" -- it's still a dream -- and you can give reality to that daydream until it will objectify itself and beoome real in your world, but you are still dreaming. You are dreaming until that moment in time when God, Who is the Lord Jesus Christ, awakes within you. And, then, as He awakes within you, you are all alone, but He has the power to come out and break the seal of that tomb, and you do know exactly what you are doing, and you are breaking it. Another doesn't break it. You break it. No one on the outside rolls away the stone. You roll it away from within. You push the base of your skull, and something rolls. As it rolls, there is an opening -- not a very large opening; but you put your head there, and you push yourself out, inch by inch by inch, and then you pull the remaining portion of you out of that skull. And when you rise, you look back, and here is the body that your mother had woven for you, signified in Scripture as the "linen clothes."

And then the wind -- the unearthly wind spoken of in the 3d chapter of the Book of John [John 3:8, Revised Standard Version]. "You must be born from above; for unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the kingdom of heaven" (John 3:3). And, then, the wise man of the Sanhedrin -- and he asks, "How can this be? How can a man who is old enter once more into his mother's womb and be born? And he said, You, a master of Israel; yet you do not know? Unless you are born from above, you cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." (John 3:9,10)

Now he makes this marvelous statement: "No one has ascended into heaven but he who descended" (John 3:13, Revised Standard Version). But no one but he who descended! The One Being carries all of us within Him. And, then, in this stage we become That One Being, and now we ascend into Heaven. And this ishhow you ascend:

He tells us now -- He says, "No one has ascended into heaven, but He who has descended, the Son of Man" (John 3:13). That which came out of man is one with the Creator of man, which is Jesus Christ. He is the only one who can ascend. And he is called the Son of Man, and he refers to himself as the "Son of Man."

Now, he says in the next verse: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up" (John 3:14).

Now, a hundred and twenty-three days after David calls you, "Father," a bolt of lightning tears your body in two from the top of your head to the base of your spine. One blow, and you are cut, -- no pain, no pain whatsoever, -- just one sharp blow of a bolt of lightning and you look at the body, and it's torn from top to bottom, and it is separated about six inches. At the base of that spine is golden, pulsing, liquid light.

Now, we are told: "At this moment the curtain of the temple was torn in two from top to bottom" (Matthew 27:51, Revised Standard Version). People think it was a church made with human hands. No; it is the Temple of God; and we are told in First Corinthians, the 3d chapter, the 16th verse: "Ye are the temple of the living God, and the spirit of God dwells in you" (I Corinthians 3:16).

Well, if you are the Temple of the Living God, and the curtain of that temple is split in two, you are split in two from top to bottom! And you see this pulsing, golden, liquid light. It is the blood of God Himself. Now, you fuse with the blood of God. You are the blood of God. Now you ascend as a fiery serpent, like fire itself, spiraling up that spine right into heaven. And when you enter, you enter like thunder. As we are told in Scripture: "And those who enter, enter like thunder." (See Matthew 11:12 and Luke 16:16, Revised Standard Version)

The whole thing reverberates when you enter. And you are that fiery being that goes up. Only he who descended can ascend, and only Jesus Christ descended. He was the One Man who "chose us in Him before the foundation of the world" (Ephesians 1:4), and He was God the Father, and He chose all of us in Him, and then one man fell and became fragmented. We are the fragmented body of the Lord Jesus Christ.

There is only one way for the redemption, and He has mapped it out in Scripture. He played the part and brought it to its climax, and now the pattern of that play is buried in us. We receive it in us, and we simply go right up into the skull; and you are the Lord Jesus Christ, once more rebuilding the temple that He deliberately shattered.

Then, nine hundred and ninety-eight days later, completing the cycle of one thousand two hundred and sixty days, -- as told us in the 12th chapter of Daniel and the 12th chapter of Revelation, -- from the birth of the child; from the birth of the child, as told us in Revelation, when this miraculous child appears, it will take twelve hundred and sixty days; and on that twelve hundred and sixtieth day the heavens open, -- and Heaven is within you. Your skull opens. Everything becomes translucent. There is no circumference, but none whatsoever! It's not bounded by anything -- a complete infinity of translucence. Complete, -- well, you describe it; there is no boundary, and that's your skull. And then hovering over you, say about twenty feet above you, as though floating, is a dove. This heavenly dove floating, -- it's not using its wings; it is simply floating. Therefore, it must be on fluid, for it's floating. And you look up, and its eye catches your eye. The most heavenly love is pouring from the eye right into your eye; and you do it automatically -- you raise your hand. In my case, I raised my left hand and protruded the index finger; and it simply descended. It descended and lit on my finger, and I brought it automatically to my face, and it smothered me with love, kissing me all over my face, all over my neck, all over my head; and while it is kissing me, a woman to my left made the statement: "They avoid man, for man gives off the most offensive odor. But to prove and demonstrate his love for you, he penetrated the ring of offense and came down to demonstrate his love for you." And while he was still kissing me, the scene dissolved.

The whole thing actually begins and ends in man, and that's the drama. Then you remain in this world, and you tell your story to the best of your ability. If you are a painter, you'll paint it. If you can write, you will tell it to the best of your ability in writing. If in some other way you could fashion it in the form of a sculpture, you will. If you cannot express it in some artistic manner, then you will tell it to the best of your ability to those who will listen. But the journey -- as far as you are concerned, the journey is over.

Then, in a moment when you do not expect it, He will call you back. Now, you do not find yourself as the world without this experience will find themselves, for every one in the world will be redeemed, but this is the plan of redemption; and if the plan has not yet unfolded within the individual, at what he calls "death," that individual is restored to life in a world just like this -- terrestrial, in a body just like this, only it is young -- unaccountably new. Nothing is missing; eyes are perfect, teeth perfect, the body is perfect. Everything is perfect; not a thing is missing, regardless of the condition of the body when we called it "dead," -- to continue a journey that started in this world, for it's the same world -- this identical world, and you will do there what you do here; and then what I am telling you now, when you least expect it, as it came to me so suddenly, -- it will come to you just as suddenly. As we are told in Scripture, "He comes like a thief in the night" (I Thessalonians 5:2).

You don't expect Him when He comes. He calls you from the dream of life, and you awake within the tomb where you were buried. So, all of us were buried in Golgotha, and Golgotha is your skull. But there is a Universal Skull. It's called "Zion" in Scripture. In the 87th Psalm, it says, "This one was born here and that one was born there, and these were born here"; and he points out within Zion, and Zion is the home of the Lord Jesus Christ. All are born at this one point within the Universal Skull; but your skull, individually, is but a replica of the Universal Skull. If I could pinpoint for you with my finger where, when I ascended, I actually reverberated, it would be a little bit left of the straight line, if I drew a straight line down my forehead. It was just a little bit left of my skull, right here [indicating].

So, then, we are called in Scripture, "the living stone of the New Temple." And here -- rooted here -- I entered. And with all of my force I tried to penetrate the skull and get out, but you don't, because this is the New Jerusalem. This is the New Temple. And every one is called back as a living stone to put into that New Jerusalem. You are individualized from then on forever and forever, and you are part of "the one body, the one spirit, . . . the one lord, . . . the one God and Father of us all" (Ephesians 4:4-6).

So, the greatest gift in the world could not be the thing created, but the Creator. God literally gave Himself, the Creator, to us, so that we become as He is. And He is the Father; and the sum total of Humanity, personified, comes out as David.* David is the one symbol that personifies the Will of God. Humanity has "played" His Will.

"I have found David, the son of Jesse," -- "Jesse" means "I am," -- "a man after my heart who will do all my will" (Acts 13:22). He's after my heart, and he will do all my will. That's Humanity! You have done the Father's Will.

In the end, you will forgive every being in the world and excuse all, for you've done the Father's Will. "How long, how vast, and how great the anguish 'ere we find the Father were long to tell" (Wm. Blake, from "Jerusalem." See footnote.), but you will find the Father; and when you find the Father, you find your Self. So, we came out and fell as one man, the Lord Jesus Christ, who descended; and then we are fragmented. Then we ascend as that One Man, in the same pattern that He sets for the world, back into the One Body. So we came out in search of God the Father, and return, having discovered our Self as God the Father. For, no one returns into that Body that is harmonious and perfect until he first finds the Father. And when you find the Father, it is not another; it is your Self! But it takes His son to reveal you as the Father, for: "No one knows who the Son is, except the Father; and no one knows who the Father is, except the Son and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal it" (Luke 10:22, Revised Standard Version).

So, "No one has ever seen God; but the only Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he has made him known" (John 1:18, Revised Standard Version).

So, I can tell you now, David one day will stand before you, and you will know he is your son. He will not deny it in time. You may deny it now; but when confronted with the evidence, you can't deny it. And there is David. And Jesus Christ is God the Father. There is no other God. There is no other Father. He is the Lord of Lords, but no one can say Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit.

The Holy Spirit is what? In the 14th chapter of John he says: "I will send you the Holy Spirit, which is the spirit of truth, and he will bring to your remembrance all the things that I have told you" (John 14:26).

---

* Exact quotation: "How long, vast and severe the anguish e'er they knew their Father, were long to tell."

So, the Holy Spirit is the "remembrance" now. Memory returns, and you are God the Father! For when you meet Him, it is not something new. When you look at David, it is as though Eternity returns. You've always known it, but you must have suffered from amnesia, -- total amnesia, like a man looking into his mother's face and not recognizing his mother, and she is worried about her son who cannot recognize her.

We know amnesia in this world, either partial or total. We have all experienced it in some way with our friends. I have a friend of mine now -- a block of time is missing. He painted a picture recalling a pier in Trinidad; and then he went in there on the locks and painted another picture. It has been rumored that a friend of his who always despised him struck him. It has not been proved, but he is now away for the rest of his earthly days, one block completely missing. He knows that he came up on the surf in Trinidad, and now he thinks he was actually shot in the Island of Trinidad. And that block of time is completely rubbed out in his mind's eye; and he picked it up from there, but they can't let him out. He has completely dropped out. If the man did it or not, it really doesn't matter. In the end, all will be forgiven. His motive -- if jealousy could have prompted the act, I don't know. Nevertheless, my friend Walter is in this home for the rest of his earthly days with a large section of time completely missing.

So, this whole thing was "sown up" beforethe world was. We saw the play. I've been trying to remember it ever since, for we are the "gods" who formed the "God." We are the gods spoken of in Scripture. We are the Elohim who came down deliberately in a state of amnesia -- total amnesia, or we could not do what we are doing. If we are pretending that we are men, knowing all along that we are God, we could not do what we are doing. We had to completely forget who we are to do what we are doing. And that power, which is Christ-In-Us, -- the creative power of God, at the moment in time when we have done the work that we came to do, awakens. We awaken, for we are that power. And, then, the drama -- the only drama in Eternity that could ever take us back to the Source of all Being, which is Jesus Christ, is the Gospel! There is no other "play."

If you are tempted to follow some other road, remember these words: Don't do it. If some one tells you tonight that they know some one who has the most marvelous diet to keep you perfect, or some one who has all the yoga-ism to sit in meditation and do something for you, forget it. I am telling you what I know from experience: the one and only true way to God the Father is through the Pattern Man that is Jesus Christ. There is no other way. There is no other Lord. There is no other God. And Jesus Christ is but the fulfillment of the Old Testament. The whole thing was an adumbration, a foreshadowing in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way; so they couldn't understand it.

So, when it happened in one and he interpreted it, based upon his own experience of Scripture, they rejected it. It was not what they were expecting. They were expecting Redemption to come in an entirely different way, as the whole vast world today is expecting it. They think that Jesus Christ is going to come from the outside; and many who are now teaching millions of people on TV -- they hope to be still here in the body to go forward and greet Him and tell Him what marvelous work they are doing. He will never, in Eternity, come that way. He comes to you as one unknown, yet lets you experience who He is; and then when you experience who He is, you will discover Him in yourself, for He became you.

God literally became as you are, that you may become as God is. There is no other God but the Lord Jesus Christ. And do not look for Him to come from without. He deliberately died for you.

"Unless I die, thou canst not live; but if I die, I shall arise again, and thou with me" (John 12:24).

"Wouldst thou love one who never died for thee, or ever die for one who has not died for thee? And if God dieth not for man and giveth not Himself eternally for man, man could not exist. So God died literally and when He died, He entered Death's Door with you, and he layed down in a grave with you and shares with you the visions of Eternity until you awaken and see the linen clothes that the female wove for you" (Wm. Blake, from "Milton").

Then you come out of that grave as the Lord Jesus Christ, for the way he is born surrounds you; the babe to bear witness to the great event that has taken place, and the witnesses that see the babe -- not you; they can't see you, for you are the Lord, and Jesus Christ is invisible. They can't see you because God is Spirit. They can talk about you, but they cannot see you, because the day will come that other witnesses will talk about them and not see them, for they will be born, too, from above, and "born not of blood nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:13).

So, they are all born of God as God. So, "I am the root of David and the offspring of David" (Revelation 22:16). For that which comes out of man, having buried Himself in man, is one with that which entered man. "I am the root," -- who is speaking? Jesus Christ. What did he say? "I am the root of David, and the offspring of David, the bright morning star" (Revelation 22:16). And, "to him that overcometh, . . . I will give the Morning Star" (Revelation 21:26,28). So, He gives you Himself!

Now, do not think that you have to labor to become it! This is Grace -- Grace -- Grace, and still more Grace! Let no one frighten you. It's an unmerited, unearned gift. You could not earn it in Eternity! Because you cannot earn it, it is given. And God gives you Himself. You cannot earn it. Your fitness for the Kingdom is the consequence, and not in any way the result, of things that you did. It's the consequence of Grace.

So, let no one frighten you and tell you that you've got to do this and do that and do the other. Believe the story. That's all you have to do. You've heard the Christian story. Believe it. And one day, unexpectedly, suddenly the story will re-enact itself in you, casting you in the central role.

So, the greatest gift in the world -- the most precious gift -- was God's gift of Himself to man. And He was not giving a portion of Himself; He gave Himself. When He gave you Himself, He had to give you His Son. So, "God so loved the world" -- that is, Humanity -- "He gave His only son" (John 3:16), because if He gave me Himself and He is a father, He has to give me His son. And His son stands before me and calls me, "Father"; and I know I am his father, and he knows he is my son. So, God gave me, because of His love for me -- He gave me His son; and only the Son can reveal the father. "No one knows who the Father is, except the Son" (Luke 10:22, Revised Standard Version). So, when the son comes, then -- and only then -- do you know the Father.

---oOo---

X]1
S2

THE MYSTERY CALLED CHRIST

7 June 1971

In the letters of Blake, there is one where he wrote to the Reverend Trusler -- the Reverend Dr. Trusler, who had criticized him for his works, and said to Blake, "You need some one to elucidate your works."

So, Blake wrote him and said, "You ought to know that what can be made explicit to the idiot is not worth my care. And the wisest of the Ancients considered what was not too explicit the fittest for instruction, because it rouses the faculties to act." Then he went on to say to this Reverend, "Why is the Bible more instructive and entertaining than any book in the world? Is it not because it is addressed to the Imagination, which is Spiritual Sensation, and only but mediately to the Understanding or Reason?"

Well, of course, the Reverend did not understand that. Like all the teachers of the world -- the religious teachers, they treat it as secular history; and Blake knew from his own experience it was not. It was God's plan of Salvation. Man must experience Scripture for himself before he can begin to understand how altogether wonderful it is. It's altogether true, but not on this level. Eternity is actually within your Immortal Head; and that's where the entire drama unfolds.

Now, let us turn to this Book that Blake called "the greatest book in the world," -- and I will endorse that. I haven't read all the books, but I do not know of anything that could come near the Bible in revelation. It hasn't a thing to do with science. It's not teaching us anything about the stars, about anything in politics; it is all about God's plan of Salvation.

Here we turn, now, to the very first book of the New Testament, Matthew. "This is the book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, son of David, son of Abraham." Here it establishes the three important characters of Scripture.

Now, we go back to Genesis, and start with the first one now, Abraham. "And the Lord tempted Abraham." One translates it "tested," which may be a better way, -- "And the Lord tested Abraham and said to him, Take your son -- your only son -- Isaac and offer him as a burnt offering." And Abraham took his son the very next day, with the fire and the wood and the knife, and two young men, and went up to Mt. Moriah. If you are familiar with the story, we need not tell you the entire thing, but that is the story.

The Lord intervened, Abraham having met the test. He said to him, "Do not lay your hand upon the lad, for you obeyed the voice of the Lord." And then he made him the "father of the multitudes," for the name "Abraham" means "father of the multitudes," -- and said to him, "They will be more numerous than the stars, more numerous than the sands of the beach." Well, just estimate that number, -- beyond the wildest dream of man. That will be his offspring, yet he only had one son.

Now we know that's a lie right away, if you take it historically, because twelve years before the birth of Isaac the Lord gave him a son whose name was Ishmael, born of a slave in the household of his wife Sarah, for she was barren and it was beyond -- well, bearing. "It had ceased to be with her after the affairs of women," -- after the nature of woman. So, finding herself barren and wanting a son and an heir, she sent her servant Hagar in to her husband Abraham, that he may "know" her, which, as the story is told, he did, and she bore him a son, and the Lord said, "Call him Ishmael," which means "God hears" or "God has heard." That's twelve years prior to the birth of Isaac. Yet we are told Isaac, -- and these are the words of the Lord, -- " Take your son, your only son, and offer him as a burnt offering."

How can the one who gave him a son called Ishmael now call this one his only son? The word translated "son and only son" appears only twelve times in the Bible, for the word "one" is "yaw-khad." This is translated and defined as "one, the only one; the unique one; my darling, my chosen one," -- any term of endearment. These are the definitions given to the word that is now translated "your son, your only son."

Now, here, we turn now to the 22d Psalm, which you find quoted all through the New Testament. It's the Psalm of David. It begins: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" This is the cry on the Cross. Yet, the words are the words of David.

We find the first verse, the 8th verse, the 18th verse all through the New Testament; and all these are the words of David. We find the same correspondence between the sufferings of Christ and the sufferings of David. The identical words are used, and they are all, now, in the words of David.

Now, in the 22d Psalm, David sings out to his father the cry of despair, and he said, "Defend me" or "Deliver me from the sword." "Deliver my soul from the sword and my life from the power of the dog." Why "my life"? That's the same word translated "your son, your only son"; so why do they now translate it "my life"? The Hebrew word is "yaw-khad," and it means, "your son, your only son." David is saying, "Deliver your son, your only son, from the power of the dog."

In the Second Psalm David has already declared, "The Lord said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee."

Now he calls upon the Lord, who seemingly has abandoned him, when he said, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" Now, "Deliver," -- not my life, -- "Deliver your son, your only son, from the power of the dog."

Now we come into the New Testament and we find that all the things said of David are now said of Jesus Christ. What is the secret?

Imagine this with me. Can you imagine a command that is absolute -- a thing to be done absolutely and continuously, something stated in the imperative passive mood, like this:

"Thy will must be being done.
Thy kingdom must be being restored."

It's the imperative passive mood. Think of the simple occurrence of an action, without reference to completeness or incompleteness; without reference to duration or repetition; without reference, specifically, to its position in time, but sometimes with reference to past time. Just imagine such an action taking place forever and forever, and there is no limit as to its duration. No one knows when the Father will stop the action, -- when God, who set the command in force, will stop it. So, we do not know the measure of the time. It has no reference to its position in time, whether it's the First Year B.C., the First Year A.D., or the year 1971. We do not know; there's no reference to position in time. So, think of such an action.

Now, you and I have to re-enact this eternal command. You and I will have the experience recorded in that 22d chapter of Psalms, when suddenly we are going to experience it, now, in the real way, for these are all adumbrations. The entire Old Testament is an adumbration, -- that is, a foreshadowing in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. It's a sketchy representation, omitting details, -- omitting all the little things that you could add into it and put into it and see the picgure. It's a very, very sketchy picture. .

Now we are coming to the story of David and it takes on more form now. "Say unto my servant David, When you lie down with your fathers," -- which is a euphemism for "death," -- when you die and sleep with your fathers, "I will raise up your son after you, who shall come forth from your body. I will be his Father, and he shall be my son."

That adumbration is taking on more fleshly states now. It's coming down to the story of Jesus Christ, who is coming out of David. Well, now, who is David? David is the symbol of humanity. Abraham is the symbol of the Father of Eternity, "the father of the multitudes." Who could that be, other than God?

So, here we have Abraham -- the symbol of the Father, David -- the symbol of humanity; and at the end of the journey something comes out of humanity which is the Son of God that is God. So, in the New Testament, the Son is made to say:

"I and my Father are one."

"He who sees me has seen the Father."

Yet, "The Father is greater than I."

He is telling us that I am not inferior to my Essential Being, the Father; only in my present capacity or office as the "sent," called the Son, am I inferior, but not as to my Essential Being, the Father.

When I am "sent," it's the Father who's sent. The Father sent me. Well, He had no one else to send but Himself; so He sent me. In the capacity -- in the office of the "sent" -- I seem inferior to my Self, the "Sender," but the "Sender" and the "sent" are one. That's what we are told in Scripture.

"He who sees me sees Him who sent me." So, if you knew my Father, you know Me; and if you know Me, you know my Father, for we are one. "I and my Father are one." So, here we find Abraham only the symbol of God the Father, David the symbol of humanity, and Jesus Christ the symbol of the Son of God which is one with God. "I and my Father are one."

So, out of humanity God plays all the parts, may I tell you? There is not one part in the world that God isn't playing. And having played all the parts, He extracts from the experiences of humanity that which represents, now, the Son; and that Son is called "David," for David is the symbol of humanity.

Do you understand what Blake meant when he said it's the most entertaining book in the world, and not one book in the world compares to it? It's the most instructive book and the most entertaining book. It's like quicksilver. You are just about to grasp the Son, and he turns into the Father. You are about to grasp the feeling of the Father, and He turns into the Son, -- just like quicksilver. He simply loses Himself and eludes your grasp in His many metamorphoses. Suddenly He is not the Father; He is the Son.

So, now, "I say to you," said he at the very end of the story, "as the Father sent me, so send I you." He's playing the part, now, of the Father. He's no longer, now, the Son; He has departed the world, and has returned to Himself the Father. "I will leave the world and go unto the Father."

"I came out from the Father and came into the world. Again, I am leaving the world and going to the Father."

So, I return to my Self, who sent Himself as me; so He comes into the world as the Son; and while he's in the world as the Son, having the experiences of humanity, he seems inferior to Himself the Father, and He is, for He took upon Himself the restrictions and the limitations of humanity.

Now we are told, when he went towards the Cross, he carried his own wooden cross on his back. Now, Abraham placed upon Isaac the wood upon his back. Isaac wondered, Where is the lamb for the sacrifice? for he sees now the wood and he is carrying it on his back. His father has the knife to slay him and he has the fire to burn that wood. He is going to burn him. "Burning" is the experiences of man. Don't think you haven't been burned! I don't mean in flames. The experiences are the burnings that you have in this world. It's from innocence through experience back to God the Father as an Awakened Imagination. That's the whole story.

So, here, the father said to him, "God Himself will supply the lamb." He is the lamb -- the aymbol of the lamb.

Let's go back now to the 22d chapter of the Book of Psalms. Remember what we told you in the 22d chapter of the Book of Genesis. He took two young men, and he took the lad -- his son, his only son. Here now, the cry of David, "Deliver me," -- your son, your only son, -- "from the power of the dog." Now you read that, and you wonder, What on earth are they talking about?

I have many Bibles at home. I haven't found one Bible that comes near the experience because they are writing and speculating.

They are theorizing; they have not had the experience. But the day that you meet David, who reveals you as God the Father, is the most exciting moment in Eternity. And there are two young men, and they stand -- You are "in spirit," but you are all-wise at that moment. David is obvious, the most beautiful lad you could put your eyes on, a lad in his teens -- early teens, beautiful beyond description. He symbolizes humanity. You have passed through all that man could ever put upon you. You have borne the fardel the allotted time, and now they are going to restore your long-lost rank. You were God before you came down, and you are going to be God by going back, but you will be enhanced by reason of the experience of becoming man.

So, you are looking at David. And here, to your right, are the two young men. In the Bible, for reasons which might be obvious, they are spoken of as "dogs." Look up the word "dog" in the Concordance -- the Biblical Concordance, and you will see it means a "male harlot," homosexuals in the service of the priest in the temple. That's who they were. But this story was "before that the world was." It didn't develop. They were part of God's plan in the beginning of time; so here they are. You do not hurt them. You are the Father now, the father of David who symbolizes humanity.

You are looking at this beautiful creature, and they are looking at him, too. You are looking at him as a father to a son, "eating" him for his joy, his beauty, all that he means to you, his love; he is your darling, as the word also means "my darling." But they are looking at him concupiscently; they are looking at him in the most lustful manner and you warn them of his victory. He has never failed because the Lord was with him. The day the Lord anointed him "the spirit of the Lord came upon him mightily from that day forward, and never left David." So, David never lost a battle.

Here is the head of the giant before you -- this enormous head, severed from the body as David severed the head from the body. And there it is on a table right before you, and here are these two. You do not a thing about it; it's part of the "play."

This "play" has been taking place "before that the world was"; and no one knows when it is going to come to an end. I can't conceive of it coming to an end until every one of us experiences the play and becomes the father of David, for it is simply God returning to Himself. That's the story.

God came out from Himself into the world, penetrated these bodies, annexed these brains of ours, and made them a portion of Himself -- a temporary portion. So, while He "wears" the body, the body is a part of the soul of the one who wears it. He will take it off -- just drop it; it means nothing. But while he wears it in this world, it is a part of the soul of the one who wears it.

So, here, the "garment" is not the man. The garment is simply just what it is. It is a garment of flesh and blood "worn" while he is in the world of the experience of man.

But I tell you from experience, you won't have to wait a second when you take off that "garment" to see what it really is as against what you thought it was. And when they are crying and weeping because you took it off, you can't believe that they could be so silly, but you were equally silly before you took it off. But nevertheless, you see it.

Before I came out tonight, this University student from U.C.L.A. -- he sits with my wife while I come to the lectures because we need some one to answer the 'phone and to be present; and before my friend arrived to bring me here, we got to talking about these things -- these matters. He is from Cairo; he's an Egyptian. And he said to me, "You know, my father had this dream. He dreamt that a friend of his was walking down the street with him; and as they were walking down the street, the friend fell, and there he died. He was dead, and many of the people came around and they began to cry and to weep. They were all looking at him, and they were weeping. A week later he dropped dead; and the identical thing my father saw -- he actually saw him saying to my father, 'What are they crying about?'"

Here was the garment; they were crying over the garment that he had taken off.

I have seen it time and time again. So, I cannot be disturbed when a man takes off his "garment." Yes, you miss the contact -- the little physical contact, but the Being who "wore" it is now clothed again in a garment just like it, but young -- altogether young and healthy. Whatever was missing before is not missing now. He is returned and restored to a healthy youth -- not a baby, -- young, -- I would say about twenty. If he died at a hundred, he's now twenty; and he goes through the same world of man -- the same terrestrial world -- to have the experiences that he must have in order to confront David.

These are the three characters, each as a symbol: Abraham the symbol of God the Father, David the symbol of humanity, and Jesus Christ the symbol of God the Father having gone through the experiences, because David, now, in the spirit, calls him, "Father."

"What think ye of the Christ?" he asked.

They said, "The son of David."

He said, "Well, how then in the spirit did David call him, My Lord?" If David calls him, "My lord," how can he be David's son?

So, he's telling you that David belongs here. It's the sum total of all the experiences of humanity; and it's a beautiful experience when the whole thing is over. Here it seems such a horrible thing, but when it's all over the result is transcendent, -- but that which comes out as the one who was "sent" to have the experience, because the Father sent Himself as the Son, and Jesus Christ is the one having the experience.

It is Christ-in-you that is the hope of glory. Were he not in you, you could not have the experience of being man; and so he suffers, and you call it that you are suffering. But as Blake said it so beautifully:

"Babel mocks, saying there is no God nor Son of God:
That Thou, O Human Imagination, O Divine Body . . . art all

A delusion; but I know Thee, O Lord, when Thou arisest upon
My weary eyes, even in this dungeon and this iron mill . . .
Thou also sufferest with me, although I behold Thee not."

You can't behold the Being that is having the experience as you do objects in space, because the Being having the experience is that which is called "Imagination." You can't behold imagination. Imagination is the reality that is called this-thing-called-God. So, the Voice answers, -- and it's your own wonderful human imagination answering:

" . . . . . Fear not! . . . . . I am with you always,
Only believe in me, that I have power to raise from the dead
Your brother who sleeps in" -- this world called -- "Albion."
[from "Jerusalem"]

Every one will rise. Not one can stop -- they couldn't even stop it if they wanted to. There is no such thing as complete annihilation. There is no annihilation. You gave it up in the beginning to come here; and when you came here, you completely forgot -- total amnesia; you forgot Who-You-Were. Listen to the words:

"Return unto me the glory that was mine, the glory that I had with Thee before that the world was."

This is not new. You gave up the Fatherhood, and yourself came into the world as the Son -- the one that is "sent," -- the one that is now to be made a burnt offering. And you are the "burnt offering" in this world, and you pass through hell in this world; but you are still one with the Father!

"I and my Father are one," -- even though "My Father is greater than I," for I'll return to my Self, the Father, having experienced what I came out to experience; and I as Father will be enhanced by the experience of being man.

So, every one is going to have it. Not one will fail.

So, today if I really see it clearly, you'll see this peculiar mystery in the Bible. The whole vast world is yourself "pushed out," and all these characters are simply states of consciousness into which you can in one little moment vanish. You try to grasp him, and all of a sudden, he vanishes into this one, into that one. You can't quite put your hand upon Him. But you do, in the depths of your Being; and you bring back glimpses of it, and then you share it with your brothers, because in the end we are all one, and yet without loss of identity.

You'll be God the Father, the father of David. And I know I am God the Father, the father of David; and yet, we are the same father! We have the same son, and yet we have no loss of identity. That is something that is difficult to explain.

So, this comes to us -- this mystery called "Christ" -- he comes to us as "one unknown." Not from the outside; he's on the inside. He rises in us as "one unknown," in the most strange, wonderful, ineffable mystery. Yet, He is That One who lets us experience Who-He-Is. You don't see Him; you experience being Him, because He was called "Father" by David, and David is going to call you "father." And may I tell you? when he does, it's not a shock; it's only the returning of memory. You know that you have always been That that was taking place in the beginning of time; but no one could attain to that bliss, except he was generated on earth. So, man had to come down, -- that is, God had to come down and be generated on earth and re-enact the drama that is eternal, for that drama was simply an adumbration. It was a sketchy representation, omitting all the details.

We came down here, and we go through the "furnaces"; and having the experiences here on earth while we walk as man, it becomes a cubic reality. And now we know the meaning of these sketches that we read in the Bible. We see, now, what the two young men were that Abraham took with him up to Mt. Moriah. He took two young men, and he took his son.

Well, here was my son, and he wasn't called "Isaac"; he was called "David," and here were two young men. It does not describe what they were in the Bible. I know what they are. I know they are men who looked concupiscently at my darling -- at my son; and I simply warned them of the past. I warned them of what took place, because he won the battle against the giant; and he who wins that battle against the giant who would destroy Israel sets his own father free, for the promise is:

"The man who brings down the enemy of Israel, I will set his father free."

So, here is the giant's head severed from the body. And who is the father of the one who brought him down? Well, I am. What is the father's name in the Bible? The father's name is Jesse. Do you know what the word "Jesse" means? "Jehovah exists." That's what it means. It is any form of the verb "to be," -- in other words, the one who bears the name "I AM." But its true definition is "Jehovah exists."

And here, the father is looking at his son. Now you know Who-You-Are. When Blake said in a very cryptic manner:

After the death of Christ, he became Jehovah.*

He returned to Himself -- Jehovah. In the end, there is nothing but the Lord God, Jehovah. There's nothing but God!

So, He sends Himself into the world; and the thing "sent" is the Son. He comes bearing witness of his Father, and we speak of him in the Bible as "Jesus, the Lord" or "Jesus Christ." He is the Savior. Well, the only Savior in the Bible is Jehovah Himself, as told us in the 43d and the 45th chapters of the Book of Isaiah:

"I am the Lord your God, the Holy One of Israel, your Savior; and besides Me there is no Savior."

---

* In "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell," Blake writes: "Know that after Christ's death, he became Jehovah."

So, if He comes as Savior, He is Jehovah. And so, when He departs, He returns to Himself, the Lord God Jehovah. There is nothing but God in the world, in spite of all the horror. But this is the flame spoken of in Scripture. These are the burns.

"Father, I see the knife, I see the wood," -- I am carrying the wood, -- "I see the flame; but where is the lamb?"

See the imagery of the lamb, the symbol of the lamb? And in the end, the Father Himself really plays the part; but in playing the part, He appeared as the Son, because there is only God the Father.

So, every one is going to have the experience of Scripture, and I can't tell any one what a thrill it is when it begins to unfold within you. It comes so suddenly, without warning, and suddenly -- all within your head. That's why I started off by telling you Eternity dwells within your Immortal Head.

That is an immortal head. The whole "play" is taking place there; but in the fullness of time you'll experience it. It is taking place. It is a command that must be done absolutely and continuously, without reference to position in time, without any reference as to its completeness or incompleteness; but it is not completed until man-on-earth replays the drama. And he does it -- when he replays it within himself, it takes on the cubic reality, while as it is told through the medium of the Prophets, it is a sketchy representation, omitting all the details.

That's why the one who wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews could say that "in many and various ways God spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets, but in these last days He has spoken to us by a son."

There's no further revelation than when the Son appears, for then you know Who-You-Are. And what man is seeking in this world is the Father. Every one is seeking the Father, the Cause of the phenomena of life. There's only one Cause; and blessed is the man who is freed from the tyranny of second causes! So, there is only one Cause, and that is God the Father.

So, as God the Father tempted Abraham, He was tempting Himself, for he's only the symbol of Himself. Can I really go through hell and return? Can I die, and rise? And God took the challenge. He could die and rise! But in rising, He enhanced the brilliance of Himself -- the greatness of Himself, because there is no limit to expansion, -- no limit to His wonderful transcendency. He placed the limit upon opacity and upon contraction; and that limit is man. So, when He became man -- and He could not play that He is man -- He isn't pretending that He's man, -- He is man. He becomes man! Even though it's a temporary "garment" that He wears, while He "wears" it, He is so identified with it, He feels that "It's myself." You cut Him, and He hurts. You chop off a finger and He says, "I've lost my finger." He is so much a part of the "garment" that He "wears" that He can't separate Himself from it, seemingly. But the day will come, He will simply take it off and return to Himself, but He will be enhanced by reason of the experience in this journey as man.

But when the day comes for the individual, no one knows of that hour, of that day; only the Father knows. No one knows but the Father. Let no one tell you that they can tell you when it's going to happen. I know from my own experience it comes so suddenly. Little did I expect the night I went to bed in San Francisco that that night, on July the 20th, 1959, was the night. Nor on the 6th day of December of the same year, did I know that that night the Fatherhood of God would be revealed to me by His Son, who would call me "father." Little did I know of the Ascent into Heaven on the morning of the 8th of April of the following year, 1960; and then January the 1st, 1963, when the dove descended in bodily form and smothered me with kisses, which was the Descent of the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove. Therefore, that was the climax of it all. That was putting the seal of approval on the journey; and you simply, now, delay your departure to tell and encourage those who are ready to hear it.

So, those who are ready to hear it are hearing it. And you can then spread the word, and tell it. You will tell it first as hearsay; but eventually you will tell it from experience, for the Evangelists in writing the story in our Gospels -- they simply related their own experience. They were not telling it from hearsay. They told exactly what happened to them, but they told it for reasons known to them in the third person. So they spoke of "him" constantly, but they are really telling their own experience. But no one in my spirit world has curtailed my tongue; so I was not commanded to tell it in the third person. I was simply told to tell it, and so I tell it as I must tell it, in the first person, for I am telling and relating my own experience.

Everything spoken of in Scripture concerning the Lord Jesus Christ I have experienced. But I am limited while I "wear" this "garment" -- with all the weaknesses of the "garment," I have assumed it -- all the limitations of the "garment" of flesh and blood, I have assumed it, and must continue to assume it until that moment in time when I take it off, and take it off for the last time. Yet, I am one with those who have not yet taken it off, because there's only one Father. So, I cannot crow -- I cannot raise my voice and simply yell, "I did it," although the 22d Psalm does end on a note of that nature: Posterity will sing His praises, and they will all say the Lord has wrought it.

All the things -- the horrors of that 22d Psalm, beginning with the cry, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" and all the pleas that he makes to be delivered from all the things round about him; but in the end, the Lord wrought it, and unborn tomorrows will hear that it was done -- it was accomplished; and that will encourage them to go on through the "furnaces of affliction."

"But how long, how vast, how severe" these furnaces before man actually discovers himself as God the Father "were long to tell."

But he will discover it, and he will know he is God the Father; for there is only God.

Meanwhile, you take what I've told you so far concerning the Law, and apply it. Apply the Law. Your dreams, may I tell you? are most encouraging -- most encouraging. One who saw her husband encased in all kinds of limitations from the hips down, and before her eyes they all began to crack and break and fall apart, and then he jumped and danced for joy. So, take it just as you saw it. He is released; he has been freed from the restrictions, whatever they were, in the immediate present -- completely freed. And many of you have these wonderful experiences.

Another one who sits next to her tonight, she had the dream of a wedding, and I was the only one -- seemingly -- that they would discuss. I sat to her right at a very long table, but across the table; and they all wondered why Neville is here, because this was a Jewish wedding. And yet, she knew that I was going to give the main speech of the evening. "Why is he here?" And so, I spoke in my own tongue, but each man heard me in his own tongue wherein he was born. And those who thought, because they were all Jewish, that they would not accept me -- all but one accepted me. The one who was controversial in the beginning -- he didn't understand one word that I said, but all the others that he thought would not accept me -- well, I thought that was the most marvelous vision that she had.

And many of them, one after the other, -- one has had one. I will tell her now from the platform that she and her husband -- In her dream, she saw a snake -- a rattlesnake, and the husband said, "I must take off the rattlers first"; so he began to take off the rattlers, and she handed him a hammer to beat it and to beat the snake to kill it. And in beating it, she awoke.

Now, that is a different kind of a dream. That's a symbol of sex. You cannot crush out sex on this level. It has to be something entirely different. You don't crush it out. You start to crush it out, and strange, peculiar dreams will possess you. It has to be transcended in the most normal, natural manner. It's not really transcended until you ascend into Heaven. That comes when your body is split from top to bottom, and you -- like a fiery serpent -- ascend into Heaven. When you see that golden, liquid light at the base of your spine, after your body is severed in two from top to bottom, and you see that pool of golden, living, liquid light, and you fuse with it and you become it, and like a fiery serpent, up you go into Heaven, and you take it by force. You take it violently.

Now the energies that went down into generation are now reversed up into regeneration. But while they are still down, if you try to kill it, as many people do, from the early church members of the Catholic Church, -- his name was Origen. He had himself castrated, that he would not be tempted by the women that he was teaching. He was one of the true early fathers of the church. He was born -- or, rather, he died one hundred years before Augustine was born. That's how early he was. He came in the Second Century A.D.; and he was one of the moving spirits in the formation of the early church which was the Catholic Church. And you read the story in the Encyclopedia Britannica. His name was Origen, and he castrated himself that he may not be disturbed when he had to face women and teach them the mystery of Christ. But he still could not cut it out that way. You can castrate the man, or woman, but it will still be in his imagination; and his dreams will still be of that nature. So, you cannot hit it and kill it. It's simply something that leaves you by a reversal of energies. It turns from generation into regeneration.

The Pattern Man

17 July 1968 by Neville

The Bible is a mystery, to be known only by revelation. You can sit down and think about it and rationalize from now to the ends of time; if it is not revealed in you, you will not know it. And the majority of the teachers of the world take the traditions of men and teach it as fact; and so we come, then, to one Bible with these preconceived misconceptions of the great revelation of God to man.

So tonight we are taking the Pattern Man. Every one who has heard of Jesus Christ thinks of him as a man. Jesus is not a man; he is the man -- the only man -- who is buried in every child born of woman, and who will rise in every child born of woman. And when he rises in us, then we and the Lord Jesus Christ are one. He comes only to fulfill Scripture. Man goes, building on this world of ours -- it's perfectly all right, -- let him do it, -- he's encouraged to do it; but the story of Jesus is to fulfill Scripture. He said, "I have come only to fulfill Scripture. Scripture must be fulfilled in me." (See Mark 14:49)

And beginning with Moses and the law and the prophets and the Psalms,, he interpreted to all, all the things concerning himself; for the Scripture was not the New Testament, -- it was only the Old. So, when you spoke of the Scriptures in that day, you only had one Scripture, and that was the Old Testament. So the Old Testament was a prophecy, and the New fulfills it; and He is the New. So, He is the Pattern Man in every child born of woman. So, he's not a man; he is the man, the perfect man; and this Perfect Pattern awakens and unfolds in us.

Now, we are told in the last chapter of Zechariah: "The lord will become king over all the earth, and in that day the Lord will be one, and his name one." (Zechariah 14:9)

If you are born into the family of the Browns, you automatically -- regardless of the name given you -- you are a Brown. So, you may be given the name of John, but nevertheless you are John Brown, if you are born into the family whose name is Brown. Well, all are being born into the one body whose name is Jesus. So, in the end, every one will be Jesus; for "in that day the Lord will be one, are His name one." (Zechariah 14:9)

You will not lose your identity. I will know you in this world of Caesar, and I will know you by your name, a friend of yours. But in the end, when you are born in the body of Jesus, you're still the John that I know here, but you are Jesus; and I will see you, and see you as Jesus, for there's only, in the end, only one man, -- the Perfect Man, the Pattern Man, and that man is Jesus. And Jesus and the Lord God Jehovah are One! They aren't two gods; they aren't two lords. It's only one God, -- "only one body, only one spirit, only one hope . . . . only one God and Father of all." (Ephesians 4:4-6)

I know it seems strange to many who have not had the experience, because they have been trained differently, and you can't blame any one. I came out of a family of Christians, -- at least, we think we are Christians; and I am quite sure that my family today would be shocked beyond measure to hear me say what I am now saying. I know this past year in Barbados, discussing it with my sister, and she is trained as I am trained, or was trained, -- but this is before the vision. And before the vision, certainly I believed in Jesus as a man -- trained as any Christian in the world, believed that he was a man, born of a woman who knew not a man in some strange miraculous manner; and then came the vision, the actual experience of the mystery of Christ.

As Paul tells us in his letter to Timothy: "Great indeed, we confess, is the mystery of our religion." (First Timothy 3:16, Revised Standard Version)

Well, if it's a mystery, then it isn't history; for history is certainly not a mystery, for history is based upon facts. So, there's no mystery to the facts of life. And if the Bible is based upon secular history, then it's not a mystery. But Paul, he said: "Great indeed, we confess, is the mystery of our religion!" (First Timothy 3:16, Revised Standard Version); and he uses the word "mystery" no less than twenty times in his letters. He said: "And God has made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his purpose, which he set forth as a plan in Jesus Christ for the fulness of time." (Ephesians 1:9,10, Revised Standard Version)

So, when the time is full in you, in every one, that plan erupts. And everything said of Him in Scripture, which you were taught to believe was secular history, proves itself in you to be supernatural history. It's a history of salvation. You are "saved" by that Pattern -- that perfect pattern.

So, he was born in a supernatural manner. You'll be born in a supernatural manner. And if his name was Jesus, you remain the same -- John or Mary, whatever your name is -- but you are Jesus by reason of that "birth," for you are born supernaturally. It comes so suddenly, it comes so unexpectedly; you don't look forward to it because you were not taught to believe that it is going to happen this way. You were taught to believe that some time in Eternity, if you are a good person in the eyes of Him who is your Savior, that then He will decide whether He will save or not. While not a thing on the outside would help, nevertheless you depended upon His grace, whether He would save you, when all of a sudden you discover He was in you all along!

The whole story of Christ is wrapped in man as a pattern, but it can't erupt in man until a certain moment in time. At that moment nothing can stop it! You may be on a journey at the moment, and certainly not thinking of this, when suddenly the whole thing unfolds within you. And the drama takes the same time as mentioned in Scripture: it takes twelve hundred and sixty days, as told us in Scripture.

In the last chapter of Daniel, a book written six hundred years B.C., Daniel said, "How long to the end of these wonders?" (Daniel 12:6) Not a statement is made as to when you begin to count, but: "'How long will it be to the end of these wonders?' . . . and he who stood above the water, he said to him: 'A time, times, and half a time.'" (Daniel 12:6,7)

The Ancients counted a "time" as a year, and a year to the Ancients was three hundred and sixty days. They divided the three hundred and sixty days by twelve, making twelve periods of thirty days. Then a half of that would be a half of a time, which would be a hundred and eighty days. So, a time was a year; times, two moreyears; and then half a time. Well, you multiply it and add it up, and you will see it comes to one thousand two hundred and sixty days, as told us in Revelation -- the 11th chapter of Revelation: "And my witnesses will come and prophecy for one thousand two hundred and sixty days." (Revelation 11:3)

Well, this erupted in me on the 20th day of July 1959, in this City of San Francisco. On the 6th day of December was the second eruption of the same year '59. On the 8th day of April of 1960 was the third eruption. And then on the first day of January of 1963 for the fourth eruption. When you add from the 20th day of July 1959 to the first day of January 1963, you will see it comes to

1,260 days -- right to the day. I had no idea that Scripture was so literally true, but not on this level, for the birth was certainly not a physical birth. Yet, I was taught as a child to believe that Jesus' birth was a physical birth, and they came from some physical section of time and place to find a little physical child. But in reading Scripture after the event, you see the whole thing was a drama taking place, not on earth, but taking place in Heaven, for He is made to say: "I am not of this world. You are from below, I am from above. You are of this world, I am not of this world." (John 8:23)

So, he is telling you in the most graphic manner what takes place in man. He is the Pattern -- the pattern of a New Man that unfolds that takes the man from this world and puts him into an entirely different world called by men "The Kingdom of Heaven." Until you are "born from above," you cannot in any manner enter the Kingdom of God (John 3:3); and you don't acquire it. It's all by grace. But that grace was "in the beginning . . . " (John 1:1), "for He chose us in Him before the foundation of the world." (Ephesians 1:4)

So, we are all chosen in the one body. The one body fell for a deliberate purpose; and we continue within the one body when the time is fulfilled and the body begins to erupt to fulfill its purpose. You and I are "born" in this manner, and we discover the Fatherhood of God in this manner. We discover the section of the torn part of the Temple in this manner, and then we find the complete satisfaction of what has taken place in us when the Dove descends upon us individually. But you read it in the story as something that took place two thousand years ago, and there it stopped. Then we are on the outside, hoping in some strange way, through our efforts, that He will see our efforts and then add them all together and we will acquire merit, and that He will save us because of acquired merit. You cannot, by any effort on your part, bring about this birth or enter the Kingdom of God.

It's all grace, grace, grace, -- and still more grace! So, we are told that grace and truth come through Jesus Christ. Well, grace is God's gift of Himself to man. That's grace.

People think of grace as something else; but, actually, in the Scriptures the word "grace," of which so much is said today as "he has charisma"; they spoke of the Kennedys as charismatic. They were those who had charisma, meaning that a peculiar spiritual force seemed to have moved them. Well, "charis" is the root of the word "grace," meaning a gift from God. And God's gift to man is God Himself!

God becomes man, that man may become God. So, that's God's gift. What greater gift could He give me than Himself? Well, He gives me the ultimate, -- that's Himself. So He "dies" by becoming me. He has to empty Himself of His glory to take upon Himself the limitation of this slave; and He "wears" this slave throughout unnumbered generations, for I didn't begin in my mother's womb, and I do not end in the grave. You and I began unnumbered generations ago. But at a moment in time predetermined by Him Who gave Himself for us, we erupt; and erupting, we find that we are He!

So, God becomes as I am, with all my weaknesses -- all my limitations, that I may become as He is, without weakness, without limitation -- free beyond measure. And without this Pattern in us, it could not work. He could not mold us from without, and make us what He desires to make us. He had to enter us. So, we are the grave in which God is buried.

God Himself entered the tomb, which is man, and He lay down in that tomb with man and shared with me my visions of Eternity, until I awake and see Jesus. And Jesus is whom, then, I become! For everything said of Him, as they think, erupts within you, -- you experience. You don't hear it coming from without; y actually experience it; so you are talking then, from then on, from experience -- not from theory. You don't speculate. If He was born from above, and you are born from above; if the infant child is brought to you as the sign of your birth, as it was brought in the cave -- as we call it in Scripture; and if there are witnesses there to record this birth, -- the child was not the thing born; the child was the evidence of something that was born. God was born. So, you are told in Scripture: "And this shall be a sign unto you." (Luke 2:12) What sign? "You shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger." (Luke 2: 12)

So, they went in haste, and they found just as it was told. They found what The sign of a birth. The child wasn't the thing that was born; that is the symbo of a birth. Well, what was born? Man was born as God!

For you are told: "and that thing -- " and the word is called "thing" -- "that thing which shall be born of you shall be called holy, the Son of God." (Luke 1:24). So when you are "born," then that is the thing.

Well, how do I know that I am "born from above"?

I felt the whole thing coming from inside, -- that is, from the whole head exploding; and something is coming out -- and I am coming out -- out of a grave. But, within a matter of moments, here comes the child; here comes this "infant wrapped in swaddling clothes," placed in your hands, with the same heavenly smile that is told in Scripture. And, then, the whole thing dissolves.

On the heels of that, a few months later, comes the discovery of the Father-hood of God. And this is the most fantastic thing, because when it happened to me, I could hardly believe this thing. Had I gone off my rocker?

I went to bed quite innocently in a normal manner, as I did night after night; and here, this night, my head begins to explode, -- and you feel you are exploding, and you wonder: "Is this the last moment in time for me? Is this what the world calls a 'massive hemorrhage'?"

Not having had anything wrong with my head prior to this, you entertain thi thought, because the whole thing is simply intensifying, and your head becomes more and more vibrant, and you cannot arrest it. You can't stop it, and it in-creases in intensity; and when it reaches the apex of intensity, there is an ex-plosion. And all of a sudden, standing before you is the David -- not a David, but the David of Biblical fame. And he looks at you, and you know he is your so and he knowsthat you are his father. Here you are, admiring and drinking in the beauty -- sheer beauty. You can't describe the beauty of David. People have tried to paint him. There is a sculpture called "The David"; it can't come near the David -- that living reality -- that comes before you!

Well, who is he? In Scripture, Jesus said, "He called me Father." (See Lu 20:44.) Well, Jesus tells us in the Scripture that: "I am the Father. He who sees me sees the Father." (John 14:9) "How can you say, Shaw us the Father? Have I been with you this long and you do not knowme, Philip? Hewho hath seen me hath seen the Father." (John 14:9)

And, if I am a father, there must be a son. And then, where is my son? And here comes David to fulfill Scripture, for he only comes to fulfill Scripture. For the prophecy was -- and these are the words in the mouth of David: "The Lord said unto me, Thou art my son. Today I have begotten thee." (Psalm 2:7) Read it in the Second Psalm, a psalm written one thousand years B.C.; and these are the words of David.

Now, in the 89th Psalm the Lord comes upon David: "I have found David, and he has called unto me, Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation." (Psalm 89:26) So, here you find yourself fulfilling Scripture; and here, as you read the Gospels, he says: "I am only here to fulfill Scripture." (See Mark 14:49) He didn't raise one finger to change the world of Caesar. He knew that every one born of woman was enslaved by the body that they wore.

You could be born in a castle or born in a hovel; you are a slave of the body that you "wear," because of the ambitions of that body, the desires of that body. So, if you wear it for ten years or a thousand years, you get up in the morning and you bathe it and you shave it and you feed it, and then you allow all the normal functions of nature to dictate. You are a slave of it! If it's in pain, you're in pain.

So, he knew that even though one calls himself a Pharoah or a King, and one a slave, all were slave of the body that they "wore." He made no effort to change the world of Caesar.

"Whose coin is this? Caesar's. Well, render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." (Matthew 22:21; Mark 12:17; Luke 20:25) He's not concerned about that. He's only concerned about the Kingdom of Heaven - the "new birth" that will set man free. For, no matter how long I live here, or how much I hold as things in this world, I am still a slave -- a slave of the things.

The day you buy a chair, you pay rent from then on. Let some one give you a table, and you accept the gift and from then on, you buy some place or pay rent for some place to house the table. You either give it away or, when you cannot use it any longer, you put it in storage and pay rent on it. You buy one thing in this world, and from then on you are a slave of it! And He knew that; and so brought freedom to the world, and the freedom comes with a "second birth"; and that "birth" is the "birth from above," not the birth from below.

Every one born from the womb of woman is a slave. Every one "born" from the skull of man -- by "man," I mean generic Man -- is set free; and that is told us in Paul's Letter to the Galatians. (See Galatians 4:22-27.) He said, We have two mothers; one is Hagar who bears children into slavery, and one is Jerusalem, called Sarah in Scripture (Old Testament), and she bears them into freedom. One is from above, and one is from below.

So, no matter who you are, how wealthy you are, how strong you are as a body, it's still a slave. But when you are "born from above" -- when you take off this "garment" for the last time, you immediately take on that immortal garment, the body of glory, for you're in the Body of Jesus. So, he is not a man, as the Christians believe and pray to a man on the outside; he is the Man, but the man who was crucified in us, and who rises in us individually, one after the other. Now, when he rises, you are set free! When he rises in me, and I am He, and my name must be One, for in the end the Lord's name is One, -- not two.

So, I will be of the Body of Jesus, one body, and of the name of Jesus; therefore the name Jesus; yet I'll be Neville. You'll know me, and know me as Neville, but you will know me as Jesus. I will know you as Peter or Mary, or any other name; but I'll know you as Jesus after you are "born from above," because Scripture must be fulfilled, for the Word of God cannot be broken.

So, we are told: Do not add to the words of God, do not take from the words of God, (Deuteronomy 4:2) -- leave them just as they are. But throughout the centuries our scholars, in translating, they bring their own prejudice to the Bible, and they insert. That's why it is essential that year after year new editions must come out, to see where these zealous people have been carried away by their own preconceived misconceptions and incorporated that misconception into Scripture. And you'll find it time and again. So, it always calls for a new edition to delete these misconceptions. But even then, those who are called upon to do the job, they will bring their misconceptions too.

But after the eruption takes place in man, it's all by vision; so you don't really care what they say. It's what has taken place in you, and you didn't do it consciously. The whole thing happened. And, so, you didn't sit down to compose some workable philosophy of life. The thing just happened! Well, if it happens in this way, then you tell it, so you will relate your own experience. If it doesn't fit their concept, it's perfectly all right. You relate your own experience.

But you will find that the same pattern will be followed by every one "born from above." So, you are on very solid ground. You tell it; and if the whole, vast world rises up in opposition, it doesn't matter, -- you tell it. Record it, if you will; but leave it as a record and a witness, for we are all called upon witness the truth of Scripture.

Now, there must be two witnesses if my evidence is to "hold water." If there are not two, it's thrown out of court. Well, when two different persons agree in testimony, it's conclusive; and, so, if I tell my story and go on record, and put it into written form, and then you have an identified experience and see that then, you and I are the two witnesses. Can we find Scriptural support for our experience? I then search the Scriptures, and I find in Scripture support for what has happened to me. So, I have the external witness of the Word of God -- the written word of God; then I have the internal witness of the Living Word of God as it unfolded within me, paralleling that which is the external Word of God.

Then what does it matter what the world will tell me? What does it matter what any one will tell me? I can only say to every one: You wait. God is merciful and patient, and in His own good time He will unfold it within you. It may come this night. It may come before the evening goes. Who knows? "It comes like a thief in the night," (Second Peter 3:10) but it hasn't a thing to do with any external behaviour on the part of a man. You can go to church every day of your life. You can go to church and give to the poor, and do all the things on the outside, -- it hasn't a thing to do with the moment of eruption.

You could, this night, be coming from a bar and be drinking until you can't even see clearly, and that night may be the night that He Who doesn't judge your human behaviour erupts within you. Because in the end, all things are forgiven. The Lord cried on the cross: "Father, forgive them. They know not what they do (Luke 23:34)

But man is taught to believe, I must conform to what man believes is the right thing; and so, unless I do that, then I'm punished. They think of a God who punishes. They can't believe Scripture, that God is infinitely merciful. I mean, infinite mercy, not just a little bit of love. You stand in His presence, the Risen Lord, and it's Infinite Love; and yet you know when you are drawn into His presence by a power that you could not resist that you are capable of the unnumbered, unlovely things that man is, and you know that you've done them, and you still feel you could continue to do them; and, yet, in His presence you ask one simple little question, -- that is, He asks it of you, and you answer as though you were divinely prompted. He embraces you, and you fuse with the Body of the Risen Lord, and become one body. From then on, you are that body; and those whose eyes are opened spiritually, when they meet you, they meet you and see you as that Being. I have had that experience unnumbered times from those whose eyes spiritually are opened.

On this level, -- yes, a little man, a weak man, capable of all the silly little things that men are capable of; yet, when the body sleeps and He Who is awake within me wakes, they see that man. And that's the man that I will, when this body drops for the last time, be -- the Immortal Being, for that Being has been awakened within me, -- and I am not unique. I am one of every child born of woman. Regardless of race, regardless of nation, regardless of anything, we are all one; in one body, and that body is the Man, the Pattern Man. And the Pattern Man is the Lord Jesus Christ, who is God Himself!

He is not some little thing. That is the Universal God, Who is crucified on man -- not on a little piece of wood, where the churches of the world are taking pieces of wood to show you the cross that was His. As the writer Mark Twain said, -- he traveled across the world and went to the different churches and all the priests showed him -- that is, the Protestant priests and the Catholic Priests, and all the others, -- pieces of wood that came from the cross. He said, If that was the cross, it could build a house. Yet a man carried it -- a man called Simon, a normal man, carried the cross, so we're told. If he carried that cross, he might just as well lift up this house, for every church that he visited as he crossed Europe had a piece of the wood from the cross! They also had a piece of the cloth that he wore -- the robe; put it all together, it would actually clothe an army -- a huge army. That was what he wore! So, every one with their silly little things to enslave the minds of man, --

Well, this is a mystery. This has not a thing to do with human history. It is divine history. It's the history of salvation. And God actually became man, and God's only name as told me in Scripture is "I Am." And the word "Jesus," if you break it down to its actual root, is "I Am." It begins: "Jod He Vau," which is the beginning of the name "Jehovah" -- Jod He Vau He; and that's how you spell Jesus in Hebrew. The word "Jesus" in Hebrew is "Joshua. "Jeshua," -- that is the name; and it is the same name that you spell "Jehovah." So, the Lord God Jehovah is "I Am."

"Go and tell them I Am has sent you. That is my name forever, and by this name I shall be known throughout all generations." (Exodus 3:14, 15)

So, can you say, "I am"? That's God, but you don't know it, because it has not erupted as yet, but that's God! That's God-in-man. As I walk the earth though I lose my memory, -- I do not know where I am -- who I am, but I know I am because I can't stop knowing I am; and that is God! And the day will come, the Pattern -- that perfect pattern -- that was buried and fused with me in the beginning -- will erupt like a seed erupts. But you are told in that mystery of the seed, -- he said, "A seed, except it fall into the ground and dies, it remains alone." (John 12:24) Well, if it dies, it brings forth much. So, He fell -- the Great Seed, the great Word of God, which is God Himself -- planted himself in us, containing within Himself the pattern -- the plan of salvation. And, so, as the plan comes to its fulness of time, it erupts, and erupting in us, it's now something we are observing on the outside. We are experiencing it on the inside. We are actually going through the experience in the first person, present. We are the main actor in the drama.

Here, may I tell you, Jesus is the only reality; but every one you meet will one day know he is Jesus. In the sleep, he doesn't know it; and because he sleeps, he has a nightmare, and he kills his brother, he steals from his brother, and therefore he is stealing from himself, for there is no "other"!

Any time I plot and plan to take from a seeming "other" for my own personal gain, I am simply robbing myself, because there is no "other." There is no other, for there's only Jesus. So, in the end, when they looked up and their eyes were opened and the brain began to completely explode, they looked, and it was Jesus only, -- nothing but Jesus.

So, when people say, "I have another way to God," forget it. There's only one way to God. He said: "I am the way, I am the truth, I am the life. No man comes unto the Father except by me." (John 14:6)

You can't go to the Father and find the Father unless you go through the Pattern Man, which is Jesus. That Pattern either unfolds within you, or you'll never find the Father. And when it erupts within you, here, you know you are the Father, because the Father's only begotten son is calling you "Father." And, yet, you are a man walking this earth with all the weaknesses of man; but you will not in Eternity see the Father, for the Father is not seen by any one but the Son. No one has ever seen the Father; but the Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he had made Him known. So, "No one knows who the Son is except the Father, and no one knows who the Father is except the Son and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal it." (Luke 10:22)

So, when the Son explodes within you, and the dust settles and He stands before you, then you know who you are. You are the Father! For the Son calls you "Father." And you know the relationship; there is no doubt, no uncertainty, in your mind as to this relationship between you, the Father, and the Son called David. So, you see that David is not a physical being.

People expect that David is some physical being that lived one thousand years B.C., and that he had this, that, or the other. It isn't so. David is an eternal state, a spiritual state; and I am speaking of a spiritual drama -- not a physical drama.

We are passing through what we think is a real world. This is a shadow world -- a world where we are banished; but if one understood the symbolism of Scripture, we are banished for "four hundred years." Well, it's not four hundred years as you and I measure time. Four hundred is the numerical value of the 22d, which is the last letter of the Hebrew alphabet; and that last letter has the cross as its symbol. "Taw," that's the last letter; the 22d letter of the Hebrew alphabet is "taw." Its symbol is a cross; its numerical value is four hundred. So, I will banish you for four hundred years while you wear the cross. As long as we wear these crosses (indicating the body) that are slaves, we are on the journey. Then I'll bring you out and set you free, and give you bliss beyond your wildest dreams, because He is going to give you Himself. But you must first go into slavery.

That was shown me so vividly in a vision of mine. I came upon a scene, the most glorious scene of flowers. They were huge sunflowers; but the flower was not a flower; it was a human face! They were all rooted in the ground, just beautiful sunflowers. If one moved, they all moved in concert. If one smiled, they all smiled. If one bent over, they all bent over. And I, walking among the -- I knew, in spite of my weakness and my limitations, that I at that moment enjoyed a greater sense of freedom than all of them put together. They had not gone out. They were in a state of infinite joy and peace and innocence. They had not gone through the story of experience. And the whole journey is from Innocence, through Experience to Awakened Imagination. That's the journey of man.

So, you must come out of the state of Innocence and enter this world of experience -- and it's a hellish world; it's a world of hell, where everything dies. No matter how long it lives, it dies. The stars die. Everything dies in this world. So, we enter the world of death wearing a cross, which is the cross of the slave; and then we are brought out by this Pattern Man erupting within us, and then having gone through the experience, we are immortal beings, -- but this time, fully awake -- not just all anchored like beautiful flowers who move in concert. We are individualized, and yet one body. We do not move in concert. We could agree to work in concert, but we are still individuals. Well, they are no individuals; they are all one grand being, moving together. I saw it so vividly this night.

So, you and I who came out, -- it's the story of the Prodigal Son. The first one didn't come out, but he didn't know he had all that the Father possesse The father said to him, "But, my son, all that is mine is yours," (Luke 15:31, Revised Standard Version) but he didn't know it. He was envious of the second one, who went out and wasted his money, and came back to find everything in abundance: the robe, the ring, the staff, and the fatted calf.

He said: "But this, your brother, was dead, and is alive; he was lost, and is found." (Luke 15:32) You have never left my house. You were never lost; you hadn't died. One must die to be made alive -- the mystery of life through death.

So, you and I were chosen in His Body in the beginning of time, before the foundation of the world. Then He fell, bringing all of us with Him -- a deliberate fall. And then we were fragmented, and started on our individualization. And when we have gone through all that we had to go through, then He erupts in us, and we and He are One.

Tonight you dwell upon it, and set your hope fully upon the eruption within you; and I hope that in the not-distant future it happens in you -- all of you, individually, because, no matter what you have heard in the past -- no matter what you have experienced in the past -- concerning the world of Caesar, it fades into nothing. It fades into nothing! And when people say to me, as some one called me today, a friend of mine I left at my last meeting, the night she was there. She was sitting in a little Mexican restaurant down in Laguna -- she and three others who were at the meeting that last night in Los Angeles. They had some Mexican dish and a glass of beer, and she had two cigarettes. Then all of a sudden she said, "Why, isn't this a strange feeling -- oh, what a strange feeling!" and she went over this way, and she was gone, -- just completely gone.

But she is awake! She was awake when she was here. So, she slips from mortality into immortality. All the others who will slip like that, or after painful exit, -- they are restored to life just as they were before, in a body the same as before, only young -- unbelievably, unaccountably young, in a world just like this, but not this one (Marta). She has gone into Heaven, because she was "born from above"; so she has immediate transition from a body of flesh and blood to one of glory in the Body of God, which is the Body of the Lord Jesus Christ. So, I have no tears to shed for her -- none, because she has been released from a body. It was a nice body; it wasn't in pain. It was just that moment in time when she slipped, and she was gone.

To all the others, death is a blessing -- to every one who has not been "born from above." Do you know why? It compels every one who dies to modify and quite often to radically alter the ideas they championed while they were here on earth. They believe, because of their external efforts to be good, that suddenly some one is going to come and meet them at the grave. They find themselves restored to life and young -- unaccountably young and new, nothing missing — no teeth missing, hair not missing, arms not missing; everything is perfect, in a world just like this, to continue the journey. And, then, they wonder, What did that minister tell me? What did that Priest tell me about what follows? Why, he was a liar. No, -- he was a liar. only because he didn't know. The blind leading the blind.

No man can ordain you to do the work of God. You are either sent to do it, or you are simply going to have some little man-made religion and call it God-given. As you are told in the Book of Romans: "How can some one preach unless he is sent?" (Romans 10:15, Revised Standard Version) And who sends him? The Risen Christ sends him.

So, you stand in His presence, and you are sent! And when you speak, then you speak with the authority of experience. You are not rationalizing; you are not in any way speculating what ought to be. But all these leaders of different groups -- religious groups, they are telling God what He ought to do -- always what He ought to do, not what God has planned to do. So, they tell you that He is going to make you suffer, and they will not preach the God of Love.

God is Infinite Mercy, but man has to pass through the furnaces of experience -- not furnaces of fire, as they talk about it, but the furnace of experience.

Do you know any greater burning than to lose some one you love dearly -- a mother losing a child? It doesn't go off for the night or the day or the week, or the month, or even the year. That's burning, -- a separation between two who love each other. Isn't that burning? When you can't sleep; you are all carried away, -- that's burning. That's a fire. That's hell.

So, you are in hell right now. All day long, the loss of a business, the loss of face; a man has a business and he's so proud of it, he joins the best clubs, and he looks down on every one who can't get into that club. Then comes a blow and he loses the business and he can't afford to remain in the club, and he has to beg now for credit, and he has no credit. He goes to the grocer's, where he was so proud before, and the grocer considers whether he will give him credit or not. Now, isn't that hell?

So, all these are the hells, the furnaces, through which man passes right here on earth. And when he leaves this hell, unless he's been "born from above, he continues in hell until that cross is completely worn, and it's worn by Christ Jesus, because Christ Jesus is "I Am." That's His name. And He's wearing this cross. When it is turned to dust, he will still find himself on a cross just like this that bleeds if you cut it; and it's solid as this is solid, in a world as solid as this world is solid, and he continues; and if he passes through an other stage called death, he finds himself restored to life and continues the journey until he resurrects.

There is a vast difference between restoration and resurrection. Resurrection is from above -- the "birth from above," and restoration is simply the passage through the gate called death to be restored into a similar body, but young, unaccountably new.

So, I tell you, the Pattern is in you. Don't beg for it, -- it's in you! The perfect pattern. And Jesus Christ is not a man. He is the man -- the only man -- that saves! He's in you as a Pattern -- the Pattern Man; and, when you least expect it, it's going to erupt like a seed, and then the flowers will take place in the most dramatic form, the flowers being these mystical dramatic acts: the birth; the discovery of the Fatherhood of God; the tearing of the curtain of the Temple, which is your own body, and the ascent of your own being into Heaven like a serpent; and then the descent of the dove upon you, smothering you with love and affection, which is the symbol of the Holy Spirit satisfied with the work that He has done. That's the seal of approval. So, the whole thing unfolds within you.

Now, let us go into the Silence; and in the Silence, on this level of Caesar, conjure a scene which will imply the fulfillment of your dream -- any dream. Its potency is in its implication -- the scene. What would you see if it were true? Well, conjure that scene, and try to believe in the reality of the scene that you have conjured. And when you open your eyes upon the world of Caesar, and it's not objectified, walk through the door as though it were true, in confidence that it will become true. Now, let us go. Good.

Now, are there any questions, please?

(Question is inaudible on the tape)

Neville: No, my dear; when you are awakened from above, there is no doubt whatsoever in your mind. If you saw some one who has made his departure from this world, that's not resurrection. That's restoration. The Bible speaks of two births and one death. But one death doesn't mean that when you depart from this world now, that is death, because you will continue in a world that also dies.

No; the death -- when Christ died for us, that was the death of which he spoke in the Bible. There's only one death. It's God's death! So, Christ took us all within His Body, and Christ fell for us. So, one Being dies; that is the death. The little departure from here is like some one leaving the stage, and you will find that he goes through this but he comes back at another scene. That's restoration. But death is simply the one death, and the only one who really died was the Lord Jesus Christ. He died.

(Several questions that are inaudible)

Neville: It's not a resurrection, but I will speak to those who are restored because I love them. They are not resurrected. I meet people night after night who were restored. I see my brother who died two years ago, my brother Lawrence. He's a young man now. When he died, he was painfully ill, and he looked old. He's only a year older than I am, but he looked much older, because he was in such pain for the last year and a half or two years of his life. But Lawrence, when I meet him, he's in his twenties, early twenties.

My mother, when she died at 61 was painfully ill and, oh, so very old looking when she died. I was sitting at home in New York City. At that moment, I felt so drowsy, I could not restrain the impulse to close my eyes; so I shut my eyes just because I couldn't hold them open. As I did, Mother appeared before me -- this blonde, blue-eyed beauty of about twenty years of age, brushing her hair, under an arbor of beautiful flowers. She was passionately fond of flowers, and had the most glorious rose bushes. I can see her now, morning after morning, with these two boys that were her little gardeners, giving them orders of what to do, especially with the roses. And she would graft her roses, and do all kinds of things. She loved them. I can see her in the garden now, with what she called a parasol. She wouldn't expose herself to the sun, as I do. I'm a sun fiend, and she loved to keep her lovely coconut skin, and she had a lovely, light skin, blue eyes, and blonde hair, and she didn't want it disfigured with the tropical sun; when we, the boys, -- you couldn't restrain us, -- were out in the sun, battered, coming in sunburnt. And, yet, to this day in my 60's, I am still in a way a worshipper of the sun. I love the sun.

But here was Mother, -- she came at that very moment. She was so alive and marvelous, I sat right down and wrote my sister Daphne and told her that Mother had recovered. She was so beautiful and so young. And Daphne sent me a wire saying, Mother has passed away. Then when she wrote me the letter a week later to give me the details of Mother's passage, it coincided with the hour that I saw her in New York City two thousand miles away. So, I know from experience that nothing dies. Mother wasn't resurrected; she was restored. And they marry there too, may I tell you; and they work there too, and they slave there, too, and they build their little castles on sand there, as they do it here.

Amundson, right now, is restored as a young man with the same drive that he left his seven hundred million dollars here last month. He couldn't take it with him, but he's going to rebuild it on the same sand, until that moment in time when he awakes and the whole is his; he doesn't have to do anything.

Are there any other questions?

(Question inaudible on the tape.)

Neville: Why, certainly, my dear. I have a family to support. I have to meet Caesar's demands upon me, paying taxes. I have no choice but to pay them. They don't ask me if they should raise them. You put a man in who promises you before you put him in that he's not going to raise taxes. He hasn't sat down in the seat before he puts another ten per cent on you, another twenty per cent on you; and he has four years, and you can't get him out, and he's going to put it on. And, so, I am in the world of Caesar. So, I go into a place -- last year I went in and bought something and it cost me so much; I go back expecting the same thing to find that they don't consult me, it's so much more. Don't keep a record of what you paid for flour and sugar and bread ten years ago, -- you'll go insane. You go in now and you buy the same items, and all of a sudden you don't have it. So, I am in the same world. As long as I am wearing this garment I am a slave, and I must be with all the slaves. When I take this garment off for the last time, which will be in this embodiment, I am immediately clothed in my body of glory in the Body of the Lord Jesus Christ, and I am one with Him, without loss of identity. But until then, man has to pass through the furnaces and play the world of Caesar, and Caesar isn't dead. They call him today, in our land, Johnson. In Russia they call him -- I don't know his name; it breaks my tongue even to pronounce it -- whatever the Russian name is. So, all these fellows are the Caesars of the world. Every head of a government is a Caesar. In Scripture, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." (Luke 20:25)

And, so, I have pain, too. If I drink too many, who knows? I may have a headache. I am not given over because I have been "born from above" that I can violate the little things of Caesar. If I overeat because I like it, -- well, I pay the price. I am not exempt. This body is something that I am wearing; and as long as I wear it, I either take care of it or abuse it. If I abuse it, then it will get even. And that's the law under which we live.

(Inaudible question on tape)

Neville: My dear, every one is going to come to the Father through the Perfect Man, known as the Lord Jesus Christ. It's a Pattern Man. Don't look upon Jesus as a man, but the Pattern Man; and that pattern either will be followed, or he will never find the Father, for the Father's only son is David, and it isn't Buddha, and it isn't Krishna; and he isn't any other name in the world. That son is David. He either comes through that channel, or he doesn't find the Father, for David can't call any one but God, "Father." And he isn't going to call Buddha "father," Krishna "father" or any one else. He's going to call the One whose name is "I Am." And, so, you will come through the one pattern. "No one comes unto the Father, except by me. I am the way, I am the truth, I am the life." (John 14:6)

It's the true way, the living way, and the only way. And these things will erupt within you. So, when they come, giving me all kinds of ways to go to God, -- some try to sell me the idea of diets to go to God. Stop eating meat; all right, then you will purify yourself, and you will go to God. Stop doing this, -- don't wear red any more because that's a bad color. It disagrees with the spirit they'll say. One lady would only wear a certain color because it was becoming to her, some one told her. So, she made it a law, like some divine revelation. You couldn't wear red; you couldn't eat onions. Well, can you imagine cooking without onions? Just imagine having to cook without a piece of garlic -- without onions. Well, now, she can't wear red, and God has splattered red all over the skies. See a sunset -- what a beautiful picture! A sunset -- that mass of red. Go into any garden and see red. And God does with all the colors what the artist can't do; He blends all the colors into one flower, and it's beautiful. Well, we can't put red with this, and so-and-so with that; so they have all these little -isms. Yet the Bible warns you against this. When Peter said, "I cannot eat the unclean thing, he fell into a trance and a sheep came down bearing all manner of food, and the Lord said to him in vision, That which I have cleansed I have cleansed. Slay and eat." (See Acts 10:15 and Acts 11:9)

So, they can't eat this, they can't eat that. If it disagrees with you, all well and good; but don't say it is unspiritual. He made everything for the food of man. Some one said, "Why do you take a drink? You are a man, and you are supposed to be a man 'born from above,' and you take a drink." I said, "Because I enjoy it." "But," he said, "that's not spiritual." I said, "Who is to tell me what is spiritual? Didn't God make it" Who on earth made alcohol? Didn't He make it in the grain, and then gave man the intelligence to extract it? Didn't He make it in the grape, and then gave man the intelligence to take it out? And you tell me not to exercise the palate that He gave me? Oh, I can indulge; I can overdo anything in this world. There isn't a thing that one eats that is good for him, that he cannot go to the extreme and make it unwholesome for him. I suppose that almost everything is good in itself; but eat excessively, and see if it is. So, that goes for everything in this world. Learn to discriminate. I must become discriminating in all my thoughts in this world; but don't tell me that there are taboos on things that God made. He made everything for man, and He made man for His own satisfaction.

Well, the time is up.

---oOo---

#1
S2

THE PERFECT LAW OF LIBERTY

2 April 1971

You should find tonight a very practical night, -- something that you can test -- take it tonight and prove it. We'll take it from Scripture, but something first with which, I think, you are all familiar. If you took a piece of steel that is magnetized, it does not differ in substance from the demagnetized piece of steel -- only in the arrangement of its molecules.

The rich man, the poor man, the beggar man, the thief are not different minds, but simply different arrangements of the same mind. There is only God in this world. So, when you say, "I am," and I say, "I am," it's the same God, but we have arranged the structure of our mind differently. We have different concepts of Self, -- that's all. But not one is better because he is richer than the one who is poor; these are only different arrangements of the structure of the mind.

Now Scripture tells us, -- and I am quoting now the Book of James -- the Epistle of James. James is really a letter of Jacob. The words "James" and "Jacob" are identical in Hebrew, Greek and in the Arabic tongue -- the same word. So, when they begin: "James, a servant of God and the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes in the dispersion," you can see at once it's simply a Christian revision of this Jewish letter. It's the letter of Jacob; and if you read it carefully, only twice do they insert and say "Jesus Christ, our Lord." All the others, -- there are eleven other times, -- it is simply "God." The Lord is God, not Christ. So, here it is really the servant of the Lord speaking; and he is giving us some fantastic instruction and very practical instruction. Now listen to it carefully. I am going to quote from the very first chapter of the Book of James:

"Be doers of the word, and not hearers only, for he who us a hearer and not a doer, is like a man who observes his natural face in the mirror; then goes his way, and at once forgets what he is like. But he who looks into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and perseveres, he will be blessed in his doing."

Now, how do I look into the law -- the perfect law which sets me free, the Law of Liberty? I look into my mind. I am now imprisoned. I have heard the sentence. I know exactly how long I'm supposed to serve. Now I look into the Law of Liberty in my mind, and I assume that I am free -- I am set free. How? I am not concerned. Who brought it about? I am not concerned. I simply look into the Perfect Law, the Law of Liberty, and I dare to assume that I am free.

If I dare to assume that I am free, I rearrange the structure of my mind -- the same mind that heard the sentence that I accepted when I heard it. Now I do not accept it. I look into the perfect law, the Law or Liberty; and if, as I am told in Scripture, I persevere, then I will actually receive that which I am doing. I must not forget what I have done and sleep this night as though I am in prison. For if I am now set free, where would I sleep? Let me know, -- exactly where would I sleep? Well, dare to assume that I am sleeping there now. If I sleep in the assumption that I am free, I am not in jail; even though the bars are there, I don't see them. I close my eyes against them.

#1
S2

As Blake tells us: "Man's perceptions are not bounded by organs of perception: he perceives more than sense (tho' ever so acute) can discover. And so Reason, or the ratio of all we have already known, is not the same that it shall be when we know more." [from "There Is No Natural Religion."]

If I take this tonight and test it, and it proves itself in the testing, then I have added to my knowledge; and so I know more than before I tested it. So, when I find myself up against something that seems beyond solution, I have found something that can solve it. All I have to do is to rearrange the structure of my mind.

So, I dare to assume that I am the man that I would be, and sleep as though I am. That is the rearrangement of that structure of the mind. I am the same being; I am Neville. I know exactly those that I knew before, but now I know them differently. I know them, now, as a freed man. But I must not be a hearer of what I heard in Scripture; I must be a doer. I must do it!

So, "Be not a hearer only," Be a doer in the full sense of the word so that actually I do it and persist, -- the word is "persevere" in Scripture.

The first chapter, the 22d through the 25th verses of the Epistle of James. So, I will simply do it; and though tomorrow I am confronted with the obvious facts of life that I am still in prison, it still doesn't matter. I did it, I am doing it, and I will continue to do it until that which I have done is perfectly externalized within my world. I am telling you this from experience. I know it.

If you go to jail and you stay five to ten years, -- all right, you know five years, and maybe you get off in six for good behavior; but when you are drafted into the Army, there is no date that you are promised where they let you out. You are "in" for the duration.

Well, I was drafted into the Army, seventeen millions of us. Well, I didn't ask the permission of any one; I only consulted myself. I looked around, and I knew what the world know: it was something that had to be done. But I must be honest with myself. I didn't want any part of it, but no part of it! Others would tell me, "Is that the act of a coward?" I didn't care what they said, -- "Is that being a good citizen?" I didn't care what they said. As I just said earlier, what we now know, which is called "Reason," -- it's a reasonable thing to do; we are at war, and we are all Americans. We should be going there because our country has declared war -- go in there and fight. And so, Reason tells us that should be done.

When I was drafted, I did not oppose it. They drafted me. They took me down to Camp Polk, Louisiana, for my basic training; and while I was there, I didn't want any part of it, and I dared to assume that I'm out of it. I made my normal, natural application as you have to do in the world of Caesar. Within 24 hours it came back, and it was simply rejected. It was signed, "Disapproved," and signed by my Colonel, a very nice gentleman. His name was Colonel Theodore Bilboe, Jr. His father was Senator from Mississippi. I said nothing.

My Captain said, "For your sake, Goddard, I am very, very sorry. I know exactly how you feel. You want to be with your wife and little girl. Your son is in Guadalcanal with the Marines, and you are now almost 38; and so I know, but I would like to go through this war with a man just like you at my side. So, I can't say that I am sorry for myself; I am sorry only for you."

I didn't say one word to him, or to the Colone; I didn't oppose it. That was the decision of "Caesar." Now I looked into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and I persevered in that law; and I "slept" that night as though I slept in my own home in New York City on Washington Square, where I lived on the 7th floor. I lived on that floor; it was a very large apartment -- two bedrooms, a lovely big living room, a dining room, a huge kitchen, and the foyer; and I slept in that place just as though I were there and not in the Army. I fell asleep in that state, having done all the normal things that would make me feel this arrangement is perfect. I rearranged the structure of my mind. Instead of seeing 25 men around me sleeping upstairs and knowing that there were 25 down below in the next area, I "slept" in my own bed with my wife in her bed and my little girl in her crib in the corner. I felt everything in that place just as though it's taking place, and I rearranged the structure of my mind, and fell sound asleep in that state.

At 4:00 o'clock in the morning, here comes a sheet of paper before my eyes and a hand from here down [indicating], with a pen in its hand; and the pen scratched out the word "disapproved," and it wrote in, in a bold script, "Approved." And then I heard the words: "That which I have done, I have done. Do nothing!" And then I awoke.

It was too early to disturb the 25 other fellows sleeping there, and I waited until the very first moment that I could leave that room, and went down to the latrine and shaved and bathed early, and came up filled with a glow that the whole thing was done. I walked in that assumption for the next nine days.

Nine days later, the same Colonel that disapproved my request called me in. He said, "Close the door, Goddard." So, I closed the door. He said, "Take a seat." He never asked me to take a seat in his presence before. I was a Private. You always stood in his presence, and never took a seat. Then he gave me all the reasons in the world why I should still be in the Army. He said, "Do you still want to get out?"

I said, "Yes, Sir."

He gave me another reason. "Do you still want to get out?"

I said, "Yes, Sir."

Another one; and when he exhausted all the reasons why I should be in the Army, I was still saying, "Yes, Sir."

He said, "All right, bring me another application and have your Captain sign it," which I did. And that day I was honorably discharged and out of the Army. I didn't run away; I was honorably discharged.

"When vision breaks forth into speech, the presence of Deity is assured," and who can oppose God? He said, "That which I have done, I have done. Do nothing!"

So, he thought he initiated the urge to let me go free. I looked into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and I persevered in that law; and he played his part, for I rearranged the structure of my mind.

I was convinced I wanted out, and I didn't ask any one's permission. I did not discuss it with any one as to why I should want out when seventeen million are being drafted, plus numberless girls to make a tremendous effort against this monstrous thing that was going on in Europe. I still wanted out. I did not take any one into my confidence as to why I wanted out. I had my 13 weeks' basic training, and then when I came out, they gave me my citizenship papers. Back in 1922 I could have been an American, but I just didn't have the time or the urge to get around to become a citizen; so I drifted on and drifted on and drifted on until after this little episode. That's why I went into the Army, or I would still be drifting through, being a citizen of Britain. But now I'm an American by adoption. And they gave it to me because I did fulfill a 13-week training course in the American Army.

So, I tell you, I know from experience how true this statement in James is. Read it carefully.

"Be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourself. For he who is a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like one who looks into the mirror and sees his natural face; and then he goes away and at once forgets what he looks like. But he who is a doer, he looks into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and perseveres. And when he does that, he is blessed in his doing."

That is, acting -- making the thing become alive within you. Now, he tells us in the same chapter: "Faith without works is dead; as the body apart from the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead."

He is not proposing that I substitute works for faith. Works are the evidence whether the faith I profess is alive or dead. I say I believe the story of Scripture. Well then, if I believe it, then do it!

He said, "Whatever you desire, believe you have received, and you shall."

If I really believe that, -- I can't say I believe by quoting the Apostle's Creed. That's not belief. Going to church and genuflecting before some man-made little cross, -- that's not Scripture. Do you really believe the doctrines, the teachings, of Scripture? Not the traditions of men, not the rituals, not the outer ceremonies; but the teachings of Scripture, -- "When you pray, believe that you have received, and you will." And: "All things are possible to him who believes." Well, do I believe that? Well then, believe it!

If I really believe that I am out of the Army, what and where would I be? Well, I would be at home, in my place a thousand miles away, on Washington Square. If I looked through the window, I would see the Holly Apartments; if I looked to the left, I would see Washington Square; if I looked to the right, I would see Sixth Avenue, -- it's now called "the Avenue of the Americas"; but then -- and still is to me, raised as I was there, -- it's still Sixth Avenue to me. And there I would look at Sixth Avenue. Well, I did that, that night. I saw Sixth Avenue, I saw Washington Square; and then I went through the entire apartment and touched objects with my imaginary hands.

#1
S2

Now, was that rational? The world would say that was the most irrational thing that one can do. Now, what is reason? The office of reason is simply to extract conclusions from premises.

Must my premises always be based upon the evidence of my senses? Must they always dictate what is rational to me? Well, having done this, and proved it to be a fact, "reason" doesn't mean to me what it means to the world. For, they would sleep in the Army; and I wrote a friend of mine who was a Freudian, and he practiced psychiatry in New York City. He was drafted, -- he was an Englishman, too; and he was drafted, and he was off in Florida -- a man my age.

So, when I got out, knowing exactly what I did, I wrote him a detailed letter telling him what I did, and how to do it. No, -- he was a Freudian, and that was something that didn't make sense to him. To him, the whole thing was centered in sex, not in this use of the imagination. All right, he didn't answer my letter. I got out in 1943 in the spring, in the month of April -- March or April of 1943. They drafted me November the 19th, 1942, and I got out in March, 1943.

When the war was over and all the other fellows were being discharged, he was discharged; and he said to me afterwards, "You know, Neville, I love to come to your lectures and to hear you because it's interesting. It's fairy. You turn my daily bread into the substance of fairy; but while I listen to you, you know what I do? I put my feet right down into the carpet, and I hold onto the sides of the chair to keep my sense of the reality and the profundity of things."

Well, he kept on holding to his little cot in the Army for another three years because he couldn't let go and put himself where he wanted to be. So, I am telling you how it's done. I am telling you how it's done from my own experience: that my perceptions are not necessarily bounded by organs of perception. I perceive more than sense, no matter how acute they are, could discover. My senses couldn't discover what I am seeing. Only in my imagination could it be done. I'm seeing the Holly Apartments, I am seeing Sixth Avenue, I am seeing Washington Square; I am seeing the bed, my wife, my child. I hadn't seen them in three months, but they are all there. I didn't bring sex into it. No, -- I didn't go to bed with her. There she was -- the girl I loved; she was in her own bed, and I in my own bed. We have twin beds. And my little girl was then just over a year -- not quite a year. She was born in June of 1942; this wss not yet June of 1943, so she was not yet a year old. Here is my sweet little child, Vicki, in her bed.

And I walked through the entire thing and touched all the objects, and felt them so normal and so natural, and came back to my bed and slept in it.

If any one was sensitive in that room, they would have seen me sleeping there. I was so natural to myself, they would have seen me -- actually seen me there.

And then the next day, he had a change of mind but he couldn't act upon it. He was resisting the change, but: "That which I have done, I have done. Do nothing!" So, he resisted it for nine days, and then called me in and told me to bring a new application, which I did. And that day I was out.

#1
S2

So, I tell you how it works. This is the most practical Law in the world. "He looks into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty." Doesn't that liberate you, if you look into the Law of Liberty?

Now, what are you now? The man, the woman, you really want to be? Well then, you are in prison, though you are not behind bars. You are imprisoned by your present concept. You are not behind bars; you are going to go home tonight and sleep as the man, the woman, you really don't want to be; so you are in prison. Now, "look into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and persevere." Do not only be a hearer of what to do. Do it, and "you will be blessed in the doing." That's what Scripture teaches. Go home and read it. I am not misquoting. I am quoting accurately from the Epistle of James in the New Testament, and this is the story that I am trying to tell every one in the world.

He said, "I am not in prison."

No, you are not in prison, not physically; but you are in prison. You may today need money, and you say, "I'm still not like the fellows who are behind bars in Sing Sing." All right, you are not behind -- behind in that, behind in this, and in the dunning note from all the places where you charge, -- you are "behind bars." You can't seem to find the necessary sum to pay them. All right, look into the perfect law of liberty. That's the "perfect law."

How do I do it? Rearrange the structure of your mind. The demagnetized piece of steel does not differ from the magnetized, only the arrangement of its molecules. And then one lifts up enormous weights when it is completely one-pointed. When all these molecules face in one direction, it's a power house. The other is scattered.

So, "let not the double-minded man think that he will in any way receive from the Lord," you are told in the same first chapter.

"If the double-minded man comes, who is unstable in all his ways, let him not think he will receive anything from the Lord."

What can you give a man who doesn't know what he wants? I've gone into a restaurant just to prove this principle, sat down, said to the waiter, "What would you like for a tip?" and he is embarrassed.

I said to my friend, "I'll give him what he wants within reason. I'm not going to give him any hundred-dollar bill, but I will give him, if he says a $5 bill." I didn't order that which warranted a $5 bill, and he was embarrassed and embarrassed and embarrassed. All he expected was exactly what he got. He just didn't know. He just had no concept of putting something -- of course, he didn't know it; so how could he put it to the test?

So, I am telling you, you rearrange the structure of your mind. That is all you do. It doesn't differ from Einstein's mind. There is only one Mind. There is only one God. There is only one Lord. Listen to it:

"One body, one spirit, one hope, one lord, one faith, ane baptism, one God and Father of us all, Who is above all, through all, and in all."

#1
S2

If He is in you, that's the same One with the one body, the one spirit; so I am not using a different mind. It's the same mind, but differently arranged?

Go into one room, and you see that some one doesn't know what to do with their furniture. Bring some one in who knows how to set a room, come back an hour later after she is through with it, and you will think you are in an entirely different home. My wife used to "pull" that on me all the time! I'd come home and think I had stepped into an entirely strange apartment and wonder if I'm really at home. She was hiding some other place. She had completely rearranged the structure of the furniture. It looked like an entirely different home. But she has that sense, how to do it, and so she did it.

So, with what you have, -- all you need is exactly what you have, for you have the Mind of God! It's not a different mind -- the same mind. And you simply rearrange the mind by a mere assumption. What would the feeling be like, were it true that I am now the man I want to be, now the woman that I want to be? And it is added: "but persevere." You must persevere in it.

If I call you now and you answer, that's one thing. Would you respond an hour later to the same call? If you persevere, you will. If now, an hour later, you think of yourself as you now -- when you dare to assume that you are now the man that you want to be; an hour later, are you still assuming that state? If you're not, you are not persevering. You are "the hearer who looked into the mirror, whose natural face" -- he saw it; "then he went his way, and at once forgot what he looked like."

So, if one hour from now you are not still assuming that you are the man that you want to be, you have forgotten. You are the hearer and not the doer. And he warns us of the vast difference between being a hearer and being a doer. The doer acts.

"God only acts and is in existing beings or man." [Blake, from "The Marriage of Heaven and Hell"]

So, bear in mind that your wonderful world is not bounded by your senses. You perceive far, far more than your senses, no matter how acute they are, could discover. Your senses can't discover what now you are capable of assuming that you are. Your senses dictate what reason will allow; and your reason and your senses are bound together. Go beyond it for what you now know from experience. What you know from the past will not be what you will know when you know more than you now know. Having done it, and proved it, I know more than I did when I was bounded by my senses.

When I couldn't get out of a certain island on time to meet a commitment in Milwaukee, I knew what I did in the Army. I simply applied the identical thing, and I got out. There was a long, long waiting list -- thousands waiting from all the islands, and only two little ships -- not big ships, two little ships, one carrying not more than 60-odd passengers, one carrying 120, and thousand waiting, and they only came once a month into the island. One every 32 days, and one every three and a half weeks. How long would it take to get them all out?

I didn't ask any one a favor. I didn't ask my brother, who was a powerful businessman in that island. He criticized me for not arranging passage back to America when I left America. He said, "That's the place where you should have done it. That's the power house of the world -- New York City, where all these things are done. And you dared to leave New York City when you could have arranged a round trip, and you came here on a one-way ticket?"

Well, I didn't ask any favors of him or any favors of any member of the family. I simply did exactly what I did in the Army; and in 24 hours I was called by the Alcoa Company and given my passage, over thousands who were waiting. It isn't my concern why she did it, or why some one else didn't get it in preference to me when my name was down at the very bottom. I wasn't at the top; I was at the bottom of the list. It isn't my concern. I looked into the perfect law, the Law of Liberty, and I persevered.

I sat in a chair in my hotel room, and there I sat in the chair and assumed I am next to the boat. I am climbing up the gangplank. That's before we had a deep-water harbor; so we had to go out to sea about maybe a half-mile or a mile out to sea on a little tender, and then take the gangplank and go up to the ship. I felt myself bobbing, as you would, on the ocean, and then moving up the gangplank. I smelled the rawness of the sea; got up to the top, -- my mind wandered. I brought it back again and did it all over again. If it wandered again, I brought it back again. I kept on doing it over and over until finally I did it, and fell sound asleep sitting in the chair in the act of doing it. The next day Alcoa calls me and gives me my passage for my wife and my little girl and myself

So, I am telling you from experience, it doesn't fail; but we must not simply "be hearers of the word; we must be doers of the word, for if you are a hearer and not a doer, you deceive yourself," he tells you, for we are the operant power. This Law doesn't operate itself. It doesn't care if you are good, bad or indifferent.

Look around the world. Who would think that tonight some one serving a life sentence in our jail, -- it's the same Mind that sits in the White House; who would think that the one who sits now in the Vatican, -- that mind of the Pope is the same Mind as the one who is groveling on his belly trying to kiss his hand?

So, on Sunday, -- it will be Palm Sunday, and they do all these things on Palm Sunday, -- the holy palms; and then comes Good Friday; then comes Sunday, and all this will go on and have all the show -- a real show. He who is now being borne on the backs of strong, strapping men does not differ from those who are his slaves bearing him -- the same Mind; but they have rearranged their mind to be slaves, and he has arranged his mind to be the Father, to be Pope, the great Pope. It's the same Mind!

There is only one Mind in the world. There aren't two minds. That's why I can tell you I know that when He stands before you, He will know you as His Father, and you will know Him as your Son. And because I know Him as my Son, are we not one Mind? Are we not one Being, when the same Being who called me "Father" will one day call you "Father"? Are we not the same Father, the same Mind, the same Spirit, the same Body, -- without loss of identity?

#1
S2

So, when you go home tonight, try it. Try it every moment of time. You know tonight what you want to be? I don't care what you want to be. It's simply a rearrangement of the mind; and you rearrange the mind, not through any study or any effort. It's simply a mere assumption. What do I want to be? Get it clear in my mind's eye. Well then, assume that I am it.

Listen to the words in the Book of Joel: "Let the weak man say, I am strong." "Let the weak man say, I am strong." That's in the Book of Joel. Jehovah-God, -- that's what the word would mean -- "Joel."

You are called upon, when you are down, to assume that you are exactly what you want to be; not down, because you don't want to be that. You want to be as free as the wind. Well, assume that you are. And may I tell you? in a way that no one knows, you'll become it, but you must persevere. And the word "perseverance" is true. If I don't believe it, well then one second later I've turned back to my former state and become once more Lot's wife, the pillar of salt. "Salt" is a preservative.

In the old days, the only way to preserve something was to salt it. Not so long ago, when I was a little boy, we caught fish -- an enormous quantity of fish, because we didn't have these anormous fleets catching our fish. We had "fish to burn," -- literally burn. If they didn't get in before, say, 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon, what did they have? They could either put it in the dungheap and make dung out of it, or clean it up and salt it. So they cleaned it up and salted it. It would keep indefinitely, for we had no refrigeration. So, you salted the fish. Now, we could have salt flying fish, if you wanted it that day; but fish that were not consumed by sundown was discarded, use it for bait the next day or use it in the dungheap and fertilize the fields with it.

So, salt is a preservative. So when Lot's wife was turned to salt, she turned back, and went back to her former state; and that is all that it means. She looked back and became a pillar of salt. You turn back to the state that you said you would leave behind you; and looking back, you were salted, you were preserved in it. So, if you turn away to what you really want to be; turn back, you are going to be "salted" in it.

So, I ask you to leave what you are, unless you like what you are. Just portions of what you are today that you like -- all right, wonderful. There are other portions that you do not like. Well, you don't have to give up everything in your living room when you rearrange the structure of it. There are certain pieces that you will keep. You say change its location, but you will keep it. The same is true with the structure of the mind: you keep certain things, and you let other things go.

Take friends in your world who are not doing well, and rearrange them in your mind's eye. Where they are doing well, put that part of the structure in your mind's eye. Rearrange the entire structure, and dare to assume that it's true, and walk in that assumption; and that assumption, though at the moment it is denied by reason and denied by your senses, if you persevere in it, it will harden into fact. This is the Law of Scripture.

He said, "I came not to abolish, but to fulfill the Jewish law and the Jewish prophets." For there was no other Scripture in the First Century but the Jewish scriptures. So, the word "Jew" is not placed before it to qualify it, but it was the only scripture that he knew. He came to fulfill the Jewish law. He reinterpreted the law psychologically, and showed them exactly how it's done.

So, go out, and do not abolish anything. Simply fulfill it. Fulfill the Law, and fulfill the Prophets. The Prophets, when they are fulfilled, that is done by sheer Grace. That comes by Promise, and no one's going to stop it, may I tell you. But you can go on living in a state that you do not wish in this world; but in spite of that, you will still receive the Promise, because it isn't given to the one who is rich and denied the one who is poor. But why remain poor and bat your head off morning, noon and night against the inevitable blows in this world?

I hope you do not wish money for the sake of money; but if you need money, then apply this Law. What would the feeling be like if it were true that I was now free of this pressure -- free of it? Dare to assume that you are, and then persist in that assumption; and that assumption will harden into reality. So, this is my lesson tonight. I think you have found it a very practical one, but I must remind you, you can either be the hearer of what you've heard tonight and not the doer. It is my hope that you will be the doer of what you've heard tonight, so that when you leave here, you leave here in the assumption -- not wait until you get home; leave here in the assumption that you are already the man -- the woman -- that you want to be. And then, between here and home, think of the man that you have assumed that you are, and let that assumption spring in your mind constantly. You are that man! Go to bed in that assumption.

Maybe this night, as it did with me in the Army, something will come, and a voice will speak.

"When vision breaks forth into speech, the presence of Deity is assured"; and maybe you will have confirmation that what you have dared to assume is. I know in my case it came that way. But it will come whether it breaks forth into speech or not, if you persist in the assumption.

QUESTION BY A LADY: To "persevere," isn't that persevering to do it over?

NEVILLE: To persevere? No. Pat, if I said to you in China, -- Suppose you are running away from something that you did here, and I met you in China and I know that's the girl that I know, and you were ahead of me, and I said, "Oh, Pat," wouldn't you turn around? Well, if you didn't turn around because you are still running, a cold streak would go right down your spine, because you are still aware that you are Pat.

You must get so aware that you are the being that you want to be that you don't respond to "Pat," if you want to get away from Pat. In other words, you are just simply an entirely different being. A rearrangement of the structure of the mind is the rearrangement of the life that you live.

You take any one in this world -- what can they really claim? I mean the socalled physical descent. It's all nonsense. But you walk the earth. All right. What are you conscious of being? In your case, I would say, be conscious of being really wanted in this world -- really loved by one person who, when he comes home and you aren't home, the house is empty. When he comes home at night and you aren't there, the house is empty. That is what I would feel that every woman in this world would want.

I know in my own case, if my Bill isn't home and I had a party of twenty scheduled, I would wonder, Where is everybody? because without her it isn't to me a home. It has always been that way since I met her; and she fills my house. I don't have to have a third party in it. My daughter doesn't live with us; she lives in her own place. The door is always open to her, and she has her own key; and we always speak of her bedroom still as her bedroom and her bathroom as her bathroom, and her closet where she still has her overflow of clothes -- that's hers. So, she comes and goes when she feels like it; but the house, as far as I am concerned, -- when Bill is there, the house is full. When Bill is not there, -- she hasn't been there for quite a long while, on and off for the last year, -- I go home to an empty house -- really a completely empty house when she isn't there. So, I take her to the hospital and leave her sometimes -- the last one six weeks. I can't tell any one how empty that house was, because no one can take the place of one that you truly love. As Shakespeare said it so beautifully in his 116th Sonnet:

" . . . . Love is not love Which alters when it alteration finds."

---oOo---

THE POTTER'S HOUSE

Tonight's title is "The Potter's House." This story is told in the 18th chapter of the Book of Jeremiah. "The Word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, 'Go down to the potter's house, and there I will let you hear my words.' So, I went down to the potter's house, and there he was working at his wheel. And the vessel he was making of clay was spoiled in the potter's hand, and he reworked it into another vessel, as it seemed good to the potter to do" [Jeremiah 18: 1-4].

Now, as we told you last week, these stories are parables. You have to extract the meaning from the story. In the 64th chapter of the Book of Isaiah you read: "O Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou art our potter; we are all the work of thy hand." [Isaiah 64:8] Here he equates the Lord our Father with the potter; and it is stated quite clearly that we are the clay.

If I am to go down to the potter's house, I need not move from where I am. For am I not told, "We are the temple of God and the Spirit of God dwells in us"? [I Corinthians 3:16] So, where could I go, other than just where I am? So, this [indicating the body] is the "potter's house."

The word "potter" means by definition in the Bible -- if you take James Strong's Concordance -- it means "imagination." It means "to determine; to form a resolution." Well, now, I determine to be a certain man which, at the moment, reason tells me that I am not. My senses tell me that I am not. Nonetheless, I would like to be that.

If I am not the man that I would like to be, then the clay that I am using -- which is the being that I am, for I'm told we are clay -- then that vessel is spoiled in my own sight; but instead of discarding it, I should rework it into another vessel, as it seems good to me to do. Well, how will I go about reworking this clay?

First of all, I must know what I would like to be, for it means "to determine." I must make that decision. What would I like to be? I do not modify it. I know the Lord is going to do it. Well, I know exactly what I would like to be.

Let me ask a very simple question: Suppose it were true? How would I see the world? What would I feel like? What would I hear if it were true? Then let me assume that it is true, that I am the man that I would like to be. Then let me look for confirmation in my imagination and see my friends as I would have to see them, were it true. Let them see me as they would have to see me if it were true. Now I am reworking the vessel in my own imagination, for that is the potter.

Will it work? I know from experience it does work. All I ask others to do is to try it. Don't judge it; try it. And you will see that we are living in a world of imagination, that the human imagination is God.

When Blake said, "I know of no other Christianity and no other Gospel, other than the liberty of both body and mind to exercise the divine arts of imagination"; then he adds: "The Apostles knew of no other Gospel." [Wm. Blake, "Jerusalem - 'To the Christians'"]

This mystery has been told in the form of a tale because:

"Truth embodied in a tale
Shall enter in at lowly doors."

Man finds it difficult to think abstractly; so he takes the great truth and he tells it in the form of a story. You and I were told the story, but we haven't gotten beyond the story to discover exactly what they are trying to tell us. What they are trying to tell us is: Our own wonderful human imagination is God. Why stand we here trembling around, calling on God for help and not ourselves, in whom God dwells?

If He dwells within me, I've got to find out where He is. When I find that He is the only creative power in the world, I find that to be my imagination. I will not always be in control of my imagination. In the course of a day I am ashamed, possibly, of unnumbered things that I have imagined; but as I am told in Scripture: "I am the Lord, and there is no other god beside me; I kill and I make alive; I wound and I heal" [Deuteronomy 32:39]. I create the evil and I have formed the good, the weal and the woe; for there is no other creative power in the world!

I cannot turn to an evil being and call it God and turn to a good thing and call that another God. It is the same creative power. -- The light that illuminates the room, it could electrocute me if I misuse it, and yet it serves to illuminate the room. I can put it to a thousand purposes, or I could misuse it. That is the same thing that we do with our imagination. The human imagination is God.

"Man is all imagination, and God is man, and exists in us, and we in Him." [Wm. Blake, from "Annotations to Berkeley's 'Siris'"] "The Eternal Body of man is the imagination, and that is God Himself." [Blake, from "The Laocoon, 'The Angel of the Divine Presence'"] That is the Divine Body that we call Jesus; and Jesus is crucified upon man, and is buried in man, and is awakening in man as the human imagination that every man aches for. And when it awakes within man, man will know Who Jesus is! He will know Who God is.

So, here the "potter's house" is just where you are seated right now. You don't have to go any place to find it. In fact, because you are one with God, God could never be so far off even to be near, because nearness implies separation; and He is not separated from man. There is no place where you can go and separate yourself from your imagination.

You can divorce yourself from the body. You can separate yourself from the body, but you can't separate yourself from your imagination, because "God (literally) became as we are, that we may be as He is." [Wm. Blake, from "There Is No Natural Religion"] He's not pretending that he is us; he literally became as we are, and He is our own wonderful human imagination.

We are told: "By Him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made" [John 1:3]. Well, you name some thing that was not first only imagined. There isn't a thing that you can name that was not first only imagined. And if "by Him all things were made, and without Him was not anything made that was made," then we have to find Him. And you will find Him as your own wonderful human imagination. That is God!

The worship of God is simply using His gift. His gift is Himself. He gave me Himself! That is the true and real worship of God, -- not to get before something that human hands made and put up on the wall and then crosses himself for luck; but that is what the world does. They make some little thing and then worship it -- that which is made with the human hand.

No; the God I worship, and the God that the whole vast world will worship, -- to worship Him is simply using His talent. He said, "To one he gave five talents, to another two, to another one, to each according to his ability. Then he went away," as we are told in the 25th chapter of the Book of Matthew [Matthew 25:15]. He went away, -- in other words, He became invisible. We are told, He becomes invisible; so He is not objective for me to worship. He takes His residence in me. He became as I am; and I've got to actually use that talent, and use it wisely.

I use it wisely every time I exercise my imagination lovingly. I don't care whether I do it for myself or for myself pushed out. The whole vast world is myself pushed out; so if I encounter an aspect of myself -- a friend or a relative or a total stranger, and I see the need, without his consent I can simply exercise my imagination lovingly on behalf of him and see if I can take that, instead of discarding it, and remold it and shape it into a better form.

What do I think he would like to be? Well, I could ask him, Are you satisfied with life? Maybe he tells me, No, he would like more money, a greater income, security, more health, -- he names it. Then without raising a finger or asking any one to help me, I could, by the use of my talent which is my imagination, represent him to myself as he would be seen by me if it were true; and without waiting for confirmation, let me assume that it is true, knowing in my heart that "The vision [which is now my vision] has its own appointed hour. It ripens, and it will flower. If it seems long, then [I must] wait, for it is sure, and it will not be late." [Habakkuk 2:3] It will not be late for the thing that I have done, for all little seeds have their own appointed hour. A man comes forward in nine months, the horse in twelve months; how long the elephant takes, I don't know, but a chicken in twenty-one days. So, every little seed has its own appointed hour.

So, that peculiar seed that I have just planted for a friend or for myself, -- how long it is going to take, I don't know; but I must actually believe it. And when I believe it, I drop it. A seed must fall into the ground and rot if it is to be made alive. I cannot hold it in my mind's eye; if I take it and do not drop it, then it remains just a seed. I must drop it into the earth and let it rot. And when it rots, it means that I have dropped it from my mind. I've done it. That's all I can do. And then, in its own wonderful appointed hour it will ripen.

Now you try it and see how it works. I will wager that it will work. It is working morning, noon and night anyway. We are totally unaware that we are doing it; but all day long you and I are harvesting what we have done! We've imagined it, and then the thing is done; but we do not recognize our own harvest when it comes up, because our memory is very faulty, and we can't remember when we ever did a thing like that. And,yet, it couldn't possibly come up unless, at some moment, some one imagined it.

So, "Go down to the potter's house," - I'm always in the potter's house,- "and there I will let you hear my words." [Jeremiah 18:2] In a vision -- in a dream of the night, a deep sleep falls upon a man while he is upon his bed, and He opens the ears of men and He seals their instructions. This you will read in the 33d chapter of the Book of Job [33:15,16].

Well, many years ago I had this vision. I was taken in spirit in what would be the turn of the Century in New York City on Fifth Avenue, when they had these huge palatial homes, fully staffed, for these great financial giants of the day. This was before income taxes took it from them. If you made ten million, you kept ten million. You spent it, but you didn't pay anything in income taxes. So, these palatial homes were all on Fifth Avenue, and they kept their stables on the West Side. They were enormous homes. A few were left when I came to New York City in 1922. The Vanderbilts and the Astors -- they were still there. But I was taken in spirit into the interior of one of these palatial places, and here there were three generations. The oldest of the generations was not present. The man speaking spoke of him as "Father"; but he was the grandfather of those addressed. There was the grandfather, the father who was speaking, and the children whom the father addressed; and he was telling the secret of his father to his children, and he said, "Father used to say, while standing on an empty lot, 'I remember when this was an empty lot.' Then he would paint a word picture so vivid that you could actually see it as he painted it, with the building standing upon it, although it was an empty lot. And he believed in the reality of what he did. And now you and I are enjoying the fortunes that he left behind. That was his secret: 'I remember when -- ' and then he painted the word picture. He knew exactly what he wanted for that lot."

Now, that was the secret. I awoke and wrote it down. Then I fell asleep again and redreamed the dream, but this time, instead of eavesdropping and hearing a man telling his children what his father did to become successful, I became the grandfather. I was not talking to others. I was simply communing with myself. And I was saying to myself, "I remember when this thing was only an empty lot. Well, look at it now!"

Well, you could take that same technique and do it concerning anything in the world. "I remember when I didn't have a job." "I remember when he had no money." If I say, "I remember when he had no money," that would imply that now he has money. "I remember when he couldn't contribute to any charitable cause in the world. In fact, he was on the receiving end!" That would imply that today he can contribute and he is on the receiving end.

Well, that was a lesson that was revealed to me. For we are told, "In a dream, in a vision of the night, . . . he opens the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction" [Job 33:15,16] in the form of a vision. It was told me so vividly; so I share it with you. If you can stand perfectly still and assume that things are as you would like them to be, but at the moment they are not; well, then, you can say, "I remember when."

Now, remain faithful to the vision and forget the appearance of the moment. The appearance tells you it cannot be. Reason denies it, and your senses deny it. But if you take this revelation which was given to me as it is to every one -- because all these dreams come from the depths of a man's soul; it is speaking to the surface mind. The surface mind is now telling you what it heard in the depths of its own soul. And the depths of my soul is one with me. Your soul is one with you, for there is only one God.

But it seems to be fragmented when it comes to the surface because there are unnumbered individuals in my world. But in the depths of my being there is only God. In the depths of your being there is only God. And because God is one, and only one, that depth is speaking to the surface mind in all of us.

So, here you can try it. Be perfectly still, and just remember when -- "I remember when I couldn't go into that club," or " -- when I could not dine in that place," which implies I can go there now, and I can dine where I want to now because I have the means. Well, just do that.

Anything in this world that you desire, take that technique and try it. Here is the story concerning the potter: he is reshaping; he doesn't discard the vessel. Man will discard a friend if the friend cannot make it. He doesn't want a further friendship, because he is always asking to be helped. Well, instead of discarding the friend, you reshape the vessel. Instead of discarding any one in this world, you reshape it in your mind's eye; and you will be amazed, as time goes on. He finds himself -- in a lucrative manner, he finds himself doing all the things he couldn't do before; and he doesn't know that you did it. You need never tell him that you did it. It doesn't really matter.

What does it matter if he knows that you planted the seed for him? For in the end, we are one anyway. There is only really one body, one Spirit, one hope, one faith, one Lord, one baptism, one God and Father of all [See Ephesians 1:4]. In the end, when man discovers who he really is, he is going to find one body, and that one body is the one Lord. And we call that Lord "Jesus Christ." And Jesus Christ is your own wonderful human imagination, which is the Divine Body of God. But man beats it morning, noon and night by the misuse of his talent. He literally gave Himself to us, -- not in any uncertain manner. "He (literally) became as we are, that we may be as He is" (Wm. Blake, "There Is No Natural Religion"].

This is the story of the Bible as I read it; so when I see it, I do not see it as secular history. I cannot see it as secular history, for I have experienced Scripture. The more man experiences Scripture, the more he integrates within himself Jesus. He is eating of the body of Jesus and drinking the blood as he experiences Scripture, for it's all about this One Being. The One Being is crucified on Humanity and buried in man. He remains buried in man until He awakes in man; and when He awakes in man, He is the man in whom He awakes. He is not another coming from without, as the world thinks.

The great and popular evangelists of the day depict the Christ as coming from without in order to save the world. Well, they will wait forever. If they wait till the ends of time, He cannot come from without. Is he not within? Are we not told: "Test yourselves and see. Do you not realize that Jesus Christ is in you?" [II Corinthians 13:5] Well, if He is in me, what am I looking on the outside for?

What signs am I trying to find in the world for His coming? You could find all kinds of signs. He isn't coming by those signs. His signs are spelled out for us in the story of Jesus in Scripture. Everything said of Him is literally true, and you are going to experience it. But in the meanwhile, we can exercise the talent, for the one who had the five made five more, and he highly commended him and said, "Enter into the feast of the Lord" [Matthew 25:21], which is the glory of God. The one who had two doubled it; he made four, and he was highly commended.

But the one who buried it because he was afraid to use it -- he was condemned. The talent was taken from him. So, do not bury the talent and say, "Well, now, this may be stupid, but we'll try it." And when you try it, it will prove itself in the testing; and when it proves itself in the performance, what does it matter what others say, or how unsound it may seem to the rational mind? If it proves itself in the testing, then use it. But to bury it, as so many people do, -- they will not even test it. Well, I ask you to test it, and you will find Who God is.

He's not even nearer than hands and feet, for you can sever the hand; you can't sever God. You can sever the foot, but you can't sever God. You can take out all sort of parts of the body; you can take out a lung. You can take out all kinds of things. They have even taken out a heart and put another heart in; but you can't do that with God, because He is your actual being. He literally became as you are, that you may be as He is.

(As some one enters the room): Come right in. Be my guest. You're late. We are just discussing the technique here, and you'll catch up in just a moment. Blake claimed that God is man's human imagination, called in Scripture "the Father." And we are molding and molding within our own mind's eye everything that is happening in our world; that the world is simply man's imagination pushed out. And instead of discarding objects in our world, we simply remold it. And the object is simply a man, any man, anything at all in the world that is our world; and we don't discard them any more, but we discover who we are. We take the vessel made of clay -- and we are the clay. We are the "potter." The potter is our own wonderful human imagination. And we simply reshape it. We don't discard it; we reshape it, and then let it, in its own good time, come into being. "The vision -- " as you and I have now reshaped it -- "has its own appointed hour, and it ripens and it will flower." If it seems to us a long time in coming, be patient, " -- it is sure, and it is not going to be late." [Habakkuk 2:3]

These things always work. If something is great, it may take two years or a year or even longer. What does it matter? It will come if I am confident that it will come. I'm telling you it does work this way.

Now, return to another aspect of Scripture. It is not strange to me, though it may be to others; but it's not strange if you and I seem to have a far greater confidence in the sense of touch. We are more thoroughly convinced by the sense of touch than we are with sight or hearing or smell. This is told us in the 27th chapter of the Book of Genesis. If you are not familiar with this story, let me just refresh your mind, if you've heard it once but you may have forgotten it. It is the story of Isaac and his sons. He is about to die, or he thinks he is.

He says, "I have very little time left, but I don't know the date of my death, and I am blind. My eye is dim, and I cannot see." And he wanted to taste some savory food; so he called his son Esau and sent him into the field to hunt, to get him some game and prepare it in the savory manner that he likes, that he may eat. Now here is food.

His wife overheard what he said to Esau, but she loved Jacob; so when Esau went hunting for game to prepare it for his father, she then turned to her son Jacob and told him what the father had said. Now she said, "You do what I tell you. You go into the flock, and you take two kids and prepare them for me. I'll do the cooking and make them savory as your father likes them, and I will give you a coat that belongs to Esau. When you come to him, he will feel the hair on it -- on you. I will take the skins from the kids and cover your hands and the smooth part of your neck."

So, when he came with the food prepared as his mother had prepared it for him, the father said to him, "Come near, my son, that I may feel you. Your voice is the voice of Jacob, but come near that I may feel you." And when he felt him, he said, "These are the hands of Esau"; and then he gave him the blessing. The whole thing was determined by touch. He could feel him. He heard the voice, but he wasn't trusting what he heard. He wanted to touch him.

We find that same sense of touch carried through the Bible. When Thomas doubted the resurrection, he said, "If I could but touch you." He said, "Put your hands in and feel." [See John 20:27] He heard the voice, but he didn't believe it. He saw, but he didn't believe it.

Then, when the girl touched Him, He said, "Who has touched me? For I perceive virtue has gone out of me," [See Luke 8:46] -- all based upon touch.

So, it isn't strange that you and I have a far greater confidence and more thoroughly believe in the sense of touch than we do in sight or hearing or smell. So, here is this story, and now in a simple way this is how we apply it:

Think of something that is distant -- anything, I don't care what it is. It could be a place, it could be a condition that you think is going to take time to do it. Now, draw near. He said, "Come near, my son." Well, if you think of something, that is your offspring -- your idea. You think of a trip, say, to New York City. It is three thousand miles away. How would I draw it and make it near? Well, I stand right here where I am, and then I "draw it near." I draw it nearer and nearer, and then I occupy it. Man's great weakness is that he is always building and building, but he doesn't occupy. Perpetual construction but no occupancy. He doesn't go in and occupy it and give it what I would call sensory vividness and a sort of cubic reality. It is always like a sketch to him in his mind's eye.

As you occupy it, it surrounds you. I can't be in San Francisco and New York at the same time; but to prove that I am in New York, then let me think of San Francisco. I must see it to the west of me by three thousand miles. I can't see it under me or around me. I must turn my mind's eye to the west -- three thousand miles to the west. Then I give this -- now New York -- all the sensory vividness, all the tones of reality that I can muster.

Then I open my eyes, and what happens? Well, San Francisco returns. Well, that is the story as told concerning Esau and Jacob. Suddenly he remembers, and Jacob now vanishes. This objective state that I have just appropriated when I returned to my conscious, rational mind, has vanished, and this seems the only reality; but I say I cannot take back my blessing. I gave that state my blessing, the right to be born; and I cannot take it back. It is called the birthright. So, he gave it the birthright, the right of birth.

So, when this "state" complains that he was robbed, then the father says, "I have given it the birthright and I cannot remove it; I cannot take it back." In other words, having actually felt myself in New York, when I opened my eyes in this room and find I am kidding myself, that whole thing was simply self-deception. I say to myself, having done it time and time again, "It doesn't matter." It seems that I am self-deceived, but I know from experience that now a bridge of incidents will start to be built. I do not consciously build it, but some series of events will occur, and I will pass over this bridge of incidents that will take me from where I am now to where I was in my imagination; and I cannot resist it.

I ask you not to try it unless you are serious, because it will work. And many a time you will try it in an idle moment not knowing this thing is going to work; and when you least expect it, when you've made plans for other things, you will have to cancel those plans because it is going to work.

I will tell you of an experience of mine. Back in 1941, it was the month of February, and I had come out with the book called "Your Faith Is Your Fortune." My audience in those days in New York City numbered, say, a thousand people three times a week. I thought I would have a fair audience, but that night it snowed and snowed. It started about noon, and kept on snowing. I began my lectures in those days around quarter of nine, and suddenly no one came. I had not more than a hundred people, when I was accustomed to a thousand people. They couldn't get through. We must have had between fourteen and sixteen inches of snow, and no one could get through. So, when I went home I was a little bit disappointed in the attendance because I brought my new book out, and I wanted to have at least a good-sized audience.

That night, this is what I did. In an idle moment -- I didn't intend it consciously, but I did it; I went to sleep in my bedroom, and I assumed that I was in Barbados, two thousand miles away across the water to the little island called Barbados. I dropped off to sleep feeling I was in my mother's home. I could hear the coconut leaves against the woodwork. I could smell the odor that comes only from the tropics. I could feel the entire atmosphere of Barbados, and I thought of New York City and saw it to the north of me, two thousand miles away; and I fell sound asleep in that assumption.

When I woke in the morning, the snow was still on the ground, say, fourteen or fifteen inches of snow. I made plans for my wife and myself to go to Maine in the month of August for a vacation and sent off a deposit to hold my place for me. In the month of August -- late August -- I got a cable from Barbados saying that Mother was desperately ill; and they didn't want to tell me anything about it because war was on. At least, England was at war. And there was no transportation, just a couple of ships moving out; and they did not want to disturb me. Mother was desperately ill, and it was terminal. There was no possibility of any recovery. And if it was at all possible to make the trip, she wanted to see me before she died. All the others were present. I was the only one who was missing.

In 24 hours my wife and I sailed for Barbados. The ship was leaving that night, and we couldn't have gotten together all the things necessary, but we sailed for Barbados instead of going to Maine. I had no plans to go Barbados; but here suddenly came the cable revealing the need to go to Barbados, and we went to Barbados, and we did not go to Maine.

What I did in February took approximately seven months to mature. I did it -- consciously did it, not thinking for one moment -- I did it only to relax and to put myself into that mood because I was disappointed that the crowd did not come out and get my new book, "Your Faith Is Your Fortune." So, I tell you from experience, don't do it idly, because when you plant something, that is still coming into being. It is going to come into being and disturb your socalled conscious plans. It works that way. So, I do know that when it comes back into this world, it doesn't really matter. I stand here just perfectly simply now and do something in my mind's eye and give it sensory vividness and give it the tones of reality, and then I open my eyes, and this shocks me, because this tells me that what I just did was self-deception. You deceive yourself. It is all in your imagination. But I know now that my imagination is the only reality; that this world is still the world of imagination, and that all the things that I see as an objective fact in my world -- they are all "pushed out" because of my imaginal acts.

To try to change circumstances before I change my imaginal activity is to work against the very nature of things. It can't change of itself. It can only change as I change the imaginal activity. So, if I now actually know the man that I would like to be, though at the moment reason denies it and my senses deny it, -- if I really know what I'd like to be so that I could write it out, name it, state it, -- well, then, in my mind's eye assume that I am that man. And to prove that I am that man, look at my friends' faces, look at the people in my world and let them see me as they would have to see me if it were true. Then if I want to carry on a conversation with them, carry on the conversation from the premise of my wish fulfilled, and then have them say to me what they would have to say. And I say to them what I would say,were I such a man, and then see what happens. And you mold yourself into that being. For you are not discarding yourself. You do not jump off the bridge because you do not like yourself as you are; you simply remold yourself.

So, the vessel in the hand of the potter was spoiled, but he didn't discard the vessel. He reworked it into another vessel as it seemed good to the potter to do. And the "potter" was his own wonderful human imagination. And that is addressed in Scripture as God.

Thou art our Potter. We are the clay. And "Thou" we discover to be I AM. "Go and tell them that my name forever and forever is I AM." [Exodus 3:15] You can't get away from I AM. How are you going to get away from it? Where would you go that you are not aware of I AM? I don't care where you go, you cannot go any place and not be aware that you are. That is God's name forever and forever.

When you use the word "God," you might think of something other than I AM. Well, that's not His name. His name is I AM. We give it the name "God," we give it the name "Lord"; we give it all these names. As I said to you earlier last week, if the name "God" or the name "Lord" or the name "Jesus Christ" conveys to you some existent something outside of man, that is a false god. You have the false Jesus Christ in that case. If you think for one moment Jesus Christ is something other than your own wonderful human imagination, you have the false Jesus Christ.

That may seem sacrilegious, blasphemous; but I am telling you what I know from experience. One day He will awaken in you, and He'll awaken in you as you. Then you will know the truth of it. No longer will you look for Him as coming from without. He can only awake from within. He is already in you, and He is buried in you. The Crucifixion is over. As Paul said, "I have been crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" [Galations 2:20]. He literally became me just as I am, with all my weaknesses, all of my limitations. He took upon Himself all of these, and waits upon me just as quickly and as indifferently when the will in me is evil as when it is good. He became a slave, we are told in Scripture, and this [indicating the physical body] is the garment of a slave. He took upon Himself the garment of a slave -- emptied Himself of all that He truly is, and took upon Himself the garment of a slave. And this body is the garment of a slave, for you are enslaved by it. You have to feed it, bathe it, wash it, and perform all the normal, natural functions of that body. No matter how much money you have in the world, you can't pay any sum of money to another to perform the natural functions for you. You have to do them all by yourself. So, here, this is a slave, -- the garment that He wears. And one day you will take it off, when He awakes within it. Then He will take it off and return to the garment that was His "before that the world was." And when He does, you are told in Scripture, He transforms my lowly form to be one form with His glorious form. Don't try to even conceive what that form is. It is not this [indicating the body] at all. It hasn't a thing to do with the weaknesses and the limitations of this garment of flesh.

It is -- well, "fire," I could call it. It is human, I grant you that, -- at least, the face is, the voice is, the hands are. But do not try to even conceive of the body itself. I only know from experience that it is a fiery being of the night. That is the Being that it is.

Wherever you are, clothed in that body, is Heaven. In that body, if you walk through the petrified forest, it will burst into foliage. If you stood in the desert, it would bloom like the rose.

So, Heaven is not a location. It is not some area or realm; it is the Body that you wear. Wherever you go, clothed in that Body, everything is perfect. When you are not clothed in it, -- well, as Milton had his Satan say:

> "Which way I fly is hell; myself am hell."
> [Milton, "Paradise Lost"]

Wherever you are in this garment -- the Christ garment -- wherever you go, it is perfect. There is nothing inharmonious wherever you are.

That happened to me back in 1946. I was coming through the Caribbean Sea on the way to Mobile, Alabama, and suddenly this motion took place within my head, and I found myself actually clothed in this beautiful garment of light. I thought at the moment that I had overcome death, and a heavenly chorus was singing, "Neville is risen. Neville is risen." And then I saw this infinite sea of human imperfection, and I knew they were waiting for me. I glided -- I didn't walk; I simply glided. And when I got to this enormous crowd: the blind, the deaf, the halt, -- every one of them was transformed into perfect beings. Eyes that were missing came out of the nowhere and filled the empty sockets. Arms that were missing came out of the nowhere, and every one was perfectly marvelous. And, yet, I didn't raise a finger to make it so. I showed no compassion. No one asked anything of me. Just as I walked by, because Perfection was within me in its fullness, everything in my world had to be perfect! And when I got to the very end, that same choral group that began by singing my praise, "Neville is risen. Neville is risen," -- when I got to the end it exulted and sang, "It is finished." And at that moment I crystallized and came back into this little body that was on the bunk on the ship.

That whole thing was altogether so vivid in my mind"s eye. I had a manuscript that would have been, say, a book of 300 pages. I tore it up and threw it away and wrote the little booklet called "The Search," based upon that experience. Out of the blue, it happened! So, I do know from my own experience that when you are clothed in that garment, as you will be one day, you are in Heaven. It is your Heavenly Body. It cannot die. It is your Immortal Self. Wherever you are, it's perfect. If you went into hell, hell would cease to be hell and it would be heaven. Wherever you go, everything is transformed in harmony with the Perfection that is springing within you.

So, Heaven is not a realm, as our evangelists are talking about. I went to a party last Saturday, and this man -- a retired gentleman -- has studied them all. He has them all catalogued: No. 3, No. 5, No. 2, No. 7; he has millions who will never get to heaven. He has some peculiar concept in his mind's eye. He's all there. Then this sweet lady with her two little girls -- she had one, I presume, five months old, and then one, I daresay, oh, a year and a half -- sweet little children; and he said to her, including the two of us who are here tonight -- a gentleman here was with me, and he knows exactly what was said. No one had asked anything of him, but he said, "You know, I have the virility and the sex life of a youth eighteen and a half years"; and this mother of these two little girls very innocently said to him, "But you look so old." What silence! Dead silence. No one had ever had the courage to tell that man before, "Why do you look so old if you are this virile thing that you are talking about?" Then, of course, he got up and walked away.

People go through this marvelous world of ours with the strangest concepts of heaven and hell. It's all within the man. When you are clothed in this wonderful garment, -- and I am speaking from my own experience, -- everything is perfect. Forget the so-called second heaven, third heaven, fourth heaven, -- just forget it. You are clothed in that garment; the garment is perfect, and wherever you go, it is perfect. There is no hell when you are clothed in that garment. There is no room for it. No man could be blind in your presence. No man could have an arm missing in your presence. Not a thing could be imperfect in the presence of the Perfect One. You are Life Itself! You are the Resurrection and the Life. You resurrect all things, -- yes, the petrified forest won't be petrified in your presence. The whole thing will burst into blossom. The desert would begin to bloom if you walked into it. That's Heaven!

So, you don't have to go to a place. You simply have to be reclothed. We are told, "He will transform our lowly bodies to be of one form with His Glorious Body," which is the Body of Christ

So, here tonight, you take me seriously and know that your own wonderful human imagination is the Divine Body of the Lord Jesus. Now, try to use it lovingly whenever you use it, and you are using it morning, noon and night, whether you are conscious of it or not. Whenever you are in doubt, do the loving thing; then you have done the right thing. Whenever you are in doubt as to what you should do, do the loving thing, and it's the right thing.

So, let me now gather it together. If tonight you know what you would like to be but you are not that person, don't despair. Be honest with yourself, and ask yourself, What would I like to be? What sort of an income would I like? Where would I like to live? Don't do these things based upon what you think you are capable of doing. Just what would you like to be? Then dare to assume that you are it! And, then, see the world from that assumption. Dare to assume it, and then view the world from that, and try to give it sensory vividness and the tones of reality. And then believe what I told you: The vision that you have made so real in your mind"s eye has its own appointed hour; and it will definitely, in its own good time, appear in your world in a way that you do not consciously know. It builds itself the bridge of incidents, the bridge over which you walk to its fulfillment.

Now, we can go into the Silence.

Are there any questions, please? If you have never heard this before, it might have shocked you, but I wouldn't apologize. We grow by shocks anyway. No one in my audience at any time, I don't care who he is, can tell me that he is more -- I would say, "rooted" in the Christian faith than the speaker. I am rooted in the Christian faith. I was born and raised in a Christian home, and learned the story at my Mother's knee. If I was ever beaten in my life, I was beaten in a Bible class in school when I was a child. Corporal punishment was allowed in those days. And I quoted correctly, but I was asked to produce my Bible to verify the quote. The quote was: "Take up thy bed and walk"; and my sadistic head master asked me to produce the Bible. Well, I didn't have it with me. I am one of ten in the family, nine boys and a girl. We didn't have ten Bibles; So, when I couldn't produce the Bible, -- well, he was allowed by law to give me all the beating he wanted. He was a sadist. So, he brought out a long cane and tapped on a little bench for me to kneel on it, and he proceeded to simply cut me in half. When my father saw what he did to me, my father that night intended to kill him. It took the nextdoor neighbors to restrain my father from going straight to his home, and he would have killed him. I was just a lad. And the next day he took me out of that school. I was bleeding from my buttocks to my knees.

I had quoted the Bible correctly, but it had been changed from "bed" to "couch." He said his Bible said "couch." Of all the nonsense in the world! But he was a sadist, and he blew his brains out that year. He was simply a peculiar sadistic creature.

So, I know my Bible, for I have studied it. But it happened that the whole thing occurred to me, not as secular history, but salvation history. The whole thing is true, but it's not secular. It is salvation history.

Now, are there any questions?

MR. BYERS: [Not distinguishable on my tape.]

NEVILLE: Well, Ken, as far as I am concerned, I would not deny what I have said. I still would repeat it, because all day long, every moment of time we are creating; so one should be watchful as to what they are imagining. But some definite thing that you are working on now, -- if perchance this very moment I got a call from, say, my brother in Barbados, and he said, "Neville, I have just mailed you or wired X number of dollars," I would trust him -- trust him implicitly. If it doesn't come tomorrow -- the bank doesn't call me tomorrow, I am not going to be concerned. I would believe what he said. At the moment I have no evidence that it is true, but I believe it.

Well, now, I must believe in God even beyond that. Well, if I believe that God is my own imagination, and I have no doubts about that, I must believe in my imaginal act as an act of God. So, if I really believe it, I am not concerned about it or worried about it. If I assume now that things are as I desire them to be, and I believe that that assumption will harden into fact, I am not going to be concerned about it. I will go along believing that it does have its own appointed hour.

MR. BYERS: You are not worried about it?

NEVILLE: And you are not going to drop back, because you believe in it. You actually accept it. But I must still be watchful, not for it, or it's coming. I must be watchful as to what use I am going to make with my talent from then on. We must watch the use of that talent. If I bury it and do not use it, it's taken from me.

Take the talent of music, if I do not practice every day, -- well, I've heard it said of great musicians that if they do not practice every day, they can't give a concert. It may be all right as far as those who are not familiar with the music, but to himself he isn't all right. And those who really understand music will know he isn't right. Whether he has a concert schedule or not, -- Aldous Huxley told me that whether he had a commitment to write, he wrote. He wrote everything. He just couldn't let one day pass by, and he would get up early in the morning and write. He couldn't type because of his eyes. He was nearly blind. But he wrote; and he wrote and wrote and wrote, always every day. He could not get out of the habit of writing, whether he was committed or not.

In my own case, I read the Bible seven days a week. I don't think that I put in less than six hours a day in reading the Bible. And I don't read just the Bible; I read it with my Concordance. I have James Strong's Concordance, and I take nothing for granted. I read it, and then I take words that seem so familiar -- words change their meaning. So, I try to go back to the original meaning of the word, and not as it is now understood in the 20th Century. What was the meaning when they used that word? For, we have changed the meanings of words.

Any other questions, please?

A LADY: [Question not audible on tape.]

NEVILLE: We are told in the 12th chapter of the Book of Numbers, "God speaks to man through the medium of dreams, and makes Himself known in vision" [Numbers 12:6]. Therefore, every dream has its own significance, but we are past masters at misinterpretation, because most of them are highly symbolical; and everything in this world contains within itself the capacity for symbolic significance. So, you take it just as it is, and it won't make any sense. Even a simple little dream could be very, very significant if God speaks to me through the language of dreams. But man has completely forgotten this language of symbolism -- completely forgotten it.

For instance, here is a simple little dream that I had just about -- oh, it might have been, say, six or seven months ago. I saw a little dog -- it appeared to me to be a dog -- on a leash. Dogs in New York City are trained to be curbed; they go to the curb when you want to air the dog on the sidewalk. Here they run wild. Well, all dogs in New York are curbed. There are signs at every lamp post: "Curb your dog." And people do it. You put your dog on a leash and you take it into the street and you curb it.

Well, I saw this little dog with whoever had it on the leash. Well, then, the dog had to go, and right on the sidewalk. It moved not more than, say, three or four inches, and again it defecated. and then moved on and it defecated again.

Now, that seems to be a very silly little dream that would have no meaning to the average person who had it. But having had the dream, I said to my wife, "Darling, I am going to get an unexpected large sum of money, and right away." I told the dream to my wife, because in the 41st chapter of Genesis we read that if a dream repeats itself, it means the thing has been fixed by the Lord, and the Lord shall shortly bring it to pass if it repeats itself. Well, it repeated itself right on the sidewalk. It was a very startling thing.

Well, forty-eight hours later I got a call from the bank, asking me if I was expecting some money; and I said, "Well, I am always expecting money." She said, "Well, from whom would you expect it?" I said, "I don't know; it could come from my brother or sister." "Where would it come from?" I said, "Maybe Barbados." Then she said, "What reason would they have to give you money?" I said, "Well, the chances are they made more than they can spend, and they wanted to share it with their poor relatives." That amused her; so she said, "Come on down and get the money." Well, there was a check waiting for me for $3,000. I didn't request it. I didn't ask for it, and he sent me a check for $3,000. It was more than a dividend check. That symbolism meant a large, unexpected sum of money being sent in the immediate present.

Now, the average person would have said, "Wasn't that a horrible dream." And they would have been disgusted with themselves to have seen such a thing. Well, I look at my own dreams, using the language of symbolism, and it revealed my good fortune coming to me unexpectedly. I thought that was very nice news to receive. They can defecate all over the world now as far as I am concerned!

---oOo---

THE POWER AND THE WISDOM

Wisdom is revealed truth which cannot be logically proven. Knowledge is science; you can prove it. You can prove the theory that you had concerning going to the moon; that can be proved. Einstein's theories -- they were theories, but in time man could devise the means to test them and either prove or disprove them. So far they've been proved -- not completely, but they have been proved. That's knowledge. But visions are described in Scripture as wisdom. They are revelation of divine truths. In the end, all knowledge will cease to be; but wisdom will remain -- these visions that are eternal.

So Paul speaks of Christ as "the power of God and the wisdom of God." [I Corinthians 1:24]

Now, what do we mean by "power"? Certainly, I would say, the best definition of it would be effectiveness in achieving one's purposes. But these are the purposes of God; yet we can use power on this level to achieve a certain objective. But I am speaking, now, of the power of Christ. It's entirely different from anything known to man, unless he has had the experience. You taste it before the end; before you awaken from this dream, you will taste of this power. And, may I tell you? it is startling. It's not destructive in the sense that you blow up a city with a hydrogen bomb or many bombs. It has not a thing to do with that power.

Here is a taste of it. You come into a place just like this. When I first tasted of it many years ago, I found myself moving in time -- I would say, backwards in time, judged by the costumes -- judged by the clothes. I would say it was a hundred and fifty years ago in this land of ours, in the east. I would say it was in the New England states, looking at the people that I saw.

I was taken in spirit into this place. It was a wonderful restaurant of that day -- 150 years ago. It was a Sunday afternoon; I could tell by the atmosphere. It was afternoon. I saw a table of four; two young men in their early 20's, undoubtedly college students and then what would be their parents. Then came a lady -- she was the waitress -- bringing a tray of food to the table. She had already served the course of soup.

There was a huge, big bay window through which I could look; and through this window I could see the grass moving. The wind was blowing. It was Fall. I could see the leaves falling; they were dropping. I could see a bird in flight.

I saw other diners; and at that moment I knew that if I could arrest the activity that I felt in me, everything would stand still. I knew it! I no sooner knew it than I tried it, and I arrested not them. I arrested the activity in me -- all in my head. Everything stood still. The bird flying, flew not. The grass moving, moved not. The leaves falling, fell not. The waitress walking, walked not. The diners dining, dined not. Every one was as "dead" as things in the museum -- as though they were made of clay. I examined them all; they were all "dead." One moment before, they were all living, living beings, and everything was alive.

A bird in flight, if arrested, should fall, shouldn't it? if gravitation is a law that is absolute. If it is arrested in flight, that thing should fall. It didn't fall; it stood still, just as I had arrested it. Leaves I could see, but they did not fall. Everything stood still. The grass stood still. The waitress stood still. Well, that's understandable; if you stop her, she can't go through the floo

And here are these diners; and one facing me -- the young boy, about 22 years of age, -- he had the spoon almost to his mouth, and i was perfectly still. He could not move it. I looked at him; he looke like "death" itself!

Then I released that activity within me, and everything continued in its course. The bird continued in its flight. The leaves continue to fall. The waitress continued to bring the food to the table, and h brought the spoon that was here [indicating] to his mouth and completed the action. Then I knew that every thing was within me; that "All tha I beheld, though it appeared without, it was within -- in my own wonde ful human imagination, of which this world of mortality is but a shado [Blake, from "Jerusalem"] It is not taking place out there at all! That's tasting of the power.

So, he defines Christ -- you read it in the 1st chapter of his First Letter to the Corinthians, the 24th verse: "Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God."

"Wisdom" is now defined in Scripture as a "child"; it's personified. We speak of wisdom -- we do not think of it as a person; but may I tell you? man is everything in this world. So everything, really, can be personified.

The 8th chapter of Proverbs personifies wisdom; and now "Wisdom" is made to speak, and these are his words:

> "God possessed me at the beginning of His way, > the first of His acts of old."
> [Proverbs 8:22]

> "When he laid out the foundations of the earth, . . .
> I was beside him, like a little child;
> I was daily his delight, > rejoicing before him always,
> rejoicing in his inhabited world, > delighting in the sons of men."
> [Proverbs 8:29-31]

Now he talks to the "sons of men," and he tells them:

> "He who finds me finds life > and obtains favor from God;
> he who misses me injures himself;
> all who hate me love death."
> [Proverbs 8:35,39]

When you read it you say, What is he talking about? He's a litt child; this is the "wonder child" spoken of in Isaiah -- the personification of Wisdom. One day you will find the child. When you find the child, then you receive favor from God, for the child is but a symbol of His Creative Power -- His Creative Wisdom. You'll find that child!

"Those who miss me injure themselves;
those who hate me," --

May I tell you? the majority of the world hate Him to the extent that they have no interest in Him -- none whatsoever. They do not wish to hear about Him. To them, it's stupid. It's folly to the Gentiles -- folly to the Greeks, and certainly a stumbling block to those who look for Him in some other form.

Who is the "child" personified in Scripture? It's called the "infant child" that one day will be placed in your hands, and you will see him as your child. But he also is a youth, as told us in the 9th chapter of Isaiah:

"To us a child is born, to us a son is given."

The son is given, for: "No man knows the Father except the Son, and no one knows who the Son is except the Father, and any one to whom the Son chooses to reveal him."

So, "No man has ever seen God. The only Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he has made him known."

So, unless the Son makes Him known, you will never know the Father! I'll tell you who He is. Now, this is only a symbol; but when you meet the symbol, it's a living, living thing as you are now, and it's David!

Robert Browning in his poem called "Saul," -- Now Saul was the demented king -- an insane man; and in this poem called "Saul" he has David, and David is about to tell the king of the coming of Messiah, of the coming of Christ. And standing in the presence of the king, Browning has him say:

"O Saul . . . . .
A face like my face shall receive thee; a man like unto me,
Thou shalt love, and be loved by for ever; a Hand like this hand Shall open the gates of new life to thee! See the Christ stand!"

It takes the Christ to reveal the Father! He tells him, "Look at me, Saul, and see the Christ stand!" But Saul was demented, as we all are. He was suffering from total amnesia, and could not recognize the Son. So the Son is screaming out morning, noon and night to the Father in all; but we are sound asleep, and do not recognize the Son.

One day he stands before you, and then there is no uncertainty as to this relationship -- none whatsoever, and you'll recognize your "son." Memory returns, and then you realize the gift. God the Father actually -- literally -- became you, that you may become God! And you look at His Son -- His only begotten Son, and you know he is your son; and he knows you are his father; and then you realize the gift that was given and bestowed upon you.

He gave you His power, and He gave you His wisdom; and you will taste of these before you depart the world, after you have had these experiences. And when you take off this garment, you'll be clothed in an entirely different form; but with all the identity of "person," I'll know you in Eternity. There is a radical transformation of form. Yet, I'll know you, but your form will be entirely different. I'll know that face raised to the N^{th} degree of beauty and majesty -- the same face, but oh! what a glorious face that was so distorted by the life you live while here.

And I am not speaking of any reincarnation, may I tell you? You are not reincarnated; you are individualized, and you tend forever towards ever greater and greater individualization. You are now completely individualized. I'll know that face, but the face is raised to the N^{th} degree of beauty and majesty, and a strength of character that you could not believe that Eternity would be long enough to produce. That's the Being that you are destined one day to encounter, and it's you; and I'll know you, but I will know you as the Risen Lord. I will know you as God Himself, and yet I'll know you as my friend -- my friend that I know and love. I'll know you as my friend; yet I will know you as God Himself.

So, he tells us in his wonderful chapter concerning Life; He is just talking: "You will not come to me. You search the Scriptures because you think in them you have Eternal Life. And it is they who bear witness to Me; yet you will not come to Me that you may have Life

You think "in them" you find it, and people will all day long search the Scripture. They search and search, and one comes upon the scene. It's not what they were looking for. Well, listen to the One who comes upon the scene. He is clad in a robe "dipped in blood," and the name by which he is called is the Word of God.

Are you dipped in a robe of blood? Are you not now wearing a body of flesh and blood? Is this [indicating the physical body] not something you are now clad in that is "dipped in blood"? Cut yourself and see if it's not blood. And who "wears" it? The Word of God. Well, who is the Word of God? Are we not told: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God"? It's God Himself!

"God actually became as we are, that we may be as He is." [Blake, from "There Is No Natural Religion"]

That is the mystery. You are now "wearing" a garment "dipped in blood"; and the name by which you are called is the "Word of God." Now there is the great mystery. "And the Word became flesh and dwelt" -- now the translation is "among us," but the preposition is "within," it's not among, as you look over here. It is in us. "God can never be so far off as even to be near," for nearness implies separation. Well then, where is He? His name forever and forever is "I AM."

I can put the body out there and look at it, but I can't stick "I AM" out there and look at it. I am the observing Being. I can observe all the things round about me as objects, but I can't observe the Observer! I can see myself in the objects round about me, revealing all the activity within me; but I, the Observer, can't stick it out and look at it as another observer. So, God can never be so far off as even to be near, because nearness -- no matter how near -- implies separation. And He is not separated from you. He actually is your very Being. The true identity of man is God!

Now, this mystery unfolds within you, and you will taste the pow -- a power unknown to mortal mind. You will taste of a wisdom. You will be able to interpret all the phenomena of life, for everything in the world contains within itself the capacity for some symbolic significance; and you will see something that means nothing to the mind as it walks by, but you will interpret the action. You will actually be able to interpret the dream -- the vision, because it's all the "language" of God.

Three men walk by; and to the average person, three men walk by. They are not just three men walking by to you when it begins to unfold. So, a woman gets upon the bus, followed by a man, followed by a woman, followed by a man; and you interpret the phenomenon that is unfolding before you. That's wisdom. Everything in the world is screaming at you and telling you what it represents in this world. But man is completely blind to it, and confuses Wisdom, which is revealed Truth, wit knowledge, which is science. Now he does not disparage science, -- no But in the end it will all fade as though it were never a part of the world.

So here, the Power and the Wisdom -- the gift that God gives to His Son. Now he delights in the sons of men. Well, who does he call himself in Scripture? He speaks of himself more often than with any other title as the "Son of Man." That's the singular of "sons of men. What does he mean by it? A "son of man" is that which comes out of man, as told us in the 7th chapter of the Book of Second Samuel.

"Go and tell my servant David" -- And who is David? "I have found in David, the son of Jesse, a man after my own heart who will do all my will."

Now the central figure in the Gospel speaks of Himself as the "Son of God," but he speaks of Himself more often as the "Son of Man"; and He tells you: "I have come to do the will of Him that sent me."

"Not my will, but Thine be done." Well, then who is that one? We are told -- David was the one that He chose, and called David "a man after my own heart, who will do all my will."

And who was David? He was the son of Jesse; and "Jesse" means "Jehovah Exists." That's what the word means -- any form of the verb "to be," -- in other words, "I AM." He is the son of "I AM." So, in the 7th chapter of Second Samuel, he turns to his prophet: "Go and tell my servant David that when his days are fulfilled and he lies dow with his fathers, I will raise up his son after him who shall come forth from his body, and I will be his father, and he shall be my son.

Something comes out of man. It is you -- your own identity -- not another. But what comes out? For all the identity of the "person" that you are, there's going to be a radical, radical transformation of form. It's not the same form. It's not the face, it's not the things that you have here, -- no. an entirely different being, but stil the same identity, but a form that is altogether different. It is a form that is Power. It's infinite power, and you do not have to exercise it in the sense of doing this or doing that.

This is what I mean by it. If clothed in that body, you found yourself in "hell," instantly "hell" would be transformed into Heaven without your raising one finger to transform it. I know this from experience. The year was 1946 when I tasted of the Wisdom of God and the Power of God.

I was on a ship coming through the Caribbean Sea from the Port of Spain, Trinidad, to Mobile, Alabama. We were seven days at sea. It was a freighter bringing boxite into the ovens in Alabama. They only carried twelve passengers. I had retired early. I had my wife and my little girl. Now the thing to do aboard a little ship like that was simply to enjoy the three meals, the sea breezes and then sleep. So, I turned in quite early; and in the wee hours of the morning I felt like a fiery being, being pulled out of my skull in the form of a serpent, like a spiral motion.

Here I am clothed, entirely different. I am fire and air! My body is simply one living, living body, something unlike anything I had ever experienced; and as far as my eye could see was a huge sea of human imperfection; the blind, the lame, the halt, the withered -- everything, all imperfect. I glided by in this body of light. I did not need the sun, I did not need the moon, the stars -- anything to illuminate my world. I was luminous enough. As I glided, I simply illuminated the area that I wanted to see. As I came by these, I knew theywere waiting to see me -- waiting for me. As I glided by, every one was transformed into the Perfection that I felt myself to be. I was "made perfect"; and as I walked by, every one had to be perfect in my presence. Eyes that were missing came out of nowhere and filled the empty sockets; the hands that were missing filled the empty sockets. Those who could not walk, they leaped for joy.

Everything was made perfect; and this heavenly chorus accompanied me and called me by my earthly name, Neville. They said, "Neville is risen," when they first came out. And then from then, that wonderful choral group sang my praises and only repeated the words, "Neville is risen." I can't describe how this heavenly chorus could take only those three words and use them in such a dramatic, wonderful way without changing the words. The music was fantastic, and these voices formed the music. I didn't hear instruments; I only heard the voices, and just the words, "Neville is risen." Well, they could take it and blend it into such beauty that at the very end of the journey when the very last one was made perfect, this heavenly chorus sang out, "It is finished."

And then I felt myself actually come down into this "garment," and this was like a straitjacket. This was something so cramping -- so completely cramping -- that no straitjacket in this world could be more confining than this body was when I came down into it.

So, I tasted of the Wisdom of God and the Power of God! I didn't have to do a thing to transform these people. My very presence transformed them. So, I know the Kingdom of Heaven is a "body"; and clothed in this Body, wherever you go is Heaven. As Milton said:

"If I make my bed in hell, Thou art there; make it in heaven, Thou are there. If I take my wings and fly," -- no matter where I fly -- and he puts the words into the mouth of Satan, -- "it is hell, for I myself am hell." [from "Paradise Lost"] If I am "hell," no matter where I go -- put me into Heaven, it becomes "hell." It's confusion. Haven't you met people that, no matter where they go, they disturb the entire evening, the whole day? Bring them in -- it's like a plague.

A friend of mine in New York City -- his name was Milo. I loved the fun of him. Take him to Carnegie Hall and put Milo at the end of the aisle standing in the back, and have Milo walk down that aisle toward, say, the 3d or 4th row; he bumped into every one in this world. He could no more walk down an aisle and go without hitting some one. He struck thus one, struck that one, struck the other one.

One night at home he took my hand to say good-bye, opened the wrong door and went right into the closet. Milo could no more stop that -- he just simply confused everything. If he came home and dined -- well, I had to watch everything at the table. He would use everything that was wrong, and yet he was a delightful person; but Milo was so completely confused -- that was Milo's life.

Well now, this is Harmony beyond measure -- the Body that is yours when you wake to it! And wherever you are, it's perfect. If you stood in the petrified forest, the whole vast forest would burst into foliage. If you went through the desert, it would blossom like the rose. Things long dead would simply become alive because you are alive, for you are the Resurrection then. You are the God of the Living, not the dead; and so all things that seemingly are "dead" become alive in your presence. This is the Power and the Wisdom of which I speak; and I am not theorizing, I am not speculating. I have tasted of the Power.

By "taste" I mean I have experienced the Power and the Wisdom of God. And when this little "garment" comes off for the last time, in the not-distant future, I am clothed in that Body forever. And the day will come, you will be clothed in a similar body. He gives it a body as He has chosen.

So, let no one frighten you, that you've got to earn the Kingdom of Heaven. You do not earn it! It is the consequence, not the condition, of His choice. "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

So, when people tell you, you've got to do this and do that and do the other in order to earn it, forget it. Then it's not a gift if you earn it. It's something that is due you, like your wages. Don't tell me at the end of the week -- if I work by the week or by the month and you pay me what I've earned that you gave me something.

I recall once my publisher, at the end of six months when he gave me a very big check, his wife said, "You see how much I have given you!

I said, "You haven't given me anything. You have only now put into my hands what you've been using without interest for the last six months. If I come in here every day and say, 'What book did you sell today?' and you paid me that day, I didn't do that. You waited six months in the confidence that you would give me the accumulated monies. So at the end of six months, you used that money -- you put it in the bank; you didn't put it in the vault. You kept that money in the bank so that you did not have to borrow from the bank to run your business. It was my money; and because it accumulated, and it was a good, big check, you now feel poor that you gave me so much. Just get that idea off your mind. You didn't give me one red penny; you just simply took what was mine that you accumulated and used without interest, and then put it into my hand."

Well, she never repeated that again!

So, I tell you, this is a gift! You don't earn the Kingdom. It is God's good pleasure to give it to you; and He has already given it to you, but the gift has not yet been realized. It is still to be realized in experience. So, I am sharing with you the experience. It comes suddenly, without warning, and then you "taste" of it. You tell it to the friends. Those who are not yet "called" to receive it will laugh at you, and say it's a hallucination. All right, let them be. They will, one day, get it. Even though today they laugh at you, one day they will get it. They will all get it.

But He calls us one by one, as told us in the 27th chapter of the Book of Isaiah: "I will call you one by one, O people of .Israel." Well, who are the "people of Israel"?

Let me quote you, now, the 8th verse, of the 32d chapter of Deuteronomy: "He has put bounds to the peoples according to the number of the sons of God." Not one child can be born in this world, but what it is a "garment" that a son of God wears!

But He's going to call His sons one by one, all in good time, each in his own order; and when He calls you, how does He call you? He sends "a famine upon the land." It's "not a famine for bread, not a hunger for bread nor a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the Word of God." [Amos 8:11]

When not a thing in this world can satisfy you but an experience of God, the "hunger" is on you. Yes, the fields may be bursting with wheat, and all the food in the world at your disposal and all the money to buy it; but if the hunger is for the Word of God, not a thing can satisfy you but an experience of God. That's when He calls you. He sends "a famine upon the land -- not a hunger for bread or a thirst for water, but for the hearing of the Word of God."

When that comes upon you, I don't care what the world will say, they can't turn you away from that experience because not a thing can satisfy you. There is not one temptation in the world -- offer you all the things in the world, it can't satisfy you. Offer you tonight the Presidency, a dictatorship of the world; it could not satisfy you. You wouldn't want it. You want to experience God. You don't want it as hearsay; you want it from something that actually takes place within you that you know from experience that God is; and you will never know Him unless His Son reveals Him. For, when His Son comes into your presence, then you know Who-God-Is. And in knowing Who-God-Is, you know Who-You-Are. Well, I'm telling you, you are God!

You are actually the only God, because in the end, there can be nothing but God. There is no room for another in the Universe. You brought this wonderful world into existence as a theater to manifest His power and His wisdom and His love for His sons, because He is going to give Himself to His sons, -- not loan Himself. He actually becomes His sons, that His sons may become the Father! That's the mystery.

So, this Power -- and there are in this audience tonight those who have tasted of the Power; there are those who have tasted, I hope, of the Wisdom, where you know you do nothing to make it so. It just is so because you are perfect. Therefore, you are told: "Be ye perfect, as your Father in Heaven is perfect." When that Perfection is yours, everything in the world is perfect.

No matter what happens to you and to those you love, you still cannot for one moment entertain the thought that God is cruel, even though you see what appears to be a horrible thing taking place in your most intimate world. Yet, you still maintain your conviction that God is Love. For, when you experience God as Infinite Love, not a thing in the world can turn you from that conviction. You know God is Love, -- that's all there is to it; and you stand in the presence of the Ancient of Days, and you can't think of anything but love. And the Ancient of Days embraces you, and you fuse and become one body. You are the Ancient of Days. And then you are "sent," and you do the job that you are "sent" to do. Then, as you are "sent," you are the Word. "And His name shall be called the Word of God."

And you are told: "My word that goes forth from my mouth shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I purpose and prosper in the thing for which I sent it." It cannot come back void; so you will return to the Father, having accomplished the work that He gave you to do. And at that return, you are God Himself! You are the Father!

I'm not here to flatter you. I'm not here to change what you are doing now. If you feel that you have not completed the world of Caesar and you want something better in the world of Caesar, -- a bigger home or more homes and more money, more fame, more recognition, -- all right. If that's your hunger, may I tell you? you're entitled to it, and you can get it. You can get it by simply assuming the feeling of the wish fulfilled, and remaining faithful to that assumption. And if you remain faithful to that assumption, it will become a fact. He puts no limit on the power of belief -- none whatsoever. "Whatsoever you desire, believe that you have received it, and you will." That is the promise made in the 11th chapter of the Book of Mark.

It doesn't say if it's good for you or it is wrong, if you desire it. There is no restriction upon the limit -- upon the limit of belief -- none. So, if you know what you want, and you dare assume that you have it, and live as though you have it, and live in the end -- viewing the world from the end instead of thinking of the end, because God in becoming man does not think of man; He thinks from man. That's the secret.

So, "Be ye imitators of God as dear children." So, God in becoming me isn't thinking of Neville; He is Neville, and He's thinking from Neville. So, if I would imitate Him, I cannot think of what I want. I must think from it.

If I want to be this, that or the other, I assume the feeling of my wish fulfilled, and then think from it. That's the secret. And you'll become it. But I'm telling you, I cannot persuade you to want an experience of God. It comes from your own Father in the depths of your own Being. And when you really are ripe for that experience, He will send the hunger. And not a thing in this world can divert you but an experience of God. You've got to have it! And you may go through a thousand and one blind alleys, but you're going to have it. And you'll come to the end, and you will realize that the Jewish-Christian faith is the one solid rock in this world.

There is no Christianity without Judaism; and Judaism without Christianity would be a tree without flowers, without fruit. Judaism is the tree; Christianity is its fulfillment; and a tree must .fulfill its purpose, -- if it's an apple tree, bear apples. And so, Christianity is the fulfillment of Judaism, and you can't divorce them. That is the solid foundation.

All these others come with their little strange concepts of life, taking you to some holy place in the country and changing your physical diets and all these things to earn the Kingdom. You don't earn it that way. You hear the story, and then you react. You either believe it, or you don't believe it.

So, Paul said he spent the last years of his life teaching Christ "from the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms, and some believed what they heard, while others disbelieved." There was no New Testament; he was only telling his own experiences based upon the Law and the Prophets and the Psalms. So he re-interpreted the old in the light of his own experience; and some believed it and others disbelieved it.

So, one day the tree will bloom, and you will know how true the Christian faith is. But it could not be unless there was first the great story of Judaism, for Judaism is the foundation stone; Christianity is the fruit -- its fulfillment. So, when you hear one little snide remark about the Jew or the Christian, don't react. They don't know what they are doing. Leave them alone. There could not be one without the other.

As the late Bishop Pike said when asked if he was a Jew, -- some person undoubtedly disliked what he said from the pulpit with the cross behind him; and he said, "Yes, I am a Jew. I am a Jew because I am a Christian. I could be a Jew and not be a Christian, but I cannot be a Christian and not be a Jew." He said, "I can be an apple tree and not bear an apple; but I can't have an apple and deny the apple tree."

---oOo---

X18
S2

THE PROMISE EXPLAINED

26 June 1970

The Bible tells the story of a promise -- of a dream that existed two thousand years only in the imagination of Israel; and when their dream came true, Israel did not recognize their own harvest, and rejected their own harvest -- denied it, for they were looking for it in an entirely different way. That is really the essence of the Bible a promise made to man, and then man believed it. It was to Abraham, and Abraham believed God, and it was reckoned unto him as righteousness. So, he had the faith to sustain it and pass it on to generations, and they all believed it; and they maintained, only in their imagination, for two thousand years the dream. Then the dream erupte within an individual -- within Israel; and he told the story, but they did not believe it.

Now we turn to the story. It's an old man, a hundred years old, and a wife ninety years old; and it is said that "it had ceased to be with her after the manner of women." In other words, it would be impossible for her to have a child. And the promise was made that she would have a child, and that child would be "your heir, and you will call him Isaac, which means he laughs." Abraham had, from a slave, a son called Ishmael. It was said of him that his hand was against every man, and every man's hand was against him.

This same story repeats itself all the way through. It begins with Abraham, and then the two -- Ishmael who came first and then Isaac. Isaac was the promise. Then the grandchildren: Esau and Jacob, and God said "Jacob I love; Esau I have hated," -- the same pattern following all through Scripture coming into the New Testament. And in man it erupted -- the story.

Now we find a wonderful story in the Book of John, the 3d Chapter of John. It is not repeated in the Bible; it is only in John. It is not mentioned in Matthew, Mark, or Luke, -- where a member of the Sanhedrin -- a Pharisee by the name of Nicodemus, -- a member of the Sanhedrin is the highest body of a religious order. And Israel was a theocracy; it was ruled by the Rabbis, and here was the highest of the Rabbis. He identified something from what he knew of his own scripture, but couldn't quite put the pieces together. So, he sought Jesus "in the night," we are told. He came during the night, seemingly in a furtive manner -- not to be identified or recognized by other members of the Sanhedrin.

He addressed him as "Rabbi," whence the fact that the man knows what others seemingly are not aware of. The conversation takes place in this manner:

He said, "I know that you are one that is sent, for no one who is not sent by God could do the things that you do"; and then a sudden break takes place in the conversation, and Jesus said to him:

"Unless one is born from above, he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

Nicodemus answered, "How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter a second time into his mother's womb and be born?"

And Jesus answered, "Truly, truly, I say unto you, unless one is born from above, he cannot enter the Kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I have said unto you that you must be born from above, for I tell you that the wind blows where it wills, and you hear the sound of it, but you cannot tell whence it comes nor whither it goes. So is every one who is born of the spirit."

Nicodemus answered, "How can this be?"

And then Jesus answered him and said, "Are you a teacher of Israel and you do not understand this? I tell you -- I tell you what I know, and I bear witness to what I have seen, but you do not receive my testimony."

That is the story in essence. Man was looking for it to take place, as Nicodemus did, as all births take place, never having heard of an entirely different kind of a birth. Here, that which is born of the flesh is flesh; that which is born of the spirit is spirit; but he never heard before that Isaac represented that which is born of the spirit.

Now, when you read the Bible, the characters of the Bible are not persons as we are; they are eternal states of consciousness through which you and I -- the Immortal Being -- we pass through these states. The end of it -- the climax of it is simply Jesus Christ. Each is destined to awaken one day as Jesus Christ, who is nothing less than God Himself! Every one is destined to awaken as God!

The birth cannot be of the flesh, for flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. It cannot enter the Kingdom of God -- only Spirit, for God is Spirit. So this represents -- Isaac represents the birth of the spirit.

Nicodemus saw only physical birth. He could not understand any kind of a birth outside of a physical birth. Paul, now, explains in his 9th Chapter of his Letter to the Romans the difference between the two births, and he speaks of the descendants of Abraham after the flesh and that which comes out of Isaac -- and "we are named out of Isaac," he said.

Well, I will tell you now from my own experience which duplicates that recorded in Scripture. You could not find a more beautiful recording than that which I have just repeated for you from the 3d Chapter of John. It is accurate. It is perfect. When he uses the word "wind," some translators said he should have used the word "spirit"; but the words "spirit" and "wind" are identical, both in Hebrew and in Greek -- the same word. But he used the right word, for when it happens in you, you think only in terms of wind. When you are "born from above," and the child is placed in your hand -- this wonderful child actually laughs. You pick it up and you look into its face and say in the most endearing manner, "How is my sweetheart?" This heavenly smile breaks upon his face; but you hear a wind. It's an unearthly wind that I can't describe by anything known to my physical senses, and yet I heard it through, seemingly, senses, for I heard the wind. I heard it coming from within me and seemingly coming from without.

So, when one is "born from above," it is the moment when he is resurrected from the grave. This whole thing is dead -- just as dead as it can be, but we animate it because we are in it. We are the Dreamer in it dreaming and keeping alive the dream -- the promise that is made. May I ask you not to reject it.

A man -- a little man -- stands before you, with all the weaknesses, all the limitations of the flesh; but everything that you are heir to I am. I am still heir to it, in spite of what has happened to me; and yet I tell you it has happened to me, and plead with you not to reject it, but accept it, for the day is not long from now when this little thing [indicating his physical body] must be shed. That which has already happened within me, which is forever, just simply escapes. That is the Imprisoned Splendor waiting -- bursting to get out permanently. It gets out night after night on a certain work to be done; but it is waiting for that moment when, for the last time, it takes off this little garment, and the silver cord is snapped and the Imprisoned Splendor set free, that which is within a man. It comes when he is "born from above."

So, the conversation between is all about the Kingdom of Heaven and the only way that it can be entered. There is no other way you can enter it. So, until the "birth" takes place, you are still flesh and blood. You will "die" here -- yes, but you cannot die, may I tell you? It seems silly. It seems stupid to tell you when a man dies and you cremate the body and you scatter the ashes that he is not dead. Yet, I know from my own experience of many who have gone -- I have seen them. I have talked with them. I am talking to you. They don't even know they are "dead." They say to me, "Who is dead?"

I say, "You're not dead, but you 'died.' I was at your funeral. You are buried," -- and I tell them the cemetery where they are buried They can't believe it, because they are not dead. They are so alive to themselves, they can't believe for one moment. And you can bring back certain things: "You recall so-and-so?"

"Yes. Did he die?" they begin to think.

"Well, yes, he did die."

"Well then, look at him. Is he 'dead'? There he is -- he died. You went to his funeral, didn't you?" -- and then they begin to think.

"Yes, I did."

"Well then, look at him. He isn't dead, but he died."

"Well, you died, too, Jack; but you are not 'dead' because nothin dies in God's world, for God is the God of the living."

Every one that "dies" here is instantly restored in a body just like this, but young -- unaccountably new -- unaccountably young with nothing missing. If you had parts missing, they aren't missing then. If you were deaf, blind, dumb, you aren't deaf, -- none of these things happened. You are simply completely restored, and you are perfect. But you are still in a world just like this, and you will still go through all the things you do here. You will work. You will marry; you will do all the things you do here, just as you do it here, until that moment when you are "born from above."

When you are "born from above," you can die no more. That is behind you, as told you in the 20th Chapter of the Book of Luke, when they asked the question: "Tell me, in the Resurrection whose wife will that one be?" because she had married seven brothers.

And he said to those who questioned him, because they were all great scientists -- in those days they spoke of the Pharisee and the Sadducee; and the Sadducee was what we would call today the scientist -- the agnostic or even the atheist. He won't believe in survival because nothing could convince him that the body was not the reality -- that something could escape from this body. So they asked him the question, "In the Resurrection, whose wife will she be?" for she married seven.

And he said to the Sadducees, "The children of this age marry, and they are given in marriage; but those who are accounted worthy to attain to that Age and to the Resurrection from the dead, they neither marry, nor are they given in marriage, for they cannot die any more, being sons of the Resurrection."

So, the whole drama begins with the Resurrection, which is the "birth from above." They are two sides of the same coin; it happens only moments apart. You feel the most terrific vibration within your head. You feel -- as I did -- that "this is it!" meaning this is now a hemorrhage -- a brain hemorrhage that must be massive, and therefore they will find the body tomorrow morning on the bed, and Neville is gone from this world.

Instead of that, I felt myself waking -- waking from a dream. I had no idea it wasn't a normal dream; but when I awoke, I was not in this world. I was in my skull, and I knew instantly that my skull was a sepulchre and I had been placed there. How I got there, I did not know; but I only knew that somebody who put me there knew or thought I was "dead." So, I was buried as one that was dead, and you are now buried as one that is dead; and you are dreaming this dream of life in your skull. And that's where you are. Your Immortal Being is there.

When I awoke to find myself completely sealed, I had an intuitive knowledge -- as you are told, "The one who wakes is the wisdom of God, and he is the power of God," for that's how Christ is defined in Scripture: "the power of God and the wisdom of God." And I knew exactly what to do. I would push the base of the skull. May I tell you? all things being relative, I stood within my skull. This [indicating his head] is a little tiny thing. How could Neville, 5' 11", stand in a skull? I stood in my skull! It is the Immortal Skull -- the Immortal Head. I stood in it just like I stand here on the stage; and I went to the base of it, and I pushed from within. As I did so, something rolled away.

That stone rolled away, and then I came out, inch by inch, head first, just like a child being born; but I'm a man, and a whole man came out; and then when I was almost out, I pulled the remaining portion of me out of that body. And then the wind became even more intense -- "the wind blowing where it wills." I heard the sound thereof but I could not tell whence it came or whither it would go. So, I looked over to the corner, having just seen the body; I looked over and couldn't see anything that could be the cause of it, but still it intensified like some enormous hurricane. I looked back to the body, and it was gone.

Then the three witnesses, as told us in the Book of Genesis, -- they then stand before -- you didn't see them approaching -- they stand before Abraham, to whom the promise was made. Now I am playing the part of Abraham, for here the promise is made; and these three witnesses sent from God, and one is not only the spokesman of God, it is God Himself! As he looks up, he doesn't see them approaching. There they are! I looked and I didn't see these three men approaching. There they sat where the body was, and they are discussing.

And in Scripture, whenever vision breaks into sound -- into speech, the presence of David is assured. They began to talk, discussing the wind; and then one is completely disturbed and walks towards the same direction where I thought the wind originated. He goes two steps and he sees the infant, the sign. As told us in Scripture, the child is only a sign of the "birth" of God. He announces the father of the child. They question his right. They say, "How can," -- calling me by name, -- "have a baby?" He doesn't argue the point; he lifts the child and presents it, and then I take the child. And then is when it smiles in my face.

Are we not asked in the 30th Chapter of the Book of Jeremiah, "And the Lord said unto Jeremiah," -- and the word "Jeremiah" means "Jehovah will rise." It is Jehovah who is buried in you. Jehovah will rise. And then Jehovah speaks to His prophet whose name, as I've just defined for you, is "Jehovah will rise," -- "Can a man bear a child?" Obviously the answer is, No. And then the Lord speaks:

"Why, then, do I see every man with his hands drawing himself out of himself just like a woman in labor? Why has every face turned pale?"

That is just as it happens. The face is ghastly pale like one in death practically, only it is moving, because the head moves, like one in recovery from a great ordeal.

But here, you draw your Self out of yourself, just as you are told. But the Old Testament is an adumbration; it is a forecasting in a not-altogether conclusive or immediately evident way. The whole thing is adumbrated. One reading it could not read the sketch. It's like a sketch. But when it actually happens in one as the cubic reality, and he reinterprets Scripture, taking you from the sketch to the reality of it, they would not accept it. They could not believe it.

